17 Families Hit By Fire

Tremendous Outpouring Of Help for Victims

by Mary Lou Williamson

Help for the seventeen families forced from their homes by the fire came pouring in from everywhere — the Red Cross, local merchants, residents, the PTA and the City of Greenbelt. Those in charge of the major efforts all expressed great joy in the "tremendous outpouring of help."

Red Cross Disaster Relief workers interviewed each family to assess immediate needs and gave out some $3000 in certificates of credit for the purchase of food and clothing.

Efforts to temporarily relocate families centered in the Springhill Lake business office. Property Manager Elton Young found empty apartments and one townhouse at SHL for seven families and by afternoon Tuesday permission was granted for six families to move back into their homes — where damage was mostly from smoke and water. Five more families will be moved to the Glenn Dale Woods Apartments on Greenbelt Road, following an offer by Alan Kay (at Monday's city council meeting) to make space available on a short term basis for the remaining families (most of whom wish to return to the SHL townhouses as soon as they are rebuilt.)

Young expressed pleasure that appropriate housing has been found so quickly for all the tenants. Some families required emergency housing at a near-by motel, provided for by SHL.

Money, food and especially clothing have been pouring in to the Fire Emergency Command Center at the SHL Community House. Coordinating the effort are Mrs. Martha Sutton, SHL Social Director, and residents Muriel Weidenfeld and Marsha Krasnick. Mrs. Claire Pilski has been helping coordinate aid from other areas of Greenbelt. When contacted late Tuesday, Mrs. Krasnick said "What we really need now is money (see box); we now have more than enough clothing. People have been very generous with clothing especially."

Assistant city manager Dennis Piendak offered the help of city trucks and men to pick up furniture and household effects (most of which is piled outside in the grass under huge, red tarpaulins) and either to provide temporary storage and/or to then move the belongings to the tenant's new apartments. Four families have availed themselves of this service. Piendak told the News Review, "The offer still stands."

Local Business Contributes

S. Klein and Woodward and Lothrop each donated a truck load of clothing. A truck and man-power was donated by Wilson-Powell Lincoln Mercury. Giant provided an average of $50 per family in gift certificates and discounts. Springhill Villa provided free hot meals.

"Merchants in the Greenbelt Center Mall, Springhill Lake Shopping Center, Beltway Plaza and from every corner of Prince Georges county have given very generously," says Mrs. Krasnick, "the Jaycees, the Lions, everyone was involved. The response has really been unbelievable, the community spirit is fantastic, people giving of themselves. It makes one believe in everything wonderful. Children's toys, many of them new, will be presented to children of the fire-victims by Santa Claus (Sgt. Thomas Van Valkenburgh). The only problem so far has been the reluctance or perhaps the shyness of the victims in receiving what

MONEY NEEDED NOW

The greatest need now is for donations of money. Donations are being accepted at Twin Pines in the center, Peoples Bank at Kenilworth and Greenbelt Rds. and Equitable Trust at the Beltway Plaza — checks should be made out to the SHL Fire Emergency Fund. Money can also be accepted at the SHL Community House or the Greenbelt city offices.

There is still some need for bedding, linens, kitchen and small household items—bring them to the Community House.

For other items that will be needed such as electrical appliances and furniture, call the Community House 474-4555 so that the list of items offered can be paired with the specific needs of the fire victims. (Storage has already become a problem.)

Fire Aided by Wind Guts Springhill Townhouses

by Mary Lou Williamson

Fire, aided by strong, icy winds, tore through 17 townhouses at Springhill Lake Apartments Sunday afternoon December 18. The County Fire Marshall's office estimates the damage to the building at $425,000 and the contents of the building at $85,000. Cause of the fire is unknown at this time and is being investigated.

The fire originated at 9268 Edmonston Road in the home of Mrs. Needham, apparently on the first floor — spreading upward to the attic and roof where the fire quickly spread to adjoining units. For the most part, the fire remained upstairs as it moved down the line of houses, burning out attics and huge holes in the roof. (The buildings had been built prior to the current code that requires fire walls built up to the roof.) Springhill Lake Property Manager, Elton Young, told the News Review that architectural plans for reconstructing the homes will first be reviewed and okayed by the County Building Inspector's office and will meet the newer requirements for fire walls. Rebuilding is expected to be completed within 90 days.

More than 100 men from 9 area fire companies responded to the 2-alarms sounded at 2:49 p.m. and 3:04 p.m. on Sunday. Four firemen were injured, no tenants were listed as injured. Firemen and equipment came from Greenbelt, Berwyn Heights, Riverdale Heights, Branchville, College Park, Beltsville, Riverdale, Tuxedo-Cheverly and Cottage City.

Volunteers Needed For Heart Clinic

The Heart Association plans to offer a free screening for heart disease at the Ridge Road Recreation Center, February 5 through 14. Tests will include medical history, height-weight ratio, blood pressure, screening electrocardiogram, blood analysis for cholesterol and triglyceride abnormalities and counselling on risk factors leading to heart disease, the nation's number one killer.

This effort will be done entirely by volunteers. Leo Gerton, Greenbelt Risk Factor Screening Committee member, asks all civic organizations serving Greenbelt to solicit their membership and ask for volunteers to work on the project.

is offered to them. It's as if each one feels that others are worse off," said Mrs. Weidenfeld, "It has been hard for them."

Largo Sports Arena Trial Ends With Contempt Charge Against City Councilwoman

by Elaine Skolnik

City Councilwoman Rhea Cohen, one of the six plaintiffs challenging the Largo sports arena, was held in contempt of court by Maryland Circuit Judge Perry Bowen when the trial ended last Saturday at Upper Marlboro. She was detained four hours in the Sheriff's office and released on bond after receiving a $500 fine and a three-months-in-jail sentence. Ms. Cohen told the News Review that her attorney Stephen Sachs of Baltimore will note an appeal to the Maryland Court of Appeals if a plea for reconsideration is not successful.

Ms. Cohen made her statement in the court after Judge Bowen asked if anyone wished to speak. "This is customary in my courtroom," he told the News Review. At no time while Ms. Cohen was speaking did the Judge caution her that she risked a contempt charge.

Judge Bowen subsequently ruled that the sports arena lease was a valid legal document and that there was no evidence to show the arena would mean a financial loss to taxpayers in Prince Georges County.

Bowen imposed the contempt of court sentence after Ms. Cohen accused him of "bias and prejudice" in a statement submitted for the record which requested that he disqualify himself from the case. Bowen took special exception to Ms. Cohen's charge that he had "made the outrageous and false statement in open court... that the citizens of Prince Georges County have no right to referendum on certain laws for which said citizens... are now circulating petitions."

Ms. Cohen also charged that the judge "unfairly prevented plaintiffs from entering into the record evidence and testimony essential to (their) case" and of "willfully harassing the plaintiffs by holding court late at night and on the weekends."

Ms. Cohen was referring to the fact that the plaintiff's lawyer had asked for a recess over the weekend because he was suffering from laryngitis.

Judge Bowen said that one witness of the plaintiffs' was not permitted to testify because his name did not appear on the pre-trial witness list as required, and the opposing attorney objected. As for the night and Saturday sessions, Bowen said that he had set aside three days for the trial and held the extra sessions so that he could meet commitments he had in the Prince Frederick county court this week. "This procedure was not unusual for me," he said.

In the courtroom, Bowen said that Ms. Cohen's conduct "tends to bring the entire judicial system into contempt and constitutes a clear and present danger to the administration of justice." He said that her conduct hindered the carrying out of the business of the court and could not be permitted without serious impairment to the dignity and standing of the court.

A fund drive is now being organized for Ms. Cohen to raise money to help pay the legal expenses of an appeal. Money may be contributed to the Rhea Cohen Defense Fund at Twin Pines Savings and Loan or mailed to Box 73, Greenbelt.

Council Refuses to Act On Anti-Busing Measure, But Supports Delay

by Al Skolnik

About 90 persons turned out at last Monday's city council meeting to watch council members wrestle with the emotion-laden issue of busing. Mayor Richard Pilski and councilwoman Elizabeth Maffay had placed the subject on the agenda and Mrs. Maffay subsequently introduced a resolution asking the city council to state its opposition to the forced busing of school children to achieve racial balance in the Prince Georges school system.

After more than two hours of audience-council participation, the council voted 3-2 against the resolution with council members Charles Schwan, Gil Weidenfeld, and Rhea Cohen forming the majority. Subsequently, this three-member majority voted to support the Prince Georges school board's request to delay implementation of any proposed busing plan until September 1973 in order to provide time for resolution of the problems related to busing.

Maffay and Pilski voted against this measure on the grounds that the action was taken after the audience had left. Pilski felt it was improper to bring up another motion on the subject after he had already informed the public that any additional motions on the subject would be carried over to the next meeting. Weidenfeld and Schwan protested that the proposal had already been discussed earlier in the evening and there had been no opposition expressed to it. In addition, Mrs. Cohen objected to discussion being closed before she had an opportunity to offer several motions.

Despite the controversial nature of the subject (the busing opponents in the audience were slightly in the majority), the 2-hour discussion was very orderly, due in no small part to the firm hand of Mayor Pilski. Everyone was given a fair opportunity to express his views and while there were some extreme positions taken, there were no discourteous acts.

Anti-Busing Sentiment

Mrs. Maffay's opposition to busing was based on the advantages of having children as close to home as possible and the fear that busing "into unfamiliar areas will surely have a detrimental effect on our children." She also thought that busing would work a hardship on parents if they had to transport sick children or children remaining at school for extra-curricular activities.

Health Department Gets 10-Yr. Water, Sewer Plan

County executive William Gullett announced on December 18 that he will neither sign nor veto the County 10-year Water and Sewer Plan. The effect of this action is that the Plan will now go to the State Department of Health and Mental Hygiene for approval before going into effect.

The 10-year plan includes an approved point of discharge for a temporary sewage treatment plant at the Greenbriar site on the Smith-Ewing tract. The plan also specifies all the precautionary conditions laid down by county health officer Perry Stearns to assure the safety of the treatment plant, including a proposal by the developer, Alan Kay, for incorporation of a virus removal system.

Kay, at the December 18 Greenbelt city council meeting, stated publicly to an audience of almost 100 persons that he will abide by all the conditions laid down by Stearns and his consultant, Dr. Cookson.

Santa Coming to Town

The Festival of Lights finale will be held at the Youth Center Friday, Dec. 22 from 2-5 p.m. where boys and girls, pre-school through elementary school, can visit Santa and his helpers. At 4 p.m., a special children's show, "Christmas Crumpets and Marmalade" will be presented by the Prince Georges Puppets. Come see the gingerbread houses, movies will be shown the entire time, coffee and donuts will be available for Mom and Dad, and all the children will receive a treat from Santa.

Mayor Pilski said that he thought it proper that the council should reflect the concern of the grassroots citizens about having their children bused out of local neighborhoods to strange areas.

Except for one person who openly said he was against integration, all the persons opposing the busing stated that they were not racists. They cited the safety hazards involved in placing buses on the Beltway, the increase in tensions of placing children in hostile climates, the negative and disruptive effects on the quality of education, the unfairness of depriving a family which has struggled to move into a neighborhood with good schools the right to attend those schools, and the foolishness and expense of busing children living across the street from one school to another school miles away.

Opposite Views

The arguments against passage of the anti-busing resolution fell into two categories. The first was that while no one favored busing for busing's sake, there was no other way under present circumstances to achieve desegregation and racial justice in the school system. It is fine, the argument ran, to talk about the problem being solved by having integrated neighborhoods, but this is not an immediate prospect.

The second argument was that the council should not take a position on the issue because it was being decided by the courts. Several speakers referred to the meaningless and futile nature of any anti-busing resolution, the fact that council really had no input to make.

Councilman Schwan summed up this attitude. "We have all taken an oath to uphold the Constitution," he said. "It seems to me that the spirit of the oath would be furthered by our concentrating on those matters within our sphere of responsibility and not on those for which we have not even a shadow of authority. I can't bring myself to support the utterance of solemn, meaningless words — which is the best that an expression of council would represent." Quoting the courts, Schwan said that what was involved here "is a matter of law, not anarchy; of constitutional right, not popular sentiment."

Several speakers implored council to be leaders in bringing the community together, to apply reason rather than emotion to avoid instilling fear into people, especially the children, and to take positive actions (such as setting up committees of parents, school personnel, civic leaders and students to make the transition easier) rather than negative exhortations.

Councilman Weidenfeld was especially concerned that council action in favor of the resolution would give false comfort to local citizens, inflame emotions, and exploit the situation. He and council member Cohen saw the council's role as that of providing responsible positive leadership. Mrs. Cohen suggested that council could make a contribution by working with the school board to install seat belts in buses and in other ways improve the health, safety, welfare and security of the students.

Some concern was expressed by others that council's approval of the anti-busing resolution would undermine public respect for the courts and encourage such acts as school boycotts. Mrs. Maffay took great exception to this argument, stating that the council was merely seeking to exercise its constitutional right to petition its representatives in Washington and Annapolis. She made it clear she was not condoning any disobedience of the law.

A Sticky Issue

It would have been relatively easy for the Greenbelt city council to let itself be influenced by popular sentiments into passing an anti-busing ordinance at Monday's meeting. Council could have rationalized that such action would have been in accordance with the theory of representative government that legislative bodies such as theirs have an obligation to reflect majority opinion.

Instead, council recognized that in certain areas the principle of majority rule must be balanced against the principle of constitutional rights. For the U. S. Constitution is a device for assuring majority rule, while at the same time protecting the rights of the minority. And upon reflection this is a sound formula, for it must be remembered that whereas one might find himself part of the majority on one issue, he might be in the minority on another issue.

Essentially, the majority of council felt that the courts are the proper authorities to rule on complex constitutional issues involving civil rights. Obviously, those who favored the anti-busing resolution and the concept of neighborhood schools do not feel minority rights are involved, since they say that their resolution would apply equally to white and black neighborhoods.

In the broad, theoretical sense, there is much merit in the principle of neighborhood schools. For who can logically argue for diverting money needed for quality education to fund additional busing with its attendant pollution and safety hazards? Unfortunately, in the context in which the issue of busing has arisen in Prince Georges county — through a suit filed by plaintiffs who feel they have been aggrieved by a school system which has not responded to the U. S. Supreme Court decision of 1954 — it is difficult to maintain that civil rights are not involved.

Under the circumstances, the council did not feel it proper or desirable for it to tamper with basic constitutional rights. However, it did feel that it had a role in determining how these rights are implemented. In this capacity, the council petitioned the courts to put the desegregation plan into effect at the beginning of the September semester, rather than in mid-semester in order to give sufficient time to prepare the transition. We hope the courts will heed this advice.

Favors Neighborhood Sch/ls
 To the Editor:

In reference to the letter published in the News Review on the 14th of December concerning the busing of school children to schools outside of their own neighborhoods, from a group of citizens who claim to be interested in showing us how to be a model for other communities in this busing issue, I must now write my first letter to the editor.

If or forefathers had felt this way back in 1776, we would not be looking forward to the celebration of our Bicentennial THREE years from now, we would still be subjects of the Queen of England. "Roll over and play dead", is fine for dogs but people have to stand up and fight for what they believe to be right.

I am not against integration: I do believe in the neighborhood school system however, at least for elementary school children. My four children's ages are spaced so that within two years, my children will be divided between three different schools. Moreover, a child of six or seven may lack the confidence and ability to get on the right bus. He will no longer be able to participate in activities after school. Due to the necessity of some buses making more than one run, a child may be forced to leave for school more than one hour earlier than he does now. If his bus schedule is such that he doesn't arrive home before four or four-thirty, and he happens to miss his bus, he may be stuck at school in an unfamiliar area until you can find a way to get to him or her, maybe as late as five or five-thirty.

I also feel safer knowing that my child has to walk only four blocks to school rather than be on a bus for fifteen or twenty minutes twice a day.

Part of the reason I haven't moved from my present location is the excellent schooling my child is receiving at Greenbelt North End School. I am sure that some people even go to the trouble of looking into the schools in an area before moving there. Why then should they be deprived of one of the contributing factors in their decision to move into that certain area? I am sure many black people are opposed to busing for the same reasons I am. Its not fair to the children or the parents.

As I said before, I am not opposed to integration! The question here is not black and white, but rather the quality of education in one area of the county as opposed to another area of the same county. If the education level of a certain area is deficient, then the school board has the obligation to bring that area up equal to all other areas of the same county. Right now, there are many people up in arms over the busing issue. If we could co-ordinate the efforts of all these people towards the school board to get them to raise the level of education in these low areas, then we would be doing something good for many different communities at once.

Everyone wants an equal chance in life. By raising the standards to an equal level throughout the county, you are providing that chance. Its not a question of black and white; its a question of fair and equal education.

Ultimate in Lunacy?

To the Editor:

The people of this country have put up with a lot of administrative lunacy in the past (prohibition, the forced ban of prayers in school, Vietnam, etc.) but busing to achieve racial desegregation has got to be the ultimate in insanity. Racial proportions are determined by specific locale, not by national average. If we have inferior schools, no matter how we rearrange the students, we'll still have the same proportion receiving substandard education.

For each new bus required, at $24,000 a shot, we could hire two teachers, buy 300 typewriters or 4,600 text books. With the Space Program and Vietnam drawing to a close, this generated multi-billion dollar tax surplus, if funneled properly, could give all our schools a superiority limited only by our imagination.

I respect those who support the Supreme Court's decision because they feel it morally proper. But, for those who comply simply because a law dictates, if this constitutes a majority, are neglecting one of our country's principal foundations. "We the People" dictate the laws, the laws do not dictate the people. Consensus reversed prohibition and forced our withdrawal from Vietnam. We can do it again. If we don't feel a law is right, that law must be changed. The voters expressed their feelings on busing in the recent election. Unquestionably the majority is there.

I'm not a radical nor a bigot. I presently attend classes with blacks and have black friends. If at the settlement of this controversial issue, we bus or not, let's get all the schools to an acceptable standard.

I'd like to know if these Greenbelters who support racial proportioning are the same "proper citizens" who have supported a screening board that has kept old Greenbelt principally white.

Holiday Fire Safety

During this holiday season the men of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Dept. and Rescue Squad would like to remind you of a few things to help make your Christmas a "Fire Safe Christmas."

1. Do not place lit wax candles on or close to your Christmas Tree.
2. Check all of your Christmas light sets whether indoor or outdoor for frayed wires, loose connections and broken sockets.
3. Use only lighting equipment carrying the Underwriters Laboratories (UL) labels. Unlabeled equipment seldom meets safety standards.
4. Be sure the fuse on the circuit serving your Christmas tree and other lighting is not over 15 amperes.
5. For outdoor lighting, use only UL outdoor sets.
6. Turn off your Christmas tree and other indoor lighting before retiring or leaving the house.
7. Refrain from smoking near the tree. Never place the Christmas tree near an exit, keep it watered, don't use tinfoil tinsel. Use flameproof decorations, and remove the tree as soon as possible, they dry out fast.
9. For artificial trees use only approved electrical wiring, lights, and other fixtures. If you tree is metal DO NOT wire it with lights or electrical fixtures.
10. Get all wrappings out of the home and into a covered metal container.
11. Remember if fire should strike have an escape route planned. Get everyone out of the house, then call the Fire Dept.

PGC Council Limits Cluster Development

Prince Georges County Council enacted legislation Oct. 17 limiting cluster development zones for single family dwellings and detached two family homes, while eliminating the high density construction from the rural-agricultural, rural-residential and residential-townhouse zones. In effect, the measure, sponsored by Councilmen Francis W.

White, D-1, and Francis B. Francois, D-A-L, will enlarge most house lots and prohibit attached dwellings in the R-R, rural-residential, zone. It will also vastly limit detached dwellings in other zones.

Although cluster development was originated to provide more general open space while building on smaller individual home lots, the theory's idealism has degenerated and resulted in housing densities as much as 50 percent greater than in conventional design, according to White.

Deviating from the past, the new law limits the minimum lot size to be used in cluster development. According to a provision, all lot reductions must be compensated for by an equivalent amount of cluster open space. In the past, cluster developers freely reduced the lot sizes, but seldom compensated by expanding the community green space.

Bridge over troubled waters.

It's easy to forget that emergencies do happen. And when there is a crisis, you'll need a nest egg to fall back on.

The Payroll Savings Plan is one of the easiest ways to make sure you've something saved for when you need money fast. When you participate in the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, an amount you designate will be set aside from each paycheck and invested in U.S. Savings Bonds. It's an effortless way to build up a reserve.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970 . . . with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Let's hope there are no troubled waters in your future. But remember, emergencies don't always happen to the other guys.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

Take stock in America.

Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.
