WSSC Grants Construction Permit For Greenbriar Plant

by Elaine Skolnik

It looked for a while on July 18 as if the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission would reconsider its support of the Greenbriar on-site temporary sewage plant. Finally, however, the construction permit was granted after the developer agreed to processing methods that would include removal of nitrogen from the effluent if it were required by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

WSSC, however, would not hold up the permit pending approval of a right-of-way across NASA property. (Such a right-of-way is needed so that the effluent from the plant can be piped - a condition required by the city - into a receiving stream on NASA property.) Council members Rhea Cohen and Elizabeth Maffay argued that such a permit be held up until NASA action had been taken on the right-of-way request. In reply, WSSC officials said that the developer will be proceeding at his own risk and would not be given a permit to operate the plant if the piping were not installed.

Emergency Arrangements

As they said they would do the week before, WSSC Commissioners also required that the final plans include a pumping station and special piping to take care of emergency situations, so that effluent from those buildings (4 apartments and recreation building) on the Anacostia side of the ridge line could be hooked up with the permanent public system rather than dumped into the local storm sewer.

But they did not insist, as urged by Mrs. Cohen, that these buildings have a secondary source of power in case of emergency, although the rest of the project has such a double, independent, power source. The commissioners felt that the hookup to the public system provided an adequate safeguard.

Status Now

As it stands now, the construction permits will require all the conditions laid down by the county council. (See box on page 4.)

At the outset of the meeting, the WSSC commissioners admitted that they had been unfamiliar with the contents of the city's conditions which the commission received prior to the July 10 meeting. At that time the city requested that no construction permit be granted for the plant unless the commission incorporated the city's conditions in the operation of the plant and the emergency hookup line was provided. Statements from council members Cohen and Maffay, as well as a statement read into the record for councilman Gil Weidenfeld, emphasized the city's request for nitrogen removal and piping.

Whose Standards?

In light of the fact that neither the State nor the county council had included nitrogen removal as a condition, WSSC Commissioner Lawrence Brooks propounded the philosophical question: "What standards are we to adhere to: Those laid down by the State, the county, the city, or citizens?" He also wondered if the effort by the city was to stop the plant. "Will the people," he asked, "be satisfied with any standard that is set?"

At this stage a representative of the developer stated that if the EPA does require nitrogen removal in its new guidelines, the developer would adhere to these standards.

Voting in favor of the permit were commissioners Lawrence Brooks, Johanna Norris, and Floyd Peterson. Against was Dave Elliott and abstaining was George McRory.

Apparently of some influence in the vote was the county's action which had imposed an October 1 deadline for completion of phase 1 of the treatment plant and had required a bond of $500,000. This is why, Greenbriar Associates explained, it was seeking a permit to begin construction before the NASA right-of-way was given.

Giese Presents Plans For Public Disclosure Of Financial Interests

A two-stage approach to the problem of public disclosure of financial interests and conflicts of interest by public officials was suggested to council by city manager James K. Giese on Monday, July 23.

The first stage would consist of a charter change which would (1) give council authority to ask for financial reports, if it is so desired, and (2) require a council member or city employee to make known any substantial financial interest in any contract with the city and to refrain from voting upon or otherwise participating in the contract. Any willful violation would constitute malfeasance in office and lead to forfeiture of office.

The second stage would consist of an ordinance that would spell out the details for disclosure of financial information. Giese presented two alternatives, one of which (draft A) he preferred.

Giese said he was motivated by a desire not to discourage a citizen from serving on council by requiring the disclosure of irrelevant information that may have no bearing on his official actions but which may be the basis for detrimental gossip. Giese cautioned that complicated and detailed requirements for the reporting of financial information can result in honest errors being made that can be used as a basis for public criticism by political opportunists.

"For these reasons," concluded Giese, "I urge council to consider very carefully the subject of financial disclosure and not act with undue haste."

Details

Under draft A, financial reports would be obtained twice a year, April 30 and July 30, covering ownership throughout a reporting period. A new council member would submit a report upon accession to office. Interests of spouse and dependent children would be included. The information disclosed would not include any dollar values, just identification of the item.

Information reported would include ownership of more than 3% or $1,000 in a corporation's stock, any interest in real estate of 3% or more, any income in excess of $500 except income from city of Greenbelt or interest from savings accounts or governmental bonds, installment loans of over $500, and gifts of more than $500 other than those from relatives or employers.

The statement would be filed under oath and thus subject to the penalties of perjury.

All reports of financial interest would be open to inspection at the city clerk's office.

Giese also submitted a draft B which he did not favor. This draft was more encompassing, including the report of dollar values, and was based on some of the off-the-cuff suggestions made by council at its July 2 meeting.

Post Office Seeks Land

The Post Office is seeking to purchase property near its present location and warns that unless such property is soon found new construction may have to take place on the periphery or even outside the city limits. This would mean that citizens who now walk to the Post Office would have to drive or get a ride in order to purchase stamps or mail or pick up their packages.

Post Office officials are most concerned by the lack of space both in the building and in the available parking space. Also, Post Office vehicles need a protected area where they would not be so easily accessible to vandals.

Postmaster Emory Harman suggests that in moving the Post Office out of the city, "the present shopping center in old Greenbelt would probably lose its identity as the center or hub of Greenbelt."

Hensel Fire

The home of Irene and Richard Hensel, 6 Orange Court, was damaged extensively and made unlivable by fire on Wednesday night, July 18.

The fire which broke out shortly after 10 p.m. was caused by a short circuit in wiring in the basement furnace room, according to Sgt. Ephraim Day of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department. Although the fire was confined to the basement, there was structural damage to the house and extensive smoke damage. 18 volunteer firemen spent three hours and eighteen minutes at the site.

One minute earlier the Fire Co. had responded to an ambulance call from a campsite at Greenbelt National Park where a propane tank had blown up. Although no fire followed, one person was burned with first and second degree burns to the face, arms and legs.

The Hensel family are now occupying the Community Church parsonage on Hillside Road. They are in need of basic furniture (either as a gift or loan) such as tables, chairs, and single beds for the children. Also needed are bedding, linens, cutlery, dishes and general household items. They now have enough clothing.

An account has been opened at Twin Pines, "Hensel Fire Fund," and cash donations may be made there.

COUNCIL DEFERS REPLY TO NASA PENDING MORE FACT GATHERING

by Al Skolnik

Getting many answers but seeking more, the city council at its July 23 meeting deferred replying to NASA (Goddard Space Flight Center) on the Greenbriar on-site sewage treatment plant until its regular meeting of Monday, August 13, when it hoped that a full council would be present. Councilman Charles Schwan was absent from the special July 23 meeting and councilwoman Elizabeth Maffay could only stay for a short time.

NASA had asked the city for comments regarding the city's concurrence with the treatment plant. In turn, council at its last meeting requested city manager James Giese to prepare an evaluative report of the plant so that council could determine whether the plans for the facility complied with the conditions recommended by the council in its February 7, 1972 resolution.

Such a report was submitted to council Monday night by Giese, after consultations with the city's engineers from Greenhome and O'Mara and after talks with representatives of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Council of Governments (COG), and the firm designing the Greenbriar plant.

NASA Faces Decision

NASA has yet to make a decision as to whether or not it will grant a right-of-way for a pipe to carry the effluent from the sewage plant for 150 feet across NASA property to a receiving stream (unnamed tributary of Beaver Dam Creek).

According to the State Water Resources Administration, the stream is free-flowing, but according to critics it is intermittent. The city's engineers advise Giese that "effluent resulting from tertiary treatment could be discharged into a dry stream without ill effect."

Nitrogen Removal

A major concern for council is that of nitrogen removal. The council in its February 7, 1972 resolution had asked that consideration be given to nitrogen removal, but neither the State Department of Health and Mental Hygiene nor the County Council, nor Washington Suburban Commission had required it as a condition for approval.

According to Giese's report, the Federal Environmental Protection Agency has no standards for nitrogen removal and the Potomac River

Environmental Conference standards are no longer in effect. Giese said that though new EPA standards are expected shortly, it is uncertain that these standards will include nitrogen removal.

The Greenbriar developer Alan Kay at Monday's council meeting reiterated that even though he has already received a permit from WSSC to construct the plant (see accompanying story), he will modify his processes to provide for such nitrogen removal if the EPA standards so specify.

Nevertheless, the council was uneasy over the consequences of nitrates in the effluent. It had a letter from its vacationing councilman Schwan, suggesting that council seek an authoritative opinion from an independent source concerning the downstream impact of the non-removal of nitrogen. He said that while nitrogen removal is not a matter of health, he thought it could have significant ecological effects.

Consequently, council decided to secure additional information on the extent to which the present processes would remove nitrogen. The city's engineer had noted that the proposed treatment process would remove some nitrogen.

Giese's Report

Giese's report found that for the most part the plans and specifications for the Greenbriar plant were meeting the conditions desired by the city or substitutes had been proposed that appeared satisfactory to the city's engineers.

The plant provides, Giese said, for secondary treatment that will continuously remove and recycle the bacterial sludge; aeration to add dissolved oxygen; disinfection; and installation of dual mechanical and electrical facilities to guard against breakdown.

Giese noted that at the request of WSSC, the plant will use a different type tertiary treatment unit than that specified in the city's resolution. This type unit has had successful experience at Landover Mall. He also noted that one mixed media filter tank will be used for filtration instead of four, as specified by the city, because only 200,000 gallons-a-day capacity will be involved initially, instead of 700,000 gallons. Another difference he noted is that alum will be used to precipitate phosphorus instead of lime, as specified by the city.

Other conditions suggested by the city and included are monitoring the flow of sewage, and requiring chlorine removal before the effluent is discharged.

Other information provided by Giese included: (1) sludge in the form of 70,000 - 75,000 gallons a month will be tank trucked to a WSSC incinerator; (2) WSSC will operate and staff the plant - not certain whether the State will license the WSSC personnel; and (3) while there are no limits as to the number of connections to the plant, WSSC is limiting connections to such that the daily flow capacity of 200,000 gallons is not exceeded.

Additional Facts Wanted

Council, impressed with the expertise that Giese and his staff had developed on such short notice, decided to ask for additional information. Upon Rhea Cohen's suggestion, Giese was asked to look into such matters as ability of plant to handle excess flowage, amounts of inorganic salts and phosphorus found in the effluent, and description of sludge removal, and description of kinds and frequency of virus tests. Councilman Gil Weidenfeld requested that the point of discharge and the stream on parcel 1 be inspected during the dry season next month. He also asked for an opinion from the city solicitor as to whether the effluent from the treatment plant will violate the city's water pollution ordinance.

Hugh Burns, Jr. Promoted

Hugh P. Burns, Jr. son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh P. Burns of 8-B Crescent, was recently promoted to the rank of Major in the U.S. Air Force.

Major Burns received his B.S. degree from the University of Maryland in 1962 at which time he was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force. Since entering the Air Force he completed Squadron Officers School and later the Air Force Command and Staff College. Subsequent to promotion to the rank of Captain, he entered Boston University under the Air Force Institute of Technology education program where he earned his Master of Science degree. During June of this year he received his Master of Arts degree from Central Michigan University.

Major Burns is married to the former Teresa Shives of Washington, D. C. They have four children: Dany 10, Brian 9, Mary 7, and Christopher 4.

Yard Sale to Benefit David Radcliffe

A miscellaneous yard sale benefiting Dave Radcliffe of Greenbelt will be held on Saturday, July 28 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, July 29, from 1 to 5 p.m. in the 2 court of Research. Featured among the varied items will be ceramics donated by friends and neighbors of Radcliffe who is improving after undergoing heart surgery in Houston, Texas.

It is Inconceivable . . .

To the Editor:

It is inconceivable to me why councilwoman Ms. Rhea Cohen insulted Judge Perry Bowen and the courts of Maryland. Judge Bowen is the same fair and impartial judge who rendered a decision in court favorable to the city of Greenbelt and against Charles Bresler.

It is inconceivable to me why councilwoman Ms. Rhea Cohen accepted from County Executive William Gullett an appointment to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission as a consultant.

Shortly after her appointment by the County Executive was accepted. I wrote a "letter to the editor" to the Greenbelt News Review citing "conflict of interest."

EIGHT months later Rhea Cohen resigned her appointment as consultant and thereby forfeited $60.00 (sixty dollars) per day. The reason she cited on her resignation was "Conflict of Interest."

Ms. Cohen, why did you wait so long to resign?

I guess it is hard to decide whether you have a "conflict of interest" when you're receiving $60. a day. We all should be thankful you took only $1,683.75 before you decided you were in "conflict of interest."

Thanks

To the Editor:

After three weeks at the Prince Georges General Hospital, Mrs. Delpha Buese (the former Delpha McCare) has returned to her home at 9 Forestway. Her stay at the hospital was due to a heart attack on June 24.

We wish to thank our many friends and neighbors for their thoughtfulness. The cards and flowers and prayers were very much appreciated.

Art Exhibit Kudos

To the Editor:

There is a fine art exhibit on the walls of Twin Pines in Greenbelt Center. The work of these artists is a credit to our town and we should be proud of them.

Why go to big department stores and pay big prices for pictures to beautify your home, when we have such excellent local talent. The two artists exhibiting have produced some delightful and interesting pictures.

I sincerely suggest that the people of Greenbelt stop by and view this pleasing collection of pictures, and perhaps purchase one, as I did.

SWIM TEAM NEWS

by Mike "Turtle" Jones

Overconfidence, added to a psyched BCC "Y" team were the key factors last Saturday as the Greenbelt Swim Team dropped its third meet of the season 272-238. High scorers for Greenbelt were John Schrider (15), Sue Bram (15), Reggie Smith (15), Lynn Labukas (13), Colleen Davis (13), Mariette Vanderzon (13), and Gene Turner (10).

This Saturday, July 28, Greenbelt will swim its last dual meet of the season at Burn Brae. Swimmers and officials should be ready to leave the pool by 7:45 a.m.

DRAMA AND MUSIC FEATURED AT LAKE PARK

The Montgomery Savoyards will perform "Trial By Jury" on Sunday, July 29 at 7 p.m. at the Lake Park Bandstand.

Also on the program will be a Gilbert and Sullivan gala of the best-loved music of these great showmen. The gala provides the audience with an opportunity to view the depth of talent of the Savoyards.

The News Review will print no letters-to-the-editor which are submitted anonymously. All letters must be signed, though names will be withheld upon the request of the writer. The address and telephone number of the writer should be designated.

100% or Else

To the Editor:

Mrs. Cohen seems to be adopting an "If you're not with me 100%, you're against the environment," tone to her letters.

The problem seems to stem from the different styles utilized by a pressure group like the Prince Georges Environment Coalition and a governing body like the city council. The Coalition is free to take a strident, all or nothing position, using techniques like the presentation of potty chairs to county councilmen while asking for their vote. Colorful as the Coalition is, it doesn't seem to be taken too seriously by the officials who make the decisions.

The city has an obligation to its citizens to be taken seriously. It is bound by law to practice the art of the possible and, when necessary, to compromise. In the case of the Greenbriar sewage treatment plant, the developer had the votes on the county council. He had the tentative approval from the state health dept. If city councilman Charles Schwan had not authored a compromise requiring piping and additional safeguards we would have a package plant operating right now with minimum safety standards.

I am sure that developers would rather have a city council full of 100 percenters who are ignored by the county council, WSSC and courts than a councilman like Schwan who presents realistic approaches.

County Conditions For Sewage Plant

- a. That the advanced treatment processes outlined by Dr. Cookson (consultant to the plant) in his written testimony be installed.
- b. That there be no bypass mechanism which would allow untreated sewage to by-pass the plant in times of overload.
- c. That excess chlorine be removed from the effluent after contact time has elapsed to effect the disinfection proposed by Dr. Cookson.
- d. That virus sampling of the effluent be done on a routine basis, at least monthly, by a competent laboratory, at the owner's expense.
- e. That multi-media filters, similar to those used at the Lake Tahoe plant be required.
- f. That there be a meter to constantly record the flow of sewage into the plant.
- g. There shall be a pre-set limit to the number of connections allowed and strict adherence to this limit.
- h. There shall be a large surge tank to equalize the flow into the plant so that flow through the treatment process during peak hours of use approximates the flow during low usage periods.
- i. A recycling capability shall be built into the plant, so that if any unit of the plant falls below the expected standard of treatment, the sewage can be sent back through the plant to insure proper treatment.
- j. A double, completely independent, power supply shall be required.
- k. The plant shall be run by WSSC using a trained and experienced maintenance crew.
- l. The method of sludge disposal shall be clearly outlined.
- m. The plant shall be closed as soon as public sewage facilities become available.
- n. That the effluent be enclosed in a pipe to a point in the stream where there is a continuous year-round flow of water, as recommended by the City of Greenbelt.
- o. That an emergency connection with the WSSC community sewer system will be built so that if a problem developed at the plant, sewage could be placed in the WSSC system instead of directly into the receiving stream.
- p. And finally, that sewage effluent will be treated with break-chlorination to meet State water quality standards.

GHI May Weigh Injunctive Action Against Greenbriar

by Barbara Likowski

Greenbriar was again discussed by Greenbelt Homes, Inc. board members at a special meeting on Thursday, July 19. Director Donald Volk asked that Greenbriar be discussed because he had received a call from councilwoman Rhea Cohen informing him that a permit for a sewage treatment plant had been granted to Alan Kay, developer of the tract. (Several other board members also had received such a call.)

Manager Royal Breashears told of writing letters to various people and organizations about the treatment plant and of having received very little information as a result of this correspondence. He also said that there were differing opinions about whether the stream in question was actually a free flowing stream.

The possibility of seeking an injunction was referred to GHI attorney, Albert Ginsberg. It was felt by board members that the longer they waited to make a decision on possible action, the harder it would be to get such an injunction.

President James Smith asked how deeply the board members felt the corporation should become involved. He then asked that the board members try to bring themselves up to date on the Greenbriar issue by the next meeting, August 9 so that the board might frame a proposal then. Smith added that he hoped interested members would also attend that meeting and express their feelings as to what stand the corporation should take.

The special board meeting had been called for the purpose of conducting some routine but necessary business such as approving membership applications, and reviewing bids on needed boiler refractory work and a roofing job. The latter bids had not yet been received.

In regards to the boiler work, Director Theodore Byerly asked if the boiler plants were in sound shape and if they would pass inspection. Breashears assured him that all the work had been done that was required for the annual inspection. This is the first time that the brick home boilers have needed to be inspected.
