GHI Manager Royal Breashears Is Honored at Retirement Dinner

A poem from a member of the GHI maintenance crew, one of many tributes to Royal D. Breashears on the occasion of his retirement, was like frosting on the cake. Breashears, who has been General Manager of GHI since 1962, was feted Sunday night, March 30, at a dinner attended by 125 guests at the Greenbelt American Legion. During the evening, many tributes to Breashears' steady, harmonious leadership of GHI and of his neighborliness were expressed.

Over the 27 years that Breashears has been associated with the cooperative, he has worked with more than twenty different boards of directors and a largesometimes cumbersome — membership (his 1600 bosses, as he likes to call them). During these years GHI has become one of the most stable cooperatives in the United States.

Breashears joined the cooperative as an accountant, not long after its incorporation in January 1953 as a resident-owner organization. Within one year he moved up to Comptroller, then in 1958 became both Comptroller and Assistant General Manager. In 1962 he was appointed General Manager, the third in the corporation's history.

During those early years, Breashears was involved in setting up the books of the cooperative—in a very real sense helping the corporation to establish its own identity after its separation from the federal government. Since GHI at that time was virtually synonymous with the town itself, many projects undertaken in the early years helped to chart the future direction of Greenbelt.

Highlights

Highlights of the years in which Breashears played a major role include:

helping to prepare a Master Plan of land use for undeveloped areas of Greenbelt to ensure continuance of the community's planning ideals; organizing a sales cooperative, Lakeside Home Owners, Inc.,

composed mostly of GHI members, to develop single family homes; -encouraging formation of the cooperative Woodland Hills to develop and purchase home sites in the Woodland Way-Northway area; -purchasing the former North End Store on Laurel Hill Rd. for restoration as a row of four frame homes and similar restoration of the former Medical Center on Ridge Rd. as a row of four masonry homes;

overseeing construction of four new single family homes and 25 new townhouses;

engaging in numerous battles with developers and county officials to protect the community from encroachment by highrise apartments and a

-surviving critical examinations of the administrative and financial affairs of the corporation by a management consulting firm, as well as by numer-

-planning the conversion from a steam heat to a hot water system in the 1000 frame homes; and shaping the critical decisions concerning rehabilitation and the heat conversion programs, which will have long-term effects on the history and viability of the corporation.

Tributes

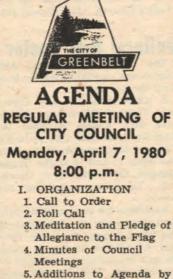

Among present and former associates gathered to honor Breashears were his predecessor and successor as General Manager, Paul Campbell and Ken Kopstein respectively; present and past GHI presidents, Donald Volk, Nat Shinderman, Ed Burgoon, and Jim Smith. Charlie Brown presided as master of ceremonies. Perhaps the tribute by Kopstein best summed up the feelings of those present when he commented on Breashears' skill in maintaining harmony and neighborliness in the community. "It is difficult to keep an organization like this running smoothly and keeping the discord down to a minimum. For the last 17 years he has provided a very strong See BREASHEARS, p. 8, col. 3

Twin Pines 23rd Annual Meeting and Elections by Mike Jones

At the 23rd annual Twin Pines meeting, President Peter Watters noted that because of current market conditions and rising interest rates, Twin Pines is currently unable to make loans for GHI homes. GHI loans are still regulated by the Maryland usury law, which limits the interest rate to 12%, although there are efforts in the state legislature to change this regulation. Currently, according to Watters, there is a waiting list of over 150 applicants for GHI loans.

Plans for a new building for Twin Pines were shelved when it was discovered that the mortgage for a large part of the Greenbelt Center is still held by a savings and loan association in Baltimore, making a construction loan impossible.

In the annual elections (see accompanying box), John Webb was re-elected, and Muriel Weidenfeld and Teresa Downey were elected to three-year terms on the Board of Directors. They join Bruce Bowman, Bill Fern, Harvey Geller, George Jones, John Maffay, and John Unger.

Irving Seigel and Joe Timer were elected to the Member Relations Committee, joining Ruth Davis, Bob Greig, and Bernina McGee. Sonia Garin and Audrey Stern were elected to the Nominations and Elections Committee, joining Miriam Reynolds, Helen Geller, and Ottilie Van Allen.

An amendment to the Twin Pines bylaws liberalizing the frequency with which dividends can be paid was passed by the membership.

Nursery School Open House

The Greenbelt Nursery School is planning an Open House which will be held on Saturday, April 26 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The School is located at Hillside and Crescent Roads behind the Community Church. Parents are invited to visit the School with their preschoolers.

Easter Egg Hunt and Show

The Easter Bunny will host the Annual Easter Egg Hunt, sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Department, on Monday, April 7. Boys and girls, preschool through sixth grade, are invited to participate in the hunt at the Greenbelt Lake Park at 9 a.m. Sharp! Hidden in the eggs are many special prizes that have been provided by Pizza Inn, Three Brothers, Donut n' Stuff, Family Pub, Gino's McDonald's, Greenbelt Consumer Services and Roy Rogers.

Following the hunt, at 9:45 a.m., "Snakes and Stuff" will appear on the Lake Park Bandstand. In the event of rain, all activities will be held at the Greenbelt Youth Center beginning at 10 a.m.

County Planning Board Denies Re-zoning Request

The Prince Georges County Planning Board on March 27 turned down a rezoning request for parcels 3 and 4. The owners want townhouse (R-T) zoning for 10.2 acres located along the northern border of Greenbelt on the east and west of Research Road.

In denying the rezoning from rural residential (R-R) to R-T, the majority of the Board concurred with its technical staff that the preferable zoning should be single-family detached housing (R-80). The Greenbelt City Council and the Citizens for Greenbelt are on record supporting R-80.

The application, together with the Planning Board and techni-

Outstanding Employee

PFC Charles Watkins

At the City's Annual Awards Banquet, held on March 15, Pfc Charles Watkins was honored as the Outstanding City Employee of 1979.

Chuck began his employment with the City in 1976 as a Police Officer-Patrolman and was promoted to his current position of Patrolman First Class in 1978. In presenting the award, Mayor Gil Weidenfeld cited Chuck's courtesy, friendliness, interest in the community, efficiency and for setting an excellent example for others. Also noted were his sense of humor, exemplary public relations and genuine concern for the citizens.

Besides Watkins, 11 other City employees received service awards. J. Paul Williams, Assistant Public Works Director, received a gift and service pin in recognition of his 30 years of service with the City. Williams, who began his employment with the City as bus operator for the old City bus system, has held several positions with the Public Works Department including Foreman and Administrative Aide. He was promoted to his present position in 1974 and he also serves as the City's Energy Coordinator.

Police Chief, William T. Lane, and Albert Markell, Foreman in the Parks Department, were honored for 15 years' service. Ten year service awards were received by Betty Lehman, Secretary in the Recreation Department, Gudrun Mills, City Clerk, Ray Vitch, Public Works Equipment Operator, and John Beh-Collector/Driver. Refuse rens, Recognized for five years' service were Police Officer John Lann, Refuse Collector Carl Bartholow and Detective Corporal, Tom Ceccarelli. Special recognition was given to Hubert Michael, Crewman IV in the Parks Department who will have completed 25 years service on April 11. Hubert plans to retire from the City on May 1, 1980.

reports, will be passed on to the Zoning Hearing Examiner, who will hold a formal public hearfor the District ing unci (County Council) on April 30, The examiner will then make his recommendation and, finally, all three recommendations will go to the District Council for a final decision. Any decision by the District Council which does not agree with the recommendations of Greenbelt's City Council would require a super majority, or eight votes out of 11. Further details on the Plan-

cal staff recommendations and

The Great Delusion To the Editor:

I share with Mr. Donald Archer his concern about the apparent deterioration of the appearance of GHI homes and grounds (News Review, March 13, 1980). However, he seems to lack an appreciation of the facts that have led to this condition.

Mr. Archer also asks if it was possible to cut the budget two months ago, why was it not possible to cut it before. The fact of the matter is that the budget was not cut. As a result of the membership action the budget was held to an increase of 10% instead of more than 20% requested by the board to meet uncontrollable inflationary costs. Even in the face of a 10% overall increase (15% for masonry), a decrease of personnel from 72 employees to 53 employees was necessary to provide funds to uncontrolled increased meet costs. It is obvious the services to members and our homes must suffer by this 20% cut in staff. Included in this cut was one inspector position, which was sorely needed to police regulations which Mr. Archer notes are observed in their breach. Other casualties were three grounds positions thus eliminating the grounds section. If Mr. Archer thinks our appearance is disgraceful now, wait until the summer comes and the corporation is faced with the problem of caring for the common grounds as well as other areas.

Why not electric heat? Mr. Archer, in 1971 the TAA Associates strongly urged a rehabilitation program which included electric heating and would have cost approximately $5 to $7 million instead of the current $11 to $12 million program now being planned that does not include heating conversion. Is it still possible today? I hope so. But the membership refused to approve $340,000 for rehabilitation financing. Will it approve an additional $4 to $5 million over and above the present rehabilitation program to change over to electric heating? The action of the membership did not save a cent for the GHI members. It merely deferred expenditures and possibly will require greater funds because of inflation.

Colors, designs, etc. of additions and home painting are personal and vary from person to person. GHI as a matter of member preference concentrates on safety and quality of construction. It prefers to dictate limitations on members' discretion at a minimum, being guided by member committee recommendations to the extent possible.

Finally, why should we need GHI management to police us? Each of us should be a responsible member minding our homes and grounds with care and pride, and consideration for our neighbors. Instead of squabbling and carping, why aren't we working

In last week's News Review, the article on GHI stated that HUD was imposing further requirements-the remodeling of kitchens and bathrooms-in return for the $6.4 million rehabilitation loan. These requirements are being considered by HUD for a different loan called GNMA Tandem Financing, available at 71/2% interest. GNMA Tandem Financing could be used to finance the heat conversion program and the additional rehabilitation, which will go before a membership vote on May 28.

GHI is continuing to work with the City of Greenbelt on revenue bond financing, available at 101/2% interest, another alternative for financing the heat conversion and further rehabilitation. Additional requirements for GNMA Tandem Financing have not yet been determined.

West Side Story

by Hally Ahearn The citizens who watched helplessly as a man caught in an excavation accident suffered for nearly three hours before a rescue squad from a neighboring community arrived were among those who founded the Greenbelt Volunteer Rescue Squad in 1946, according to W. Vincent Dutton, Chief of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad from 1958 to 1965.

On the roster of today's voluateer members, junior members, associates and Ladies Auxiliary. Dutton will show you names of many families are repeated. Dutton's father-in-law, Joseph Wenrich, is a past president of the organization; his wife Cleo is president of the Ladies Auxiliary; his son Michael W. Dutton is the present volunteer fire and rescue chief.

Last week the volunteer family celebrated its 25th anniversary. In February, 1955, volunteers assisting Greenbelt's paid firefighters joined those on the Rescue Squad to become the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad. Inc.

During 1960 the fire department building on Crescent Road between St. Hugh's Rectory and Parkway was constructed. The volunteer organization moved out of its cramped quarters in what is now the Nyman Realty office, where "bunks" for over night volunteers had been the fire hose beds on the trucks and the nose of the Class A pumper stuck out of the door.

The new building includes an 8-man double-decker bunk room. Additions were later built to accommodate more bunks, including those for the two University of Maryland Fire Protection Engineering majors who live in the bunk rocm in exchange for being on call and for five other live-in volunteers.

About $12,000 was raised by carnivals, raffles and dances to pay for many of the furnishings for the new building. The volunteer organization also raises funds through its Friday night bingo games and catering services offered by the Ladies Auxiliary. No money is received from the county to pay for new equipment.

Equipment

Along the back wall and a side wall of the 8-stall bay. called the apparatus room, some 45 or 50 heavy firefighting coats and the preverbial hats, some charred and bubbled from heat, hang on pegs. Heavy rubber hip boots stand under each coat.

When Deputy Chief Bill Holland walked into the fire station 12 years ago, at age 13, he said to himself, "I've got to have one of those ccats." He flips open screwlock panels on the side and back of one of the Class A engines to reveal other equipment necessary for firefighting. In one compartment are giant-sized spare couplings used to connect the 50 foot sections of hose, and equally huge nozzles for deflecting spray in various situations. One is a circular brass "cellar" nozzle lowered through a hole in the ceiling to sprinkle down an area until it is cool enough to enter. In ancther compartment are shovels, and squeegees for cleaning up after a fire, unless the area must be left as evidence for the fire marshall's investigation.

Specially designed tools are used to open up rooms to check for charring and the extent of fire spread. (The pike pole looks like a giant fishing spear, with a point for passing through the ceiling and a hook which catches on the inside to pull down the plaster. The egg hook is used for walls. Its hook has a saw tooth which is brought down through the plaster in a sawing motion to cut out sections of wall.) The forcibleentry or 'bar" man slides a "K" tool behind the lockplate on a door and rips off the lock to gain entry. Thanks to the K tool, invented by a New York City vol-unter fire chief, Holland says "We don't often have to smash a door down with an axe anymore."

Salvage is another firefighting water-proof principle. Heavy throws are carried in the compartments to protect rugs and furniture from water damage and tracking. Ventilation, another of the principles, is assisted by a smoke ejector or heavy-duty fan carried along. But contrary to popular belief. firemen rarely break windows to effect ventilation. "Heat breaks the windows," says Deputy Chief William F. Dunn. "Firemen usually just open them."

Air tanks, called "Scotts" for the name of their manufacturer, and masks are carried in compartments and also in the cab and mounted outside next to the "buckets" or cubbies on each side of the engine where firefighters ride standing up. Before Scotts, the masks firemen used merely filtered the air. "not much better than a handkerchief," commented Dunn.

Another surprising fact not shown in movie versions of fire is that most indoor firefighting is carried on in complete darkness. Even flames do not illuminate through the thick clouds of smoke.

Holland tells of the time he crawled up out of a sunken living room to escape through a window. He learned later that there was no sunken living room; he had crawled up onto a kitchen table and out the window. Dunn recounts the time he mistook an overstuffed chair for a body. Disorientation inside a burning building is complete. For this reason, firefighters are trained with their gas masks taped blind. They are taught to 'follow the hose wherever it goes," feeling for the coupling through their heavy gloves to discover which way it is screwed together "It's male in, female out," says Dunn. "I hope that doesn't sound chauvinistic." They are also taught to follow cracks between floorboards to the wall and then lean one shoulder to the wall and follow it out.

Noxious_Gasses

As many as 15 gases can be produced from a burning carpet. Burning telphone wire insulation produces deadly polyvinyl chloride, and heavy levels of carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide are almost always present at a fire. A (D-17) gas meter is carried which measures the lower flammable limit of any combustible gasses present. In the cab is a manual which lists various chemical mixtures and gives ways to combat, contain, and treat vict'ms of each.

The driver operates the pumps from a panel of pressure gauges and control dials set in the side of the truck. Because 38 pounds of pressure are lost to friction for every 100 feet of hose, he must make on the spot calculations to regulate pressure for each of the 5 hoses on the truck, for a total of 1,600 feet of hose line.

Greenbelt's two Class A pumpers and one minipump certainly outstrip the converted bread truck of 1955. The minipumper, which has the same water flow capacity as the two big engines but carries only five men instead of eight, is used to get into tight spots — for some apartment fires and for brush and auto fires.

The two box-style rescue vehicles were purchased in 1974 and 1975 to replace the old Cadillac models, at a cost of about $26,500 each. The vehicles, and those who ride them, are equipped to handle eye wounds, burns, poisoning, bee stings, cuts, fractures and births, explains Lt. Matthew Weber. At least 80 hours of first aid training, including CPR, are required before an aid man, or women, can go out in an ambulance.

Although there are no women fire and rescue volunteers at present ,over the years four women have participated. Every volunteer is required to be trained in first aid and be equally trained and willing to ride the ambulance or the engine, although a volunteer can opt to only ride the ambulance.

Transport

Last Saturday, for instance, Eddie Meier, Randy Krob and Earl Breeden handled an "emergency transport." An elderly woman resident of the Greenbelt Convalescent Home was having trouble breathing and was running a temperature. Meier drove, with Krob in the cab to give directions, and Breeden rode in the box, checking the oxygen kit. Inside the convalescent home they rolled the sheets close to the patient's body and hoisted her, in the sheet, onto the stretcher. They carefully wrapped her hair, moist from fever, in a towel, tucked in blanket and sheet and strapped her in. Outside, giving the woman advance warning, they lowered the collapsible stretcher and on the count of three hoisted it into the ambulance. Krob helped her husband climb aboard and then held the patient's arm. All during the ride aid man Krob talked to her. "How do you like the nurses at the convalescent center? They're pretty nice, aren't they?" The woman's face lit up. "Yes, very nice." The siren wailed, and soon she was delivered to the Laurel Hospital Center.

Randy Krob is the son of Greenbelt Police Lt. John R. Krob, who as a volunteer fireman logged in enough calls to be among the top ten most active volunteers in 1979. A log is kept of all the calls received and answered, and any other operational detail. If a piece of equipment is moved, for instance, its new location is entered in the log.

To maintain voting status, volunteers must earn 250 points a quarter. Points are awarded for attendance at meetings and training sessions, on-duty time and for various other services performed, and logged for each participant.

In the control room where the logs are kept is a red phone, a direct pick-up to the county-wide central fire and ambulance control system in Hyattsville. Mounted on one wall is the city's municipal alarm system connected directly to the fire house from all the major buildings in Greenbelt. Green Ridge House will scon be added to this system.

Throughout the other offices are other notebooks containing preplans, equipment-testing records, procedures, and training materials. Pre-plans are records and block diagrams of all buildings and locations within the department's jurisdiction. They show water hook-ups, gas lines and exits and list any hazardous materials on the premises. Pre-plans are updated by yearly inspection. Only GHI and single-family homes are exempt from routine inspection, but free home inspections are offered to anyone who wishes this service.

On the bulletin boards are recent notices from county and state agencies, WSSC, Pepco and WGL concerning changes in roads, and in gas, electrical and water lines. These are later placed on file for reference and for use in training.

Training

Training is ongoing and extensive. "Almost everybody goes to school on Monday nights." says Holland. Typical topics are "Tactics for Brushfires," "Oxygen Systems," "Arson Detection for Firefighters." Since major emergencies are not everyday occurrences, review is important. "We like to keep it fresh in our minds," says Dunn.

Junior Associate members are interested volunteers from 13 to 16 years old who participate in classroom training and work to become familiar with tools, equipment and procedures. Juniors, from 16 to 18, are issued equipment and allowed to ride — on the back step only — but are not allowed to enter a burning building. Younger members are required to maintain a B average in school. Senior members, 18 or older, must be employed.

While associate members do not ride, they perform other necessary duties and accrue points in the same way as regular members. Dunn's wife, Pat, for example, runs the annual ambulance 'drive and does a lot of the paperwork. "She didn't join the Ladies Auxiliary, because she hates to ccok." says Dunn. "She's a very organized person. so that's the kind of work she does for us," he says proudly.

Auxiliary

The Ladies Auxiliary is a separate organization but members are often related to the volunteers. The profits from their catering and fundraising events are used to buy equipment and furnishings and to contribute to memorial funds maintained for firemen who suffer illness or injury not related to their active volunteer service.

Fire and rescue volunteers receive no money for the service they perform, but "Everybody with five years service has been in the hospital at least once," says

Dunn. "We always have burns, everytime there is a 'working' or 'all hands' fire," he adds. The neck, ears, hands and knees of anyone working in the fire are always scorched.

Vince Dutton hopes two bills will get through the Maryland legislature this year. One would give an income tax break to volunter firemen. The other provides that a portion of fire insurance monies come back to departments. In 1974 the county government provided a retirement bonus of about $100 a month for volunteers who have served for 25 years and maintained 50 service points per month for all of these years.

Three firemen, paid by the county, work weekdays in the Greenbelt station. but, says Dunn, "In Greenbelt our volunteers come first. They go out on calls first." On the other hand, Vince Dutton says proudly, "There is a job for evrybody in fire service." He cites former Greenbelt volunteers-who have made careers of fire service. Bob Grant works for the National Fire Protection Association: Joe Batchler teaches firemanship at the University of Maryland; Dick Custer works on hazardous materials for the Bureau of Standards. Adds Dunn, "People are beginning to recognize fire service as a science, instead of sixteen gorillas with a hose.'

Holland says he joined the fire service family for a chance to do something — a public service and for something to do. Others volunteers echo these reasons for their commitment. But Junior member Earl Breeden uncovered what is perhaps the deepest motivation: "It's just that my heart beats faster when I see a fire."

Council Declines Position on State Bill About Pregnancy by Denise Tann

The City Council tabled consideration of a State bill on adolescent pregnancy at its March 3 meeting following an endorsement request made by the director of Greenbelt CARES, Carol Leventhal. Council, voting 3 to 2, cited its established policy of not taking a position on matters not singularly affecting Greenbelt.

The legislation, House Bill 444, is a State government bill which will provide funding for public and private agencies to implement comprehensive services and referrals to pregnant and nonpregnant teenagers.

This service will include pregnancy tests, maternity counseling, paternity counseling, family planning services, nutrition information and counseling, educational, vocational and legal assistance.

Since HB-444 focused on the issue of adolescent pregnancy, Leventhal felt that as director of a youth services bureau, the bill was worth supporting. She solicited the support of the council by sending a draft letter to City Manager James K. Giese for approval and possible endorsement by council.

The draft letter requested that Governor Harry Hughes support the bill by including funds for it in his supplemental budget and told of Leventhal's support of the bill.

Leventhal

At the request of councilman Richard Pilski at the February 25 meeting, Leventhal appeared before council on March 3 to explain her position. She said, "I felt that I could personally endorse the bill and professionaly endorse it." She said that she saw this as an opportunity to boost existing programs with state monies and a facility like Green-belt CARES would be attracted to that. Leventhal said she hoped that the letter could be sent with the council's endorsement, but, if not, "I will pass it along as my personal view."

Councilman Thomas X. White asked Leventhal for statistics to get an estimate of the extent of the problem within Greenbelt. Leventhal cited that of the 14 females between the ages of 13 and 17 that CARES is concerned with, four are sexually active, none is presently pregnant, but each is "pre-pregnant." She said, "I coined a phrase 'pre-pregnant' meaning that the four are intent on becoming pregnant."

White urged council to support the bill and offered a motion.

Opposition Councilman Charles Schwan

said he thought Carol should support the bill because she is qualified to do so and he would endorse that wholeheartedly. But, he said, 'I don't feel council should endorse_the bill."

Mayor Gill Weidenfeld was in in agreement with Schwan. "I have no problem with Carol in her professional capacity lobbying for this bill. I personally support it as an individual, but I'm not comfortable with having the city getting involved in these social issues," he said.

Pilski, on the other hand. said he saw no problem with supporting the bill.

Although he had seconded the motion "for the purpose of dis-Councilman Richard cussion,' Castaldi said he too agreed with Schwan. He then moved to table the bill "so I don't find myself voting against it.'

"The council will still support Carol's sending a letter," Schwan added.

White

Seeing support for his motion eroding, White explained his position once more: "Carol is a city staff member directly involved with youngsters at risk of untimely pregnancies. The city should support HB-444, which provides funding for counseling and assistance for these youngsters. This bill will directly impact on children in Greenbelt who go to CARES for assistance." White felt the bill was appropriate for council to support. these services are made available. they will be meeting a need. I'm sure Carol feels that impacts Greenbelt. I'm sorry to see that council is reluctant to take a position on this bill," he concluded. 'One does things as a matter of principle here," said Schwan, "I do support the bill, but I feel we don't take a position on bills that are not peculiar to Greenbelt."

The three members of council who voted to table -- Schwan, Weidenfeld and Castaldi - felt that the city government should carefully refrain from going into social issues not singularly affecting Greenbelt.

Council Delays Decisions Until Budget Hearings

The City Council held an amazingly short meeting on March 17 and deferred much of their business until later meetings.

Council first discussed the new property tax rates and decided to question state legislators about their actions.

No action was taken on the budget report from the Park and Recreation Advisory Board but council agreed to take up the matter when the entire city budget comes up for review next month. Included in the report was a request from Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club for $8300, a boost of 70 percent over last year's request.

The Advisory Planning Board submitted a report on the issuance of a Capital Improvement Bond, with specific recommendations as to what should be included. Again, action was deferred until the council takes up the city's budget.

Council voted to hold future hearings on the feasibility of cable TV for Greenbelt and agreed to contract with the state for mosquito control.

The longest and most heated discussion of the night centered on the raising of rates for the Greenbelt municipal pool, Costs are rising and use is dropping, so the city faces the potential of increasing deficits. To offset this, Recreation Director Harry G. Irving proposed that the rates be boosted $30 across the board, bringing the membership cost up to $90 for city residents and $120 for non-residents. Irving also proposed that daily admittance fees be raised 25c per person. The new cost would be $2 for residents, $2.50 for non-residents. Included was a proposal to raise the fee for swimming lessons from $8 to $10.

Council member Richard Pilski feels that the city should consider taking a slight loss on the pool so more people could use it. He was vehemently opposed to raising the rates for swimming lessons because he felt that "... every child should know how to swim."

Member Richard Castaldi took a different approach, saying that everyone should have to pitch in "at least something" to make up for the loss of revenues.

And again, the council decided to wait until the budget hearings to make any decision.

"Night Watch" Makes It

The Greenbelt Players' production of Night Watch, the first play to be performed in the Utopia Theater, closed Sunday night after playing to record crowds. Over 700 people saw the play during its two-week run, and the Players received complimentary reviews in Washington and local newspapers. The Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center, producer of the play, expressed delight with the community's response.

The next performance by the Greenbelt Players will be three one-act plays, tentatively scheduied for' June. These plays will be chosen from the best productions of the actors' and directors' workshops which will begin soon at the theater. Anyone interested in the workshops should call Angela Schreiber at 345-3916.

The Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center returns to its regular schedule of events in April. This Friday, April 4, the movie will be "West Side Story," at 8 p.m. On the following Friday, April 11, the following Friday, April 11, the Cultural Arts Center features a ballet movie, "The Red Shoes," also at 8 p.m.

The Cultural Arts Center will kick off a major membership and fund-raising drive later this month. The Center needs to raise a substantial sum of money by June 1 in order to secure a year's lease on the Utopia Theater. People interested in helping out should call Konrad Herling at 345-9369, John Ward at 345-4487, or Lindley Darden at 474-0037.
