Ridge Rd. Widening, Southway to Eastway

by Bill Rowland

During its regular meeting council received information from City Manager James Giese about "a very preliminary set of plans" prepared by the engineering firm of John D. Emler & Associates for reconstruction of Ridge Road between Southway and Eastway.

The city, which has already received a Community Development Block Grant of $129,000 for the part of the project between Southway and Gardenway, has applied for an additional grant for the Gardenway-to-Eastway work.

In written comments to the council, Giese said, "It is proposed to widen Ridge Road to a 40-foot width, with concrete curbs and gutters. These improvements would be similar to the improvements previously undertaken on Ridge Road between Eastway and Northway, and (would) provide sufficient width for parking on both sides of the road and a single travel lane in either direction." A sidewalk to be located along the southeastern side of the road "would be five feet wide where it is located adjacent to the curb and gutter, which will be in most instances. Handicapped ramps would be provided at designated sidewalks and driveway entrances."

In oral comments to the council, Giese outlined proposals to realign the sidewalk and modify the width of the road where necessary to avoid destruction of trees.

Giese suggested that before design proceeds further, the council should hold a public hearing and then give direction to the engineers as to final design requirements. The council asked Giese to schedule the public hearing.

Transfer of Roads

In another road-related development, the city has been asked in a letter from the Maryland State Highway Administration to accept transfer, from state to city ownership, of parts of Crescent and Ridge Roads adjacent to Kenilworth Avenue.

As a part of the construction of the Beltway/Kenilworth Avenue interchange, the state obtained rights of way and constructed Crescent Road from the Lake Park entrance to its present connection with Kenilworth Avenue, and also the section of Ridge Road from Crescent to Ivy Lane. In 1981, the State Highway Administration (SHA) did maintenance resurfacing of these two sections of roads, and then took a look at the status of both roads.

According to SHA's letter, their review found that "the mileage contained in the repaved area of both roadways is now, and has been for many years, included in the municipal mileage claimed by and granted to the City of Greenbelt" for state Highway User Fund Allocations. SHA also told the city that "the roadways are restrictive in scope since they serve only the City of Greenbelt community . . . (and), therefore, should be a part of the municipal system."

City Manager Giese suggested to the council that perhaps the city should agree to assume responsibility for these roads. But council members raised the point that SHA has previously said it might become necessary to move Crescent Road from its present alignment so that it intersects with Kenilworth Ave. farther away from the Beltway exit ramp. The councilmen want to know whether, in that event, the city as owner would have to pay the costs both of constructing the new road and of tearing up the old pavement to convert the land to park use. The council agreed to defer action on the SHA proposal until more information about city liabilities is obtained.

The Golden Egg

Council acknowledged the receipt of two letters from Sidney J. Brown, owner of the Beltway Plaza Mall, protesting the increase in the city's Admissions and Amusement Tax on coin-operated amusement devices from 4% to 10 percent.

Brown said the increase was an attempt to "kill the goose that laid the Golden Egg. This tax," said Brown, "obviously is aimed at one business, namely the Beltway Plaza, and on that basis it is strictly biased, discriminatory, unfair and a denial of equal protection of the law in violation of the Constitution. Unless the council withdraws this attempt to destroy the Beltway Plaza and its merchants, we shall take the matter to court."

In a letter of reply to Brown, City Manager Giese explained "that unlike all other forms of amusement and admission taxes which were at the rate of ten percent, the tax upon the game machines was only at 4% percent. Subsequently, it was the decision of council to make the tax rate uniform. . . . Since this tax applies to all coin-operated amusement games within the city, and since there are many such devices located outside the Beltway Plaza . . . I do not feel it was the intention of the city council to discriminate against anybody."

The council declined to reconsider the increase in the tax, which it had passed on February 1 and which will go into effect on April 15.

Request for Another Meeting On Rezoning Annoys Council

by Bill Rowland

Greenbelt's city council members, during their regular meeting on February 22, reacted angrily to a letter from Edward C. Gibbs, Jr., attorney for the owners of Parcels 1 and 2, asking for a second meeting with representatives of the city to discuss possible alternatives for the development of the property.

In late January, after Gibbs failed to convince the council to accept rezoning, the owners asked the county's Zoning Hearing Examiner to "continue" — that is, postpone — a scheduled hearing on the controversial and long-dormant applications for rezoning of this 112-acre property between Greenbelt Homes and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. The owners want townhouse (R-T) zoning. The city council and the Technical Staff of Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission have strongly opposed the R-T zone, favoring instead use of the land for free-standing single-family homes.

The council members expressed serious concern about the effect that continuing delay of the zoning hearing might have for the city. This concern focused around generalized understanding that if the hearing examiner's decision is not filed with the county council by April 26, then resolution of the rezoning issue could not be reached before January 1983 at the earliest — that is, with redistricting in effect and the new nine-member county council in office. There were suspicions that it was already too late from a procedural point of view to meet the April deadline. But no hard facts on timing, options open to the owners, or implications and impacts for the city, were available during this meeting, and the council asked the city manager to gather the information.

As to a council work session with Gibbs, Councilmen Thomas White, Richard Pilski, and Edward Putens made very clear their complete disinterest in talking further with the attorney about what White called "old, ancient" rezoning applications. White said he would be interested in a meeting only if the owners wanted to propose new development plans for the property.

Mayor Richard Castaldi and Mayor Pro Tem Gil Weidenfeld, although sharing the unease of the other three councilmen about the situation, argued that the council should not refuse to meet with Gibbs. City Manager James Giese suggested that if the rezoning applications do get to the county council (sitting as District Council) for decision, the city probably would be in a better position if it could show that it had talked to the developer when asked to do so.

With the council caught in a three-to-two impasse against meeting in a work session with Gibbs, City Solicitor Emmett Nanna finally offered the saving compromise: Put the topic of Parcel 1 & 2 rezoning on the agenda for the next regular council meeting, and let Gibbs attend and speak in public if he wishes. The five councilmen readily agreed. (The News Review later learned from City Manager Giese that Gibbs had a prior commitment for the evening of March 1 when council was to meet next, and that the topic would probably be put on the agenda for the March 15 regular meeting of council.)

Credit Union To Hold Open House March 20

The Greenbelt Federal Credit Union is holding an Open House on Saturday, March 20, from 2 to 5 p.m. in celebration of its move to new quarters at 111 Centerway (former post office) in the community shopping center. All residents of Greenbelt and all members of the Greenbelt Cooperative, Inc., are invited to attend.

The credit union is vacating its quarters in the Greenbelt supermarket complex it has occupied since 1962 when the supermarket was rebuilt following a fire which burned the original structure to the ground.

The new location provides approximately three times as much space as the credit union's former office in the co-op facility.

GFCU is one of the oldest credit unions in the area. Through mergers it is now comprised of the original community credit union plus three acquisitions: Winnie's Chuck Wagon (ARA), Railway Express (WREX), and Consumers Co-op credit unions.

Membership in GFCU is open to anyone who lives or works in Greenbelt and to members and employees of the Greenbelt Cooperative, Inc.

Electric Heat Show & Tell Draws Crowd

by Katherine Keene

Some 300 GHI members made their way to the Hamilton Place office on Saturday and Sunday to see a sample of a Chromalox baseboard heater and wall and floor thermostats. Members of the Board and Audit Committee who were present to answer questions said that the turnout was quite beyond their expectations. "We've learned a lot more about the questions we need to answer," board member Steve Curtis said.

There were questions. Members wanted to know how large the baseboard heaters would be, where they would be located, when they could expect them in their row, whether the new wiring would tear up the walls, if they really had to have a ceiling heater in the kitchen, why they could not have a wall thermostat in the living room and floor thermostats in the bedroom, or why the wall thermostat could not be in the bedroom and the floor thermostat everywhere else.

Steve Curtis, who was present on both Saturday and Sunday for the entire sessions, fielded most of the questions, at times addressing as many as 30 people. He and John Lewis took the heater apart, demonstrating how the heating unit snapped into position easily, and showing the protective grill that covers the top to prevent little hands or paws from thrusting themselves into the heater.

One obvious need that members still have is to see the hot water heaters to help them decide where to place them.

Meadows Is Back

To the Editor:

With great pleasure many old-time customers welcome Dave Meadows back as Manager of the Greenbelt Co-op Service Station after being detailed to the Westminster Service Station for 14 weeks. Many letters were written and the Greenbelt Area Co-op Council acted strongly to request his return. Many loyal customers dropped out when he was gone. Dave will be glad to welcome such customers back for the quality service he has always provided...

The Washington Consumers' Checkbook recently rated the Greenbelt Co-op Service Station, when managed by Mr. Meadows, in the small top group of garages in customer satisfaction, quality of work, and price.

Boys & Girls Club

Jesse Cho's fifteen foot bank shot with three seconds remaining earned Greenbelt's 10-year old Boys and Girls Club basketball team a 32-30 victory over Bladensburg, March 5. This victory also clinched the Boys' "10" AA National League title for Greenbelt and gave the team a 12-0 league mark with three league games remaining. The game was a tight contest with Greenbelt five points down with slightly more than three minutes left to play. However, team defensive play led to Greenbelt's scoring the game's last seven points to win by two. Team members are Bob Asmussen, Joel Cahalan, Frank Campbell, Jim Barron, Jesse Cho, George Clinedinst, Pat Conrad, Shawn Luddy, Jeff Powers, and Scott Smith.

O'Neill Play: A Good Try

by Rema Boscov

Eugene O'Neill's "A Moon for the Misbegotten" opened Friday at the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center and will be performed weekends through March 21. This play is in the tradition of "A Long Day's Journey Into Night," and its semi-autobiographical overtones give it freshness as O'Neill skillfully bathes us in the humor and pathos of an Irish father and daughter, transplanted to tenant soil in Connecticut, and their pathetic alcoholic landlord.

In true O'Neill fashion the present exists to explain the past and we get relatively little dramatic action. O'Neill was a dabbler in that new science of his day—psychology. He here presents us with a man turned to drink and whores, steeped with the guilty memory of his sexual debauchery while his mother lay in her coffin, who seeks love and forgiveness on the breast of mother-substitute Josie Hogan, a virgin fiercely proud of her pre-tentious reputation as the neighborhood scandal. Angela Schreiber does a creditable performance in this role, which demands a believable transition from belligerent daughter to compassionate friend.

Her saucy father, a trickster with the Irish love for drinks, drama and his daughter is very well characterized by Charles Bortell, who obviously enjoys this role, though first night flusters had him fumbling a few lines. Joe Glenn's performance as Jim Tyrone, guilt-ridden drunkard with one foot in the grave, seeking forgiveness in his journey toward death, is convincing. That is fortunate and perhaps not unexpected, since O'Neill has invested in this character the thrust of his message and a recurring theme in his plays—life is time spent waiting to die.

This is a tough play to put across well. There is so much dialogue and so little action. Pacing is all-important. And that's where this production positively falls apart. The dialogue simply does not flow. Too many seconds elapse from speech to speech (okay, now it's your turn) and what could become a powerful performance becomes a trial of the public patience. Plainly, this show drags.

But this is amateur local live theater and the people who present it are to be applauded. Tom Schreiber has done a laudable job with the set and the cast has taken a sizable jab at a herculean task. No doubt they and director Bruce Lloyd have grown from this undertaking. I hope next time they will attempt to learn less and select a play we can enjoy watching as much as they enjoy presenting it. I have seen them do it before. I know they can do it again.

Josie Hogan, played by Angela Schreiber, confronts her saucy Irish father, played by Charles Bortell, in a scene from Eugene O'Neill's "Moon for the Misbegotten." The play will be given weekends through March 21 at the Utopia Theater.

New Crime Prevention Committee Named; Commemorative Guidelines Are Adopted

by Bill Rowland

"People" topics showed up in a variety of forms in the agenda for the regular city council meeting on February 22.

The city council appointed the seven members of the new Greenbelt Crime Prevention Committee. Members are Richard G. Cripe, Sharon Weidenfeld, and Hollis Raphael Weisman, all for three-year terms; Ruth E. Kastner and Clifton L. Brown, Jr., both for two-year terms; and James P. Desautels and Robert J. Flynn, both for one-year terms. Longer-range staffing of the committee will be for staggered terms of three years. Council also named Councilman Edward Putens as its nonvoting member on the committee. Pfc. Doug Sappington has been designated by the city manager as the Police Department's nonvoting member. The Community Relations Advisory Board will also provide a nonvoting member.

Al Cousin was appointed by the council as the new chairman of the Community Relations Advisory Board.

Commemorative Guidelines

"Commemorative Guidelines" for the future naming of city properties were adopted by the council. The new guidelines provide that any person, living or deceased, who has made a significant contribution to the city or its citizens is eligible for commemoration. However, persons who at the time of nomination are elected or appointed officials or employees of the city are not eligible. Descriptive names, including references to historical, geographical, or traditional names (such as "Indian Springs" or "Boxwood Playground") are also eligible for nomination.

Organizations, elected officials, and individuals, by petitions to the city council, may nominate persons or descriptive names for commemoration. The council will refer petitions to one or more of the city's advisory boards for consideration at two or more publicized meetings, and for recommendations back to the council.

The council will decide the official names for properties and facilities. The Maryland-National Capital Park & Planning Commission is responsible by law for designating street names, and the council will decide on street names to be recommended to that agency.

After adopting the new guidelines, the council promptly put them to their first use. Albert Herling had previously proposed to the council that Southway be renamed in honor of Rexford Tugwell, that Centerway be renamed in honor of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and that the Center Mall be renamed in honor of Edward Filene. Council referred the proposals to the Advisory Planning Board, the Community Relations Advisory Board, and the Park and Recreation Advisory Board, to be considered by all three boards in accordance with the new guidelines.

FDR Centennial

The council members reacted with interest to a proposal initiated by Betty Allen, and put on the agenda by Councilman Thomas White, for a centennial commemoration of Franklin D. Roosevelt in Greenbelt this year. As White told the council in written comments, "1982 is the centennial year commemorating the 100th birthday of Franklin D. Roosevelt. I propose that council consider including an appropriate program in conjunction with this year's Greenbelt Day ceremonies to memorialize Roosevelt. If council agrees, a committee made up of interested citizens should be formed to plan and recommend suitable activities."

Allen, on the staff of the Greenbelt Library, is in charge of the Library's Tugwell Room. She told the council that she has been receiving many requests for information because of the centennial. She feels Greenbelt probably would not exist if it were not for President Roosevelt and his administration. Allen suggested that preparations be done on a cooperative basis, citing such groups as the library, a University of Maryland project now underway, Greenbelt Homes, Inc., and the Democratic Club.

The council asked the city manager to publicize the proposal so that the council can assess community interest.

Indictment Sought

State's Attorney, Arthur A. Marshall, Jr., announced plans to seek indictment against the off-duty Metropolitan Police Officer under investigation in connection with the death of 53 year old maintenance engineer James Brown at Springhill Lake Apartments, in Greenbelt, on February 17, 1982.

State's Attorney Marshall said the case against Anthony John Zavosky of 9160 Springhill Lane will be presented to the County's Grand Jury on March 17, 1982, and that indictment for Murder and Use of a Handgun in the Commission of a Felony will be sought from the 23 member citizen panel.

Marshall declined to discuss the details of the case at this time, stating only that he believes the evidence justifies the murder and handgun indictment, and that the facts known to the state support such a recommendation to the Grand Jury.

ROOSEVELT COMMEMORATION COMMITTEE

The year 1982 commemorates the 100th anniversary of the birth of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, our nation's 32nd president. Since President Roosevelt had a direct influence on the beginning of Greenbelt, it is only fitting that the occasion of his birthday be honored by this city.

The City Council is seeking volunteers willing to serve on a committee to help plan an appropriate commemoration. Interested persons should contact Gudrun Mills, City Clerk, at the Greenbelt City Office, 474-3870.

City Girl Scout-Brownie Troops Need Leaders

Greenbelt needs Girl Scout leaders, men or women. The Springhill Lake Junior troop (grades 4-6), has been unable to meet this year because it has no leader, although there are several people willing to be assistant leaders. Anyone interested in working with this group should attend a meeting Thursday, March 18 at 7 p.m. in the Springhill Lake Community Room.

Central Greenbelt's Brownie troop (grades 2-3) needs an assistant leader. Leaders are also needed for a new first grade Brownie troop, that will be needed next year.

Members' Request to Retain Old Oil Burners Turned Down by GHI Board

by Mary Lou Williamson

Appeals to the Greenbelt Homes Board of Directors to keep the old oil burners, one from 3-court Eastway and the other from 28 Ridge, were denied. The vote at the February 25 regular meeting was unanimous, 7-0. (Steve Curtis and Della Donaldson were absent from the meeting.) The board also rejected the idea of reimbursement for inconvenience to members, saying that it could not be done fairly.

General Manager Tim Mitter announced that the John Hanson resales financing agreement has been caught in the real-estate vs. consumer loan snare that has plagued GHI throughout its history. The laws and the interest rates of the two types of loans differ. Loans for GHI houses through Twin Pines and the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union have been considered consumer loans. John Hanson officials, who had been thinking in terms of real estate loans, have delayed signing the agreement while their attorneys are studying the situation.

Probably the most difficult task the board faced during the evening was in turning down the request of the members of 3 court Eastway. These members had petitioned the board to keep their present oil heating system. All but one member of the court have now signed, and the remaining couple is in Florida for the winter and had not yet decided. "We aren't asking for anything special," said their spokesman Frank Ging. "We intend to stay on oil and the system is going to be maintained by GHI."

One by one the board members reviewed for Ging and a few others who were present from the 3 court, why the corporation had decided to give up the old system. They talked about the high cost of maintenance and the high cost of fuel oil. By contrast, they said, this year for about $1500 each of them would get an entirely new system of heat and hot water plus the needed electrical work. This investment is expected to result in the immediate reduction of the members' monthly cost of fuel and all but eliminate the large maintenance force needed to keep the old oil plants working at a large monthly expense.

This last point was a critical factor in the board's decision to deny 3-court's request. There will be no oil heating engineers left on the maintenance staff to take care of one or two boilers.

Don Volk was concerned that the members of the 3-court, who have met previously with board members to discuss this issue, apparently did not understand what the board wanted them to do. Volk said he had told them to "come back to us with a unanimous decision to keep the oil system, but with a plan of how you are going to do it." Licenses and permits to operate the boilers must be obtained from the county, boilers must meet county codes (this requirement, involving major work, has been waived for two years by the county in view of GHI's anticipated change to electric heat), and day-to-day maintenance and repair of boilers, insurance, and purchase of fuel oil must be considered. "You need to present this information to us, and its cost," said Volk.

"I see nothing of that in your plan."

"I am convinced that economically (the conversion to electric heat) makes sense!" Volk emphasized.

Member Nat Shinderman said much the same thing. "The 3-court could have chosen deliberately to pay more (to keep the oil heat) . . . and develop a comprehensive plan. You could have provided those answers. I believe the direction of the corporation is the correct one."

On a motion by Volk the board voted unanimously to reject the proposal.

Larger Homes Equity

With little pertinent discussion, the board unanimously chose to recommend changing the way in which GHI's larger homes are bought and sold. The current method, intended originally to keep down the price of a larger home for GHI members, has resulted in problems. Because GHI owns a share of each unit (equity), the corporation must buy back each unit and then resell to the incoming member. If this process takes several months, as has happened in the past, the corporation can lose several hundred dollars, even several thousand dollars, as it must continue to pay the mortgage and monthly charges. Also this share has been growing proportionately each time the unit is resold.

This arrangement, set by membership vote, can only be changed by membership vote.

Three options have been proposed: 1) keep current policy, 2) freeze percent of equity which GHI holds, or 3) change so that contract and method of selling is the same as for all other GHI houses. (Current contracts would remain in force until unit is sold, unless the member desires to change.)

Board member Joe Jenkins asked that the board make a recommendation to the members. On a motion by Volk, option 3 was unanimously endorsed. (Margaret Hogensen was absent during discussion and vote on the above item.)

Yet to be determined are the best method of voting and how to provide adequate information to members to make an informed decision.

Baseboard Unit Failures

Staff architect Stan Sersen made a brief technical report on the failures of two electrical baseboard heating units, an item of information brought up at the previous board meeting. Two identical failures in different houses had occurred, according to Sersen, when a solder joint failed and the heating coil broke loose. In one house, the spark from the coil ignited a sheer curtain which hung down over the unit. The small fire which resulted was contained to a corner of the room, burning the curtain, some wall and rug.

In the second unit, where there was no curtain, there was no fire, said Sersen.

Finance Committee Report

The board received a brief report from the Finance Committee. The Committee is asking for 1) a review and analysis of the fiscal department's "procedures records and systems to determine their adequacy and conformance with recommended accounting systems and practices, 2) preparation of a procedures and operations manual for the fiscal department, and 3) new or revised systems and procedures including computer applications. The Finance Committee wants to prepare specifications together with the Audit Committee and in consultation with management for the "services of a qualified public accounting firm with systems accounting expertise."

President Jim Smith asked the Finance Committee to come back to the Board at its next meeting with background information, explaining what is wanted and why, so that the board will be prepared to discuss the issue.

Member Sandy Smith was again present as spokesperson for the 80 members who had been without heat "on the coldest night of the century." The group had petitioned the board for some reimbursement for the inconvenience and extra cost they incurred during the night and half a day they were without heat. The fuel oil company had paid a $13,000 penalty to GHI for allowing the plant to run out of oil. Some members had borrowed or purchased electric heaters. Others spent time with neighbors or friends, and one 90-year-old woman wrapped herself in electric heating pads to keep warm.

Audit Committee member Bettie Denson expressed one side of the argument: "Those people were paying for heat they didn't get."

While most people were sympathetic to the argument, the nature of the cooperative and how it functions was the deciding factor. If members together share the bad, then by the same reasoning, they should share the good. Board member Wayne Williams went a step further. He doubted it would be legal to do anything but share the penalty among all members.

From a practical standpoint, said Mitter, the money should go to offset general heating expenses: the cost of extra oil for January and large deficits in the heating budget of several years ago that has not been made up.

The fact that the corporation "profited" by the fuel company's error is "what gives us something to talk about," said member Joe Comproni. "It is unusual." Curious, he wanted an explanation of the penalty fee. The fuel company was obliged to pay $100 per day per unit, explained Smith. "The purpose of the penalty is not to compensate (the affected) members, but to protect the entire membership, by insuring good and prompt service."

Mitter pointed out that other smaller heating plants have also run out, resulting in penalties. In those cases, he doubted whether affected members were even aware there was a problem. "The initial contract (price of oil) might have been less (if this penalty clause had not been included)," said Mitter in explanation of why he felt the penalties should go into the regular cash account and be used to offset the cost of oil. "That in fact, he said, is what happened in the smaller cases. "The penalty was deducted from our bill. The fuel supplier was very embarrassed by the January incident and was so anxious to make amends, they brought us a check immediately."

In response to the very real problems faced by the people whose homes were cold, Jim Smith asked that the Member Relations committee look into developing a network of persons within the co-operative willing to help in such an emergency.

He was transported to Prince Georges Hospital shock trauma unit where he was later reported to be in stable condition. The shooting occurred as the result of a domestic argument. In addition, one of the juveniles was charged with theft of over $300, fleeing and eluding, resisting arrest, carrying a concealed weapon and driving without a permit. He was incarcerated in the juvenile detention center in Cheltenham.
