Our Reporters in Ride-along Through BARC Hoyer Hosts Group Research Projects Highlighted

by Mary Lou Williamson

On a water-logged Friday, April 15, Congressman Steny Hoyer, with the help of Dr. Paul Putnam, director of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Farm (BARC), led a tour of the over-7,000 acre research farm. The tour was designed by Putnam to reinforce for area elected officials the significant role the station plays in designing tomorrow's food supply and by Hoyer to show therefore the inadvisability of continuing to sell off chunks of the center.

Armed with a set of goals, Hoyer and his invited guests three dozen local officials and a dozen or more journalists and photographers - filled a large bus for a two-hour ride through the rain. The WTTG-Channel 5 camera crew tagged along behind in their own van.

"We wanted to see, first hand, what vital work is being conducted at the Research Center," -Hoyer's Goal No. 1. On the North Farm (west of Route One), the group viewed the world's largest orchard entirely propagated from "tissue culture." Scientist Miklos Faust displayed his virus-free, genetically identical plants grown by the thousands from tiny bits of plant tissue. This new form of propagation, using stoppered test tubes and glass jars in the sterile conditions of a laboratory, allows fruit trees to be grown on their own root system rather than grafted onto other stock. Strawberry plants and five leading types of apple trees now propagated in this manner at Beltsville are shipped to test stations around the country. Faust is particularly excited about his new dwarf apple trees that are more prolific in fruit production per acre than full size trees and require easier and less expensive care. Genetic work is underway to produce a dwarf peach—equally prolific and with good tasting fruit. Faust is designing the orchards of the future.

Plans for the visitors to disembark atop Cherry Hill to view a dainty new orchard of young peach trees in bloom and the beauty of the open, rolling farm land with research center buildings in the distance, had to be scrapped because of the steady and the water-sogged

As the bus bounced back along the narrow field road toward Route One, Putnam pointed out the new Bio-Science Building, "one of the only two new buildings put up since World War II." (The other, the 14-story National Agricultural Library, is not under BARC administration). The Bio-Science building houses studies such as soil-borne diseases and basic research in mycology. (It was in this building that Greenbelt resident and BARC mycology expert L. R. Batra, upon special request, first tested and then guaranteed the purity and healthfulness of the millions of pounds of processed cheeses held in storage and now being given away by the federal government.)

An adjacent building houses the national program staff - a coordinating group, including Greenbelt resident Ralph Bram that "makes sure we're not duplicating work done in any of the field stations around the country,' said Putnam.

Ken Blue Challenges Riders In Saturday's Ride-A-Bike

The Annual Ride-A-Bike For The Retarded is scheduled for this Saturday, April 30. The registration table will open at 10 a.m. at the Youth Center with Mayor Gil Weidenfeld leading the first group off shortly thereafter. Other councilmen will also be participating. In the event of rain, the program will be rescheduled for Saturday, May 7.

The city's fund raiser program securing pledges for their paris co-sponsored by the Greenbelt ticipation. Pledge forms can be tion for Retarded Citizens. The Greenbelt Route is dedicated to the memory of Hosea D. White, Jr., whose annual participation and contributions to the program made it a yearly success in raising critically needed funds for programs for the mentally retarded. Ken Blue, Jaycees chairman for the event, has pledged 200 miles and hopes others will accept his challenge.

Citizens are urged to take part by either biking or hiking and

At an April 15 press conference at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC), Congressman Steny Hoyer said an end must be put to the uncertainty surrounding the future of the lands at BARC, and that he would commit himself to the effort to stop attempts to further erode the size and shape of the research center.

Hoyer told the press, and a gathering of various state and local Maryland officials, that by coming to BARC the delegation wanted "to express collectively our outrage at the cavalier methods used by this administration in an attempt to salvage their budget." He added that the officials wanted "to see, first hand, what vital work is being conducted at the Research Center . . to present a solid show of support for the work being done Hoyer said that since 1971 more than 2200 acres of the center have been given over to other government agencies or private interests. Hoyer said: "There is question that the 7500 acres of BARC provide an attractive setting for commercial development. It is right off major interstate highways and major access

Hoyer accused the General Services Administration and the Federal Property Review Board of "barreling through a proposal to sell off 267 acres of land at BARC," thereby perverting the intent and purpose of the law that permits GSA to dispose of land the federal government no longer needs or wants. Hoyer added, "The administration has been entrusted with the care and management of our federal resources, and it appears now that its representatives seem bent on selling to the highest bidder any federal land that might appear attractive to the private sector, regardless of the consequences."

Hoyer expressed concern that GSA is planning another survey in May to determine if more land might be subject to excessing. Hoyer pointed out that if the 247-acre excessed BARC parcel is sold, it would place people within one tenth of a mile of pesticide research being carried on at BARC. Hoyer asked, "And how much would it cost the government to pick up stakes, move 2300 employees and buy the land to renew the BARC mandate at some See HOYER, page 8, col. 4 ound the city, although when completed these federal, state and city projects will ultimately improve travel conditions.

The State Highway Administration is currently widening the Beltway exit ramp to Kenilworth Ave. to make it two separate lanes, and will be installing a traffic light for cars making the left turn from the ramp onto the southbound lane of Kenilworth. The light will stop traffic only after being tripped by a car on the exit ramp, and will be synchronized with the light at the Crsecent Road intersec-

The ramp improvements are a direct response to the increasing number of cars exiting at Kenilworth and a solution to backups on the ramp that back up onto the Beltway at rush hour. Planning stages for this project began almost two years ago, and the actual construction should be completed by July, according to Thomas Kidwell of the Highway Administration. The New Jersey barrier now in the plan will not be a permanent fixture. The federal government is paying for three-fourths of the project and the state of Maryland will pay the rest from its Special Projects Fund. The total cost for the improvements is $139,551.

Water Line

Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission is installing a new water main along Crescent Road, to tie together two existing systems in Boxwood and Lakewood creating a "loop connection." The project is also tying up traffic somewhat along Crescent Road. According to Frank Hauser, foreman of the Tri-County Utilities, Inc. crew hired by the WSSC, the crew will be laying pipe for about one more week, and the entire project should be completed in about two weeks. Connecting the two water systems will allow the water to flow continuously, which has several benefits, according to Haus-The water is fresher and more sanitary, and the pressure in the pipes doesn't fluctuate as much which cuts down on hammering in the pipes.

Overpass

Completion of the pedestrian walkway to Eleanor Roosevelt High School overpass has been delayed by all the wet weather this Spring. Fill dirt needs to be added and ramps built at each end of the walkway but the area has been so muddy. it won't support the construction vehicles. A spokesman for the Federal Highway Administration estimates that two weeks of dry weather is all that is needed before work on the walkway can resume. Meanwhile, students regularly cross the walkway, although one complained, "Yeah, I use it, but you can't cross it unless you climb - it's a pain!"

Potholes

Potholes were not such a problem this year on Greenbelt streets because of the mild winter. Greenbelt's public works Director George Smith says that his crews filled fewer this year than last. Public Works crews finished patching the final potholes last week, although with temporary patches until the weather warms up enough that they put in permanent patches. In the meantime if residents spot a temporary patch giving way, or a new hole developing, they can probably assume that the public works department already knows about it. "Usually we see them — usually we don't get calls on potholes," Smith said, but he suggested that Greenbelters call 474-8004, twenty-four hours a day and leave a message on an answering machine with the location of the hole.

Questions Intent

To the Editor:

The petition that placed on the Annual Meeting agenda an item concerning a "former GHI Board President who is now a GHI Board Member" is an example of what causes persons outside GHI to view with disrespect the corporation and its members. Indeed it is hard to see how it could be improved upon if its aim is to discredit GHI and its members. Consider:

1) The action complained about occurred more than two years ago; 2) It amounted to a technical matter; 3) GHI lost nothing, may even have gained from the transaction; 4) Long ago the board acted to amend the procedure that gave rise to the alleged matter; and 5) The same item appeared on the Annual Membership meeting agenda two years ago and the membership chose to ignore it.

Bringing up the issue again serves only to prove that among GHI members there are some who are reckless, irresponsible and vindictive.

Greenbelter Runs Through The News Review regrets Comedy Film at Utopia

by Eileen Peterson

If you blink or sneeze during next weekend's showing of The Lavender Hill Mob at Greenbelt's Utopia Theater, you will probably miss seeing one of your neighbors.

Of course, you may miss spotting Winona ("Johnny") Creech anyway, since she's changed a bit since that day some thirty years ago when she ran through a crowd in an English movie featuring the better-known Alec Guinness.

Gus Weiland, head of the Cultural Arts Center Film Committee which presents the First Friday and Saturday Film series each month, has invited Johnny to next week's showing. It isn't every day we get a film in Greenbelt with one of our own in it. . .

Has she seen the film? "Lots of times," she laughs, "and I'm not sure I'd be able to find myself. I wore a blue hat with a big black knob on it." Blue . . . with knob . . . She interrupts: "The movie is black and white." There goes that clue.

"I was in The Man in the White Suit, and in a cafe scene in Audrey Hepburn's first movie," she remembers. It was easy work, and she lived near the film studios just west of London. Her neighbor was the production manager for the Mob film and suggested she come down and do a bit in a crowd scene.

She got paid the equivalent of a dollar or two. "But everything was cheaper then," she recalls, and it was fun to see film stars, to work near them.

Great Baltimore Symphony Plays to Half-filled Hall

by Germaine Timmermans

Lovers of symphonic music enjoyed a delightful evening when the Baltimore Symphony presented its second biannual concert of the 1982-83 season at Eleanor Roosevelt High School on Wednesday, April 20. The selections were taken entirely from the Romantic era.

Verdi's overture to La Forza del Destino opened the program with its dramatic and intense melody. The horn section stood out especially with its full, rich sound. Schubert's Symphony No. 8, the "Unfinished (so-called because it consists of only two movements) rounded out the first half of the program. Conductor Alan Balter did a fine job of delineating the foreboding versus lyrical segments of the first movement. The handling of the dynamics in the second movements was skillful; the pianissimo sections were especially arresting.

Bizet's Symphony in C, the main work on the second half of the program, was performed with the light-hearted, joyful lyricism which is its hallmark. Though the strings did not always meet the demands placed on them in the allegro vivace movement, they did do good pizzicato work in the first and second movements of this symphony and in the second of the Schubert. Oboist Joe Turner played his solo in the Adagio of the Bizet symphony with expressive beauty and played the smaller solos in the allegro vivo and in the second movement of the Schubert symphony equally well.

"Tales from the Vienna Woods" by Johann Strauss, Jr., provided a charming conclusion for the program. Maestro Balter chose a realistic waltz tempo and included just enough rubato to give the piece dramatic emotion while allowing it to become schmaltzy.

Unfortunately, there was one major disappointment Wednesday evening: The hall was just slightly over half full. During intermission, Albert Herling of the Greenbelt Arts Trust ad-dressed himself to this situation and informed the audience that the Trust had a $7500 deficit resulting from the community's failure to support the perform-

April 30, 1983 is the deadline to apply for air-to-air heat exchangers or extra electric heat.

Members who feel the need of extra heat in their homes may wish to take advantage of this offer. The air-to-air heat exchanger is one remedy for the moisture problems in block homes.

Interested members should return the bottom part of the flyers, Application for Air-to-Air Heat Exchanger and Request for Extra Electric Heat, to the GHI Reception Office.

Anyone who has not received the flyers may call the GHI hotline (474-6644) to receive them.

REHAB LOAN DEFERRAL PROGRAM

Means $35.00 per month to Members

The Rehab Loan Deferral Program (RLDP) has begun. For the first time, many eligible members are having $35.00 of their rehab payment deferred each month. This loan will be assessed 3% interest but does not need to be repaid until the house is sold.

To find out whether you can receive this $35.00 deferral, call the Member Services Coordinator (474-6644). Eligibility is determined by financial status and rehab charges.

It is not too late to fill out the RLDP application and join this program. GHI wants to help all its members who can use this assistance.

Greenbelt Grab Bag

by Punchin' Judy

"Space Cadet Splsk, as medical officer on this flying saucer, it is my duty to confine you to sick bay. You appear to be in an advanced condition of confusion."

"I admit I am confused, your Psychness, very confused."

'Let us employ the speech patterns of this planet. You may call me Dr. Shrink, or simply Doc.'

"Thank you, your-I mean-Doc. I've been on other worlds, but I just don't understand this one that they call Earth."

"Give me an example of what is bothering you, Splsk.'

"Well, for instance, why do they call the place where we landed The Golden Triangle? Do they mine precious metal in this area? Is that why the terrain is so uneven?"

"Apparently not. For some reason the natives rearrange the vegetation and the ground at irregular intervals. It may have some mystical significance. We landed here because even if our invisibility shield were to malfunction, our presence would not cause comment. People expect this area to be weird."

"I can understand that, of course, but some of the local customs just don't make sense to me. The other day I thought I would buy a souvenir for my mother. I was told about a very nice store. I don't remember the name, but it has something to do with ladies' garments."

"Oh yes, Bloomies, I've shopped

"Then you must know it is necessary to take an archaic transportation system known as bus-Metro. I couldn't figure it out, so I went to another store, only a few ticksecs away, in a place called Beltway Plaza."

"That should not have been beyond even your kinetic ability,

"I managed to get there all right. I noticed that most of the customers in that store had little wheeled vehicles into which they put their purchases. Some even had little young people in these vehicles, but I couldn't find where they are sold. Too bad, Mother would have liked me to send her one, I think.'

"Mm, we'll have to have a chat about the birds and bees one of these days but go on for now."

"Yes, well one man wasn't putting his purchases in the little vehicle. He was putting them under his coat. Then some people in uniform came and said he must go with them."

"Perhaps he was planning to take the articles without paying for them."

"Nobody seemed to be paying for anything. People just pre-sented little plastic rectangles, somebody did a ritual with them, and then the purchases were put into a bag. But maybe this man didn't have a plastic rectangle."

"Or perhaps he left home with-

"He must have been a long way from home. He said they couldn't stop him because he came from another country.'

"Yes, that is what is called— International Law — Diplomats from other lands have immunity, as do their families and employees."

"Those countries must be very easygoing. I guess they have no law enforcement and nobody ever gets arrested."

"As a matter of fact, some of those countries arrest people for no reason at all. Sometimes they are never seen again and sometimes they are sent to a very cold place.

"As cold as it has been here?"

"Much colder. The local weather just got a bit mixed up this year. There was a warm winter, so they made up for it with a cold spring."

"It doesn't make sense! Now about this man from another land. Somebody told me his country wants the local authorities to apologize for not letting him take things out of the store without the ritual of the plastic rec-

"I can't explain that, but you have to realize that this is a very primitive planet."

"I'm from another land too. Can I take things without paying for them?"

"Certainly not; that is known as shoplifting.'

"But you said . . ."
"Look it's Wednesday. I have an important appointment to push a little ball around a local green place with a set of metal sticks. Why don't you just take two of these yellow pills and call my office first thing in the morn-ing."

or 'of no value to our federal government,' and to see just how that action would affect the experiments at BARC." - Hoyer's Goal No. 2.

As the bus approached the 13acre parcel on Route One north of the library, one of the two parcels "excessed" during 1982 by BARC officials and released for sale by Government Services Administration (GSA), Putnam explained his role. "I work for the Executive Branch . . ." he began. "It has been their policy to sell land not fully utilized." (Any open field, even one containing experimental crops or livestock, may at least upon first inspection -be considered underutilized, according to current GSA definitions, Putnam later explained to the News Review. "It's our job to explain as best we can why it's not underutilized. If we're successful, they'll not recommend its excess. If we're not, they will.") We excessed parcels of land that would "be least damaging to the research center, if they were excessed, Putnam told the group.

The 13-acre parcel, Putnam told the group, has been the connecting link between the two large areas of the farm BARC-East and BARC-West. A small road to the south of the property allows slow-moving farm equipment to move safely from one area to the other. Earlier plans called for construction of a vistiors/conference center on the site, but budget constraints have prevented implementation.

Sale of this parcel worries Faust, for it would bring development which could introduce viruses and added pollution to within 0.1 mile of his experimental virus-free strawberry field. If he should have to move his field, he pointed out there is no other place on the 7,000 acres BARC still owns that duplicates the special conditions of that strawberry patch.

The group also viewed the wooded five-acre site off Rhode Island Avenue between Sunnyside Park (BARC land excessed several years ago and picked up by Park and Planning) and the State Police Barracks. The five acres was excessed under a previous administration and attracted the interest of Park and Planning. Their efforts to obtain the land in order to expand the park next door were turned down by GSA in favor of selling the parcel at fair market value.

Earlier Sales

In the past dozen years, 2,200 acres have been stripped from BARC-most given to other federal agencies, some sold. One parcel, wholly within the industrial tract on the north side of Sunnyside Avenue sold for a tantalizing $50,000 an acre.

Of the 7,000+ acres remaining, 4,000 is in cleared ground used for research plot or for forage and feed for experimental animals on the farm; and 2,000 is wooded flood plain along Beaver Dam and Indian Creeks and their tributaries or buffer zones used to isolate research plots. (An executive order of the late '70's prohibits the excessing of land in a flood plain.) The remaining 500 acres is taken up by building clusters, operational sites, parking lots and roads. About 2,300 people work here, bringing a major portion of BARC's budget into the immediate area where most live. Adding in the budgets of other agencies who share or rent space at BA-RC, the total funds coming into the area reaches $100 million an-

The oldest building on the station is the white house high on a hill over-looking Powder Mill Road and used for office space. Built in 1792, the house was on the Snowden (Montpelier) property.

The Beltsville white turkey was developed here in the forties. The Log Lodge, built by the Civilian Conservation Corps from logs on the site, was patterned after the one in Yellowstone Park. Putnam is participating in the Human Nutrition Study along with a number of Greenbelt residents and others.

The third stop brought the bus riders to the bees. Greenbelt resident and BARC bee expert Suzanne Batra boarded the bus, for by now the riders, like the bees they had come to see, would not come out into the rain. Batra talked of her work in introducing a small, gentle bee whose sting (if sufficiently pestered) is rather like a mosquito bite. The Osmia bee, imported from Japan,

The remaining parcel excessed by BARC officials, 247 acres, which lies along the northern border of the entomology area of BARC, occupies, in part, a flood plain and serves as a buffer zone. It is the site of entomological, zoological (frogs and salamanders) and forest (gypsy moth and fall cankerworm) research.

Three five-week old dairy calves are startled at being the center of so much attention. Congressman Steny Hoyer and his invited guests learn first hand about dairy research at BARC. "We wanted to present a solid show of support for the work being done here," Hoyer said later at a press conference. On either side of Hoyer are (left) Leo Green and Parris Glendening and (right) Arthur Dorman and Tim Maloney. On the far right is N. Hooven, dairy research scientist.

Legislation

In February, Hoyer introduced a bill in the House of Representatives "to restrict the disposal by the Administrator of General Services of certain real property located at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center." In response to a question about how this bill and related legislation is progressing," Hoyer said, "They (the bills) are not moving at this point in time." He added, "They are in committee."

But Hoyer went on to say that the intent of the legislation is to prod the administration into a 'change of heart" so that the matter may be resolved administratively without the of passing the legislation. Hoyer said, "The bills, to some ucase, are a vehicle to focus attention on the issue so that we might resolve it, from our particular standpoint administratively—that is, to have a change of heart."

Hoyer said the proposed legislation, if widely supported in the Congress, would probably put enough pressure on the executive branch to cause a redetermination of the adverse effects of the BARC sale, and would probably prevent the sale without need for passing legislation. Hover closed his statement by saying, will continue my close scrutiny of both GSA and FPRB actions, and I will work to see that legislation is adopted in Congress to preserve and maintain the land and functions of the Research Center here in Beltsville."

Greenbelt was well represented with Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, Councilmen Ed Putens, Advisory Planning Board member Toni Bram, city staff members James K. Giese and Dorothy Lauber. County Councilman Richard Castaldi, County Executive Parris Glendening and State Senator Leo Green were also there.
