Analysis of Crime Statistics Explored

by Edith Beauchamp

The Greenbelt Police Department will be entering the computer age soon and exploring ways of analyzing crime statistics by computer as the result of a 4-0 vote by the city council Monday, May 16. The two-part motion adopted at last week's council hearing requires that authorized police personnel enter the crime data on an "in-house" computer to keep police records confidential.

The second part of the motion instructs the city staff to look into the possibility of working with the Criminology Department at the University of Maryland or others to develop experimental statistical computer programs to analyze police data. Any recommendations that the staff finally makes on the experimental program would be subject to approval by the council at a later date.

The motion was something of a compromise to a proposal submitted in January to the city council by Putens Associates and the Crime Prevention Committee. It was debated at a May 10 council work session. Councilman Ed Putens abstained from the vote and all discussion of the subject to avoid possible conflict of interest.

The Putens Associates' plan called for criminology students at the University of Maryland to have access to police records and to enter selected information from the records on the University's computers. Students would then analyze the crime data for trends. According to the proposal, the program would be free-of-charge to the city for one year, and if the city desired, could be continued on a paid basis thereafter—using either the University's or Putens Associates' computers or those of some other firm.

Debate at the May 10 work session was often heated as the four members of council—Putens did not attend—City Manager James K. Giese and Police Chief William T. Lane individually expressed reservations about certain aspects of the Putens Associates proposal. Members of the Crime Prevention Committee expressed anger at the council members' seeming reluctance to embrace the plan. But the real disagreement was not with developing a computer system to evaluate crime data but with the methods for developing the system which the Committee suggested.

Giese told the committee that allowing student volunteers to have access to confidential police records was "non-negotiable" and that police department employees would have to enter the information rather than the students. Using police employees to enter the data would also mean that the proposal was not "free-of-charge," Giese said.

Both Giese and Lane emphasized that the Police Department is required by law to keep certain arrest information confidential—all juvenile records, for example. Names of victims and names of suspects are also kept confidential on a discretionary basis to prevent undue embarrassment to the individuals involved. This is particularly true in domestic violence cases, they said.

The actual number of crimes reported last year in Greenbelt was relatively small, Giese said, and he questioned the ability of a computer to accurately reflect "trends" with only a few instances of a certain type of crime. However, Richard Cripe of Putens Associates, the author of the proposal, pointed out that the city's size is growing, the number of businesses is increasing and therefore the crime rate is likely to go up. Giese acknowledged that the use of a computer system in the future would be beneficial.

Memo

In a memorandum to the council before the work session, Giese suggested that police reports over a three-year period be used as the basis for the statistical analysis. Although no figures on Greenbelt's crime rate were included in his memo, Giese did present a three-year breakdown of crime figures in the Public Safety section of the Fiscal Year 1983-84 Budget he had submitted to the city council April 15.

Over the last three years, police officers filed 4,751 crime reports. In 1982 they filed 1,673, which was down from 1,725 filed in 1981. Most types of crimes reported decreased in Greenbelt in 1982 over the previous year except for two major categories: there were 51 more larcenies and thefts in '82 and 46 more vandalisms reported. Larcenies (703 in '82), thefts and vandalisms (570 in '82) are the two largest categories of crime in each of the last three years. The next largest category of crime in each of the three years is breaking and entering (166 in '82, down from 179 in '81). One homicide was reported in 1982, and as there were none in 1981, it was an increase over the prior year. One homicide was also reported in 1980.

In his memo to council, Giese pointed out several considerations in evaluating statistical crime data. "The first problem is that most crime is patternless—

The dance is being geared for those members of the population who have entered "middle age" or older, i.e., the parents and grandparents of the band members and their friends. (Students must be accompanied by an adult.) The Jazz Band won a silver medal at the International Music Festival in Bermuda last February.

The dance will be held in the cafeteria of the High School on Saturday evening, June 4 at 8 p.m. Admission will be charged. Proceeds of the benefit will go to the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Jazz Band. The group receives no financial support from the school system.

Baccalaureate Service For Roosevelt Students

The Greenbelt Clergy will conduct a Baccalaureate Service for the graduating class of Eleanor Roosevelt High School this Sunday, June 5, in the school auditorium, beginning at 2 p.m. Members of the class and their faculty advisor have worked together with the clergy in planning the service.

The speaker this year will be the Rev. Sherry Taylor, co-pastor of the Greenbelt Community Church. The Roosevelt Chamber Choir, directed by Dr. Barbara Baker, will sing two anthems. Other music will be provided by the High School Band under the direction of Mrs. Sally Wagner.

Three members of the Senior Class will participate in the service along with representatives from each of the religious organizations in Greenbelt. The religious organizations also provide refreshments after the service for all the graduates and their guests.

Greenbelt Celebrates its Forty-Sixth With Speeches, Sports, Sales

by Germaine Timmermans

Greenbelt has proudly commemorated its anniversaries from the start and this coming week-end the City will carry on the tradition with a wide variety of activities (see schedule of events, page 12).

Saturday will feature the formal dedication of the Gladys Noon Spellman Trail and Overpass (see advertisement on this page), the Walk for Hope and an Arts and Crafts Fair. Sunday's main event will be the afternoon concert by the Greenbelt Concert Band of Prince George's County and an appearance by the council and mayor.

Two more new events this year are the Sidewalk and Bake Sale on Friday, and an Open House and Strawberry Festival at the Greenbelt Nursing Center on Saturday.

Sports and games will be well represented in the city's celebration of its forty-sixth year. "Our aim is to get all sports activities into the program," says Hank Irving, Director of the Recreation Department. Highlights are the semi-finals and finals of the tennis tournament; a moonlight swim at the Pool for singles, families, and groups on Friday and, in addition, a Teen Splash Party on Saturday; baseball and softball games; tournaments in disc golf (frisbee) and pitch and putt golf; and table game tournaments at both the Youth Center and Springhill Lake Recreation Center. Ribbons and trophies will be awarded to winners of various competitions.

Friday

Crocheted afghans, used clothing, books, white elephants, bedding and house plants, costume jewelry, cakes, filled donuts, and perhaps, home-baked bread will be available at Friday's Sidewalk and Bake Sale which will be held rain or shine.

Saturday

The first annual Walk for Hope, scheduled for Saturday, is a 10-kilometer walk to raise funds for the American Cancer Society. The Society aims to raise $6000 for its fight against cancer by gaining sponsored pledges. Registration information is available at the Greenbelt Youth Center, Community Service Savings and Loan, and American Cancer Society.

On the same day, Roosevelt (Center) Mall will be the scene of the Arts and Crafts Fair. To the accompaniment of live music, artists and craftspeople will sell as well as demonstrate their work, which includes quilting, calligraphy, chair-caning, toy-making, doll-making, and wrought ironwork.

Juggling balls will also be for sale. The event will be held in the Utopia Theater in case of rain. Musical entertainment planned for various times during the day include Elizabeth Beer-Stevens, flutist; John Haugh, tenor Carolyn Boone and friends; and a newly formed trio of jazz musicians from ERHS.

At 11:30 the Gladys Noon Spellman Pedestrian Trail and Overpass, located at the end of Gardenway at the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, will be dedicated. City and regional officials and members of the Spellman family will be on hand for the ceremony.

The Greenbelt Nursing Home will hold its first Strawberry Festival and Open House in conjunction with Greenbelt Day. Citizens are encouraged to drop by and get acquainted with the staff, residents, and programs at the Center. Visitors can have their blood pressure checked free and enjoy fresh strawberries and whipped cream for a reasonable charge.

Greenbelters curious about the history of their city can increase their knowledge by visiting the Tugwell Room in the Greenbelt Library. Named after Rexford Guy Tugwell, Director of the Resettlement Administration which built the city, the Tugwell Room will hold many historical and contemporary mementos. official See CELEBRATE, page 10, col. 1

SATURDAY RACES

As part of the dedication ceremonies for the Spellman Overpass on Saturday morning, two long-distance races of 2 and 3½ miles will be run. Both races will start at the Overpass at 11 a.m. but finish at the Gardenway playground. Registration for these two races will be held from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Overpass. The route of the races will be the start at Overpass, along the dirt path leading to Gardenway, left at Ridge for about 1/4 mile then right into 23 Court, half left into inner walk, into tunnel under Crescent, left onto grass at Centerway, right at road leading into parking lot alongside municipal building, through gate onto roadway, pass swimming pool and Youth Center, pass tennis courts and turn around at bridge near entrance to lake park. That is one mile. Returning to Gardenway playground will be a 2-mile course. The 3½ mile race will turn into Lake Park and go clockwise around the lake and return to Gardenway playground.

Although some of the better runners in Greenbelt are expected, anyone who can complete the distance, even walking, is invited to attend. All participants will receive a commemorative ribbon with their time and name. Age group winners will receive awards.

The races are free and sponsored by Greenbelt Running Club and the Recreation Department. Further information from Larry Noel, 474-9362.

Concluding Chords

The final concert of the season for the Eleanor Roosevelt Symphony Orchestra and various Choruses will be held on Friday evening, June 3, at 8 p.m. The concert is free and will be held in the Auditorium of the Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Since the Mixed Chorus and the Orchestra are both prize-winning organizations, the evening has the portent of being a very exciting one.

Condominium Seminars

The Central Maryland Chapter of Community Associations Institute (CAI) will be sponsoring three mini-seminars on June 4 dealing with absentee owners, the changes in the Maryland Condominium Act, taxes, reserves and investing. The seminars will be held in Baltimore, Annapolis and Frederick. For more details contact Chapter Administrator Diane Vreeland of Greenbriar, 345-6484.

Alternative Impression

To the Editor:

As a former resident of Springhill Lake, I read with interest the article on the development's 20th anniversary. It is true that Springhill Lake is extremely well maintained and efficiently managed—no small feat for a project consisting of some 3,000 units.

However, I feel obliged to offer an alternative impression to the Utopian picture of life at Springhill Lake presented in the article. In the four years I lived there, I never experienced the sense of community described by some of the residents. In fact, when I first moved there and made friendly gestures to my neighbors, their reactions ranged from shock to paranoia. The transience of the population of Springhill Lake probably has a great deal to do with this. I would suspect that in such neighborhoods, people deal with transience either by banding together out of a need to rely on each other or by preventing themselves from getting close to each other because they assume their relationships in the community will not last very long. My sense is that the latter is operating among Springhill Lake residents.

Harmony is something else I did not experience at Springhill Lake. On the contrary, I lived among people who, for the most part, did as they pleased without regard for their neighbors' privacy, security, and need for peace and quiet. When they were confronted with their lack of consideration, their reaction too frequently was defensiveness or indignation, rather than a willingness to cooperate.

I disagree that security is not a problem at Springhill Lake. My section and those nearby had what seemed to be more than their share of vandalism (of cars and apartments), rape, breaking and entering, and robbery. Just before I moved, some of my neighbors discovered someone living in the storage room of our building, someone who had broken into a number of storage bins and set up housekeeping there. His access to the building was made easy by the refusal of many of my neighbors to keep the door to the storage room locked.

The writer of the article describes Springhill Lake as a "little town" because it has many of the physical characteristics of one. However, any Greenbelter should know that it takes more than schools, shopping centers, and gas stations to make a neighborhood a community.

(Incidentally, I left Springhill Lake to move to downtown Washington, where I have found friendliness, quiet, and a sense of community that one would not expect to find in the center of a large city.)

WOMAN'S CLUB NOTES

The Arts Group, headed by Peg Wainscott, was invited to a "Love is Ageless" luncheon at the Greenbelt Nursing Center April 23. It was given to show the Center's appreciation of the assistance given the patients by fifteen groups and several individuals of the Greenbelt area. Mayor Weidenfeld spoke about the "tremendous number of groups in Greenbelt who donate their time and efforts to making ours a better community in which to live." Joy Yohe, Recreation Director, emceed the program and gave awards to those donating the most service. The Holy Cross Lutheran Church received a plaque for top honors, and the Woman's Club came in second in contributions given.

This year the Woman's Club made tray favors for the seven special holidays of the year for the 140 patients. In addition, the group made and donated 20 lap robes, 41 bed socks, 2 sweaters, 2 stoles and one shawl; and patients clothes were altered and mended.

Council Looks at CARES, Administration Budgets

by Leta Mach

CARES Director Carol Leventhal and City Manager James K. Giese presented the Youth Services Bureau budget at the work session on May 17. Leventhal was particularly concerned about the deletion of a proposed 2.2% increase in grants to Youth Services Bureaus from the State Department of Juvenile Services. This is not the first time the Department has tried to cut grants to Youth Services Bureaus but it was the first time the move had been made after the state legislature had adjourned and the budget had already been passed.

Giese explained, "It's not a significant loss ($1,250), I think Carol's concerned about the principle." Casimir R. Prybyl, Director of Finance and Administrative Services, also expressed concern about the methods used by the state Department of Juvenile Services. Councilman Ed Putens feared that this taking of money from Youth Services Bureaus was becoming a trend. Mayor Gil Weidenfeld suggested the matter be put on the agenda of a brief special meeting so that Council could inform area legislators and go on record against the cut.

The CARES budget, itself, is much like previous years, explained Giese. On the other hand, there will be significant changes in CARES. Dr. Leo Walder, who was instrumental in founding CARES, will not serve as a consultant next year. Walder has other plans for the coming year.

In his place, Leventhal is considering a system of using four competent professionals on a three-month basis each. The rotating system would allow CARES to evaluate these consultants and provide a variety of fresh ideas, explained Leventhal.

Leventhal would like to put one part-time employee, who has been with CARES four years, on a classified basis. The change would mean the employee would receive fringe benefits. Giese said money is available for the added expense. Several council members found the request reasonable.

Council also heard from Pat Henry of Washington EAR. The organization is a radio reading and information service for the blind and handicapped. For several years, Greenbelt has given a contribution to Washington EAR. The group is asking for $500, the same amount as last year. Giese noted that Greenbelt seems to be the only municipality in Prince Georges or Montgomery County which supports the program. "I'm proud of that," replied Putens.

Administration

During the evening, council reviewed the general government account. The account for city council is much the same as before. However, Giese did pose the question of increases in council salaries. At present the Mayor receives $3,400 a year and council members receive $3,000 each. Salaries were last increased two years ago and have been increased two or three times in the last 12 years, generally by $500 each time.

Since this is an election year, the election account is considerably more than last year's. The account proposes $175 (the current rate paid by Prince Georges County) for election workers. A resolution will be required if the new compensation rate is approved.

Except for one addition, the administration account is much the same as last year's. This account provides for the City Manager's and City Clerk's office. Giese is proposing to subscribe to Public Technology, Inc. (PTI) for the first time. PTI is strengthening its services to small governments and could provide technical assistance and discounted purchases of such items as computer technology. Weidenfeld felt the fee would more than pay for itself in the savings on consultants' fees.

A significant project in the legal council account is the re-codification of the city code.

Now out of print, the city code was last published 12 years ago. It is proposed that the new code be annotated to relevant Maryland laws. The project would take about a year and would be charged to two fiscal years.

The community promotion account sets aside funds to provide information to citizens and recognize city employees and advisory boards. As last year, money has been designated for an anticipated fiftieth anniversary celebration for the city. Funds equal to expected cable TV franchise revenues are also provided for public information programming—for example, hiring part-time people to operate cameras for the telecast of such events as public hearings.

Revenues

Council also examined revenues to see how all these city services would be funded. Revenues come from real and personal property taxes, penalties and interest, admissions and amusement taxes, licenses and permits, revenues from other governmental agencies, service charges, fines and forfeitures, interest and dividends, rent and concessions and sale of recyclable materials. Revenues from admissions and amusements and personal property taxes are increasing. However, Giese had the bad news that $60,000 too much had been estimated for revenues from ordinary business corporations because the personal property the General Electric Company has in Greenbelt is not as much as first thought.

Finally, Giese noted that, except for North End School, the city budget is balanced without a tax increase.

Improving the Pool and Purchasing a Bus Are Major Topics at Parks Dept. Hearing

by Sandra Surber Smith

Renovations and improvements to the city pool and the purchase of a van/bus were the items which generated the most discussion at the May 3 hearing on the budget for the Greenbelt Recreation and Parks Department. In his opening remarks, City Manager Jim Giese said that this year's program contained no major shifts but represented a continuation of many of the same activities for the provision of "leisure time opportunities to enrich individual and family experiences." He and Recreation Director Hank Irving answered questions from mayor Gil Weidenfeld and city council members Tom White, Bob Zugby and Ed Putens. (Councilman Richard Pilski was not present.) Also at the meeting were members of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board.

Some of the major items in this year's $681,600 budget are reconstruction of four tennis courts at Braden Field ($80,000), a variety of improvements to parks, including new lights for Braden Field ($45,200), improvement and beautification of the entrance to Buddy Attick Park ($15,000) and widening and improving the access to the Northway Athletic Field ($6,200). Also planned are a picnic shelter for Greenbelt Park, a multipurpose play court at Springhill Lake Park, and replacement of the Youth Center gym windows.

For the municipal pool, this budget proposes the purchase of a tot dock, a removable structure to be placed in the shallow end of the pool, and used when providing swimming instruction to children unable to stand on the pool floor and for therapeutic exercise by handicapped persons. Already two therapeutic standing ladders have been installed to provide easier access for the elderly or those with handicaps. Up for discussion was the long-term need for pool renovation, including construction or major renovation of the bathhouse. A lower priority among proposed (but not funded) capital improvements is the installation of a turning wall in the municipal pool. This is the first year the pool is projected to operate without a deficit, since a twenty-year bond issue was paid off during the past year and revenues are expected to increase with a change in operating hours. This summer the pool will open at 10 a.m. on most Saturdays and Sundays.

Van/bus

Irving and Anne Moltz, recreation assistants, spoke in favor of the purchase of a van/bus to provide services and transportation to events which now cannot be provided or can only be provided at a prohibitive cost. Moltz thought that the van would be most useful in providing transportation to a variety of sight-seeing, recreational and sports events for all ages of participants. Both Irving and Anne saw the bus used for a variety of programs not only in the Recreation Department but in "other city activities and predicted that the cost would be recovered through charges for events. Giese was less certain that the van/bus would be self-supporting. Most council members seemed in favor and agreed that it would also be discussed at the upcoming public hearing on transportation. Cost for the vehicle ranged from $15,000 for a used van to $24,000 for a new one which would carry from 24-26 passengers, the minimum for economical group trips.

In addition to the review of proposed expenditures, the budget hearing provided an opportunity to discuss major program initiatives for the next year. These range from recreation programming on cable TV, to development of a guide to recreation activities, to promotion of the new adult exercises for lunch program.

The Recreation Department is also exploring ways to offer classes in locations throughout the community and to co-sponsor high-adventure programs such as white water rafting and canoeing. There are also plans to expand "Arts in the Parks" program with added outdoor events such as artists shows, craft demonstrations, workshops and performances. A challenge for the department is to plan for the use of the North End School as a multi-purpose community center, when and if the city acquires that building.

probably more than 75%. This is because much of the crime committed is done without planning. An opportunity presents itself and the perpetrator takes advantage of the situation. Or it is the result of emotional and confrontational situations as is the case with most acts of assault and battery or murder," Giese wrote. The unpatterned crime statistics can confuse the analysis of patterned crime.

"The second problem is that much patterned crime takes place in multiple jurisdictions... The criminal moves with far greater ease between police jurisdictions than data does," Giese continued.

Despite the reservations he expressed in his memo to council, and during the work session itself, Giese had completed considerable research about the types of computer systems available and what other municipal police departments were doing about analyzing crime figures. He also set forth in the 1983-84 City Budget a "special objective" for the new fiscal year of finding a suitable computer system for the police department to increase record-keeping efficiency.

WARNING FROM WSSC

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) warns its bi-county water and sewer customers to be on the alert for three white (or light complexioned) males impersonating WSSC Inspectors/Collectors.

Last week the WSSC had several calls from customers in the Prince Georges and Montgomery County area reporting three men without proper WSSC identification, driving a blue van or black pick-up truck, approaching the customer on the pretense of entering the house to check the water pressure or to check for possible leaks.

One individual will ask that the customer accompany him to the basement or kitchen to check the faucets, while another male enters the house to assist. The customer is then offered a $45 rebate for service overcharge and ally evaluated the crime reports. He recalled during the work session that several years ago he and a police officer plotted the locations of each crime report on a city map with push pins. While not a technologically advanced method, it did identify visually the areas of the city with the most incidents of crime.

is requested to change a $100 bill. The third individual stays in the vehicle.

Since attempts at this scam have been interrupted twice, the outcome must be assumed. The customer discloses the location and amount of money in the house or on his person.

These individuals are not WSSC representatives. Please call Greenbelt police immediately at 474-5454.

The WSSC requires its Inspectors/Collectors to be identifiable to the customer by: carrying an ID card with the employee's picture and ID number, wearing a uniform consisting of blue pants and a blue shirt with a WSSC emblem, and driving a Commission-assigned vehicle with a Commission logo.

If there is any doubt, please ask the Commission representative for proper identification, and/or call the WSSC's Customer Services Division on 699-5600.

Glendening for Completion Of Entire Metro System

County Executive Parris Glendening in releasing the final report of the citizen task force on Land Use Planning, Water, Sewers, and Transportation, emphasized that his principal concern is assuring the completion of the full 101 mile Metrorail system, as recommended in the report.

Glendening said his highest priority in the Metrorail system is the Greenbelt line. This line would extend from the Fort Totten Station in the District of Columbia to West Hyattsville, Prince Georges Plaza, College Park, and end at Greenbelt.

In addition to completion of the Metrorail construction, the report also noted the need to improve access to various Metrorail stations. Glendening explained that he has already taken action on some of these access routes. "We've taken steps to accelerate the extension of Cherrywood Lane over the Beltway to Kenilworth Avenue in order to serve the Greenbelt Line."

Public Works and Police Go Out to the Ball Game

by Glynese Echols

The Greenbelt Police Department surprisingly defeated the Greenbelt Department of Public Works, 9-5, in a softball game recently at the North End Field. The game was played for a keg of Miller Lite Beer.

The police department had a difficult beginning, but after the fourth inning, it was over for public works. The police almost lost the game by forfeit. Twenty minutes after the time the game was to start, the police team only had four players. Public works players and fans didn't appreciate the delay and almost called the game a forfeit. As 11-year-old Patty Hall stated, "It's not their fault that the police don't have enough players."

The situation didn't improve much for the police department during the 1st inning. They were up to bat first and were out, 1-2-3. Public works then had their turn at bat. They immediately secured two triples bringing two runs in. Detective Doug Sappington (who came to the field right from work and prepared for the game by taking off his dress shirt, leaving on his 1-shirt, rolling up his dress pants, and covering his leather loafers with mud) pulled the police team out of a rut when he caught two low fly balls in a row, inspiring his team to forge ahead to victory.

Through the 4th inning, the game was tied at 4-4, but a double play made by the police team, put them at bat again and the public works team never got ahead.

Peggy O'Hagan, the only female playing in the game, went up to bat for public works for the first time in the bottom of the 5th inning. Unfortunately, her debut was not as good as her performance throughout the rest of the game. She hit a grounder to the pitcher and was out at first base.

By the top of the 7th, the police team lead, 8-5, and Thomas Justin hit a fly out in center field, bringing John Squires into home. The score was 9-5. During the bottom of the 7th, the public works team remained scoreless. Sappington described the last out, a fly caught by Clifton Northam: "It was great. He was ready for it, sun in his eyes, up to his knees in water and mud . . . and it landed right in his glove."

Judy Squires, wife of Officer John Squires, umpired the first three innings; then Sue Justin, wife of Officer Thomas Justin, finished the game. Sue was commended highly for "knowing her baseball", especially when she called a pitch a "strike" when it dropped on home plate. The call was against a player on her husband's team, and John Lann, a "baseball authority", and police team player, supported her call. Public Works didn't seem to think there was any bias involved; John Pyles of public works said of Sue, "I just love that girl!"

At the end of the 7th inning, not too many people wanted to quit. So, with Lann as a coach, player, and arbitrator for the police team, and with no one in particular coaching public works, the wives and girlfriends joined their respective teams and softball continued until no one could see the ball. No one is quite sure what the score of that game was.

There were three home runs Monday night, all of which were hit during the coed game. Thomas Justin hit the first, Karl Scaggs of public works hit the second, and Kenny Hall, also of public works, scored the last.

By the end of the evening, everyone was more interested in having a cold beer (which both teams supplied) and wrestling in the muddy field than wondering who won the second game, who hit the home runs or what the highest batting average was.

Road Improvements Occupy Council

by Edith Beauchamp

Half of the agenda of the Monday, May 2, city council meeting concerned road improvements. Council considered improvements to two sections of Ridge Road — between Gardenway and Eastway and between Southway and Westway; considered purchasing equipment to mark cross walks, center lines and other traffic lines on city streets; and received copies of bids from various concrete contractors for curb, gutter and sidewalk work.

Work on the improvements to Ridge Road began on the section between Gardenway and Eastway. Councilman Thomas White expressed strong concern about the placement of the pavement and sidewalk "so the old and valuable trees" along the roadway "are not jeopardized." "Every effort should be made so the final process preserves the life of those trees," he said. City Manager James Giese indicated he would notify the contractor of the need to be especially careful to save the trees.

The City Council resolved a minor curbing issue by agreeing to Giese's recommendation to use the standard vertical faced curb used throughout the county. The Advisory Planning Board had suggested in an April 18 report that rolled curbs be used on this section of the roadway as they are "more in keeping with the nature of Greenbelt." Giese, in a lengthy memorandum to council on the subject, disagreed. He cited the history of the use of rolled curbs and the practical reasons for their eventual replacement by the vertical faced or square curb. In the statement he said, "In my opinion neither the rolled curb nor the vertical faced curb is in keeping with the original character of Greenbelt." Mayor Gil Weidenfeld commented, "There is always a balancing between practicality and aesthetics."

In the same report, Giese informed the council that left-over Community Development Block Grant funds from Eastway to Southway improvements to Ridge Rd. could be used to extend the improvements from Southway to Westway. The addition of curbs, gutters and improved shoulders would be similar to work already underway on the other sections of Ridge Rd. The council unanimously directed Giese to request the county to okay the transfer of the funds from the one project to the other. Giese estimates the surplus from the Eastway to Southway project will be $31,000.

Councilman Bob Zugby introduced a resolution to purchase street paving marking equipment.

Negotiated Purchase

The marking equipment is a new innovation by the 3-M Company. The machines apply a plastic line which lasts longer and takes less time to put down than a painted line. The total cost of the equipment is $6,726.80, $6,700 of which would be given to the city by the State Highway Administration in a Highway Safety Grant. The resolution will be voted on at a future meeting.

Twelve sealed bids from various concrete contractors for curb, gutter and sidewalk work in the city were opened in the council chamber on Thursday, April 21, and presented to the council at the Monday night meeting. The

Washington Ear Aids Area Handicapped

Greenbelt is probably the only municipality providing support to Washington EAR. For many years, the city has given the organization a donation under the "Other Recreation Programs" account of the city budget.

Washington EAR aids the handicapped and visually impaired. It provides 112 hours of radio programming each week. Portions of the Washington Post, USA Today and the New York Times are read each day. Ann Landers, Jack Anderson and the horoscope are always read. There are special programs for the funnies, tax and shopping information, books and magazines. A new service provides audio description of live stage performances from Arena Stage, Kennedy Center and some PBS television programs. Audio description tells the visually impaired (through tiny FM receivers) what is happening on stage during pauses in the dialogue.

Washington EAR has over 2000 listeners. It is credited with pulling many impaired listeners back into the mainstream.

Hardest-working Firefighters Feted

by Mary Lou Williamson

There were no awards for bravery or heroism this year at the Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad's annual banquet held in February. The fortunate lack of serious fires in this community makes it difficult for firefighters to show the stuff they're made of. The honors instead were dealt out to those who work hardest: the ten top runners, the persons selected for the Chief's awards, the officers who run the organization, and others.

John Crisman, a long-time volunteer member and now county Superintendent of Machinery, arrived at the gala affair he was to emcee after two days on duty with no sleep, thanks to February's 20-inch snow storm.

Because streets were still treacherous with ice and snow — cars could not negotiate the hill on Greenbelt Road by Eleanor Roosevelt high school — not quite all the tables were filled. Offers of help for getting home safely were offered and many accepted.

Chief's Awards

In presenting his awards, Fire Chief Michael Dutton recognized Paul Williams, liaison with the city; Bill Dunn, Assistant Chief; Bob Lauer, past president; Steve Wurtz (paid) sergeant; John Crisman; and the Ladies Auxiliary (Peggy Pergola, President).

Top Runners

Top runners for 1982 were: Ed Meier — 286, Chris Hunt — 368, Skip Bingham — 396, Barry Beyers — 413, Bob Berry — 496, Dicky Wynkoop — 539, Ronnie Walters — 636, Earl Breeden — 739, Clay Tourtelotte — 750, and Matt Weber — 1182.

1983 Officers

Executive officers sworn in for the new year were John Snoddy, President; Henry Wynkoop, Vice President; Dave Hissey, Secretary; Ben Kolbenslag, Treasurer; and Trustees Ed Hughes, Moe Palmerton, Michael Dutton, Paul Rouseau and James Bordas.

Line officers continuing in their positions for 1983 are Fire Chief Michael Dutton; Assistant Fire Chief, William Dunn; Deputy Fire Chief, Gene Davis; Captains Jay Reminick, Joe Aulisio and Matthew Weber; and Lieutenants Ed Meier and Richard Wynkoop. John Voight was promoted to Lieutenant and Clayton Tourtelotte to Sergeant.

Jack Snoddy and Henry Wynkoop were presented with plaques and briefcases to carry all their papers.

Service Awards

James Stratchko and Ed Meier received 5-year service pins. Ten-year awards went to Bob Lauer and Barry Bordas. A 30-year pin went to James Bordas. Two men were recognized with Life Memberships — Gene Davis, who joined as a Junior member in 1966, has held every rank up to Deputy Fire Chief. Joining as a Junior Associate in 1963, Ken Stair won the coveted "most calls' award in 1966.

Junior Aides

Those young men at the bottom of the totem pole — the "gofers" — were recognized with much appreciation for the chores they handle routinely. They are Carl Anderson, John Crisman, Billy Mims, Buddy Robertson, Tommy Holland, David Kerr and Bobby Angel.

Ladies Auxiliary

Fourteen women represented Greenbelt in last summer's county-wide competition at the Firemen's Association Annual Convention in neighboring Berwyn Heights. Competing for the first Varda, "the woman who is always here with a smile and words of encouragement . . ." to receive the president's award.

Theresa Manuel was selected as Fire Lady of the year. As a new member, Reynolds said of Manuel, "we harrassed her so much and yet she has stuck in there!"

Service pins were awarded to Sonia Krob — 5 years and Dot Varda — 20 years.

New Officers Sworn In

Marty Neal, President of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Prince Georges County Volunteer Fireman's Association, was present time, the ladies stole the show, winning the Sportsmanship Award and four of the seven events entered. Team members were Captain Nancy Holland, Mary Fran, Jane and Teresa Crisman, Theresa and Peggy Manuel, Cindy Trudeau, Faye Zoellner, Kathy Reynolds, Donna Aulisio, Edie Stringfellow, Margaret McKinney, Rita Wooddell and Margie Groht. Skip Bingham coached the team with the aid of Mike Dutton and Bob Berry.

"The first time these ladies participated," said a proud husband and father of one-fifth of the team, John Crisman, "They knocked their sox off." Retiring president Kathy Reynolds awarded "Rookie of the Year" award to Rita Wooddell, who offered "real gusto" when the auxiliary and fellow members most needed it.

President's Award

Reynolds selected Chaplain Dot

to swear in the Greenbelt Ladies' Auxiliary officers: Peggy Pergola, president; Betty Wynkoop, vice-president; Fran Crisman, treasurer; Cindy Trudeau, secretary; Faye Copeland, historian; Dot Varda, chaplain; and Nancy Holland, color guard.

Renee Brooks, the Miss Greenbelt contestant sponsored by the Fire Department and Rescue Squad, and Carolyn Boone Fire Prevention Queen for Prince Georges County, received the thanks of both the Fire Department and the Auxiliary. The girls also received gifts.

A diamond heart pendant was presented to Kathy Reynolds from her auxiliary as a thank you for serving as Auxiliary President for 1982.

Capping off the evening was the announcement of incoming auxiliary president Peggy Pergola of "all new, custom-made furniture for the fire house

City's Presentation on Gypsy Moths Offers Tips on Control

by Germaine Timmermans

Only a small group of interested citizens attended the meeting on gypsy moths at the City Council Chambers on the evening of April 5. Dennis Doornekamp, the city's Park Superintendent, and Kevin Brown, landscape technician at the University of Maryland Physical Plant, gave a talk and a slide and film presentation on the life-cycle and activities of the gypsy moth. Though no signs of the moth have yet been found in the city, citizens are advised to know what to look for in order to arrest the spread of this pest. The gypsy moth has been found as close as College Park, so it is likely that its arrival here is imminent.

Life Cycle

The life cycle of the gypsy moth begins with the laying of the egg mass by the female in June through August. These egg masses containing 75-1000 eggs each, are yellowish-white in color and are covered with a furry layer. The eggs hatch in April and early May of the following year, and the larvae (caterpillars) then begin defoliating trees. Male caterpillars go through five instars (stages or moults), females through six. These stages last 4-10 days each. Gypsy moth caterpillars can be easily recognized during the second and following instars by the four pairs of blue dots on their backs found toward the head, followed by six pairs of red dots. They also have narrow yellow stripes down their backs and are hairy.

During June and July the caterpillars undergo pupation, which lasts two weeks. After this period the moths emerge from their cocoons: the female is large, mainly white, and flightless; the male is smaller gray and brown, and can fly.

Gypsy moth larvae can be highly destructive to the tree population of an area. Entire sections of forest land can be lost as a result of their ravenous appetites. In areas of high infestation these caterpillars have been known to cover roads and houses. Egg masses are capable of staining the siding of houses on which they have been deposited.

Gypsy moth caterpillars will eat 500-600 kinds of plants but prefer certain ones to others. Preferred trees and bushes are:

oak, alder, apple, gray and white birches, box elder hawthorn, larch, linden, mountain ash, Lombardy poplar, roses, blue spruce, sumac, and willow. The larger larvae particularly like beech, red cedar, chestnut, hemlock, plum, pine, and spruce. Trees usually avoided are black and yellow birches, cherry, cottonwood, elm, maple, pear, black gum, hickory, sassafras, native mountain laurel, rhododendron, and holly. Shade trees, particularly oaks, are most susceptible to damage. Deciduous trees defoliated 60% or more are in danger of permanent damage. Conifers which have lost the majority of their needles to caterpillars do not recover.

How to Identify

Citizens can spot gypsy moth presence and activity through several means. Egg masses are often found on tree trunks at eye level or in sheltered spots. They can be scraped off and disposed of through incineration or by placing them in oil or gasoline. Firewood and Pennsylvania Christmas trees should be checked, since they can also harbor egg masses. Campers coming from infested areas should inspect their trailer and gear for traces of the moth. Leaf loss is an indication of the possible presence of larvae. A piece of burlap tied loosely around the entire circumference of a tree at eye level helps to monitor the population in a given area, as will gypsy moth traps. Anyone who spots gypsy moth egg masses or caterpillars is asked to contact the County Extension Agent at 952-3312.

Control Methods

A product called "Tanglefoot" applied around a tree trunk helps control damage by preventing caterpillars from reaching the leaves according to Brown. Petroleum jelly or any similar product should not be used in lieu of "Tanglefoot", as it will cause tree canker. Metal bands around tree trunks are ineffective deterrents.

Residents, Brown noted, can also stop caterpillars from inflicting further damage to their shrubs and smaller trees by spraying with pesticides. Bacillus Thuringiensis (BT), which goes by the trade name Thuricide, is an effective (though expensive) biological pesticide if used during the first three instars. It takes seven to ten days to work. Sevin works more quickly and is less expensive, but is toxic to bees. Orthene is effective and is non-toxic to bees, but has a very unpleasant odor.

The city will probably spray affected trees in public areas should there be an infestation, but no definite strategy has been planned. GHI has also not discussed a course of action. The State will most likely do aerial spraying of BT if there are sufficient funds.

Additional information on gypsy moths is available in the pamphlets "The Gypsy Moth in Maryland," published by the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Maryland (454-3621), and the Gypsy Moth Handbook published by the USDA: "The Homeowner and the Gypsy Moth: Guidelines for Control," Home and Garden Bulletin No. 227, available at the Government Printing Office (the D.C. number for orders and inquiries is 783-3238; the number for the Laurel bookstore is 953-7974.).

papers, original plans, aerial photographs, and other treasures of the city's forty-six years of development. A special feature is the display of some of the original furniture residents used in their homes. As Wallace F. Mabee reported in a supplement to The Cooperator (the former name of this newspaper) issued on the first anniversary of Greenbelt, "The Special Skills Division of the Resettlement Administration designed various sets of furniture of a type that they considered most appropriate for furnishing the homes at Greenbelt." The furniture was designed with careful thought of the utility as well as appearance and remand for it was so heavy that a second order had to be placed.

The program includes selections from Victor Herbert's Eileen, works by Bach, Lehar, McCoy, Koppitz, and others. The official "Heart of Greenbelt March," by Seymour Levine, which won the Bicentennial competition, will also be performed. Featured soloists are soprano Charlotte Kominski, trumpeters Andy Leech and Kent Hills, and alto saxophonist Caroline Cherrick.

Joe Reminick Honored For GHI Committee Work

by Mary Moien

At a reception at the GHI offices on Friday evening, April 29, it was announced that Joe Reminick of the Aesthetics and Environment (A&E) Committee had been named GHI "Committee Participant of the Year." More than 50 GHI committee members, board members, and staff gathered to honor all GHI residents who participated in the many committees throughout the year.

Nominations for the Participant of the Year award had been requested within the past few months. Betty Deitch, Chairman of the Member and Community Relations Committee which sponsored the reception, announced the selection of Joe Reminick as the winner. The surprised Reminick had to leave his post of serving refreshments to come forward to accept his plaque. Susan Gervasi, Chairman, A&E Committee, praised Reminick for "presenting the committee with ideas and options on many issues, and for volunteering his time and energy to improve our community. . . He's chaired a number of subcommittees, working on such issues as pet problems and clean-up day. . . . Joe's ever-present concern with the aesthetics of GHI and the safety of its members makes him a valuable asset not only to our committee, but to our GHI cooperative."

Richard Castaldi, life-long Greenbelt resident and member of the county council, then presented Joe with a citation from the Prince Georges County Council for his devotion to Greenbelt.

Joe, in his acceptance statement, expressed his surprise at being selected. He then turned the tables by stating that he could not have won this recognition without the hard work of all of the A&E Committee members.
