A Cantankerous Council Quarrels Over Pay Raise, Passes It Anyway

by Mary Lou Williamson

During the spring deliberations on the budget the Greenbelt City Council elected to raise its salary by a third and to pay the added cost ($30,000) of repairing the four unusable tennis courts at Braden Field for a total cost of $85,000. At its July 15 meeting council followed up on those decisions by approving a charter amendment changing the salaries and by accepting the low bid for the tennis courts — a bid again above the last estimate.

Both decisions were arrived at after acrimonious debate and a 3 to 2 vote. Both occurred late in the evening, long after the seats in the council chambers had emptied. Only those watching on cable saw and heard the tenor of the exchanges.

Council's salary had remained unchanged for eight years prior to being set at $1,500, outlined councilmember Tom White, then moved upward by $500 every other term to reach $3,000 four years ago. "The increment is now $1,000," said White. He disagreed with both the increase and its size. "$3,000 is in line with—slightly above—other similar governments or even private boards of directors," he said.

Calling the increase "unnecessary" and pointing out that there has been "no increased responsibility" for council under the city's charter, White urged council to reconsider the 33% increase.

Opposed to rehashing a subject which had been argued several times last spring, councilmember Toni Bram stated her position. This increase has been "worked over, over-reacted to, is just for getting votes (in the coming election). I don't feel any guilt in introducing it . . . women are notoriously underpaid, the five of us are underpaid." Claiming council deserves the increase which is just "keeping up with inflation," Bram continued. "Greenbelt has always been a leader." Council can "no longer justify" spending time on more discussion, "at least three members" are ready to vote, she said.

"It is important to allow disagreement to be voiced at each step of deliberations," councilmember Dick Pilski cautioned. "I think it's too much money. $250 would be enough."

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld made two points in defense of the increase. Bowie, a somewhat similar city, is paid more than Greenbelt. There the mayor gets $5,000 and the council $3,600 each. "We have more departments and more issues here. The increase is not out of line," he said. The Bowie council is considering an increase in their salaries. The $1,500 salary of 20 years ago had more buying power than the $3,000 of today, Weidenfeld said. While council's salary has doubled in those years, most things have tripled in cost. He objected to calling the increase 33% because council has not received an increase for four years. Weidenfeld, Ed Putens and Bram voted

yes. White and Pilski voted no.

Tennis Courts

When council first approved the reconstruction of the four tennis courts on Braden Field in 1984, the cost was estimated at $55,000. Later engineering work projected the cost to be $85,000. At the recommendation of the city manager, council added the extra $30,000 into the new budget and reappropriated from last year the original amount minus the cost of the engineering work.

At Monday's meeting council learned the low bid of two would be $94,000—an increase of $9,000. City Manager James K. Giese, who had met with the firm's representatives, recommended that council go ahead with the project. He suggested that some of the work could be done by the Public Works Department, lowering dollar outlay, but reminded council there is still a price tag. See COUNCIL, page 3, col. 2

Golden Triangle Building Cap Lifted as Roads Are Improved

by Norman Scherstrom

It is a case of a square deal coming full circle for the Golden Triangle. The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, developers of the Golden Triangle, sought and gained approval from the city council on July 15 to lift the cap placed on development of the Golden Triangle. The cap had limited development to 450,000 square feet until the interchange now under construction at Greenbelt Road and Kenilworth Avenue is completed. Action later in the week, July 18, by the Prince Georges Planning Board, made it official. The change nearly doubles the amount of office space in the triangle's office park.

The move will allow Prudential to plan now for the total remaining undeveloped land.

The agreement formalizes a previous understanding that would allow development of 912,000 square feet on the Golden Triangle, according to David Essig, general manager of development for Prudential. "We had been granted the full amount in '81 but we were limited to 450,000 square feet until road improvements were underway," he said.

The council debated whether road improvements must be completed before the building cap should be lifted. Essig pointed out that under state law once a road is funded, it is considered completed. He wanted to go before the county planning board with the city, not against them, he said.

"I am persuaded by your arguments," Mayor Weidenfeld said at the council meeting. "Get the best clients, the best quality you can get."

The approval sends Prudential back to the drawing board to devise a plan of development while it is still engaged in trying to complete its original development, two large office buildings.

"The first building is almost completely leased," Essig said. "The second building is empty. We're confident that within 6 to 12 months we can fill the rest of the offices. We're looking at defense-related businesses tied to NASA and the support people that feed into those types of industries"

Essig said the new development might include a hotel or restaurant besides new office space. "We're considering a hotel. It would be a nice amenity for the project. You already have a Hilton and a Holiday Inn in the area but 4 or 5 different layers of motels can go into a market and still be viable," he said.

Essig added that the additional development should complete the triangle. "Our goal is not to sell to a speculative developer. Our intent is to build out the site, and with this I think the site would be pretty fully utilized."

In approving the new building space allowance, the planning board set certain conditions, essentially those requested by the city: the board must approve all site plans; the City of Greenbelt will be consulted on site plan review; all land grading plans will be referred to the soil conservation district; the easements of land for access by pedestrians and bicyclists will be permitted if overpasses for the Beltway and Kenilworth Avenue are constructed.

"These are typical conditions usually put on this sort of thing," Essig said.

That is the shape of things in the Golden Triangle.

Sunrise Debacle Prompts City to Seek Understanding with County Executive

by Virginia Beauchamp

The Greenbelt City Council, still angry over the county's offer of special revenue bonds to facilitate the construction of Sunrise Village Apartments, a luxury apartment development next to Goddard Space Village and the Beltway in east Greenbelt, met in a work session on July 23 to try to address the issue of county-city relations. What they came up with was the draft of a plan for an understanding with county executive Parris Glendening to avoid such occurrences in the future.

For several years the city has tried to keep the lid on further development until roads adequate to handle the increased traffic are in place. Thus Coakley & Williams, Inc., developers of the Maryland Trade Center properties, were asked to sign covenants with the city in 1981 when they sought annexation, tying actual construction on their property to the completion of a supporting road system.

Of major concern to council has been the widening of Greenbelt Rd., with reconstruction of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway overpass and new exit ramps. In the meantime plans for development of the Tidler and Smith-Ewing tracts along the east side of Hanover Parkway may be slowed by similar constraints concerning adequate public facilities.

Thus the announced plans—coming out of the blue—for the start of construction this fall of a 478-apartment complex in two 11-story highrise towers was especially troubling. When council then learned that urging by county officials had impelled Sunrise developer Jim McCaig to go ahead immediately with his plans, council members were more than troubled; they were angry.

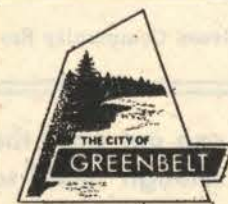

As a carrot to induce the developer to follow a more luxurious design than he might otherwise undertake, the county was willing to issue tax exempt Industrial Development Bonds (IDBs) to assist in financing construction. Not only do city council members object philosophically to the use of IDBs for such a purpose, but they regard the county's behind-the-scenes offer as a "fast track" to development contrary to the city's known position of coordinating development with construction of public facilities. (Since the initial proposal, the county has backed off from the offer to McCaig of IDBs unless the city approves. The city has so far denied such approval.)

At the July 23 work session, mayor Gil Weidenfeld sketched out a draft understanding. The understanding, in the form of a letter to the county executive, was scheduled to be taken up officially in a special city council meeting on July 31, just prior to an already-scheduled work session on another matter. In the meantime city manager Jim Giese will run by the terms of the understanding with Glendening's aide Fern Piret.

In brief, the understanding asks the county executive: (1) to confirm and carry out the time schedule for completion of planned road construction in Greenbelt as set forth in a recent memorandum to the city by James Novak of the county's Public Works Department (See story in last issue of News Review.); (2) to make county funds available for reconstruction of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway overpass if federal funds are delayed; (3) to submit to the city progress reports every three months on all road construction time-tables; and (4) to offer no special inducements to developers in east Greenbelt in the form of revenue bonds or other financial "fast track" benefits without the city's approval until all proposed road construction affecting east Greenbelt is completed.

Throughout the work session one very interested party, Coakley & Williams attorney Russell Shipley, was present. Far from blaming the city for their action, Shipley felt it would be helpful in assuring orderly development.

Peace Ribbon Project Involves Greenbelters

by Gayle Drake

During the past three years several Greenbelters have joined with others from around the world, sewing away their fears of nuclear war by stitching banners depicting their "dedication to this planet and its creatures." They have responded to the challenge of "What I cannot bear to think of as lost forever in a nuclear war" through the medium of needlepoint, applique, paint, and even crayon, creating beautiful works of folk art which will be displayed this Sunday, August 4, in Washington, D.C.

The banners were originally planned to be tied together as a ribbon around the Pentagon, but the response from around the world has been so great that over 15 miles of yard-long banners have already been gathered from all 50 states and 6 continents (Antarctica passed). The official ribbon display is now planned to circle not only the Pentagon, but also the Capitol and Mall, and the White House Ellipse.

Some of the more than 500 banners sent to Greenbelt from the state of Minnesota are presently being displayed at the Greenbelt Community Church. Greenbelt Community Church is hosting a dinner for Minnesotans who have come to participate in the Ribbon celebration. Greenbelters interested in helping to host the Minnesota delegation may call Marj or Bert Donn, host coordinators, at 474-1353.

Banners from Greenbelt will be displayed this Sunday with the rest of the banners from Maryland on the west side of the Capitol. Since the Park Police are requiring each banner to be held by at least one individual, and thousands of sections have been mailed to Washington from all over the world, Greenbelters are encouraged to come help hold the display. Carpools will be leaving Greenbelt from the parking lot near Suburban Bank this Sunday at 9:40 and 10:40 a.m. For more information call Esther Webb at 474-6890.

Saturday Movies Free To First 100 Kids

Over 180 people (mostly children) filled the Utopia Theater on Saturday for the showing of "Pinocchio."

Thanks to a generous gift from the Greenbelt American Legion Post No. 136, the first 100 children got in free. The offer will be repeated this coming Saturday for the showing of "Old Yeller," beginning at 10 a.m.

The Greenbelt Arts Center is delighted with the response to the Saturday morning film series and is planning a second series.

Correction

In the July 18 News Review article, "Hanover Parkway Route Worries Hunting Ridge Residents. Council", Thomas Renahan was mistakenly identified as president of the Hunting Ridge civic association. Gail T. Fisher is president. Renahan is one of five directors. In addition, the article stated that Renahan is in favor of extending Hanover Parkway. Renahan did not say he was in favor of the road, rather, given the current situation, he is not in favor of obstructing construction of the road. The News Review regrets the errors.

Adopt-A-Tree By August 31

Time is of the essence for Greenbelters interested in becoming part of the Adopt-a-Tree program to apply to order trees since the deadline to order trees for fall planting is August 31. Applications for ordering trees are available from the city fiscal office and at the manager's desk in the Co-op Supermarket.

Requests have been made to provide more information on this project, which is sponsored by the 50th Anniversary Committee. The kick-off will be the planting of a tree on Sunday, October 13, commemorating the first shovel of earth turned over in Greenbelt on October 12, 1935.

Trees that will be planted this fall and through 1987 come into two categories, shade and flowering ornamental. Shade trees include pin oak (Quercus palustris), northern red oak (Quercus borealis), willow oak (Quercus phellos), little leaf linden (Tilia cordata), red maple (Acer rubrum) and sugar maple (Acer saccharum). All these trees are round except the linden, which is conical. The height range is from 80 to 120 feet. All are fast growing and require full sun. Autumn colors include red, yellow, orange and crimson, the most colorful being maple.

The flowering ornamental trees include Bradford pear (Pyrus calleryana), flowering crab (Malus), dogwood (Cornus florida), and Yoshino Cherry (Prunus yedoensis). All of these are round except the cherry, which is spreading. The height range is from 25 to 50 feet. All are slow growing and require full sun. Fall leaf colors are predominantly red-crimson.

The trees are balled-burlapped and/or container grown, with delivery in time for fall planting between October 15 and November 15. Trees donated for city property will be planted by the city. Those on private property will be planted by the donor. Upon request the committee will furnish names of persons who will plant trees on private property.

More information can be obtained from 474-6587 or 474-6433.

Cat Rescued From Tree After 3½ Day Ordeal

by Katherine Keene

A male grey and white tabby is in stable condition at College Park Veterinary Hospital after three & a half agonizing days caught in a tall tulip poplar in the Attick Lake Park. He was finally rescued by a three-man crew, Richard Mills, Steward Whitehead, and Thomas Keifline of the city Public Works Department. Keifline got to within twenty feet of the limb where the cat was stranded and made the last stretch with climbing equipment.

How the cat happened to be in the tree on Saturday, July 27 when it was first spotted at 10 a.m. is not known. Jogger Lee Mowery of Laurel, who makes several laps daily, first spotted it. (Many people are unaware that cats have to learn how to climb down from a tree. Because their claws curl inward they cannot come head first, but must be taught by another cat or their owner to back down.)

Mowery, a young woman who cares deeply about all living things, called the cat. It looked at her but was afraid to come down and apparently did not know how to climb down backwards. She jogged around the lake again. It was still there, meowing, on the return lap.

Her first thought was, of course, the Fire Department, since she had often heard that firemen had the long ladders necessary to rescue a small animal 40 feet up in a tree. She was told that the Greenbelt department's insurance did not permit them to rescue cats. She called the County Humane Society, The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, The Animal Rescue League, Friends of Animals. Before the weekend was over she had called every organization listed in the phonebook that seemed a probable source of help. All failed to help, except the S.P.C.A., which did try to locate professional tree climbers.

One of these, from Beltsville, did offer to help provided Mowery would pay him $125 in advance. When she could not he was no longer interested. Another one from Gaithersburg offered to come to help. A small crowd waited until 10:30 p.m. When they phoned to see what had happened his wife told them he had gone to bed.

All sorts of people, children, joggers, picnickers gave suggestions on Saturday and on Sunday and on Monday. A D.C. policeman said the District police do rescue cats caught in trees. Mowery's husband, a retired Navy career man, tried climbing the tree using the Old Shiny-up Method—tried and true. He finally reached the lowest branches, but the cat retreated higher into the tree. He had by this time areas of skinless flesh on his arms, hands, legs, and chest and had to give up.

By Monday the cat's cries were getting weaker and fewer. The Greenbelt police had refused to help. County Executive Glendening's office was called. Someone was supposed to call back, but did not. On Monday Greenbelt mayor Gil Weidenfeld stopped by, but left thinking that a tree climber was on his way. The cat spent Monday night in the tree.

By Tuesday morning a small crowd surrounded the tree. The cat was well known. Mowery was back early, and found that it was not responding to her calls. Another jogger, Shirley Yoho, decided to phone Muriel Weidenfeld, thinking that the mayor's wife might be able to do something. Muriel could — she phoned city manager James Giese, who heard for the first time of the cat's plight.

Giese contacted the Public Works Department, which immediately sent a crew with a cherry-picker and climbing equipment. Keifline, who had never used the equipment, went after the cat. As he approached the frightened animal withdrew to the end of a branch. Keifline tried putting food on a pole. The cat wasn't interested. He coaxed the cat. Mowery, who by this time apparently was, in the cat's mind, a friend, called too, and the cat finally came near enough to be put into a bag and lowered to the ground. Keifline, shaking from his ordeal with unfamiliar equipment 90 feet above the ground, also came down.

Unfortunately the Mowerys cannot keep the cat, since they live in a no-pet apartment in Laurel. It is hoped that either the owner or a compassionate friend of cats will come forward. Mowery said that he appears to have been a pet, since he is well behaved, tries to reach for the door knob to open a door, and sits up in the back seat of a car as if he's being driven by his own chauffeur.

CITY NOTES

The general crew made temporary repairs to the sidewalk and curb and gutter on Ridge Road between Northway and Research Roads.

The parks crew continued cleaning Greenbelt Lake and Buddy Attick Park in the vicinity of the Lake. A great deal of debris has been removed from both the bay and peninsula area.

One member of the Public Works Department was assigned to drive for the Greenbelt Connection two half days to cover the absence of the driver-manager of the Greenbelt Connection. Both buses are in service. The Mercedes bus was completely inspected by an outside firm to determine the overall condition of the bus and it was judged in good mechanical condition throughout.

The parks crew is continuing the intensive watering program of all sod and annual planted areas. At the entrance of Buddy Attick Park a portion of the planted area has been covered with a black mat material in an effort to control weeds and hold moisture at the roots of the plants. Additional mulch has been added to many of the planted areas also in an attempt to hold the moisture around these plants.

Sixty-two campers are enrolled in Camp Pine Tree for the third session. On the first day, the campers took a field trip to the National Aquarium in Baltimore's Inner Harbor. This Wednesday, "Christmas in July" was celebrated in the Youth Center lounge which was decorated with Christmas trees, lights and all the trimmings. Thursday night was the annual Sleep-Over. The theme was New Year's Eve. Pinatas were broken, games played, movies shown and snacks were served. As usual, sleeping was very low on the list of events.

The Boys' and Girls' Club are getting ready for their Fall programs. Soccer registration was held at the Youth Center. Football registration and practice will begin Thursday, August 1 on Braden Field.

Springhill Lake Recreation Center has been undergoing a "face lifting" inside and out. Interior painting and landscaping around the outside of the building has been accomplished during the week.

The annual Greenbelt CARES picnic and volleyball party was held recently at Carol Leventhal's home. Former and current volunteers and staff all enjoyed some keen volleyball competition.

Barbara Lawson visited the Juvenile Services facility located in Cheltenham, Maryland, this week to compile client recidivism aggregate data.

At the invitation of Judge David Ross, Prince Georges County Juvenile Court, Carol Leventhal attended a day long symposium concerning the county's restitution program for juveniles. Created in 1982, the program has been selected by the U.S. Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, U.S. Department of Justice, as one of six exemplary programs of its kind across the nation.

Members of the CARES staff were involved in the day long workshop on adolescent suicide held on June 21, as both attendees and as participants. The workshop was an outcome of the deliberations of the education and training committee of the county's force on Adolescent Suicide, on which Carol Leventhal has been serving.

A new volunteer counselor has joined the CARES Family Clinic staff. Jennifer Smith, a doctoral student in psychology at Catholic University comes to CARES with an extensive background in working with children and adolescents.

Soccer Update

by Sue Cornelius

Help State Police Take A Bite Out of Crime

The Maryland State Police are in need of black or golden retrievers to assist troopers in combatting crime — tracking criminals, locating lost children, searching buildings, locating explosive devices, firearms, and narcotics. The dogs must be one year old males, AKC registered, they must have a good temperament and be able to fetch and retrieve. Persons wishing to donate retrievers should contact Sgt. Ben Cohey at (301) 442-2700.

FOSTER HOMES NEEDED

The Bureau of Rehabilitation Inc., a private, non-profit United Way agency, and the Juvenile Services Administration of the State of Maryland work with youth who need foster homes in Prince Georges county. These adolescents, aged 13-17, are placed in foster homes by the court because they lack proper parental supervision or have been charged with a minor offense.

The bureau's Supportive Services to Assist Youth (SSTAY) provides foster care adolescents with individual, group and family counseling, educational tutoring and school advocacy and year round recreation and cultural activities programs. Foster parents receive ongoing support, crisis intervention and professional training from experienced staff.

Foster parents are desperately needed in the county. They can be single or married, with or without children. Financial reimbursement for room and board for the youth will be given. For more information call Paul Bliss at 459-5525.

Greenbelt Grab Bag

by Punchin' Judy

Long, long ago, back in the fifties, there was a fashion called the "chemise." It defied anatomical reality by having the belt located around the top of the lower extremities. Punchin' Judy never indulged in this mode, never was even tempted, being in a shape which was better suited to maternity clothes.

Thirty years have passed, and a style has emerged strongly reminiscent of the unlamented chemise. Not only does your friendly neighborhood columnist not like this look, but she no longer has any excuse to hide faults of figure under a forgiving smock.

What is to be done? Well, there are several options. One can wear the old clothes that are crowding the closet. Lo and behold! They are too short. The stock market must be going up, because the hemlines certainly are coming down. Some of you might take a tuck and pretend they're mini dresses, but not if your knees look like mine.

Fortunately, the stores are carrying separates — skirts and blouses. And what skirts! Omar the tentmaker would have a field day. He could make three tents out of one skirt and silently steal away! His Japanese colleagues should feel happy with the shirts — they are cut straight across like kimonos, and almost as long!

Admittedly, there is one advantage to those oversize fashions. It is possible to buy them in a smaller size than one usually wears, giving one a euphoric feeling of having lost weight.

Having stalked the stores for suitable styles, I finally decided to give in and approached the racks of skirts and tops. Let me tell you, there are two concepts that my mother managed to instill in me. One was the one about wearing clean unmentionables in case I was hit by a bus, a catastrophe which fortunately has not occurred. The other one was that patterns must never be mixed: no stripes with plaids, no polka dots with checks. Mother would have been horrified. Not only is one expected to match up such horrifying combinations, they even occur on the same garment!

Well, I have been forced to disobey the maternal advice. I have bought a striped skirt and a coordinated plaid top. But I promise to obey the other dictum. After all, there are a lot of busses around.

MARYLAND STATE GUARD RECRUITING VOLUNTEERS

Company C of the Maryland State Guard, based at the Greenbelt Armory, is currently seeking volunteers for a variety of positions, Capt. John E. Manning, Company C Commander, or Nick Oneglia, at 474-4848, explained that the State Guard is a state military force, completely separate from the Maryland National Guard. The State Guard is basically a military police-type organization. It can be activated to reinforce the National Guard, or, in the absence of the National Guard on federal duty, to replace it as a state security force.

The State Guard is open to all Maryland citizens aged 16 to 75. Prior military service is a plus but is not required. Serving is on a voluntary, unpaid basis unless a unit is activated. When that happens, State Guard personnel receive the same pay and benefits as National Guardsmen of like rank and tenure.

Possible missions for the State Guard would be armory security, disaster relief, emergency communications, civil disturbance control, traffic management and anti-terrorist operations.

Citizens interested in learning more about the State Guard can call Captain Manning at 460-5992 in Rockville.

Swim Team News

by Tom Jones

Last Saturday, Greenbelt concluded its regular meet season with another victory over the Naval Ordnance Station Swim Team, 303-217. Greenbelt took an early lead and kept it throughout the rainy meet.

Triple winners (scoring 15 points) were Josh Kepler, Jennifer Drake, Steffan Sonneveldt, and Tara Yaney. Other scorers included Allison Low and Rob Reed (13 points); Shannon Berger (12); Bill Barwick and Brian Sluder (11); Jason Everhart, Morgan Groft, Trevor Groft, Peter Myers, Carolyn Drake, and Lynda Blue (9); Kim Lofgren, John Pryce, and Kathy Barwick (8); Jeremy Floyd and Terry Flanigan (7).

Last Sunday, the annual Novice Meet took place at Greenbelt. This meet is open to everyone who has not received a first, second, or third place in any official Prince-Mont League meet, whether or not they are on a team. Many swimmers showed up from Greenbelt. Becky Kerr came in first in breaststroke, second in butterfly, and third in backstroke. Ardith Porosky took firsts in freestyle, backstroke, and the individual medley (I.M.) Meadow Wirick had firsts in free and back. Jessica Kerr came in first in free. Nancy Rodgers had a third in fly and a fourth in back. Fini Penn took firsts in fly and breast. Aruna Inversin had second place in back, third in free, and fourth in breast. Jason Cox was third in breast and fourth in free. Joshua Lefchick took a first in back, second in free, and fourth in breast. Theresa Caven-der came in second in back and fourth in free. Fini Penn was second in free. Kate Greig took a second in breast and a fourth in free. Leah Choper was first in breast and I. M., and second in free. Courtney Flanigan came in third in free. Becky Sotok took second in breast and fourth in free. Miriam Lofgren was first in breast and second in back. Sharon Blunt was second in back, and third in breast. I. M. Marie Wilkinson took a fourth in back. T. Berger came in first in back. Brienne Leas took second in back. Danielle Leas was also second in in terms of other jobs not accomplished by the crew.

"I objected to the way this was handled during the budget process," said White. "Now it's up again. Do we have an unlimited supply of funds for the tennis courts? he queried. "I can think of a lot of unmet needs. Roosevelt Center could very much use $100,000 to make it safe. Not to make it playable. There are probably 10 more worthy projects," he suggested.

"I am going to echo Mr. White," said Pilski. "We could use it in the swimming pool; we've been talking about rehabilitating Braden Field for years; at the lake park, we could build toilet facilities; or it could be the down payment on replacing the disgusting and degrading showers in the Youth Center. It is not good to make decisions like this at 12 o'clock at night."

"Choose your time," Bram offered. "I'm not afraid."

"Why not defer to the next meeting—when we do not have to compete with Johnny Carson (for the late night TV audience). Let's bring this amount of money before the public after plenty of publicity." White seconded the motion. Giese then pointed out that the bids are good for only 30 days. (Council won't meet again until August 12, after the 30 days are up.)

"I oppose (the delay)" said Weidenfeld. "I don't see the justification." People have come to the city twice in two years to ask for the repair of the courts. Many people in Greenbelt play tennis. "The city made a commitment when it built the original courts. Already the delay has been unbelievable."

The amendment to delay, on back.

This Saturday, Greenbelt will take part in the divisional meet at Prince Georges Council. There is a good chance that Greenbelt will win a division championship, as they did in 1983. Swimmers and officials participating in the meet should meet at the pool at 7 a.m. Warm-ups for Greenbelt are at 7:45 and the meet starts at 9.

a vote of 2 to 3, failed. A vote on the motion to accept the low bid of Pickens succeeded, 3 to 2. The same division occurred with each vote, White and Pilski on one side, Weidenfeld, Bram and Putens on the other.

White then moved to "direct that staff make an assessment of tennis needs" in the community and methods of recouping some of the cost of repairs. The motion was seconded by Pilski. In speaking against the motion, Weidenfeld pointed out that "council has not in the past wanted a policy of charging for tennis." The motion failed 3 to 2.

White then accepted as a friendly amendment Weidenfeld's compromise to refer the policy question to PRAB. But he would not accept Putens' amendment to direct PRAB to hold a public hearing on the issue. Pilski objected to telling an advisory board what to do. "That's the beauty of the system," he said, "the boards have always acted separately." PRAB chairman Keith Chernikoff pointed out that his committee's first task on the issue would be one of "fact finding. All our meetings are open. We'll be sure (an announcement appears in) the News Review and on Cable TV." Putens' motion, seconded by Bram, passed 3 to 2.

A tally of the final vote showed all five supporting the referral to PRAB until the city clerk pointed out to Pilski that White's motion now included Putens' requirement that PRAB hold a public hearing.

"Well, then I vote 'no'," said Pilski.

Other Business

Council directed staff to hire architects for site analysis and design work on the Police Station, the Youth Center addition, Public Works needs, and indoor/outdoor swimming pools. At the same time staff will identify potential sites for these facilities and potential parcels for parkland acquisition. The city will also advertise for proposals for utilization of space in the North End Center. Expressions of interest have been received for a day care center and a Montessori school.

Council looked at the possibility of granting the day after Thanksgiving as a city holiday in place of Columbus Day. The only problem the city appears to have is how to handle the collection of refuse that week with two holidays. Probably households would be limited to one paper pick-up and one refuse pick-up.

Daniels Wins Wet Race

by Larry Noel

Steve Daniels of Greenbelt and the Washington Running Club continued winning races in this area with a 5 kilometer (3.1 mile) win in Greenbelt National Park on July 27 in a driving rain. His time of 16:05 was 7 seconds faster than Jeff Cushing from Lumberton, North Carolina and Craig Voise of Alexandria. Daniels was the subject of a feature article in the Prince Georges Journal of July 26.

This winning race was organized by the Prince Georges Running Club as part of the one-a-month races it sponsors. The rain before, during and after the race held down the number of runners—only 40 ran. Christy Peters of Laurel was the first female in 21:34 with the first Greenbelt female Nan Donnell in 25:51. Fortunately the rain stopped for the picnic held by the Prince Georges Running Club after the race.

Greenbelt finishers were Steve Daniels, 1st, 16:05; Al Naylor, 4, 16:28; Jim Walsh, 10, 18:42; Geoff Baker, 11, 18:55; John McLaughlin, 14, 19:16; Nan Donnell, 34, 25:51 and Marvin Holmes, 37, 26:37.

A meeting of the Prince Georges Running Club will be held on Monday, August 5 at the Greenbelt Library at 7:30 p.m. Interested joggers or runners are invited.

City Golden Agers Beat Rockville Team

by Jerry Conway

The Greenbelt Golden Agers softball team defeated Rockville Golden Agers by a close score of 15-12 on Wednesday, July 24 at Braden Field. Several smashing homeruns with men on base by Mike Burchick, Jim McGann and Bill Grennon along with good defensive fielding enabled us to defeat the opponents. The players of both teams and the spectators of the game enjoyed a brief social session after the game. Everybody over age 55 is invited to participate in this stimulating sports activity. We practice for fun every Monday morning from 9:30 to 11

What is Tartar?

Tartar (calculus) forms on the teeth when plaque becomes calcified. Plaque is soft and easily removed from the surface of the teeth with proper brushing and flossing. Tartar can only be removed by a dentist or hygienist using specially designed instruments.

If allowed to remain for an extended period of time, tartar causes gum recession along with loss of bone which supports the teeth. In extreme cases, teeth must be removed due to looseness and infection which can not be treated.

Periodic treatment by your dentist can remove the tartar deposit, but the damage done can not be reversed. Thorough cleaning of the mouth on a daily basis is the only means of preventing the harmful effects of tartar.

CONSIDERING A CHANGE IN RESIDENCE?

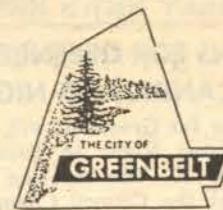

There are three key elements to consider:

- A) Your needs: things you positively have to have.
- B) Your wants: things you'd like to have, but don't necessarily need.
- C) Your qualifications:
- 1) Your initial investment (cash to move in)
 - 2) Your total income (gross yearly income)
 - 3) Your debt service (total indebtedness)

I would like the opportunity to discuss with you how we can combine these three factors to assist you and your family in achieving your housing goals both within Greenbelt and the metropolitan area - of course with no obligation.

New Teen Club Plans Activities

The Greenbelt Youth Club, sponsored by the Catholic Community of Greenbelt, has many plans for the month of August. They begin the month by welcoming Father Jeff Charlton and the Saint Pius X Teen Club from Indianapolis, Indiana. Greenbelters will remember Father Jeff as the deacon at St. Hugh's (1982-83). The teens from Indianapolis will visit Greenbelt this year. Next summer Greenbelt teens will travel to Indianapolis. The Indiana teens will reside in the homes of many local residents during their stay in Greenbelt.

The clubs will begin their week together with a trip to Ocean City on Monday, August 5. On Tuesday and Wednesday, August 6 and 7, sightseeing in downtown Washington (including the National Catholic Shrine and Franciscan Monastery) is on the schedule.

On Tuesday evening, August 6, the teens will relax at a pool party sponsored by the Catholic Community of Greenbelt at the Greenbelt pool. The pool party will run from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served. There is an admission fee to defray the cost of renting the pool. The Greenbelt Youth Club invites all their friends in the community to the party to visit Father Jeff.

Wednesday evening there will be a VCR movie party. On Thursday evening, August 8, there will be a liturgy and a pot luck dinner for the teens and host families.

On August 13 there will be a Calendar Meeting to plan future

Council Tidbits

In what councilmember Toni Bram called the shortest city council meeting that she could remember, she and three of her colleagues (Richard Pilski being absent) in a special meeting on July 22 unanimously approved an agreement between the city and Sidney Brown, president of Beltway Greenbelt Properties, Inc., concerning future driveway improvements west of Cherrywood Lane in the Beltway Plaza. The driveway in question is that approved earlier to provide access to the new Chi Chi's Restaurant.

On their half of the driveway — the section to the south — Chi Chi's has carried out landscaping and provided a sidewalk. In lieu of a performance bond, which would tie up specially earmarked funds possibly for years, the city has accepted Brown's written agreement that at such time as he develops the rest of Parcel S to the north of the driveway, he will also provide a sidewalk and appropriate landscaping.

The special meeting to execute this agreement was scheduled five minutes before an already-scheduled council work session on transportation issues.
