Reclassification of Police Officers Raises Their Salaries Significantly

by Mavis Fletcher

At a worksession on May 9, city council members considered the proposed public safety budget for the 1988/89 fiscal year. The public safety share of the proposed $8,018,000 city budget is $2,773,400 or 34.6 percent. A major source of increased costs in the public safety budget is the reclassification of all police officers' positions to one grade higher on the pay scale.

In introducing the public safety budget, City Manager James K. Giese said that the reclassification of police officers was part of a general review of all city classified positions which has resulted in the recommendation that a number of the positions be reclassified. In the case of police officers, he noted, the starting salary for Greenbelt officers is below that of any major police department in the area, as well as below that of Laurel and Hyattsville, the two municipalities most comparable in size to Greenbelt.

The reclassification will bring starting pay for police officers to almost $22,000 per year, equaling about a five percent pay increase. In addition, all city employees with fewer than six years service are eligible to earn an annual in-grade increase—about four percent. Moreover, the proposed budget provides for a four percent cost-of-living adjustment for all city employees. Putting it all together, a police officer with fewer than six years of service in the department could earn a pay increase of approximately 14 percent in the next year.

FOP Requests

Among a long list of requests put forth by the Fraternal Order of Police at a city council worksession on March 23, the FOP asked for a 10 percent pay raise. According to a statement by FOP President John A. Lann at that meeting, the pay raise and other benefits for which the FOP was asking were needed to retain young police officers. (Over 57% of the department have fewer than five years service).

In the face of a proposed 14 percent pay raise for the younger members of the department who might be particularly vulnerable to recruitment, the FOP pressed for none of the other earlier-proposed benefits at the public safety budget worksession. Police Chief James R. Craze said that he had made the decision to ask for increased pay over the take-home car program on which the FOP had placed much emphasis at the worksession. Giese said that the take-home car program had been seriously considered and costed-out over various phase-in periods; however, he had decided not to propose the program this year.

Crime Statistics

Statistics presented in the budget give a "good news, bad news" picture of crime in the city. Overall, Class I offenses as a whole (homicide, rape, robbery, assault, breaking and entering/burglary, larceny/theft, and auto theft) were up 17 percent in 1987. However, in certain important categories crime had decreased. Cases of breaking and entering/burglary are down eight percent and robberies have decreased nine percent. No homicides were committed in the city for the second year in a row, and rapes were down 50%, from 12 in 1986 to six in 1987.

However, assaults increased 19% and cases of larceny/theft increased 33%. Calls for service to the department decreased slightly (three percent) as did reported vehicle accidents (five percent). The best news is a 50% increase in adult arrests; juvenile arrests declined six percent.

More Officers Needed

Giese said that the budget recommendation submitted by Craze called for two additional officers for the department. One would have been slated for the Special Enforcement Unit (SEU) and one was a slot for a captain. Neither recommendation was included in the final budget proposal.

Councilmembers asked several questions about the SEU, which Craze said, has been targeted against drug trafficking since last year. Mayor pro tem Joseph Isaacs asserted that the SEU unit never has functioned

Council Reviews Recreation Budget

by Marsha Barrett

At the city council worksession on the Recreation Department budget on May 3, the recreation staff highlighted for the council the department's accomplishments, problems, and future projects. The recreation budget for the 1988/89 fiscal year is $1,381,800 or 17.2% of the city's total budget. The proposed budget for the department is 6% above last year's.

Among the department's accomplishments were renovation of the outdoor pool and installation of the new batting cages. Renovation of the outdoor pool finished ahead of schedule. The pool opens Saturday, May 28. Admission is free on opening day and there will be an opening ceremony at 10 a.m. After the batting cages were installed they earned $411 during their first two weeks of operation. While the cost of the cages was approximately $13,000, the department expects the cages to become revenue producing in the future.

Staffing Problems

Hank Irving, Director of Recreation, outlined a staffing problem to the council. The department has been experiencing a high degree of employee turnover. Irving felt the department was unable to attract and retain good employees. He based the reason for the high turnover on low salaries. Many former recreation employees were joining the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission (MNCPPC). Irving expressed the opinion that Greenbelt was becoming a training ground for other parks departments. He suggested to council that the city raise department salaries, so that the city can compete with other parks departments. James K. Giese, city manager, countered Irving's proposal with two facts. One, the 1988/89 budget allows for a 5% increase in salaries, and two, he commented that the city's salary structure should not be determined by the fact that it existed in the shadow of larger parks and recreation departments. He stated further that Greenbelt salaries are in line with other cities the size of Greenbelt.

The acquisition of Schrom Hills Park, the increase and decrease of different sports activities, and other budget topics were discussed. While the 1988/89 budget addresses funds for Schrom Hills park, the recreation department is already hearing resident requests for more amenities. In answer to council's observation that there had been an increase in co-ed volleyball and a decrease in membership in the Golden Age Club, the staff responded that many people, seniors as well, were becoming increasingly interested in more active sports and educational classes like real estate and financial investment.

Indoor Pool

As for future projects, discussion centered on the indoor pool. The recreation staff emphasized that estimates to operate the indoor pool were speculative, much depended on revenue generated by indoor pool rates, group rentals and pool pass sales. The council discussed how to encourage use of the pool and meet citizen needs. One idea was to move the weight room to the indoor pool. Another council member

Joe Glazer to Sing New Deal Songs at Museum Program

by Eileen Peterson

When Joe Glazer worked for the Textile Workers' Union in Ohio during the 1940s, he took home more than a paycheck: he absorbed, and later collected, labor union songs and published them as "Songs of Work and Protest."

A specialist on songs of the New Deal period, he'll feel right at home at the Greenbelt Museum's fundraiser on Wednesday, May 25 at the Greenbelt American Legion.

Traveling to more than 60 foreign countries for the U.S. Information Agency, Glazer has interpreted American life in song and story. Drawing from his more than 20 albums of songs, he weaves pictures of working people and social movements, the good times as well as the hard times. He sings of the strengths as well as the weaknesses in American society. In his latest album, "Old Folks Ain't All the Same," his songs deal with various aspects of aging, including social security and old-age pensions.

At the fundraiser, Glazer will sing of the New Deal, the WPA, the Roosevelts and Martin Luther King. When Greenbelt was born, songs sprang up about the spirit of the people coming out of the Great Depression. But they were also about the sit-down strikes and the growth of the CIO and industrial unions.

Glazer has been the subject of two half-hour productions for Public Television and the star of a documentary movie, "Songs and Stories of Labor," produced by Rutgers University. He has sung at the White House and at Madison Square Garden at union rallies, at civil rights demonstrations and at scores of universities.

Poison Warning

The Food and Drug Administration is appealing to all parents and childcare personnel to search their medicine cabinets for one-ounce bottles of Humco and Brite Life brand ipecac syrup. Ipecac syrup is commonly used to induce vomiting, especially in cases of poison ingestion.

The Humco bottles labeled as being ipecac syrup may in fact contain a poisonous amount of eucalyptus oil. Eucalyptus oil is commonly used in minute amounts in vaporizers and nose-drops and in coughdrops as flavoring and is considered safe for these products. However, pure eucalyptus oil taken in the amounts recommended on ipecac syrup labels can quickly cause convulsions and coma. As little as a teaspoon can be fatal.

The Brite Life may contain iodides tincture. Lot #004715 with expiration date 7-92 is the only lot of Brite Life involved in the recall. The bottles of iodides tincture mislabeled as ipecac syrup may also be identified by the presence of a plastic applicator rod visible in the bottle. For further information contact the USFDA, Bob Fisher or Sandra Baxter at 1-615-736-2088.

Joe Glazer will appear at the American Legion on Wednesday May 25, 7:30-10:30 p.m. in a benefit performance for the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum.

He has been called "Art Buchwald with a guitar," and Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin called him "the world's greatest troubador." He has sung at various anniversaries of the New Deal, including one at the May flower Hotel in Washington which drew '30s leaders such as FDR's trusted advisor, Rex Tugwell. Glazer, a New York City native now living in Chevy Chase, will take fundraiser patrons back to the days when Greenbelt was a dream turning into reality for and by the working people looking to a better future.

SHOCKED

To the Editor:

I was shocked when I read the News Review's editorial criticizing the city council for their "hasty" decision to oppose the Cinema n' Drafthouse liquor license.

Any "hastiness" was not on the part of the city council, but rather on the part of Mr. Christacos and the Cinema n' Drafthouse owners, who waited until the "eleventh hour" (two weeks before their liquor board hearing) to come before council with their request and the deal to renovate the center. Even after council members asked for a more specific offer, the owner neglected to bring anything in writing to the April 18 meeting. Thus council was put in the position of having to make a snap decision without a clear commitment on what the city would actually get in return for its support for the liquor license.

Rather than criticism, council deserves praise for its prudence in refusing to agree to such a deal with nothing in writing. We could have ended up with a Cinema n' Drafthouse and no renovation at all.

Furthermore, I am simply stunned by the editorial's wholesale endorsement of Mr. Christacos' position, in its assertion that "Christacos is absolutely right when he says that he needs an unusual centerpiece to anchor any renovation of these buildings and make it pay." For one thing, if the center is "shabby and rundown", as the News Review says, we have the owner to thank for that. It is his responsibility to keep his buildings in decent repair. And don't forget it is Greenbelt residents that will have to live with the "unusual centerpiece".

A possible solution to the problem: If Mr. Christacos isn't finding his investment in the center sufficiently profitable, perhaps the Merchant's Association, with help from the community, could form a cooperative and take it off his hands. It would be far better for the city to then lend money to a cooperative for the renovation than to give an undeserved grant to the owner. And such an endeavor would be in keeping with Greenbelt's longstanding tradition of solving problems together, as a community.

And speaking of Greenbelt tradition, the News Review's editorial chastises city council for "speaking for the status quo—circa 1937"—apparently implying that efforts to preserve our heritage are misguided and irrelevant in today's world. To me, his attitude amounts to nothing less than a sellout of the values that Greenbelt stands for, and a slap in the face to the memory of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

A Timely Reminder

To the Editor:

I was pleased to read in the first City newsletter (City News, Spring 1988) that "negotiations are underway for the purchase of 3.8 acres of land in the Greenbelt East area" adjacent to the city-owned Schrom Hills Park.

I was hoping to read that similar progress had been made toward the purchase of Parcels 1 and 2. Citizens might remember Parcel 1 as the tract in danger of development (houses and townhouses), the threat of which resulted in a fantastic citizen turnout for the December city council meetings.

In response to this turnout, as well as their own desire to help save Greenbelt's green belt, city council voted to pursue the acquisition of all or as much as possible of the 102-acre Parcel 1.

I urge city council (as well as Greenbelt citizens) to stay on top of this matter. I further urge council to investigate all of our options simultaneously, rather than pursuing a single course of action only to find (down the road) that it is not viable.

I also have the following suggestions with respect to specific actions to be taken toward preserving Parcels 1 and 2 as parkland:

- Perform research necessary to determine the fair market value of the parcels. This is crucial for making informed choices. (Currently the proposed city budget estimates the value of Parcels 1 & 2 to be between $1.52 and $4.3 million.)

- Pursue negotiations with owners to acquire the parcels, regardless of all previous unsuccessful attempts.

- Investigate the possibility of county and/or state funds to assist in the purchase of the parcels.

- Research the viability of condemning the parcels should negotiations with the owners fail. If it's not possible/winnable, let's not pin all of our hopes on this one.

- Determine whether purchasing a portion of Parcel 1 is even a possibility (should funds be insufficient to acquire the entire parcel). That is, would the owners even consider selling a portion of the parcel vs. the entire parcel.

The City Newsletter's update on development projects underway in the city (Maryland Trade Center III, Commerce Center II, Belle Point townhouses and commercial space, various road expansions) makes the retention of green space all the more ur-Patricia Ann (Patty Ann) Osborne, 25, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Osborne, Periwinkle Court, died May 11 in an automobile accident.

Patty Ann moved to Greenbelt as a young child in September 1965. She attended North End, St. Hugh's and John Carroll elementary schools, Mary McLeod Bethune junior high school and graduated from Eleanor Roosevelt senior high school in 1980. She received an AA degree in General Studies from Prince Georges Community College in 1983 and a BA in General Studies from the University of Maryland in 1986.

Patty Ann worked as a retail sales associate for Garfinkels from 1979 to 1983, was a sales and services coordinator for Cintas Corp. from 1984 to 1987, and was a management consultant at NIH for ROW Associates until the time of her death.

She was an active participant in CYO and Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club sports, including softball, soccer and bowling. She was a volunteer for the Boys and Girls Club and was named by them as Girl of the Year. The Club's annual ski trip to Seven Springs resort in Pennsylvania was organized by her.

Her hobby was photography and she also liked to spend time with her nieces and nephew.

She is survived by her parents Sonny and Barbara Osborne, brothers Bill of Riverdale and Ed of Greenbelt; sisters Bridget, Beth and Cindy of Greenbelt; grandmother Lena Osborne, special friend Jeff Morgan, four nieces and a nephew, and many relatives and friends.

Patty had an exuberance for life and her relatives and friends remember her gregarious personality, vivacious smile and contagious laugh.

Services were held at St. Hugh's Catholic Church on Saturday, May 14 with burial in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

Last Chance

To the Editor:

The concept of people living in the presence of green parkland ought to be defended vigorously by all citizens of Greenbelt and their elected officials. The proposal to buy Parcels 1 and 2 must not be postponed or neglected. This is our last chance to buy some woodlands. There is no more being made.

Recreation Groups Bring Annual Wish Lists to Council

by Elizabeth Loebman

Eleven Greenbelt cultural and recreational organizations presented the city council with funding requests in a May 10 work session. Representatives from each organization met with the council in an organized, yet relaxed meeting, which was held in the Morrison Lounge of the Greenbelt Youth Center.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld asked each representative the amount of money that they were requesting and what the money would be used for.

The session began at about 8 p.m. with the Golden Age Club's request for $1800, the same amount as last year. The senior-citizen group takes day-trips to places such as Harborplace in Baltimore, Potomac Mills, the National Art Gallery and the Amish Folk Festival. The money is used to provide the group transportation.

The group is also planning longer trips to Alaska and Nova Scotia. A councilmember joked and asked if the group intends to take a bus to Alaska.

Rena Hull, chairperson of the Labor Day Festival, asked for the same "in-kind" contribution as last year. The group requests that the city's Public Works department help in putting up booths and the bandstand, in painting and in setting up electrical wiring. Hull says that everything should run smoothly "provided that it doesn't rain like last year."

Two cultural organizations attended the meeting, the Greenbelt Concert Band and the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center.

The concert band, which is an all-adult band, asked the council for $200 more than last year. The group's representative, Thomas Cherrix, blames the higher figure on a "bit of inflation." The money, $4000 in total, would be spent on salaries and equipment.

The Arts Center requested $8000 from the council. The group wants to buy a new $5600 dance stage and will use $3000 for lighting and cable for electrical equipment.

Recently the group was given a 60-day eviction notice from their landlord, George Christacos of Alexandria, Virginia. The notice says that they are to leave their current location at the Utopia by July 1. The group's spokesperson, Kevin Kneisley, asked the council, "Why purchase anything if we are out by July 1?" He adds that the group is looking for a new home and that they "have a number of alternatives."

The seven remaining groups were all recreational/athletic groups.

The running club wants $300 for visors that will be distributed to runners at footraces. The group has sponsored many competitions in the past, including a "dog race" where owners teamed up with their dogs in what was a competitive, yet humorous race.

The Greenbelt Senior Softball Team came to the council for funds for the first time. The group requested $700 so that they could "upgrade themselves a little bit." The 20 person team hopes to get uniforms, a scoreboard and a first-aid kit.

The remaining athletic organizations requested funds for similar reasons: all of the groups need equipment, uniforms, supplies, salaries (umpires and coaches) and facility rental.

Clete Mehringer, of the Greenbelt Soccer Association, told the council that equipment fees add up to quite a lot of money. "There are balls, which are $25 a piece for the cheap ones, then there are bags for the balls, and water bottles . . ." he added.

Other groups represented at the meeting were the Aquatic Boosters Club, the Boys and Girls Club, Greenbelt Little League, and Babe Ruth League.

RECREATION BUDGET

(Continued from page one) ber noted that while the city is attempting to make the pool self-supporting, it seemed like an expensive form of exercise to offer to citizens when jogging was cheaper. In the discussion the question arose as to whether the pool would be self-supporting or a service to citizens. The recreation staff answered that there was a growing demand for exercise and that demand encompassed changes in types of programs offered, like co-ed volleyball, special population needs and pre-school activities. The staff felt with successful program scheduling of group sales and citizen use of the pool, the pool could possibly earn enough to be self-supporting.

Arts Center

Some final comments concerned the Arts Center and resurfacing Braden Field tennis courts. It was noted that the Arts Center's lease had been cancelled as of July 1. Council members also suggested that they might want to listen to another presentation by the Cinema 'n Drafthouse. Comments on the possibility of resurfacing Braden Field tennis courts arose when the staff expressed concern over the age of the present court surfaces and requested a complete overhaul. Giese noted that only funds for patching the courts had been included in the budget because resurfacing was very expensive.

ERHS Student Hit by Van Makes Good Progress

Karen Henning, the Roosevelt student who was hit by a car as she ran into the street around the front of a Metrobus, is back in school. Karen, a tenth grader from Lanham, was running across Hanover Parkway on May 2 to join a group of friends. Neither she nor the driver of the Toyota van, also a student, saw the other in time to stop. Karen suffered a cracked left pelvis and a lot of abrasions, particularly on the right hand. She was taken to the shock trauma center at Prince Georges Hospital in Cheverly.

"It was an impulsive act, she was so lucky not to have been hurt more seriously," her mother Marilyn Henning told the News Review on Tuesday. The family was overwhelmed, she said, with the kindness and caring of the school administrators, teachers and students—the phone calls and visits, the get well cards personally delivered to the hospital by Karen's art class and the assignments collected by a guidance counsellor. The abrasions are nearly healed, now, she related, and Karen is able to put some weight on her left foot.

properly and asked, "How can we get it going?" Craze answered that the unit is functioning better now than it has since it was formed but admitted that it is operating at half strength (two officers) at this time. Giese said that budget constraints had kept him from recommending the additional officer for this unit but agreed that an additional officer would help keep a unit functional which is used as a reserve manpower source for other units.

Councilmember Edward Putens said that he would probably want to support the addition of one officer to this unit. However, residents of Greenbelt East, present at the meeting, wanted at least two officers added to the force. Sandy Bowers of Greenbriar said she could not reconcile the "stagnation" in the size of the police force with the great increase in building in Greenbelt East. Arlene Peterson of Greenwood Village, concerned with the number of break-ins in her neighborhood, called for additional patrol officers "so we can see some visibility" in that part of the city.

Dorothy Pyles, active in the Greenbriar neighborhood crime watch, also supported the addition of two patrol officers. "The presence of police on the street is of benefit" in deterring crime, she said. "The number of people you had in 1986 can't cope with the number of 1988 residential units," she maintained.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld explained that council cannot grant all requests of the police before it considers expenses of other parts of the government. He said that council gives great weight to police protection but must also consider the needs of public works, the recreation department, Greenbelt CARES, and other city departments. He noted that the public safety part of the budget is increasing faster than any other part but added that "we cannot abandon all the other traditional Greenbelt services."

Craze, while stating that some formulas would support additional officers for the department, reminded residents that the number of officers in the department has increased 30% in the last five years. Councilmember Antoinette Bram maintained that the department has also become more efficient and lauded the department as "the best force" in the area.

Isaacs and Councilmember Thomas White also pointed out that the council has to weigh all the parts of the budget before deciding. Isaacs also noted that breaking and entering cases are down and that calls for service have decreased. White said that the police budget is the fastest growing part of the budget and that "what has been presented is a balancing act."

Paul Sinkovic of Greenbriar agreed that it is "a real balancing act" but added that those attending were "showing our concerns." Putens asked whether they would be ready to pay for the additional officers they had asked for. Sinkovic replied, "I feel that most citizens would."

Facts About Gypsy Moths

by René Bryan

'Tis the season for gypsy moth caterpillars to munch, munch, munch on their favorite delights - your trees! White oak, red oak, birch, willow, sweet gum and about 100 other varieties of trees and shrubs are among their favorites. This insect has a huge appetite and is the most serious enemy of hardwood trees in the eastern United States.

According to the USDA Forest Service, more than 2 million acres will be defoliated this year. Gypsy moth caterpillars infest trees in large numbers— as many as 30,000 caterpillars an infest a single tree - each eating 5 to 10 leaves in a lifetime.

Native to Europe, the moth was brought into the United States in 1869 by a French scientist working near Boston. He was trying to create a new strain of silkworms. His experiment failed but some of his caterpillars escaped, and ever since people have been trying to halt the spread of the moths.

Egg masses are laid in many clusters in the fall, with 100 to 1,000 eggs in each cluster. Young gypsy moth caterpillars hatch in April and May. As they grow, feeding only at night, the tiny spots on their back become more obvious. From the head down, the first five pairs of spots are blue and the remaining six pairs are brick red. The brightly marked caterpillars are about 2 inches long when they reach maturity in late June or early July.

After spinning cocoons, the adult moth emerges approximately two weeks later. Egg laying occurs shortly after mating. Adult moths die shortly after they have mated and produced the overwintering eggs.

Control Measures

Presently, there are two commonly applied sprays that the State of Maryland uses to combat gypsy moth caterpillars. Those pesticides are Dimilin and BT. Dimilin is preferred because it does not seem to harm other predators. Spraying should be done in the spring when the caterpillars are less than 1/2 inch long and most vulnerable, and before leaf damage becomes serious.

To control larger caterpillars, a good tactic may be to encircle the tree trunks with commercially available sticky bands. These trap caterpillars crawling up or down the tree during their daily journey. Another method to catch caterpillars is to use wide burlap bands. Place the folded burlap bands around tree trunk, the idea being not to trap the caterpillars but to give them an apparently safe daytime hiding place. Then collect and destroy the caterpillars every morning. When collecting the caterpillars DO NOT TOUCH them - some people are allergic to their hairs. Gently scrape them off the burlap with a stick or wear gloves and pick them off by hand. Drown the collected pests in rubbing alcohol, kerosene, or soapy water. City Horticulturist Bill Phelan recommends using either of these methods for controlling gypsy moth caterpillars.

In addition, homeowners should scrape off egg masses during the fall and winter months and drop them into a container of rubbing alcohol or kerosene. These hairy clusters look almost as if they are covered with tan chamois or velvet. New egg masses are firm to the touch; hatched ones are soft and spongy.

State Program

The State is presently spraying, via helicopter, in heavily infested areas. At this time, Greenbelt does not meet the requirements for the Maryland State Gypsy Moth Spraying Program. To determine whether or not an area is largely infested, egg masses are counted and an estimated egg mass per acre figure is calculated. Egg masses were counted around Greenbelt Lake earlier this spring. Figures of 150 to 175 egg masses per acre were deter-

State Sprays Gypsy Moths

Maryland's Gypsy Moth Suppression Program is both safe and effective, says Wayne A. Cawley, Jr., Secretary of the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

Each landowner is notified at least 30 to 60 days before any treatment begins. Persons who object may ask to be exempted from the program.

The chemicals used to control Gypsy Moths are deemed safe. Dimilin and B.T. (Bacillus Thuringiensis) are both EPA-approved and are used only under the strict supervision of the Department of Agriculture's trained professional staff. Rumors that one can't garden for six months after spraying are unfounded, according to Cawley.

When an area reaches a figure of 500 egg masses per acre it qualifies for spraying. At this level defoliation is visible.

CARES Budget Aired At Council Worksession

by Mavis Fletcher

At a city council worksession on the proposed budget for the Greenbelt CARES Youth Service Bureau on May 9, Carol Levanthal, director of CARES, said that there has been a gradual movement upward in the numbers of the people served in the community. Levanthal heads a staff of two fulltime (including herself) and two half-time professional counselors and one full-time and one half-time office assistants. The budget for the 1988/89 fiscal year is $187,800. State and county grants account for more than half of the total; the city's share is $87,300.

City Manager James K. Giese introduced the proposed budget by saying that the only substantial change from last year was reclassification of all the professional positions in CARES. The positions have been raised two grades. The reclassification is part of a program of reassessing classification of all positions in the city government.

Council Questions

Mayor pro tem Joseph Isaacs asked whether the bureau is generally working at capacity. Levanthal replied that it is and that there is a waiting list for services. Mayor Gil Weidenfeld inquired whether the proportion of Greenbelt residents has gone up or down. Levanthal said that about 60% of the clients are residents, a number which has remained fairly steady. She noted that residents are given preference for the bureau's services, then come persons who work or go to school in Greenbelt, then referrals from other areas are accepted.

Councilmember Thomas White asked whether Levanthal had seen any change in the clientele of CARES in the past ten years. She replied that the "seriousness may have increased—people may be more distraught" but that otherwise there is little change. She said she felt that CARES had "done a good job in educating people that it's OK to come in" for help but some clients still come in at the "last minute." When White inquired about substance abuse, Levanthal replied that this had not changed very much in the last ten years either.

When councilmember Antoinette Bram asked how the bureau approaches problems with parents, Levanthal indicated that CARES insists that all members of the family come in for counseling, not just the youths. Isaacs asked about outreach programs in the community and was told that the bureau does have some such programs—for example, in the schools. Councilmember Edward Putens suggested that cable TV programming might be a channel for reaching some prospective clients. Levanthal agreed but said that available video tapes "aren't terrific."
