Center School Charette -- A Report

by Virginia Beauchamp

On Thursday evening, July 27 the results of the two-day charette concerning the future of Greenbelt Center School were opened up to the public in a meeting held in the school gymnasium. Following greetings from school board representative Suzanne Plogman, R. C. Garcia, charette coordinator and Vice President of SHWC, the architectural firm given the mandate to study the possible rehabilitation of the facility, presided at the meeting. Around 30 people attended the session.

Garcia presented the two alternatives open to school administrators and to the community: to rebuild the present facility within historic trust guidelines to create as useful an educational structure as possible, or to locate a new site and plan a wholly new structure with the most advanced educational design.

Financially they were projected to cost about the same—$7,790,000 for the renovation; $7,965,992 for the new structure. (The latter figure, however, does not include the cost of acquiring the land.) Garcia indicated that the best educational value for the money would be achieved by building new, but that the best social and cultural solution would be reached by restoring the existing building.

Originally SHWC and county school administrators had hoped to make their decision and apply for state support for the new school by the state deadline of September 1. But a strong plea by Center School Principal John Van Schoonoven for more time for public hearings, with confirmation of this need by other charette participants, led Deputy Superintendent Edward Felegy to extend the county's deadline to October 31. This decision, however, will put off until September 1, 1989, final approval for whichever alternative the community may choose.

Design Presented

In describing the design concept that charette participants had come up with, SHWC architect Jeryl Jordan displayed layouts of the three floors, as well as a sketch of the courtyard which forms an important element in the proposed new addition. (See separate story.) He also showed a sketch of a new driveway design at the east end of the building, which was created through discussion with City Manager Jim Giese and landscape architect Laurence Coffin, who has been creating a new design for both municipal parking lots.

According to the new plan, buses would enter the west parking lot of the municipal center by an enlarged driveway between the Municipal Building and the bank. At the rear of the lot they would turn left on a driveway connecting with the school property and enter the present bus driveway, heading toward Crescent Road. They would then exit on the present driveway. The design is considered an improvement over the current system of handling bus traffic.

Audience Response

Speaking for the Art Deco Society, president Richard Striner praised Garcia and the charette process that had resulted in the new design. He noted its preservation on the ground floor level of the "essentially historical environment." The structural changes on the second-floor

A View of the New Plan

by Virginia Beauchamp

In a design concept worked out during the two-day charette for redevelopment of Center School, the present appearance of both main corridors of the original structure would be maintained—the tiled walls, the ceiling heights, the lobby area inside the main door. To the east, the gymnasium and stage would remain the same as well. By replacing functions of the original classrooms along these two wings of the L-shaped structure, now deemed too small for regular classes, the rooms can be utilized in their present size.

Along the north-south corridor, a health room, reading room, and computer room would occupy one side. Facing these would be offices for guidance personnel. Opposite the gymnasium in the east-west corridor would be special education classrooms. Behind the stage in the single classroom at the east end of the building, the band room would be located. This room could also double as a staging area for events on the stage itself.

The later addition to the Center School building, nearest the Youth Center, would house Kindergarten classes as it does now. Because each of these rooms has an individual entrance door at ground level, they are regarded as most suited to the youngest children. The second-floor level of this section would also remain virtually intact.

New Addition

Presently the corridor leading back from the school's front door ends just where doors open to the left into the stairwell. In the new plan an opening would also appear at the right, providing access to a new corridor.

Confusing but Amusing

by Barbara Likowski

Zany! The Greenbelt Arts Center's presentation of two one-act plays on July 29 was just that. Also confusing, ridiculous, distorted, funny, in some cases approaching slapstick comedy. At times one didn't know quite what to make of them. Where was the plot? Was there a plot? Who were the characters? Yes, who were the characters? Those in the play didn't always agree with those in the program. Sometimes they changed in mid-play.

Not far into "An Actor's Nightmare" by Christopher Durang, one was able to understand why in a brief biographical sketch in the program, actor John Delone who played George or Stanley or whatever his name was asked that "if anyone can figure out what he's doing or who he is in these two plays (to) please let him know."

Things didn't get better in the second play "The Real Inspector Hound" by Tom Stoppard. There was Delone (we think it was Delone) obviously one of two critics watching a play. Then later he became a part of that play.

That may be hard to understand but seeing is believing . . . and watching can be fun if one doesn't try to pin things down or insist on knowing the plot but accepts the overall picture that is created and enjoys the clowning around.

Both plays do, after all, have a theme, however exaggerated and vague, and they can be enjoyed for what they are . . . sometimes pointless and sometimes very much to the point. The critic, Moon in "Hound", played to the hilt by Stan Eisenstein, aptly said "Does this play know where it's going?"

Children, especially, like this sort of thing and adults may need to let go of some preconceived ideas of what a play should be.

The players all seemed to enjoy themselves and that helped the audience to relate to them. Indeed, once totally absorbed, the audience tended to forgive some spots of tediousness, some frustration at all the loose ends, some ham acting because it was all so much fun. The cast did a good job, each character made us feel his/her part, however melodramatic. We found ourselves fascinated with the corpse in "Hound" who after an initial scratch when he first lay down, didn't move for the next forty minutes or more. We began to wonder if we should be worried after all.

Anyone wanting to see for himself can come down to Center School on August 26 or 27 and forget for awhile how things are supposed to be and just enjoy them as they are.

Volunteers Asked to Help Preserve Greenbelt Park

On Saturday, August 27, area citizens will have the opportunity to get a hands on experience in preserving a National Park Service area close to their neighborhood. During the "Take Pride In America Day" sponsored by Greenbelt Park and the National Park Service, interested citizens and volunteers will be able to join work teams led by park staff and participate in a day of outdoor work and friendship. Activities will include clearing brush, picking up litter, assisting with handicapped accessibility, rebuilding the path to the campfire circle, painting picnic tables, trail maintenance and general clean-up.

The event will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Greenbelt Park, across from the Golden Triangle development on Greenbelt Road. To sign up as a participant, call 344-3949. Wear sturdy clothes and work boots, if possible.

Lunch will be provided for participants through donations from local merchants, and various awards such as Take Pride In America hats and mugs will also be available. All participants will receive a Take Pride In America certificate.

Take Pride in America is a program of the U.S. Department of the Interior, initiated by Interior Secretary Donald Hodel. The campaign is a partnership of public and private organizations committed to insuring the best use of the resources that belong to all and seeks to reduce destructive behavior and encourage constructive activities on U.S. lands.

Decorated Bikes Sought for Parade

The Greenbelt Lion's Club will again be sponsoring the bikes and trikes contest in the Labor Day Parade.

There will be three prizes in three categories from kindergarten through 12 years. All entries will receive an award.

Children are invited to bring their decorated bikes and trikes to the open area near the Mobil gas station at 8:30 a.m. on Labor Day.

GHI Board Comments on Proposed Greenbelt-College Park Master Plan

by Mavis Fletcher

Despite hot weather and a board room with erratic air conditioning, the board of directors of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. took action on three major projects at the meeting on August 11. The board approved a final draft of comments on the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission's proposed master plan for the area, approved a program to enable eligible members to defer increases in monthly co-op fees and selected a test building for a possible solution to structural cracking in some of the units.

With only minor revisions, the board approved comments on the master plan presented by GHI General Manager Ron Colton. Among Colton's major points were opposition to dropping the Residential Planned Community (RPC) zoning for the historic central city and rezoning the GHI properties into euclidean (specific, conventional) zoning categories. The proposed rezoning would have a heavy impact on GHI since the cooperative's homes would then be a non-conforming use within the new zone.

GHI also opposed the rezoning of the land around the future Metro station to the Mixed Use Transportation Oriented (M-X-T) zone in the sectional map amendment process which implements the master plan. The comments recommend that this zoning not be granted "until the necessary transportation facilities are in place to serve the proposed development."

Kenilworth and ICC

In the comments, GHI opposed the extension and widening of Kenilworth Avenue but made no mention of the Intercounty Connector which it would serve. Despite the urging of Ruth Kastner, who represented Citizens for Greenbelt and her own views before the board, the board refused to take a position on the ICC. Director Alan Freas, Jr. asked Kastner if she thought the two roadways were inextricably linked. She replied that she sees them "as a package deal" and thinks "the county does too." Director Ray McCawley recommended that the GHI comments not refer to the ICC because "it really isn't the subject of the master plan." Freas also said he thought this was "not the for-

Museum Needs Donations For Labor Day Exhibit

by Sandra Barnes

"A Greenbelt Family Works At Home" is the theme of the Greenbelt Museum's new exhibit on Labor Day weekend. The museum will be set up to show how a typical family in the 1930s worked in their home. Of special interest will be the curtain stretcher, a recent donation from Tillie Wetter. Additional items for the exhibit are still needed. These include a galvanized bucket, gardening tools, corn broom, rug beater, 1930s console radio, watering can, dust pan, egg beater, sifter, treadle sewing machine, and hand tools. Also needed is a lace curtain.

Persons with items to donate should call Mary Linstrom at 474-7951 or Martha Sinden at 345-1669.

The Greenbelt Museum will be open during Labor Day weekend on Saturday, 1-4 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m.

Voter Registration Set for August 20

The Board of Supervisors of Elections of Prince Georges County, in cooperation with Giant Food, will conduct voter registration at all Giant stores located in Prince Georges County on Saturday, August 20, from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

The last day to register for the upcoming November 8 presidential general election is Monday, October 10. Citizens are encouraged to apply for registration now instead of waiting until the last minute.

Registration by mail is available to County residents by calling the 24-hour voter registration hotline, 627-2814. Requests for applications are filled within two to three working days.

For absentee ballot information, call the Election Office at 952-3270 and ask for the absentee ballot clerk.

Debate Welcome

To the Editor:

Will the real News Review stand up?

Horrors! I can't believe my eyes. An editorial in this champion urging voters not to sign a petition.

The News Review's very life depends on fundamental rights guaranteed by our Constitution. The public's very life depends on its Constitutional right to vote.

In 1776, our nation's founders felt that no issue was so dangerous that it couldn't even be talked about. Had they felt otherwise, the Declaration of Independence, which, after all, was a declaration of rebellion, could not have been debated, much less voted upon.

I for one will sign all except the most repugnant petitions circulated by sincere citizens seeking to make changes by following the system of allowing the majority of voters the chance to directly decide an issue. I am opposed to restructuring the Prince Georges County Council but I apparently have more trust than the News Review has in the good sense of the voters to do the right things. I for one welcome spirited debate on any issue of importance.

Here a monumental staircase would be placed, as well as an elevator providing access to all five levels of the building. (The 1968 addition to Center School is set half a flight below the original building, thus adding two levels to the three of the 1937 structure.)

The most striking feature of the new design would be the use made of the new addition. Architect Jeryl Jordan would extend the east wall of the present structure back toward the Youth Center, with another door opening to the east at the basement level. The present kitchen would be utilized, but the dining area would be converted for use as a choral room. Four classrooms of the accepted new size would be arranged in the northeast corner, with a new cafeteria and an open courtyard, where children might enjoy their bag lunches, filling in the rest of the space. (The drawing shows these two spaces—indoor and outdoor—as two triangles with a shared hypotenuse.)

Directly above the cafeteria, on the second floor level, would be a multi-media room (or library as such a room used to be called). This also would open upon the courtyard, but on another tier. Three new classrooms would also be provided at this level in the addition.

On the second floor level of the original building, a structural change would be made, moving the north-south corridor further to the east. With this change, the three classrooms to the west could be enlarged to the desired dimensions. The remaining rooms to the east, much reduced, would be used for teacher planning and for a teacher's lounge. They would look out on the new courtyard.

With the new design the ground floor level of the original building would appear virtually as it did in 1937. Classrooms would be placed in sets of three. While these sets would be separated in different parts of the building, thus tending to isolate teachers from one another, each set would allow children of the same grade level to stay nearby (since most grades presently require three rooms).

(Editor's note: At the end of the July 27 public hearing, when these plans were shown, architect R. C. Garcia promised that more polished drawings of this design concept will be made available for use in further public hearings. As soon as they are ready, the News Review will publish them.)

Our Year's Stay In Greenbelt

To the Editor:

This month my family and I are returning to our home in Florida after a year's stay in Greenbelt while we worked temporarily at the Goddard Space Flight Center. During our year in Greenbelt, we participated in most of your community events, attended one of your local churches, had our first child born nearby, and, of course, have received your newspaper regularly. I am writing to you and your readers to express our thanks for an enjoyable year. Thanks especially to our neighbors, church friends, NASA colleagues, and to GHL. The community spirit and friendliness we found in Greenbelt are to be admired and commended.

CFG Board Formulates Position on Master Plan

The Executive Board of Citizens for Greenbelt met on August 11 to finalize its report to the County Planning Board on the Master Plan. In addition to their opposition to the RPC zone deletion, the Kenilworth extension, and the increased density on Parcels 1 and 2, the board added five points.

The board supported the City Council's opposition to the Intercountry Connector (ICC). The ICC doesn't appear in the Greenbelt plan but appears in the Beltsville/Fairland Master Plan just north of Greenbelt. The board was concerned that the ICC will promote more development north of Greenbelt, thereby generating new traffic as well as directing Montgomery County traffic into Prince Georges County.

The board opposed the Ridge Road Extension to Cherrywood Lane, which the board thought might provide a conduit for large amounts of Metro traffic through Greenbelt. The board expressed dissatisfaction with the city council's argument that right-of-way reserved for the extension could be used to deter development of the Furey tract. The board was concerned that this could backfire on the city and provide an incentive for higher density rezoning of the tract to make up for the owner's loss of desirable land to the road right-of-way. They further felt that the building of the Metro station could exert pressure from outside the city to build the Ridge extension.

The board also opposed the Crescent relocation to Ivy Lane, asking instead that other measures be investigated to improve safety near the Beltway exit to Kenilworth. They felt that connecting Crescent to Capital Office Park would greatly increase commercial traffic through Greenbelt.

The board supported the city's position opposing the MXT zone near the Metro Station.

The board opposed the zoning of the Springhill Lake golf course and other open areas at a medium density. The board will ask that they be zoned at a low density to reflect their present use as open space.

CFG encourages members and all residents to express their views on the new Master Plan. Comments should be addressed to: John W. Rhoads, Chairman, Prince Georges Planning Board, County Administration Bldg., Rm. 4134, Upper Marlboro, MD 20772. To discuss the plan by phone, citizens may call Area Planner Paul Aggarwal, 952-3572, or Councilman Richard Castaldi, 952-3094.

Can periodontal Disease Be Prevented?

Periodontal (gum) disease usually begins as inflammation at the gumline. Among the causes are poor oral hygiene, improper diet, abnormal tooth alignment, undesirable habits, gum and bone irregularities, and broken dental restorations. Prevention involves recognizing and treating these conditions promptly.

The early signs of periodontal disease are bleeding, soreness, pain and bad breath. However, these signs may not appear at all until the disease is quite advanced, so that periodic examinations are necessary for early detection.

um to oppose the ICC."
Ridge Road Extension
 Kastner also urged the board to oppose the master plan proposal to extend Ridge Road to connect with Kenilworth Avenue at Cherrywood Lane. She said that this extension would "plug it into the Metro station." "People coming out of (Metro) will find it very useful" to use Ridge Road when traffic is backed up. She also expressed concern that the owners of the Furey property (an undeveloped parcel of land on the city's boundaries) might seek higher density development because the road right-of-way is there.

fused to change the position which, by not opposing the extension, acquiesces in the county's plan to acquire the right-of-way for the road. (The city staff has stated in other meetings that the road will not be built unless the city agrees to the construction.) Director Nancy Hutchins said that she felt that it is hard to see the future clearly and once the right-of-way is lost it would be difficult to get it back.

Audit Committee member Peter Liebscher, however, supported Kastner's view. He said that residents would be inconvenienced in a small way in getting to Metro if the road is not built but that the inconvenience will be very large if traffic cuts

Attention Prospective Home Buyers

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI), one of the largest and most established housing cooperatives in the country, is offering brief and informative presentations designed to introduce GHI to you. The presentation will explain what a cooperative is, how GHI operates, what services are provided to GHI members under the monthly charges, and the financing sources which are available. This information will be useful to you whether or not you purchase a GHI home. This is an ideal opportunity for persons who are considering homeownership to learn about GHI and to ask questions in a relaxed atmosphere. Let us introduce you to the cooperative lifestyle BEFORE you look for a home. The next presentations will be held on:

Saturday, August 27 11:00 a.m.

Tuesday September 6 7:00 p.m.

Saturday, September 17 11:00 a.m.

Please call Louise at 474-4161 for reservations and information. The sessions are free, and there is no obligation.

We're looking for 3 "out-of-this-world" sales people. Will train new prospective agents. Established agents please call for information.

CHARETTE, cont. fr. page 1 level (which requires moving a corridor several feet out of its original position) he called "a compromise we can live with."

Giese questioned the cost figure for renovation, which he thought was too high. But Garcia explained that historic preservation is costly. For example, asbestos removal is very costly and after it is removed, the original wall materials must be replaced.

"Improving and modernizing at the same time as restoring is very expensive," Garcia said. He noted that the cost figure had been arrived at with the experienced input of Hyman Myers, a Philadelphia restoration specialist who had been brought in as a consultant and who had participated in the charette.

Jack Hammond, Capital Improvement Program Officer for the county school system, said that costs included sites, test borings, architectural fees, etc.—as well as land clearing (though not land acquisition). The redevelopment plan for Center School also includes a new addition which provide 20,000 more square feet of space. Hammond also noted that lighting fixtures for a historic structure must be specially chosen. If a new school were to be built in Greenbelt, land acquisition could cost $700,00 in addition.

Greenbelter Bill Stratton, an architect, stated that the restoration of the school would provide "a higher value in the physical surroundings" because the original materials were of a better quality than those used in contemporary building. He also indicated that the classrooms designed in the proposed concept would be somewhat larger than current specifications call for.

Other Values

County councilman Richard Castaldi pointed out other values in keeping Center School as a viable educational facility. "It would bring historical value back into the community," he said. The municipal swimming pool could also be part of the academic program. "If you leave this building, then there are new problems," he pointed out.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld concurred. "If you close the school and relocate, there would be impact on the community. Furthermore, children might not be able to walk to school."

As for the major negative in remaining at the present site—the inadequate playground—Weidenfeld offered full support from the community. The city could provide play space during the day at Braden Field, he noted.

Van Schoonoven felt the playground was the major problem. New schools allow six or seven acres, he said. This site includes a 45-foot difference in elevation, which makes it unsatisfactory. He agreed that the new design solved "100 per cent" the classroom needs of the instructional program, as well as suitable access to the central functions of the school. But he saw the five levels of the structure as a negative factor. "I cannot say," he said, "that the children will get the same education in a renovated school."

One parent queried what would happen to the children during the renovation process, if that alternative was chosen.

Lions to Hear Bob Wade

Bob Wade, University of Maryland basketball coach, will speak to the Greenbelt Lions at their next meeting, Monday at the Fireside Beefhouse, 6011 Greenbelt Road.

The public is invited to attend at 7:30 p.m. For information call 474-5156.

Felegy promised that within four to six weeks the school administration would lay out concrete options. "We will dialogue with you," he promised.

FINANCING FOR

G.H.I. HOMES

The following lenders have indicated their willingness to make loans for the purchase or refinancing of G.H.I. homes, as evidenced by Recognition Agreements with G.H.I. Some also will provide home equity loans or lines of credit. We encourage anyone seeking financing to contact them to compare rates and terms. GHI is always interested in locating additional lenders, and welcomes inquiries from other credit unions, banks, savings and loans, and mortgage companies.
