Council Hears Plans for 7-Eleven, Changes Budget, Meeting Schedule

by Virginia Beauchamp

With newly elected Mayor Pro Tem Thomas X. White presiding in the absence of Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, the Greenbelt city council moved into a heavy agenda at the regular meeting on November 20. Of primary interest was presentation of a design plan by Mark Vogel Co. representatives for a 7-Eleven store to be constructed at the intersection of Hanover Parkway and Good Luck Rd., at the southeastern gateway to the city. The site is in the northwest quadrant of the intersection.

Although not pleased with the choice of facility being proposed, council acknowledged, in White's words, that they had "extremely limited leverage." The property is already zoned C-1 (commercial) and site plan review by the county's Planning Board is not required. The developer's discussion of plans with the city was therefore a courtesy. Previously the city's Advisory Planning Board (APB) had recommended approval subject to certain conditions relating to access, landscaping, and signage.

In answer to White's question, "Is it too late?", referring to the kind of business chosen for the site, Rick Pretty, Mark Vogel Co. vice president for planning, said "Yes." He commented that the company had tried to interest a bank in locating there but had not been able to find one. On the other hand, several oil companies were interested in the site for a future gasoline service station, which the developer had felt was not desirable. In contrast, they felt that a 7-Eleven was a good use especially since this would not be a standard facility but what is called their "super store."

Steve Carl, speaking for the corporation that owns the 7-Eleven franchises, described the super store as an expensive building with dark brick on four sides. "We're willing to do anything to make an attractive entrance," he said, speaking to council's concern that this municipal gateway would seem undistinguished.

Pretty said the building size had been reduced to 4,000 square feet and that 31 parking spaces would be provided on-site. Driveways into the property would be cut from both Hanover Parkway and Good Luck Rd. Islands in the parking lot would be 30 feet—not the originally planned 24. Pretty promised also that the company would do "a responsible job" of buffering.

Shielding this busy 24-hour-a-day store from its neighbors was a major concern of council members throughout the discussion since it would be located in the heart of a residential community. Speaking to this issue, Pretty described a 6 ft. board-on-board fence to surround the facility on three sides, with landscaping outside the fence. Berms would also be raised along the street sides of the property to block direct view of the lighting fixtures from nearby residences, he said. Light poles would be reduced in height from the originally planned 30 ft. to 12 ft. Signage would also be reduced in size from what the company typically uses. In addition, some form of screening would be installed to hide the mechanical equipment located on the rooftop of the structure.

Other Concerns

for the developer agreed, saying that a right-turn-only would be allowed.

Council member Antoinette Bram raised a couple of other points with the Southland representatives: whether the company itself was in financial difficulties and whether a 24-hour facility of this nature would not be attracting crime into the neighborhood. To both questions representative Bob Fitzgerald spoke reassuringly. He conceded that the company had gone through a buy-out and as a result has a big debt. But the company is "sound," he assured council. As to the issue of physical security, Fitzgerald said that Southland had developed an anti-crime program that was a "leader in the industry."

Council member Joseph Isaacs wondered whether the company had surveyed its future neighbors (those living along Princess Garden Parkway, across the way). Such a survey was made a number of years ago, Fitzgerald said, at which time no objection had been expressed to a small shop to be located there. A follow-up survey had not been taken, Fitzgerald said.

Two Greenbelt East residents, Shelton Goldberg of Jacobs Drive and Joe Spivak of Ora Glen Ct., both spoke enthusiastically about the convenience of such a facility. They saw its location as reducing traffic congestion in and around the Greenway Center, which residents now have to enter if only to buy a loaf of bread or a carton of milk. They felt the facility would be attractive to residents of future single-family homes to be located in the vicinity.

During the course of discussion, Vogel representatives also noted that they had received a

Weidenfeld Elected Mayor, Gudrun Mills Given Award

by Pat Scully

The Charter Meeting of the newly elected city council, on Nov. 13, was marked by both tradition and surprise. As tradition dictated, Gil Weidenfeld, the top vote-getter, was elected Mayor; Thomas X. White, the second highest vote-getter, was elected mayor pro tem. The surprise came when City Manager James K. Giese presented a City Manager's Award to City Clerk Gudrun H. Mills.

Ceremonials

Mills began the meeting by certifying the election results, with the five incumbents returned to office: Weidenfeld, White, Joseph Isaacs, Edward Putens and Antoinette Bram. Since these five top vote-getters each received at least 40 percent of the vote no run-off election was required.

As outgoing mayor, Weidenfeld administered the oath of office to the four council members. With outgoing mayor pro tem Isaacs serving as temporary chair, the council then unanimously elected Weidenfeld as mayor. In keeping with tradition, Norman Pritchett, Clerk of the Circuit Court, administered the mayor's oath.

Speeches

Weidenfeld thanked his supporters, especially his wife, Micki, and their daughters, and pledged to live up to the high level of confidence shown. We have an experienced council, he said, that faces a heavy schedule and will need to cooperate fully, working as a team to resolve the difficult issues facing the city. Among these issues, he cited the Sunrise development, which council opposes, expediting improvements to the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, traffic problems in Greenbelt East, and opposition to the extension of Kenilworth Avenue to Virginia Manor Road. "Greenbelt has enough major highways," Weidenfeld declared.

He also referred to what has been accomplished. The 72-acre school board property has been deeded to the city, we have purchased Parcel 2 and the Parcel 1 condemnation suit is progressing. The new, state-of-the-art police station has been completed and will be occupied within the next few weeks. The outdoor swimming pool has been renovated and progress has been made on the indoor pool, the Schrom Hills Park master plan, lake improvements, a master plan for the Roosevelt Center and planning for the community center.

White unanimously elected as mayor pro tem, spoke of the lively election that had focused on important issues, including traffic, overdevelopment, fiscal responsibility, planning and decision making. He "hoped we learned from the campaign," and will keep what was learned in mind as the council faces a crowded calendar. He looks forward, he said, to working for and with the citizens and the council.

Isaacs thanked the voters for their confidence in allowing him to serve another two years. The campaign allowed a great deal of contact with voters and he invited citizens to continue to share their ideas, complaints and thoughts with the council.

Noting the record voter turnout, Putens thanked the voters, saying the turnout was an indication that Greenbelt is a very serious city. He also gave special thanks to his family and a welcome to the new puppy, 9-week-old Misty.

Thanking her family and friends, Bram answered their question, "Why do you do this?" She has a sincere commitment to excellence in government, she said, which starts at the local level. Campaigning provided her with an opportunity to hear citizens' concerns for the environment and the budget and, increasingly, senior concerns. She concluded, "Enough talk, let's get back to work."

Manager's Award

Giese stated that the election had been conducted without a hitch or flaw and was the tenth such election. Therefore, in recognition of her outstanding handling of ten regular and four special elections and her work in maintaining the voter rolls, he surprised Mills by presenting her with a City Manager's Special Award. Mills, visibly moved, thanked him and all the poll watchers, election judges and others who help smooth the election process.

Correction

School Board Member Suzanne Plogman has informed the News Review that contrary to the article in our October 19 issue, city officials were informed of the October 11 meeting between residents and school officials concerning the new elementary school. The notification was done in a letter to City Manager James K. Giese, dated October 4.

Greenbelt Woman Killed In Local Auto Accident

This article is based on information provided by the Greenbelt Police Dept. The word "charged" does not imply guilt.

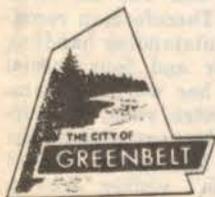

At 7:19 in the morning on November 21, Sandra Jean Miller of the 7300 block of Mandan Road was fatally injured in an accident on the way to work. She had been making a left turn from north-bound Mandan Road onto west-bound Greenbelt Road in a 1988 Dodge Shadow when a 1985 Oldsmobile Cutless Supreme, proceeding east-bound on Greenbelt Road, struck the left side of her car. The traffic signal was green for traffic on Mandan Road, where Miller was. The driver of the Oldsmobile, Malcolm Joseph Breaux of Capital Heights, was charged with failing to stop for a red traffic signal.

Miller, 40 years old, was transported to AMI Doctor's Hospital in Lanham where, at 8:37 a.m., she was pronounced dead of massive internal injuries.

Breaux, 20, was transported to Prince Georges Hospital Center in Cheverly. He was treated for minor injuries and later released.

The case is still under investigation.

The Train Yard

To the Editor:
An article in the November 23 News Review indicated that approval for the Greenbelt Metro station and the train yard is expected in the next few weeks.

It is true that approvals are expected in the near future for the Metro station which is located inside the Beltway. However, the proposal to locate a train yard outside the Beltway on BARC property is a separate issue and has not yet been considered for final approval. The train yard will be considered separately in about three months.

Approximately 80 acres would be developed into a Metro train storage and maintenance facility on BARC property between the Beltway and Sunnyside Avenue.

While the EPA approved filling in 13 acres of wetlands for the Metro station inside the Beltway, it may have reservations about allowing use of the BARC property for the train yard for several reasons.

There are federal laws which prohibit the disturbing of wetlands when practical alternatives exist. The BARC property contains high-quality wetlands and there are other feasible locations for the train yard.

There are state and county laws which prohibit development on a hundred-year floodplain. Much of the BARC property in question is on a hundred-year floodplain.

This Monday night (December 4) city council will consider a petition to invite Metro officials to a public hearing on the impact of the station and train yard.

On Tuesday night (December 5) at the Citizens for Greenbelt meeting there will be a slide show and brief presentation on the subject.

Both meetings begin at 8 p.m. in the municipal building.

waiver on a storm water management ditch, covered by a grate, which had earlier been specified by the county. Indicating that she would like time to study this modification, and in the absence of city attorney Robert Manzi, Wilson asked council if they could defer responding to the developer's presentation until the next regular council meeting. Both parties quickly agreed to this request.

Deer Hunting

Far removed from the topic of future development was almost the first item to be brought before the meeting—a request from residents Rodney Roberts and Marsha Barrett against deer hunting within the city. Barrett assured council she had personally talked with four bow hunters, walking out of the recently acquired former school board property near Northway extended. They indicated that they had permits, she said. Roberts said that a buck had been killed there on November 11.

City Manager James Giese said that any kind of hunting is prohibited within the city and that staff would post signs in the woodland areas. Bram also suggested that the city contact officials of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center about the presence of hunters, since there are also many deer on BARC property.

Council Schedule

A major block of time near the beginning of the meeting had to do with the important issue of when council's own future meetings would be held. Changes in the standing rules had already been read in October changing meetings from the first and third to the second and fourth Mondays of the month and Bram presented the resolution for second reading.

Immediately Charles Hagelgans

of Crescent Road spoke in objection to the language referring to special meetings, which he considered too vague. These specify that when a special meeting is called the city clerk shall prepare a notice stating the time and place and the subjects to be considered. He wondered what time frame was intended. Giese commented that a meeting can be called in an emergency with two hours notice and that notices of such meetings would be put on the city's cable Channel 10.

Hagelgans also objected to city documents' being withheld from public distribution. Clearly he and council disagreed, however, about what is a city document. City Clerk Gudrun Mills insisted that council minutes prepared by her are only "a draft" until approved by council itself at the following meeting and that at that time only could they be released to the public. Giese said that administrative reports are also city documents.

Following a sometimes spirited discussion with Hagelgans, council unanimously passed the resolution changing the times of meeting. The resolution becomes effective on January 1, 1990.

Budget Process

Another administrative resolution, presented by council member Ed Putens for both first and second reading, with the rules suspended, was also adopted after some discussion. This would change the budget process from an annual to a biennial timetable. Giese argued that this procedure would be enacted on a trial basis in an effort to reduce both council and staff time, which is "very expensive." It would help in long-range planning as well, he said, and better coincide with council terms.

White expressed concern about the time frame, which specifies that a newly elected council, about the first of the year, must agree on goals, objectives and

Metro Station Discussed At Next CFG Meeting

First and second place winners of the logo contest will be announced by the judges (Ben Abramowitz, Sandy Harpe and Michael Smallwood). The first place prize is $100; the second place prize is $50. All thirty-six logo priorities of a new budget. He felt this would be "buying into the manager's budget" at too early a date.

Bram disagreed. She said that the accountability in a two-year process is "more obvious." Both Isaacs and Putens felt that the proposed system should be tried experimentally. One aspect of the proposed resolution was amended, however, to provide more time for council—this was that budgets for the next fiscal year and the following year both be presented at the second meeting in March, rather than the first meeting in April of even-numbered years (following the election of a new council). The budget must be adopted by the last day of May in order to meet the county's deadline in preparing tax bills.

The annual Christmas Candlelight Concert will take place at the First United Methodist Church, 6201 Belcrest Road in Hyattsville on Sunday, Dec. 3 at 8 p.m. The 65 voice choir, under the direction of Greenbelt Resident, Dr. Dale Krider, will perform seasonal music with brass, tympani, handbells and the church's large pipe organ.

entries will be on display. The first place logo will appear on Citizens for Greenbelt stationery, advertisements, etc.

After the logo contest there will be a brief business meeting followed by a presentation by Rick Meetre of information concerning the impact of Greenbelt's future Metro station. It will focus on environmental issues related to the loss of wetlands and on potential development near the station. Included will be maps and a slide show of the properties involved. Questions from the floor will be welcome.

The meeting will be capped off with a social hour and refreshments.

On Saturday, November 25, 1989, God granted you your heartfelt wish. You now rest in peace, but I will miss you. The many Greenbelt citizens who came from all around to enjoy your beautiful yard and flowers in the spring, will also miss you.

Elsie, I admired your courageous, dauntless spirit and it has been a privilege to have known such a gutsy lady who was my friend and neighbor for over 20 years.

Love and farewell,
Hilda Orleans

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello Again:

This week we got a taste of what's ahead in weather for our vehicles. There's nothing more aggravating than auto problems in sub-freezing temperatures. Sometimes automobile owners are their own worst enemies. An automotive after-market chemical company survey of service station and automotive repair shops found that 65% of winter-dead engines were caused by owners' lack of preventive maintenance.

According to the survey, poor drive belts are the number one problem. This leads to low alternator charging and excessive battery drain.

The second largest problem is poorly tuned engines.

And the third is frozen fuel lines with excessive amounts of moisture in the lines.

These conditions are all preventable. Just keep up maintenance, especially watching fluid levels. Keep the fuel tank full so no moisture can develop.

For added peace of mind keep some or all of the following in your trunk: road flares, extra blankets, flashlight with spare batteries, a small shovel, matches in a moisture-proof container, a first aid kit, and some kind of snack.

This may seem extreme, but you never know what may happen on the road, or when you can help out someone else.

Till next time.
