CFG Considers What to Look For In Hiring the City's New Manager

by Diane Oberg

"We have a difficult act to follow here" in replacing retiring City Manager James K. Giese, Councilmember Antoinette M. Bram told the audience at Citizens for Greenbelt's (CFG) January 24 forum. Giese, who has been city manager for 28 years, plans to retire by June 1. The CFG forum addressed the issues relating to Giese's replacement and the challenges in "City Management in the 1990's."

Giese, himself speaking as the first panelist, stressed that the city manager is not a political leader but an administrator who can be fired by council at any time.

The city manager is responsible for managing the day-to-day operations of the city, implementing the directives of the city council, hiring all other city staff, informing and advising council, recommending courses of action and submitting the annual budget. The manager also represents the council to employees and the public and represents those employees to the council.

Manager's Role

The new manager, said Giese, will have to find ways to maintain the city as a quality community without the rapid growth in tax base seen in recent years. Other challenges include planning for the operation of the indoor pool and the arrival of Metro, maintaining the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center as green space, maintaining the original planned community and doing "everything I did well better and everything I didn't do well a heck of a lot better."

Giese said a city manager should be trained in public administration with local government experience. He did not think that the different goals and environment of private industry and state and federal government provided relevant experience. Bram disagreed, saying that council should also consider "CEO types" for the position.

A new city manager, said Giese, must be able to tell council what it needs to hear, rather than what it wants to hear; keep council informed of all sides of an issue, not just those of whatever interest groups appear before council; and be able to accept and implement council decisions, even if the city manager disagrees with those decisions. In addition, a knowledge of Maryland would be useful, though not essential.

Qualifications

Panel member James Harmon, vice president for Human Relations at Litton-Amecon and chair of an earlier College Park citizens committee responsible for recommending a new city manager, went even further. He said that Greenbelt would be lucky if it could find a good candidate from within Prince Georges County. Harmon felt that a new manager will have "a lot to learn" about Greenbelt and that a familiarity with the county would be a significant advantage.

Harmon also urged council to weigh experience more heavily than training and to clearly identify what it sees as the responsibilities of the manager and what is the prerogative of council.

The third panel member, Professor Dorn McGrath, said that the candidate selected must understand the special aspects of Greenbelt, including the cultural setting, purposes and citizen expectations. See CITY MANAGER, page 6

QUERIES RAISED ABOUT HISTORIC DISTRICT DESIGNATION FOR GHI

by Diane Oberg

At its January 28 regular meeting, the Greenbelt City Council considered whether to ask park and planning officials to study the feasibility of incorporating the original part of the city into a county historic district, approved changes to the contract for engineering studies of Greenbelt Lake, and filled several committee vacancies.

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) is considering seeking recognition by the county Historic Preservation Commission as an historic district. General Manager Ron Colton asked the city to request a Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission study of the proposed district. Although City Manager James K. Giese recommended pursuing the study, he expressed several concerns about the effect county historic status would have upon GHI. Council referred the request to the Advisory Planning Board for comment.

Old Greenbelt is already designated as an historic district on the National Register of Historic Places. This designation, Giese said, requires GHI to get approval by federal preservation authorities for any changes involving federal funds. The resulting restrictions had caused GHI some problems in the past, he recalled.

Giese was concerned about the restrictions that county historic status would place upon GHI and its members. Any changes, including to exterior appearance, landscaping, and sheds would be subject to historic review. He objected to the idea of old Greenbelt as "a Williamsburg," void of true inhabitants. Instead, the city was planned as a changing variable community which must change as times and citizen needs change. Giese expected that the requested study would identify the restrictions that would accompany historic designation.

Other Actions

Council:
—Hired Slavin, Nevins and Associates, Inc. to conduct the search for a new city manager. Giese plans to retire by June 1.

—Approved the employment of Dames & Moore to provide engineering services for stream bank stabilization measures at Greenbelt Lake and authorized city staff to apply for a state grant for the project. The federal Environmental Protection Agency has already approved a $75,000 grant for similar stabilization work.

—Made the following appointments to city boards and committees: Lawrence White, Employee Relations Board; John Mongelli, Community Relations Advisory Board; Carol Cobb, See COUNCIL, page 8, col. 5

$35 Million Federal Courthouse Planned for Cherrywood Lane

by Elaine Skolnik

Representatives of the General Services Administration and the architectural firm of Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum (HOK) unveiled preliminary plans for the proposed federal courthouse at a January 29 city council worksession. Located adjacent to Capital Office Park, but just outside the city limits on the fringe of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, the facility will be situated on a 9.3 acre tract north of Cherrywood Lane near Edmonston Road (Kenilworth Ave.).

GSA emphasizes that the project is still in its formative stages. Originally, a $25 million, 135,000 square foot building was contemplated on 8.5 acres. On the drawing boards currently is a $35 million, 165,000 square foot courthouse and administrative wing that will house seven courtrooms (District, Bankruptcy and Magistrate courts) and space for U.S. attorneys, trustees, marshals, GSA concessions and a satellite office for the incumbent Congressman. Still unsettled is whether the structure will have three or four stories.

Officially called the southern division of the U.S. District Court of Maryland, the facility will serve Prince Georges, Montgomery, Calvert, Charles and St. Mary's counties. Construction is expected to begin this summer, with completion slated for 1993 when the Greenbelt Metro line is expected to become operational.

In response to concerns about traffic and the environment, council was informed by GSA and HOK speakers that the courthouse project would impact "minimally" on traffic and wildlife and would not affect any wetlands. A draft Environmental Assessment prepared by GSA's consultant has been evaluated by the National Capital Planning Commission (NCP) staff and is on the commission's agenda for February 7.

NCP staff has recommended that the final Environmental Assessment include a detailed analysis of the Hyattsville site alternate (off Route 1 near East-West Highway), in particular emphasizing matters dealing with traffic, parking and environmental consequences. In this way, staff noted, "we could equally evaluate the merits" of the Hyattsville site — one of seven alternatives initially studied. See COURTHOUSE, p. 8, c. 1

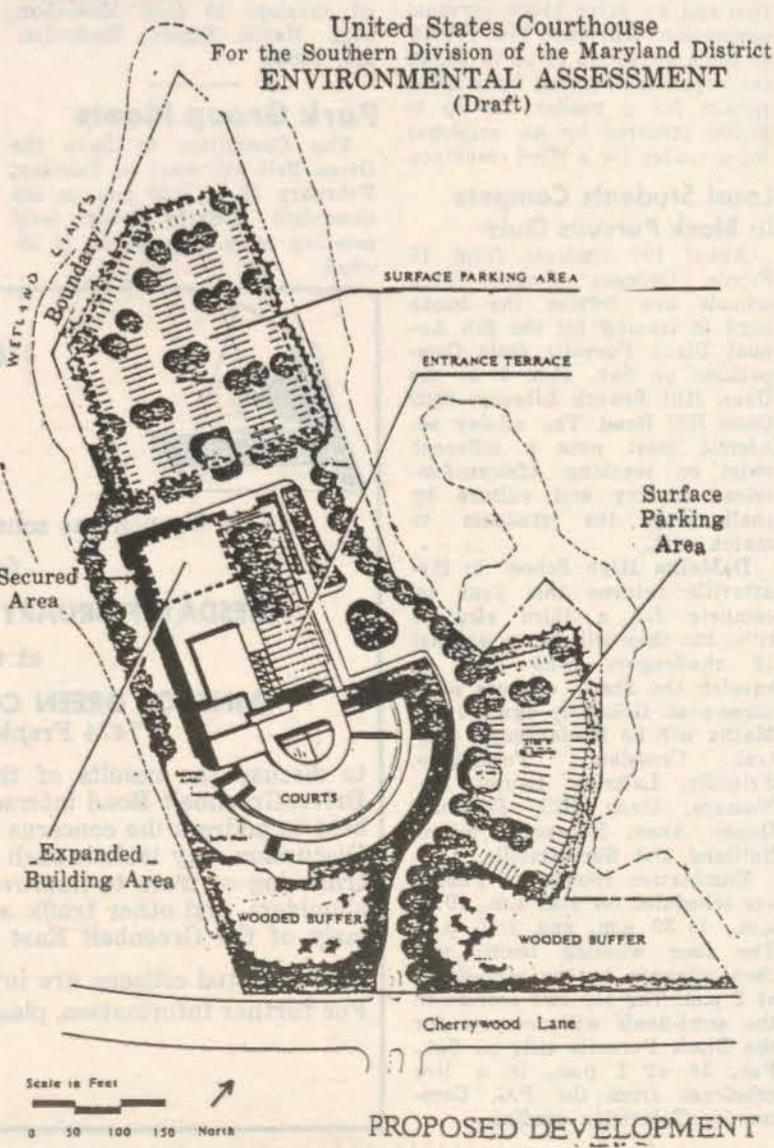

Accessibility Key To Site Selection

by Elaine Skolnik

In the selection process for the courthouse, GSA advertised for donated sites located close to major highways in heavily populated northern Prince Georges County within five miles of the Montgomery County-Prince Georges County border. Among the major sites studied were properties located in Hyattsville, Laurel and two on BARC land.

BARC's Cherrywood Lane/Edmonston Road tract was considered most desirable because of its accessibility to the Beltway, major highways, the Greenbelt Metro and access to Montgomery County. Probably factored in also was the proposed improvement and extension of Kenilworth Avenue, which would eventually hook up with the proposed Inter-County Connector designed to run from Montgomery County to Route 1 near Muirkirk Road.

At the present time the ICC is stalled on the drawing boards because of controversy over the highway's route in Montgomery County. However, the Maryland State Highway Administration See SITE, page 8, col. 2

FLU REACHES MARYLAND

The season's first laboratory-confirmed cases of influenza were reported January 23 by the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene (DHMH). Outbreaks of influenza-like illness in several nursing homes have been reported.

The influenza was type B, a type included in this year's influenza vaccine. Therefore, there is a good chance that the vaccine will be effective.

"It's not too late to receive influenza vaccine," said Timothy Cote, M.D., DHMH medical epidemiologist. Dr. Cote urges people over 65 years of age, those with chronic illness, and health care workers to ask their physician about influenza vaccine. They should also receive a pneumococcal vaccine if they have not already received it. This vaccine is effective for at least 5 years.

Legal Help Available To Military Families

The Law Foundation of Prince Georges County, Inc., a not-for-profit organization dedicated to providing pro bono legal services to the indigent of Prince Georges County, offers free legal services to any resident of Prince Georges County who has a family member serving in the Armed Forces overseas in connection with the war in the Persian Gulf. For any qualifying family member the Foundation's normal income guidelines have been waived.

Interested parties may contact the Foundation's Pro Bono Coordinator, Ann Bailey at (301) 627-7776 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 12 p.m. Monday thru Friday, for further information and to be assigned to an attorney.

The two qualifications for legal representation without cost are that the recipient be a member of the immediate family of a man or woman called to serve on active duty in connection with the Persian Gulf conflict and that the legal problem be related to the individual's having to be away from home. For example, the types of cases that the Law Foundation can provide assistance with are evictions, foreclosures, bankruptcy, consumer law issues, powers of attorney, wills and financial counseling. No criminal matters will be handled but many types of civil cases will qualify for services.

Maryland families of military personnel serving in the Persian Gulf War may also contact the Maryland State Bar Association's "Operation Desert Storm" hotline, 1-800-492-1964, and receive legal advice from a panel of volunteer attorneys. The volunteer attorney will give free legal advice on any legal situation the family may face over the phone, and will arrange additional services if necessary.

In October 1990, the Foundation sponsored "Covering the Courts", a workshop to help journalists better understand and more effectively cover, explain and report on the judicial system. The two-day workshop was conducted at the Adult Education Center at the University of Maryland in conjunction with the American Judicature Society and the University's School of Journalism.

Prince Georges County has a very large population of deaf and hearing impaired and for this reason the Foundation has designed a program providing special services to this disabled group. The Foundation is purchasing a special telecommunications device for the deaf and hearing impaired which will enable its staff to communicate with citizens needing the Pro Bono project. Recently developed technology allows a court reporter's simultaneous transcription to be projected onto a large screen in the court room. The Foundation will provide this equipment as well as a special "loop system" which is a device for enhancing sound for severely hearing impaired individuals in a special designed Model Court Room For the Deaf in the County's soon-to-be-completed new court house. This will enable hearing impaired citizens, lawyers and law students to enjoy access to our judicial system.

The Foundation also is in the process of preparing training programs and manuals to allow it to establish a Seniors Legal Assistance Program whereby retired and semi-retired seniors

Cast of "Nunsense" Proves Singing Nuns Can Be Fun

by Pat Scully

The Little Sisters of Hoboken face a crisis when 52 members of the order succumb to botulism after eating Sister Julia's vichyssoise. The surviving nuns have been trying to raise enough money to bury them all. But four nuns are still in the freezer and the Board of Health is closing in. The sisters seize on a hallowed tradition in fundraising: 'Let's put on a show!'

On this premise (more a pretext than a plot), the talented and enthusiastic cast of Nunsense present a pleasant evening of song and dance, patter and puns, at Petrucci's Dinner Theatre in Laurel.

Characters

Despite the uniformity of costuming ("Nunsense is habit forming," the sisters sing), each of the nuns emerges as a distinctive character. Donna Dandino as Sister Regina, the reverend mother, and Tina Marie Casamento as Sister Mary Hubert, mistress of novices, engage in an evening-long power struggle thinly veiled by Christian virtues. Reverend mother attempts to keep her unruly sisters in line by being "gentle, but FIRM." Sister Hubert gives lip service to her vow of obedience while second-guessing every decision of her superior.

Terri Mazzealli as Sister Robert Anne proves she wasn't meant to play second fiddle. She steals nearly every scene with her dynamic stage presence, strong voice, impersonations and irreverent humor.

The other-worldly Sister Mary Amnesia, played by Theresa Sweet, proves the versatile though unfocused point for the plot. In addition to an angelic soprano voice, Sister Amnesia displays surprising talents at ventriloquism (with her sidekick, Sister Mary Annette) and country-western music. The novice Sister Mary Leo, played by Holly Shockey, aspires (humbly, of course) to be the first prima ballerina nun. She is particularly effective in her death-throes in The Dying Nun Ballet ("Soup's On").

The gospel-esque closing number, "I've Got the Spirit Now, 'Cause I'm Holier than Thou," sent the audience away smiling, if no holier.

Logistics

The nuns do take up a collection during intermission ("lending an air of verisimilitude to an otherwise bold and unconvincing narrative") although not for the burial fund. The cast members selected charities to which the collections are donated; February's contributions will go to the American Diabetes Association.

An all-you-can-eat buffet precedes the performance, featuring a wide variety of cold salads, in addition to a tossed salad bar. Roast beef carved to order anchors the dinner buffet, which also included baked chicken with a mustard sauce, as well as fish, pasta, wild rice and mixed vegetables on a recent Sunday evening. Warm apple cobbler was the only standout on the dessert table, which also included chocolate or yellow sheet cake with chocolate frosting and yellow cake with cherry glaze.

Nunsense will be playing at Petrucci's Tuesday through Sunday evenings, and selected Wednesday and Sunday matinees, through March 17. The Monday through Friday Matinee Series is now featuring "Ira Aldridge, Pound to Thee Forever," through March 15, to be followed in April and May by "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." Call 725-5226 for information and reservations.

will be recruited, trained and employed as paralegal assistants with an expertise in elder law. These volunteers will work personally with individual seniors and senior organizations and with practicing attorneys who volunteer for the program.

Scheibel Showing: Bright, Flowing Colors... Diverse

by Eileen Peterson

Through the power of her art, the creative life of Jo Scheibel is being celebrated in a special exhibition at the University of Maryland's University College.

On Thursday, January 31, well over 200 friends and guests packed the 300-foot-long lower concourse in the Adult Education Building on the College Park campus to open a retrospective showing of 26 works by the Greenbelt artist who died last September.

The diversity of the exhibit reflects some of the development of 20th-century painting—from the more traditional pastels through the later abstracts. Scheibel worked in charcoal, doing many figure studies and a striking Cubist-style drawing (reproduced above), as well as watercolors and oils. Numerous acrylic on canvas and wood collages, and the flowing colors of vivid abstract paintings contrast with the paintings of her three children: Kim McCarl in her wedding dress, son Gregg with his guitar, and a portrait of Lorie entitled "Mischief."

"Metamorphosis," consisting of bright watercolors moving across the paper, was done in 1978, the year the artist quit her job at the urging of her children to become a full-time art student. She received a Bachelors of Fine Arts. cum laude, in 1982.

Art Show

The art show grew out of a visit McCarl made to Barbara Bancroft, the newly-appointed art curator at UC. With a mock-up of a 1991 calendar filled with 13 color reproductions of Scheibel's art works, McCarl outlined her idea for an exhibit at the campus where her mother had been a teaching assistant in many art classes.

University College had recently decided to begin rotating exhibits of art by alumni, students and faculty. McCarl (who is pursuing a Master's Degree in Architecture at Catholic University) set up the gallery (including the track lighting which was a donation from her family) for this first show in the space.

Scheibel's artist-teacher Jack Dillinger recalls that "she lit up the room and . . . was the brightest . . . with lots of spirit." She was responsive to exercises in drawing class and would apply them in good ways. he reflects. Her love of drawing is seen in many of the charcoal figures of women. She had a special interest in women painters, and her painting of the French Impressionist Berthe Morisot is in the collection.

At the opening, McCarl mentioned the "intensity" of art speaking to the viewer, and the response of many in the crowded gallery to the diversity of media and colors inspired them to re-view and compare the works.

Scheibel was continually promoting and encouraging local artists, from the 1960s when she was president of the Greenbelt Art Guild to more recent years as a founding member of Professional Artists of Greenbelt (1985). In August this group, including the artist, displayed their works at Harmony Hall Regional Arts Center in Ft. Washington. In April of this year, the Prince Georges Arts Council will include a number of Jo Scheibel's works in a special show.

In the homes of many of her friends as well as in offices of companies, a major airline, and in galleries yet to be determined, Jo Scheibel's art speaks in varied voices. The Art Gallery at the Greenbelt Library will show several of her paintings throughout June in its group exhibit of the Professional Artists of Greenbelt.

The exhibition, open daily from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., continues at University College through April. For more information about Scheibel's works or to obtain a copy of the calendar, call Kim McCarl at 474-5182.

"Cubist Study" is a charcoal Cubist-style drawing by Jo Scheibel featured in a three-month-long exhibit of her works in the Adult Education Building at the University of Maryland.

METHODISTS HOLD LENTEN SERVICES

Mowatt Memorial United Methodist Church, 40 Ridge Rd., will hold Lenten worship services each Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. beginning February 13, Ash Wednesday. The community is invited.

Dorothy Wilson, a Greenbelt resident since 1958, will be the first speaker. Her topic is "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do."

Our sympathy to Ed Griffin on the recent death of his mother.

Former Greenbelter Jeanne Hensel, Gaithersburg, has been named a Young Careerist by the Business and Professional Women's Club of Gaithersburg. Hensel will represent the Gaithersburg BPW club in a state-wide YC competition when the Maryland Federation holds its annual convention in February.

Jeanne was selected based upon her career accomplishments, community involvement, and ability to project an image reflecting the role of today's young women in society.

A graduate of Columbia Union College, she is the daughter of Irene and Richard Hensel, Orange Court.

Three of our neighbors, students at St. Vincent Pallotti High School have earned high honors (3.50 or greater). They are Susan Gibson of Hillside Rd., Lisa Smith of Hedgewood Dr., and Erin Barcus of Periwinkle Ct. Good Work!

Fans and friends of Martha Unger of Lakeside Dr. may want to head out to the University of Maryland's North Gym Saturday, Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. Her Northern Illinois University women's gymnastics team will be meeting the Lady Terrapins in an All Around Contest. The Lady Huskies are 8-0 this year, looking for a national ranking as Martha completes her five-year NCAA career.

In the absence of the Fitzenreiters, it is with great pleasure that the city staff announces the birth of Bradley Scott Fitzenreiter, son of Scott and Gina, grandson of Dick and Pat. City Manager fort that has sustained it since the city's founding.

Search Process

One significant issue at the forum was the procedure to be used to find a new manager. Giese announced that council expects to hire an executive search firm at its January 28 meeting. (At that meeting, council selected Slavin, Nevins and Associates, Inc. at a cost of $17,500). This firm will recruit applicants, both by nationwide advertising and personal contact; screen the applicants according to council's guidelines; select a small number of finalists for council consideration and perform background and reference checks. The firm will also assist council in negotiating terms of employment for the new manager.

Harmon could not "imagine why you would want to" use a search firm instead of a citizens committee such as he had headed to help the College Park Council select a previous city manager. Bram pointed out that College Park had used a search firm to find its current manager. Giese also noted that Harmon is a professional personnel expert.

Harmon's committee had reviewed and evaluated each of the candidates for the College Park post. He felt that one important step is to have a single individual call each of the finalists to determine "what he's all about." This would allow a consistent evaluation of the applicants. Afterwards, the remaining candidates would come to town to be interviewed by council.

McGrath shared Harmon's skepticism about search firms. He said that he has yet to see one that turned out as well as he had hoped. A city with the sensitivity and education of Greenbelt has the resources needed to identify those candidates sensitive and sympathetic to Greenbelt, he said.

Important Search

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld explained that since Giese had been city manager for several years longer than any of the current members had been on council, they had no experience in hiring a city manager. When Giese told them of his plans to retire, the council members met with officials from Rockville and College Park to learn of their experiences in hiring new city managers. Both of these cities used search firms in hiring their current managers. Mayor pro tem Thomas X. White stressed the importance of the search for a new manager to replace "a well respected and very capable" city manager of 28 years experience. He called it the most important act of the city in the next six months. In conducting the search, council will be defining what Greenbelt currently is and what "we want it to be." He added that one of the reasons for council's decision to use a search firm was to insulate the city from the administrative burden and to maintain the necessary confidentiality.

Citizen Input

Konrad Herling asked what opportunities would be provided for citizen comment. Weidenfeld replied that council had not yet finalized the procedures but that they were considering involving the advisory board chairs. Eunice Coxon was disappointed that the city would not be using a citizens' committee, such as Harmon had chaired for College Park. She said that restricting citizen input to the board chairs was "much too narrow." (Slavin, Nevins is meeting the week of February 4 with representatives of various homeowners' associations and other informed citizens.)

McGrath suggested that council might invite the finalists to address the community to see what kind of rapport exists between the candidates and the citizens. Giese questioned this, saying that it is the citizens' job to elect good council members, but that it was council's responsibility to select a good city manager.

Ben Rosenzweig suggested that someone should evaluate the applicants rejected by the search firm to ensure that the decisions did not result from bias.

ied—and GSA's preferred site at Cherrywood Lane and Edmonston Road.

The recommendations of NCPD, the agency charged with reviewing structures built on federal property, is advisory when the land involved is outside the District of Columbia.

Preferred BARC Site

Architect Lisa Welgehausen of HOK explained that, by configuring a site that was long, narrow and irregular, "we were able to avoid wetlands and leave a nice treed area" at the BARC boundary and a "nice (wooded) front yard." (See preliminary site plan).

By "tucking the structure into the site from its high point (near Cherrywood Lane) to its low point," most of the topography will not be disturbed, Welgehausen observed.

"We anticipate the building to have a cleaner and modern exterior," she said, adding that the interior will be traditional, in particular the courtrooms, where "richer woods rather than blonde" will be used.

The building will feature a fan-shaped facade composed of stone-like materials, combined with either continuous ribbon windows or a curtain wall. The circular portion of the building would face Cherrywood Lane and house the courtrooms.

Welgehausen said, "We want the courthouse building to be one of dignity, one that would stand the test of time—a building that would fit in with the neighborhood (Capital Office Park.)"

Concerned that the courthouse appearance did not "adequately convey the image required of a U.S. Courthouse," NCPD staff has recommended that the design plans be revised to "reflect a more prestigious Federal presence that symbolizes the judicial function."

Annexation

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld brought up council's hope of the city's annexing the courthouse property. "It is logical to do so," he said.

The mayor and council members Antoinette Bram, Joseph Isaacs and Edward Putens (council member Thomas White being absent) pointed out that annexation made sense and would prevent confusion among those coming to the courthouse, which has a Beltsville address. (Council also hopes to annex the nearby BARC Metro Yards.)

GSA Project Officer Harry W. Debes said he "didn't expect to see any resistance" to annexation. He noted that about five percent of those coming to the courthouse would probably use public transportation. Bram asked that a shuttle bus run from Metro to the courthouse in order to encourage more ridership.

Debes noted that about half of the new courthouse employees are expected to be those currently employed by the court system. Of this group, he observed, many will come from the Rockville and Baltimore areas. The other half will be new employees. This fact, he said, will offer Greenbelt area residents opportunities for employment. The total number of employees is expected to be about 330.

Underground and surface parking is proposed with a parking deck planned if the building is expanded.

Capital Office Park and GSA consultants are cooperating in bringing sewer and water lines to the north side of Cherrywood Lane where the courthouse is sited and where two additional high-rise office buildings are planned.

has recently initiated a study to "develop and evaluate alternatives for improving Kenilworth Avenue (MD 201) Extended and Baltimore Avenue (U.S. 1) from the Capital Beltway (I-95) to north of Muirkirk Road. . ." The initial process is expected to take two to three years.

Long Battle

The battle for a federal courthouse in the Prince Georges County/Montgomery County area has spanned about 17 years. Originally the effort was to create a separate, completely autonomous southern district with the Baltimore courthouse serving the northern district. That focus changed over the years. Thus, the newly created southern district court is not a separate entity. The chief judge and chief clerk will continue to be located in the Baltimore courthouse.

In 1987 Representative Steny H. Hoyer (D-Md.) introduced legislation to establish a southern branch of the Baltimore court. The measure, approved by Congress in 1988, stipulated that the new court would be located in Prince Georges County within five miles of the Montgomery County border and that it would be used for federal criminal and civil cases originating in the five counties comprising the southern division of the U.S. District Court of Maryland. Up to 30 percent of the cases tried in Baltimore are from the Washington area.

No Maryland Sales Tax On U.S., Maryland Flags

With the nation at war, an increasing number of people are buying American flags to show their patriotism and support for their fellow-Americans fighting in the Persian Gulf.

State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein said "Sales of American and Maryland flags and government documents are exempt from Maryland sales and use tax, but the tax applies to sales of flags of other states and nations."

Customers who can document that they have been charged sales tax on American and Maryland flags can get a refund by calling 1-800-492-1751 to get a refund application form.

Fantasia Trio Opens Series

by Jan M. Turkiewicz

The Fantasia Trio opened the Greenbelt Arts Center 1991 Music Series Sunday evening, February 3 at the Mishkan Torah Synagogue. The trio includes guitarist Philip Mathieu, who performs as a free lance artist in different styles of music, including pop, rock and jazz; violinist Joan Singer, who appears regularly with local symphony and opera companies in performances at the Kennedy Center Opera House and Wolf Trap; and cellist Barbara Brown, who currently plays with the Kennedy Center Orchestra for the Washington Opera and Ballet companies.

Sonata No. 4 in C by J. S. Bach was the opening work on the program. Originally written for violin, cello and basso continuo, it was arranged for violin, cello and guitar by Marlow. Its five movements, Andante-Presto, Allegro, Adagio, Minuet 1, and Minuet 2, provided the audience an opportunity to become familiar gradually with the expressive, varied sound of the guitar as played by Philip Mathieu.

The guitar was amplified throughout this concert. The rationale for doing so is clear; the volume of the modern violin and modern cello is greater than it was 200 years ago, whereas the volume of the guitar is basically the same. Nevertheless, this listener would like to have heard at least one composition performed with unamplified guitar. Accomplished performers such as Singer and Brown would have no problem in adjusting their volume so that a good balance with unamplified guitar would be achieved, especially in a small to medium size hall with acoustics as good as they are in the Mishkan Torah synagogue.

The Bach sonata was followed by Terzetto, a trio in four movements by Paganini, composed for guitar, violin and cello. The violin and cello duet passages in the second movement, Minuetto, were beautifully played as though by one instrument and one musical mind. The guitar, sounding like a lute, evoked in the mind's eye of this listener a scene in sunny Italy during the time of Mozart and Haydn, in which Paganini is enjoying himself with friends who are playing the guitar and cello.

After intermission, the trio gave a fine, sensitive performance of three pieces, Pavin Op.

50 by Faure (arr. Marlow), Gymnopedia by Satie (arr. Marlow), and Berceuse by Faure (arr. Mathieu). This arrangement by Mathieu is particularly felicitous because each instrument states and develops the Berceuse melody as a solo with the other instruments providing an accompaniment. These three pieces, small in structure but delightful to listen to, provided a marked contrast to the major and last work on the program. Trio in A Minor by H. Ambrosius.

composer, wrote the trio in four movements. It was performed with conviction and a wide range of dynamics from all three instrumentalists, as well as different tone colors and tone production techniques from the guitar. The audience responded to the performance with great enthusiasm. A good musical evening was enjoyed by all.

BLOOD DONORS NEEDED

Greenbelt Homes Inc. is joining the Red Cross in an effort to help meet the blood needs of the community by sponsoring a blood drive on Tuesday, February 19 from 3-7 p.m. The goal is to collect 40 pints of blood. The entire donation process only takes 45 minutes to an hour from the time a person enters to the time he leaves.

Proper medical care depends on a ready supply of blood.

Blood products are needed for a host of medical problems including trauma, cancer, burns, open heart surgery, organ transplants, gastro-intestinal problems and kidney failure. A portion of the whole blood collected at one drive will be retained in special blood bags for use by pediatric patients. An estimated 25% of collected blood is used in the treatment of cancer.
