

Proscenium Theatre Concept Plan Presented at Council Worksession

by David Morse

The City Council heard Kim Scheibel McCarl, a Greenbelt architect, outline her proposal to build a traditional proscenium theater at a crowded but spirited work session on July 21. The theater is designed as an addition to the Community Center which is slated to take up residence in the Center School Building upon completion of renovations. Despite its enthusiastic reception of the concept Mc-Carl presented, the council declined to give its imprimatur to the plan at this time. And some councilmembers were asking hard questions about its financial viability.

In some ways the real star of the meeting was the large three-dimensional architectural model built by McCarl, which dominated one end of the long table in the crowded conference room, and to which she frequently referred in her presentation. As Councilmember Edward Putens put it, the model seemed to "bring (the design) to life" and to give it "a feeling of actuality."

The preliminary design was developed by McCarl in close cooperation with the Theater Development Committee of the Greenbelt Arts Center. Tom Renahan, chairman of that committee, spoke first, presenting the committee's views as to the rationale of the plan and its advantage over the "black box" concept which had been designed by Florance Eichbaum Esocoff King (PEEK) the architectural firm under contract with the city to develop preliminary plans for the Community Center.

Renahan said this design would best meet the requirements of city policy to "build a firstclass performing arts center" because its high level of audience comfort, its excellent acoustics, and its state-of-the-art technical systems would not only serve its audience and resident theater company well but would make it highly attractive to outside groups as well, enabling the city to recoup a greater return on its investment through rental fees and foundation grants. He emphasized the theater's attractiveness not only to performing arts groups but as a venue for business seminars, weddings, bar mitzvahs, etc. He also said that Roosevelt Center deserved "a beautiful building which enhances the environment around it" and that would serve as "a focal point of the entire Roosevelt Center area." Furthermore, he said, the Theater Development Committee had consulted its own experience and the experience of other theatres to minimize the possibility of technical mistakes

The star of the meeting was the large three-dimensional model of the proposed theatre and the community center constructed by architect Kim McCarl.

The McCarl Design

McCarl said she had researched similar theaters all over the United States, and indeed, even delved into precedents of antiquity, to gain inspiration for her design. She also attended carefully to the overall design of Old Greenbelt, giving the theater a curved outer wall to re-flect the curvilinear "bowl" shape of the environing streets. She placed the entrance of the theater facing inward toward the Aquatic Center (rather than towards Crescent Road) because, she said, "I felt strongly that to put in another back of a building (in an area already dominated by them) would be a travesty." and also because, she said, "The building needed to address all of Greenbelt." Some other advantages to the design, she said, are:

-A large and attractive lobby, which would not only enhance the audience's theater experience but could enhance city revenues as well by being rented by outside groups for various functions;

—An outdoor courtyard, which could serve as a pleasant space for theatergoers during intermissions and which could also be used as an amphitheater for outdoor musical and theatrical performances;

-A "fly space," i.e., an area high above the stage hidden from view from the audience, used by traditional theaters to store scenery and equipment, enabling rapid and easy scene changes (another feature making it attractive to outside theater groups);

—A sloping floor, which enables the audience to see the stage without obstruction;

-A cable TV office on the second floor which reaches over

-Wall space for showcasing paintings;

-Large, curved windows in the lobby area to "bring in the outdoors';

—Ample room for related facilities, such as a "green room." where actors await their entrances. dressing and makeup rooms, rehearsal space, a dance studio. and storage space for costumes and other theater paraphernalia.

Financial Questions

Most of the City Council's questions concerned the cost to the city of building and running such a facility. Since no capital cost estimates were available as yet, the Council directed itself to the costs of day-to-day operation. Mayor Gil Weidenfeld introduced the subject by asking, "Are these kinds of theaters generally self-supporting?" Renahan responded by saying that while he expected it to require city subsidy, a vigorous and ongoing marketing effort of the theater's various facilities could provide "a very good recovery rate (of costs) versus revenues. He said that the theater's high quality and design for multiple See THEATER, page 10

Aerosol cans have been added to the growing list of materials received for recycling. Effective Monday, August 16, the Recycling Center at Buddy Attick Park, as part of an experiment, will accept empty household aerosol cans in a specially marked drum. It's important, however, that residents first release all contents and gases from the cans, then remove the plastic nozzle or cap. The processor, Georgetown Paper Stock Co., insists that cans be emptied and free of contents to avoid explosion during the baling process. "If all goes well, aerosol cans will become another material collected at the Center," said Public Works Director Carl Hirsch.

"Aerosol cans are made of at least 25 percent recycled steel. And steel is easily recycled again and again" said Chuck Nettle-ship of the Steel Can Institute in Richmond, Va. Specific household cans accepted for recycling include shaving and deodorant cans, hairspray, air freshener and furniture polishes, whipped cream dispensers, and PAM-like vegetable spray cans. Sorry, the Center cannot accept spray paint cans, any cans that contain flammable contents (e.g., WD-40). or contents considered hazard-ous material.

The city's efforts to maximize recycling opportunities for its residents continues to draw praise from the County Office of Re-cycling, Dave Helmecki said. "Adding aerosol cans to an al-ready extensive drop-off pro-

GREENBELT NEWS REVIEW

Fifty Years Ago Airing the Wash by James Giese

May, 1943 - Mrs. Fred Meredith, 4-N Laurel Hill Road, submitted a Letter to the Editor to the Greenbelt Cooperator concerning the Federal housing regulations for Greenbelt prohibiting the hanging out of laundry on Sundays, excerpts from which appear as follows:

'I am the Mother of threemonth-old triplets. Due to wartime conditions, we are unable to secure competent domestic help or buy any such item as a washing machine. I do all the work myself as we are far away from home and there are no relations to lend a helping hand. My day begins at 5 and ends at 11. And any mother can tell you there is little time for rest even with one baby, so I can't really be accused of wasting time.

"Yet-the management 'insists' that I do no laundry on Sunday. When Monday is a rainy day and it often is-and sometimes it rains on both Saturday and Monday-I not only am thrown off schedule so necessary to babies, but my work seems doubled.

"I have appealed for some consideration of this problem but not only do I get an unconditional 'No.' no constructive suggestions have been forthcoming. It's just like knocking my head against a

"Perhaps we could engage Mr. John L. Lewis to organize our children in a union which would have as its platform 'no dirt, diapers on Sunday.' That's as logical as any other suggestions

Public Works crews have made space under the Aquatic Center to store furniture and supplies being donated by Greenbelt citifor the Bush family of zens 10-F Plateau Place who were burned out of their home by a catastrophic fire late last Sunday night, August 1. Crews have picked up and stored, so far, a sofabed, chest of drawers, dresser, dining room set, and three bags of linens.

The Maryland Environmental Service of the Department of Natural Resources reports in their Second Quarter Collection Report that Greenbelt has recycled 2,825 gallons of used mo-tor oil and 150 gallons of used automobile antifreeze. Recycling Coordinator Tracy

Vincent reports that in July Greenbelt residents recycled at the Drop-Off Center:

8,300 lbs. co-mingled materials (glass, cans, plastic containers); 12.300 lbs. newspaper; 9,040 lbs. corrugated cardboard; and 8.380 lbs, mixed paper.

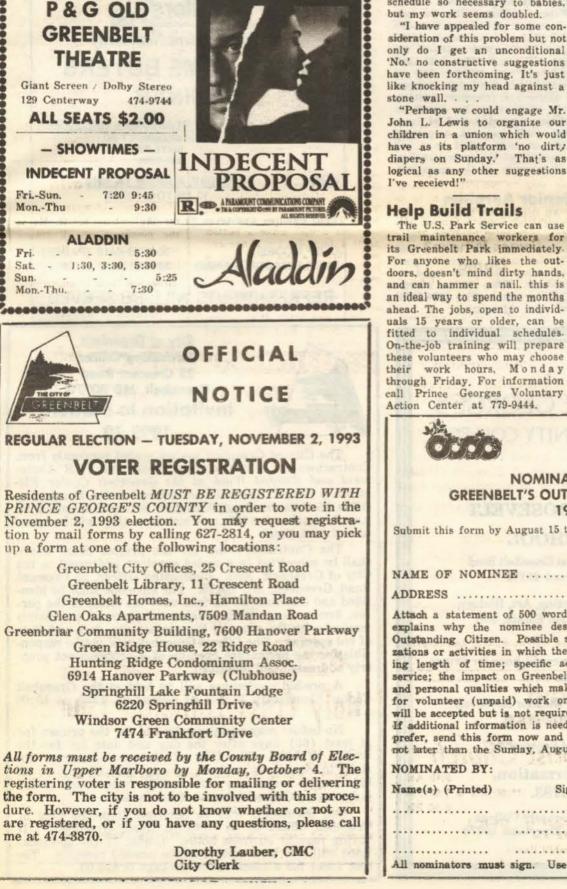

Recycling this amount saves critical landfill space larger than the size of a typical suburban residential 2-car garage.

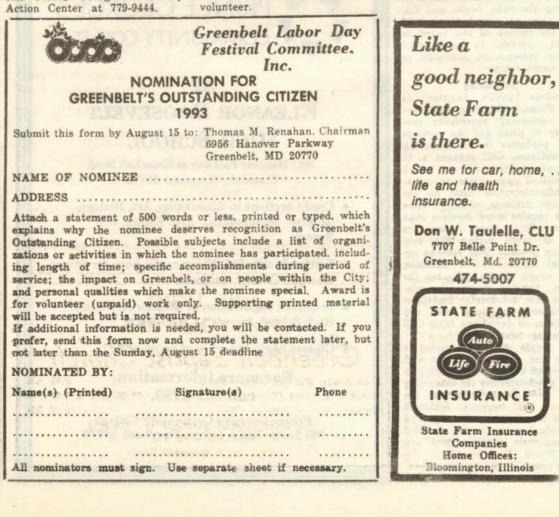

Topsoil from the Metro construction site is again available and is being transported to Northway Field for city use.

The Street Maintenance Crew worked overtime Monday evening, August 2, to unclog and clear storm drains during the heavy rainstorm.

The Horticultural Crew, with assistance from the Street Maintenance Crew, responded to in emergency situation on the af-ternoon of Tuesday, July 27 to cut up and remove a large tree which unexpectedly fell near the Public Library. Wires which were pulled down were repaired by the Building Systems Oper-ations Crew and all services were back to normal by the next day.

GHI Salaries To Be Given To Board Members Only

by Sandy Smith

It was a replay of a topic on the agenda for many meetings-disclosure of employee salaries-at the July 15 meet-ing of the Greenbelt Homes Inc. Board of Directors. After numerous other motions on this subject were proposed and defeated, Carole Levin's motion that a list of exact salaries of the GHI manager and all employees be available to board members on request passed. The other subject generating considerable debate and review was the issue of subleasing. It took many forms, as various sublease requests were presented and discussed.

Salaries

Extending discussion several times beyond its 15 minute limit per topic, the board sought agreement on the issue of making available information on GHI employee salaries. A motion by Levin to make current and keep up to date a list of exact salaries of employees and have the information available to members was defeated. Similarly a motion by Bill Phelan to have a list of exact titles and salary ranges died. Don Comis tried to gain approval for a proposal to have the exact salaries of the manager and department heads available to members.

Both Nat Shinderman and Mat Amberg indicated that their interpretation of GHI bylaws would call for salary information as a cost of the corporation be part of the records open for inspection by all members. Phelan said that he supported the motion on salary disclosure at the annual meeting because he felt the intent was to release information by salary range to protect disclosure of information for each individual employee. He said that exact salary by exact job title would clearly make it possible to individually identify many employees.

Finally, the motion by Levin that a list be maintained and kept up to date of the exact salaries of the general manager and all GHI employees by job title and that this information should be given to all board members upon request was passed. The motion further spe-cified that this information would be kept confidential. Following the vote, Levin and Comis went on record as protesting the failure of the board to grant approval to make exact salary information available to the membership.

Subleasing

Andrea Lavalle, Assistan' to the Finance Director, described the subleasing procedures currently in place and the services GHI performs in administering the sublease. GHI charges a 10 percent administrative fee which is deemed appropriate to recover administrative costs on the average sublease, although some units require more services than others. Since most owners are out of town during the subleasing process, GHI reviews po-tential applicants to sublease, runs credit checks, prepares the lease, handles payments, prepares tax documents, maintains appliances, and deals with any problems or deviations from GHI operating rules

A couple who is remaining in wn but subleasing their unit the ted a waiver of the 10 per-: administrative fee since they will be able to perform the typical GHI services. Although there was appreciation for this individual case, the board voted to maintain the standard fee. As Board Member Keith Jahoda noted, he did not want management in the position of having to decide each situation on a case by case basis.

In a case which Board Mem-ber Chuck Hess stated did not set a precedent, the board ap-proved subleasing of a unit by a resident who had lived in the unit for many years assisting an elderly member. Upon the death of that member, the unit was willed to a relative who is bedridden and cannot move into the unit. The individual occupy-ing unit now requests permission to occupy the unit until he retires in three years and moves from the area. The board agreed that this was a unique case and unanimously approved the sublease request.

Another member failed to obtain approval to sublease without option to buy. This member was marrying soon and moving out of Greenbelt. He has been unable to sell his unit although he has priced it competitively and marketed it aggressively. Previously the board had approved his request to sublease with option to buy. but would offer no further exemption. Phelan summed up the board's reluctance to sublease without option to buy. He said that he did not want to create a community of renters.

Another unusual sublease request was presented by Bobbi McCarthy on behalf of the Community Church. The church owns two units which have been joined and currently serve as the church's parsonage. The Church has voted to provide its minister a housing allowance begin-ning in 1994 and would like to rent the units until a decision is made to retain the units or sell them. There were comments that this falls outside the subleasing criteria, however, this argument was countered by the fact that other exceptions have been granted to churches in the community. The request was approved.

Other Business

In other business. the board approved $100 contributions to the Greenbelt Arts Center for its annual fund-raiser and community drive in support of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. It approved the second reading of the purchase of sectional board tables at a cost not to exceed $4,200.

The proposal of Stegman & Associates was accepted to per-form the 1993 audit at a cost of $13,000. Stegman has performed the audit for a number of years and was selected again last year after an extensive bidding and review process. Kathy Weber suggested that a new company be chosen for the audit and cited as her reason a statement by Stegman staff at the last audit report that GHI staff had been very helpful. She indicated that this might suggest a closer and friendlier relationship than may be beneficial. Others suggested that to learn that staff had not cooperated with an audit would be a bad sign, both of the professionalism and integrity of the operations.

AMERICAN

A funny thing happened to me on the way to the Forum the Forum Hotel, that is, in what used to be East Berlin.

The last time I saw East Berlin was before the fall of the late unlamented Wall. We were advised not to try to go into that area, so we climbed up to a metal platform from which we could see into that sector. On the other side was a wooden platform from which East Berliners looked at us. We waved to them and they waved back.

Looking at the Eastern sector from the colorful life and activity of the West side gave one a feeling of grayness, like watching a color film on a black and white television with poor definition. But that has all changed.

There is a new atmosphere in that neighborhood. Some of it is not exactly aromatic, because the sewers, long neglected, are being rebuilt. But there are bright lights everywhere and colorful posters and signs. Stores are chockful of merchandise and people look well-dressed. Considering the shockingly high prices in department stores, it is a mystery to me how they manage that. I kept thinking amazed Berlin how shoppers would be at the reasonable prices at Greenway or Beltway Plaza.

Since I speak German, language was no problem. However, most Americans probably would have no trouble, as thousands of our words, especially slang, have crept into the German tongue. Movie titles, though -and all films being shown there seem to be American-are translated. Would you go to see "Und Taglich Grusst das Murmeltier?" You should, "Groundhog Day" is most enjoyable. "Jungle Book" became "Das Dschungelbuch," but "Toys" stayed unchanged. to see a I would have loved German film. but couldn't locate one.

We saw very obese citizens, although many beltlines showed obvious signs of beer drinking. Beer is available everywhere, restaurants, carry-outs, street stands. It does not flow like water, however. In fact drinking water is unobtainable. If you order water in a restaurant, you will get seltzer. You may be asked if you wish it with or without "gas," the latter being uncarbonated. but nevertheless bottled. In one friendly restaurant we succeeded in getting our wish. "You mean water from the tap?" the surprised waiter asked. He brought us a oitcher full, and even included a few ice cubes. I feel sure ne went home that night and told his wife about the crazy Americans and their drinking habits.

What struck me most during this visit to Europe was the informality of the borders. Not only were no visas required, but only cursory attention was paid to passports. At the border between Germany and the Czech Republic we asked to have cur passports stamped. The German guard, although protesting, managed to unearth a stamp from the lower recesses of his bag. The Czech guard denied having one.

It's gratifying to find that at least some of the European countries are showing friendliness toward each other. Still passports look so naked without stamps, and it makes it harder to brag about one's wanderings. Of course, if you twist my arm, I'll show you my photographs. You're just lucky I don't do slide shows.

Newspaper Warns Of Fraud Scheme

Postal authorities in Washington, DC, and Maryland are on the trail of a group of fast-talking bunko artists representing themselves as Stars and Stripes employees and ad salesmen. Taking advantage of the high name recognition of the publication, the con men entice unsuspecting unemployed men and women into making phone calls to entice people into making tax-deductible "contributions" to The Stars and Stripes, Consumers are asked to send checks made out to The Stars and Stripes to a post office box listed under that name. Postal agents say such confidence men set up shop in a community. spend a month or two working the area and move on before anyone knows the fraudulent nature of their operation.

In a statement issued in Washington, D.C. the newspaper publisher, Howard E. Haugerud, made clear that the publication does not ask for or accept contributions, tax-deductible or otherwise, and that any such solicitations should be brought to the attention to the local authorities and The Stars and Stripes Staff. uses would also serve this end. He added, "(T)he city is going to hold its own events and programs. . . So you have to assign some kind of value to that even if it's not moneymaking." He also noted, "There may be council meetings which would draw interest, . . ." Councilmember Antoinette Bram drew hearty laughter from the generally jovial participants by responding wryly, "That would bring in a lot of money."

Al Herling also addressed this question, making an impassioned plea for the necessity of subsidizing the arts. "All the arts, through the ages," he said, "have been subsidized." He said it was important to maintain and improve the quality of life by encouraging and supporting artistic achievement. He also observed that the level of subsidy contemplated here was far less than that of other major cultural assets, such as the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, on whose board he sits. And he said it would enliven the commercial prospects of the area as well. "(T)he businesses that are locating in the city and nearby will find it easier to attract good personnel when they know that this area is not a cultural desert . . . Any company that tries to recruit employees knows damn well they want to know what are the schools like, what are the cultural facilities? And the employees of these companies may want to know. if they have certain talents, 'How can I use them?'" He praised the work of the volunteer Theater Development Committee in exploring ways to bring in additional revenue and reminded the Council of what he said was its commitment to build a performing arts center.

It was Councilmember Thomas White, however, who dominated the questioning regarding financial viability. He prefaced his questions with praise of the concept, saying that it "shows a lot of thought as to integrating it into the center." He stated three principal areas of concern: (1) He said there were "design and use conflicts (with other parts of the community center)" which have to be resolved. (2) He said it was of surpassing importance to have a marketing analysis. "We cannot go very much further," he said, without such a study, and added, "I think this all the more the case because of the plans for an 80 million dollar arts facility about three miles away (at the University of Maryland)." (3) He said it was important to know more about ways and means to raise funds for building the theater, especially given the high projected cost of renovating the Center School building. "I'd be very interested in seeing some kind of business plan . . . not so much to critique them, but just to see evidence of soundness and realistic expectations." The city, moreover, "will probably have to do a lot more digging in terms of its own strat-He said that a bill deegy.' feated in the last state legislative session would have helped in this regard by "providing municipalities with enabling authority to float bonds for a particular authority." financing capital projects with the bonds and retiring the debt through revenues taken in from the facility. He added that he expected that the Maryland Municipal League would try to introduce such legislation again. "I'm like Al (Herling), he said. "I don't think anything is impossible. . . . But we have to be very, very careful about the fiscal aspects of

is as a teaching facility. (T)he function is not going to be a competitive one." He added that, unlike the case of the University of Maryland facility, to which the state has already pledged funds, "we don't know what marketing possibilities we have (for the Greenbelt theater) until we have clear plans for our center."

Councilmember White countered that there is indeed a relationship between the two facilities. because "one of the reservoirs that we would try to tap would be the state. . . There's going to be a level of difficulty in making an approach to the state, or even the county . . . because of that facility." Bram commented that competition for available markets and public funds would probably be eased by growth in the Washington metropolitan area, whose population she asserted would top 7.5 million by 1995.

Other Questions

Several other issues were discussed by the Council. Bram asked the Council to make an endorsement of the McCarl concept at this work session. Weidenfeld said, "At this point, I think I'd like to let staff try and work with it. I don't see how council can make a decision at this point." Bram then rejoined. "Wait a minute. We have an architect's rendering here. We can say 'Yes' to this if we want."

Said Weidenfeld, "You can but I can't." explaining, "I would just like to have some feedback from the architect. I don't know how much work he's already put into what he's doing. He may be done, as far as I know."

Bram also raised questions of how the proposed theater would impact on parking, and whether there would be any difficulty by such groups as wedding parties to obtain one-day liquor licenses for use in the facility, prompting Herling to respond, "I'm delighted to hear people talk about what we're going to do with this thing as though it's already built."

THE ART OF DOING NOTHING

After a peditrician makes a diagnosis, his/her task is to suggest a plan of treatment. This is usually in the form of medication, and/or some procedure that a parent can do at home (such as suctioning out nostrils when they are congested, giving enemas for constipation, or applying ear plugs before swimming). In extreme cases a doctor may recommend surgery.

The most extreme recommendation, however — the most resisted by parents, is to do - NOTHING!

I shall use the rest of this article to describe common conditions for which the best treatment is no treatment.

CHRONIC DIARRHEA: afer a bout of "intestinal flu" when the fever is gone. the vomiting and belly ache has subsided, and the child appears completely well and gaining weight — frequently the diarrhea will continue for several more weeks. The stools remain soft or watery; they are passed several times a day. The parent calls me daily, angry and frustrated. She wants action! stronger medicines, stricter diets to the point of starving the child. What to do? NOTHING! Ignore the condition! Put the child on a normal diet (same as before the illness started) and give no medication. The liquid stools are caused by a change in the intestinal enzymes caused by the germ of the original illness. The diarrhea is completely harmless. It will go away faster if the child receives fat in the diet. A clear liquid diet will only prolong the diarrhea and cause malnourishment. Thus if you ignore the condition it will go away quickly.

CROOKED LEGS AND FEET: Most babies are born with "deformed" bones in the legs and feet. This is due to the cramped space in the womb, where the child remains for many months. Almost all these bones straighten out within one or two years without intervention from pediatricians, orthopedist, parents, shoe salesmen, gadget salesmen, etc. Remember that old adage: "If it ain't broke, don't fix i!"

SKIN BLEMISHES (WARTS, MOLES, ETC.): Most warts disappear eventually on their own (exception: warts on the bottom of feet). Most moles and benign tumors never turn into cancer. Unless these lesions are bothersome, they can and should be left alone; BUT you should discuss each and every case with your doctor just in case a special situation exists.

VIRAL AILMENTS: Most childhood diseases are caused by viruses and not bacteria. Since antibiotic are inffective against viruses, they are not needed, and should not be prescribed in most febrile illnesses. In the case of middle ear infections, sinus infections, and pneoumonias, the opposite is true, and most doctors will routinely prescribe antibiotics. Throat infections are especially difficult to treat. Most of these are viral and should be left alone but some are caused by strep, which, if untreated, may result in rheumatic heart disease. The diagnosis is difficult to make on clinical grounds (just by looking). If there is doubt, the throat should be cultured for strep.

UMBILICAL HERNIA: A small belly-button protrusion should be absolutely left alone. It will not rupture when the baby cries. Do NOT put a coin over it and tape it. However, do not confuse this with an inguinal hernia (in the groin), which may become inccarcerated (stuck in the scrotum or strangulated (blood supply obstructed causing gangrene). Inguinal hernas should be referred to a surgeon as soon as possible.

MINOR BAD HABITS (thumb-sucking, masturbation): We live in a puritanical society. Any time we see someone (such as our children) enjoying themselves we try to stop it. Many of these minor bad habits are a normal phase of childhood. They do not signify deep psychopathology. They do not need psychiatric consultation or therapy (unless they are part of obsessive-compulsive behavior). Thumb-sucking and pacifiers will not cause tooth deformities (in most cases); masterbation will not cause all the many bad things it is supposed to cause.

In this brief essay I have tried to convince you to avoid the dictum that "for every ill threre is a pill." Not all ailments require medical attention, or medications. If in doubt, consult your doctor; but if he recommends no treatment, accept it, unless the situation changes for the worse.

Center School Sixth Graders Win Awards, Reminisce

by Barbara Likowski

The last sixth grade awards assembly of Greenbelt Center elementary school was held Friday June 11. As these 62 students move on, their fellow students in the lower grades will move on, too, to a new Greenbelt elementary school in the north end of the city. So it was fitting that besides the many awards given, the students themselves composed a slide show and script named "Remembering Greenbelt Center."

Awards were many and varied. The prestigious American Legion awards went to Niteroi Coe and Daylan Gray. Runnersup were Ashley Dial and Kevin Ludwig. The John Van Schoonhoven

The John Van Schoonhoven Excellence in Writing Award was presented by School Board member Suzanne Plogman to Heather Norden.

Outstanding Academic Achievement awards to students maintaining at least a B average were given to Jamie Arey, Gary Arrington, Aubrey Barber, Michael Bell, Jason Brooks, Michelle Coates, Alexander Cosgrove. Amy Demas, Sima Fadli, Erin Gaffney, Sheree Henderson, James McKee, Jeremy Rubinstein. Todd Walton, Ashlee Wilkins and Andrew Weyel.

Also to Niteroi Coe, Michael Davis. Ashley Dial. Valyncia Graham, Daylan Gray. Alicia Johnson. Travis James, Ebony Lee. Heather Norden, Terra Phelan. April Roberts. Schlley Shupp. Michelle Smith. Robert Strauss, Stephanie Sumpter and Blair White.

Michel Monke and Mathew West were named most improved students. Receiving citizenship awards were: Michael Davis, Heather Norden, Terra Phelan, April Roberts, Robert Strauss, Shelley Shupp, India Freeland, Garcia Orange and Tynisha Toler.

Excerpts from Rembering Greenbelt Center include: "Greenbelt Center has taught me that my education is my responsibility because I'm the one learning and it is really my choice if I want to learn."

"It taught me that I can learn if I think hard and stay in my seat during work time."

"The teachers in the school are great. They care about you. Greenbelt Center has been through a lot in our years. With budget cuts, we weren't going to go to Camp Schmidt but we went because they cared and wanted us to have the fun."

"When I was in second and third grade I used to be bad because I didn't take pride in my work. Now through fifth and sixth grades I've realized that learning is fun. Now I'm getting A's and B's in my work."

"I'd like to be a basketball player when I grow up. And if I do I'd like to thank two people . . , my parents and Mr. Howze who taught me how to shoot a foul shot. A killer foul shot."

"Greenbelt Center has taught me in P.E. to work as a team. It also taught me to help each other. It also taught me to have fun."

"When you feel you can't talk to anyone, you can talk to Mrs. Goff. She sure makes me feel hetter...."

"Counseling is very important to me, because whenever you have a problem you can talk to a nice counselor named Mrs. Morton. She is a very special person."

"Being a tutor was a good experience for me because I got to help someone who needed it. I hope my tutee learned a lot. I know I did."

I know I did." "I will remember all of my classmates because they are like brothers and sisters to me and I am with them almost every day." "There is one thing I love

"There is one thing I love about Greenbelt Center. That's friendship. Everywhere you look there are nice people such as teachers. secretaries, principals and vice principals, cafeteria ladies. custodians, children, parents, assistant counselors. Well, anyway. I think you get the point."

Public Invited to See Wall Hanging Exhibit

The public is invited to a reception featuring hooked wall hangings on August 15, 2-4 p.m. at the Phelps Senior Center, Laurel.

"Creative Hooking" is an exhibit of the hooked wall hangings and rugs created by the Friday morning rug hooking class that meets at the Phelps Senior Center. Rug hooking, a craft indigenous to America, is done by pulling woolen strips up as loops through a burlap backing. The woolen fabric used is recycled from old clothes and manufacturer's remainders and is occasionally re-dyed by the artists in the class.

This exhibit shows a wide range of hooking styles ranging from flat color surfaces to shaded three dimensional effects and various color treatments including bright primaries and subtle tans and grays. The exhibit includes wall hangings of landscapes and animals. Persian and oriental rugs, floral stool covers and pillows.

The class is taught by Roslyn Logsdon, rug hooker and resident artist at Montpelier Cultural Arts Center. The senior class, which is sponsored by Laurel Park and Recreation, will start again in September at the Phelps Senior Center. Roslyn Logsdon also teaches rug hooking at other senior centers in Prince Georges County and at The Montpelier Cultural Arts Center.

Fifty Years Ago Beetles Earn Money

by James Giese

June, 1943 — Greenbelt kids could earn money collecting the beetles. No, not the English ones who were probably still in diapers in 1943, but the Japanese kind. Town Landscape Crew Chief Angus MacGregor had town funds available to pay 25 cents for each quart collected of the pernicious plant eaters which were in plentiful supply according to the Greenbelt Cooperator.

Children would not be paid if it was found that they had tampered with the city's beetle traps and obtained their supply from them. In the past year, the town had used Japellin spray but didn't use enough to get the desired results. Also, "certain disease germs" were injected into the ground. These germs were expected to feed upon the larvae and destroy them before they became beetles. However, the effect was not expected to be realized for five years.

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello again ! ! !

If it's been three months or 3000 miles since your last motor oil and oil filter change. you're overdue. With these hot days we and our vehicles endure, it is important to do everything to try and protect the heart of our vehicles, "The Engine." As we already know, engine oil lubricates the basic internal workings of the engine, but on the other hand, engine motor oil also provides 30 percent of cooling just through the basic lubricating process to dissipate heat by way of less friction.

First off, always keep your engine fluids at the proper level-Keep your preventive maintenance schedule within proper time and mileage intervals.

Choose good quality motor oil and filters.
