by Linda Savaryn

Public schools in Prince Georges County reopen Monday, August 30. Approximately 113,391 students are expected to enroll, an increase of about 2,000 over last year. This continues an upward trend that started with the introduction of magnet schools in 1987. This year the county will operate 175 schools. So far 434 new teachers have been hired.

All magnet schools are full and have waiting lists. The magnet schools, which offer specialized programs, were instituted as a means of achieving racial integration. They were filled by lottery this year. Exceptions were the performing arts and TAG schools for which students need an audition or test.

Focus on Math Mathematics will be stressed this year. Equity 2000, a program sponsored by the College Board. aims to have all students pass algebra before graduation. To reach this goal, the mathematics program in all grades is being restructured. Principals, teachers, and guidance counselors are working together to implement the new program. This summer all principals participated in an Equity 2000 Principal's Institute; teachers attended a four-day workshop; and a week-long Guidance Institute was held at Suitland High School for guidance counselors.

Extra-Curricular Activities Students will still need to have a 2.0 or better grade average in order to participate in sports or activities; averages will be computed each quarter.

Greenbelt Elementary School. There it stands at 66 Ridge Rd. in all its newness and splendor. Plantings in front take away some of the bleakness of the huge parking lot and help to buffer the neighboring houses.

Built on the site of the old North End School, this new school, a one-story building, is the result of school and community planning together.

As soon as we enter the building we can feel the excitement. People are everywhere, workmen, Center School's hard working staff, and support staff. They're moving furniture, installing last minute equipment, and unpacking the many boxes of supplies. Everything is new, including the phone number, 513-5911.

We have come in the main door which is on the right in the front. Passing the gym on our left (more about that later) we come to the large administrative office. Glass windows cover two sides of the office. There is an open window making it convenient for people to talk to the busy secretaries inside, to register children or make their presence known.

We go through the door on the side of this office to the office of Principal Carolyn Goff. Hers is the first along a small corridor of offices. We find her busy but able to take a few minutes to let us know how things are going.

Same Staff

The staff from Center School will be the same in the new school except for fifth grade teacher Sara Sutton wro retired in June. Three new teachers are expected. Goff said, two of them men. They will teach grades 1, 3 and 5/6. The 5/6 grade teacher will teach Social Studies because fifth and sixth grades will be departmentalized with each teacher teaching a different subject.

While the children who previously attended Center will attend the new school, others have registered as well. The enrollment has passed 600 and is still going up. There are already 100 kindergarten children registered and it has been necessary to add a fourth first grade. For the first time since busing and magnet schools were instituted in the county because of court ordered desegregation, children from Boxwood Village, Lakeside North, University Square and Charlestowne Village can return to their community school.

Leaving the office we return to the hallway, which leads down the entire length of the school, ready to look at the 23 classrooms. On our right across from the office are two music rooms, instrumental and vocal. Entering the darkened vocal music room we are startled to have the light go on. It is sensored. We see rows of chairs sitting ready for pupils. We can imagine them sitting there singing.

Bigger and Better Labor Day Festival Next Weekend

by Sandy Smith

The 39th Greenbelt Labor Day Festival opens on Friday, September 3 and runs through Monday, September 6. Throughout the weekend top entertainment will be playing on the Festival stage and a carnival with rides and games, athletic contests, shows and exhibitions, pageants and a parade are also on the schedule. The four-day Festival is a celebration of the city of Greenbelt, its people and activities, but the Festival draws crowds from all over the metropolitan area and former Greenbelters make a special effort to come back for the fun.

Bands Galore

When One Thin Dime takes the stage Friday evening, the audience will not only be watching a top area band headlining in major local clubs, it will also be watching hometown performers who have made good. Charlie Havekost and Rick Colby are Greenbelters in the group. Havekost sings lead vocals and plays the guitar. He's a mostly selftaught musician who works in computers at the National Institutes of Health by day. The group is known for its "rockin" rhythm and blues" and for involving the audience in the show. Other members of the group are Jimmy Trollinger, Rob Dalrymple, Bob Felesky and vocalist Mary Shaver.

Earlier in the evening the Greenbelt Concert Band begins the musical entertainment with its traditional Labor Day Concert. Comfortably seated under the trees in Roosevelt Center, the concert band plays selections from its considerable repertoire and features talented soloists on a variety of instruments.

This year's entertainment committee, Barbara Barber and Rick Ransom, have planned a variety of entertainment. They promise something for everyone and every musical taste. Ransom himself is a talented musician who plays electric keyboard and sings. He performs a wide range of musical styles and has played frequently with local groups in many clubs. He does golden oldies, rock and roll classics and standards, as well as original compositions. He will be performing on Sunday afternoon. Avenue Grand Band

Denny Martin's Avenue Grand Band is on stage Saturday evening. The group is noted for its golden oldies, playing music from the 50s through Motown, but specializing in the doo-wap sound. Chick Hall, Junior, a fine guitarist, is a member of the group and son of famed guitarist Chick Hall, Senior. Rhythm and Blues Hall of

Center Is Looking Good

Traditionally the season for painting up and fixing up occurs in the spring. But it's different this year in Greenbelt. How lovely everything looks as we move toward the Labor Day Festival weekend!

Most noticeable is the wonderful job undertaken by George Christacos, owner of the Roosevelt Center buildings, to renew his property with a fresh coat of paint. Everything glistens under its new white and gray refurbishing. Across the driveway to the north from the newly painted theater, Co-op is repainting its store and across the parking lot entrance drive to the east Centre Video has also spruced up its premises with an attractive job of landscaping, brightened by many pretty flowers. Earlier the city's horticulturist, Bill Phelan, had landscaped the slope between Greenbelt Video and the medical building with shrubbery and clumps of flowering plants. Added to the neat appearance of the new concrete walkway from the west parking lot, which was put in place a few months earlier, and to the canopies matching those along the commercial fronts of the rest of the Center's buildings, this landscaping makes of the whole an inviting pedestrian avenue into the Center mall.

One last eyesore now seems about to disappear as well —the construction debris around the renovation of the old swimming pool bathhouse. With its new siding and porthole windows painted to match the larger structure for the indoor pool, the entire complex is now unified. New sod in front of the renovated building and attractive new plantings along the slope and the front of the indoor pool suggest that landscaping will also be carried out to harmonize the whole. Only that old ugly dumpster still remains in the parking lot. But city inspector Jim Sterling assures us that will be hauled away before the Labor Day Festival weekend.

Even Mother Nature has gotten into the spirit of Greenbelt's effort to look good for fall, as plenty of rain has brought back the green to all the surrounding lawns. Greenbelt's citizens owe a debt of gratitude to all those whose vision and personal efforts have made the city so attractive. We salute them.

Albert Hering no longer sits on the Board of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. as was reported in the August 12 issue. He was a member of that board in the late 1970s.

Scary

To the Editor:

Efforts to pretty-up the visuals and make improvements at Beltway Plaza Mall are understandable. To stay viable, the mall needs to be attractive and competitive. But in light of parking lot crime in recent years, it seems the newly planted trees will eventually provide great cover for lurking undetected. Even if I'm wrong about the trees, the parking garage appears a monumentally poor idea, a potential hotbed for crime. Thoughts of poorly lit, scary parking garages never warm my heart. One at Beltway Plaza gives me the chills. What were they thinking? Colette Zanin by Jerry Conway The Greenbelt Senior Softball Team accepted a challenge game with the Bowie Seniors All Stars, age 65 plus team. We defeated the Bowie team in a seven inning game by a score of 11 to 7. Our team's ages range from 62 to 81 and the majority of our team is 65 plus. In the 60 plus Baltimore Beltway League, we lost the last four games by close scores. All 30 players on our team find joy, humor, good exercise and sportsmanship in all the games we play. We do have to adjust to playing on other ballfields a distance from Greenbelt, but we all agree that the best ball field is Braden Field in Greenbelt.

We have five games to play yet in the 28 game series. We will play Montgomery County, Howard County and Dundalk on their fields and we'll play Parkville and Catonsville on Braden Field. On September 20, 22, and 27 we will play in a tournament with seven other teams at Cedar Lane in Columbia.

We do hope to show our best skills during this event and that the temperature will be more favorable for us. Win or lose we will have fun and exercise.

sides of the corridor. They're painted in bright yellow, blue or salmon. Each has windows, places to hang coats and a shelf for lunches, places for four computers, a sink, and a bathroom. Desks and chairs are piled in the center of each room. Teachers are busy putting books on shelves, decorating, making their classrooms into a home away from home. There is also a primary teachers' workroom.

At the end of the corridor stretching along the outer side are two large kindergarten rooms. A partition between them can be removed to make one huge room. Each one has a room on the side in which are small Apple computers. The kindergarten rooms open to a large balcony that can be used for outdoor activities. There is also room below to play.

Across the hall from the kindergarten rooms is the new science lab. Here Carolyn Lu-betzky will teach science to grades K through 6. She is busily arranging shelves of science equipment. Again we catch some of the excitement in the air as we listen to her enthusiastically tell us how she will implement math skills using science. (Lu-betzky taught at the old North End School and came to Center when the two schools merged). Next to the science lab is the art room. A line of easels is set up ready for students to come in and experiment creatively. Again we can almost see them already at work. A computer is available for help with drawing.

Between the science lab and art room a small corridor with a door at the end enables students to enter a courtyard where they can experiment or paint in the open air. The courtyard is the center of the entire building and many uses for it are planned.

Across from the lab and art rooms are resource room of Roz Efron, speech room, special education testing room, the office of Joe Brown after school program coordinator, and two Chapter I resource rooms. (Chapter I is a resource for children who are below grade level in reading and math.)

A corridor on the left goes up the other side of the school. On the left we see the resource computer room. Along this corridor are classrooms for the upper grades. The last office on the left in the corridor is that of Paulette Watkins, EIA (Elementary Instructional Assistant). Watkins serves as vice-principal during part of the school day and then director of the After School Program.

On the right we can enter the cafeteria. It looks like an oversized room. But looking more closely we see that it really is two rooms. A partition that can be closed is now open to allow workmen use of the entire room. Open, the two rooms can be used for meetings and programs. A stage, not very far off the floor, is divided by the partition. Both rooms have a door outside to the front of the building. Out in the hall are bathrooms, boys and girls.

This second room is, of course, the gym. Modern equipment sits ready to be used by eager young-

The group was originally formed in Baltimore in 1947 by tenor and lead vocalist Sonny Til. They recently held an R&B symposium and concert at the Smithsonian Institution and annually perform a pre-game show in Memorial Stadium for fans of another group of Orioles-the baseball team.

Bustin' Loose is "country with a kick." They are the featured performers Sunday evening and categorize their performance as new country and country with an edge. Another Greenbelter, David Spencer, is a member of this group. They are frequently headline performers at the area county fairs.

Recording artists, the Grand-sons of the Pioneers, performs on Monday afternoon. This group has taken the roots of American music, from New Orleans rhythm and blues, to western swing, to Tex.-Mex. as the basis for their eclectic style of rock and roll.

Leisure Time Granddads is a barbershop quartet which has played more than 300 concerts since it was formed five years ago. Each member of the quartet is a grandfather-they total 16 grandchildren among themand a talented singer with the Knights of Harmony barbershop chorus. They formed the quartet a few years ago with the goal of performing and bringing music to groups throughout the area.

The group is the 1991 Senior Quartet Champion for the Mid-Atlantic District and has appeared in international competitions. They have a wide reper-toire and invite the audience to sing along. Together they have 259 years, many of them spent singing.

Hard Rock

Seraph delivers a different sound. It is a hard rock group composed of Greenbelters Man Nguyen on guitar, Rob Heurer, guitar, Chien Nguyen on drums, and DN Nguyen on bass and vocals. They have played at Eleanor Roosevelt High School coffee house and other local engagements. Seraph will be on stage with its heavy metal sound just after the parade on Monday.

Also performing just after the parade, but in Roosevelt Mall, will be the German brass band, Alte Kameraden, the old Com-rades. It is the German band unit of the City of Fairfax Band. Organized in 1977, the Alte Kameraden preserves the musical heritage and fest spirit of Bavarian village bands. The bandsmen take their name from the title of a classic German march, to express their musical camaraderie.

Partners in Song, Columbia residents Iris Hirsch and Diane Perry, took their first guitar lessons from an old PBS show, Learn Folk Guitar, 20 years ago. Today they perform folk, pop, country and children's music with a blend of voices, acoustic guitars and percussion instruments. They have a particularly active performance, involving the au-

Among the marching groups are the Prince Georges County Police Pipe Band and the Camelot Lancers. As usual, the year's Outstanding Citizen will be the Grand Marshal of the parade.

Each year there are new parade attractions. This year the parade features an entry of trained dogs and demonstration by Allie and Adelle Lee. The dogs will march in the parade with their owners and at the viewing stand will be directed by Allie Lee in a demonstration of major commands. The marching dogs, of all breeds, will be in the intermediate and advanced training category.

Allie Lee, a dog trainer located in Greenbelt, has trained many Greenbelt dogs, donating some of the fees to civic organizations and causes in Greenbelt. More details on the parade will appear in the next issue of the News Review.

Everyone is welcome at the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. Families often plan on spending the weekend at the Festival. Old friends and neighbors return year after year and visitors come from around the metropolitan area. New residents in the city take this opportunity to learn more about Greenbelt in a single event. The Festival is community-based, communitydriven. It is run by an all-volunteer steering committee elected each year.

Each year openings on the committee occur, for which new members are being recruited. Area businesses support the Festival through many types of donations and support.

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello again ! ! !

Every day we deal with different questions that people have. The best question is: What is preventive maintenance? It's a program or schedule. On the lighter side, it is as far as you're willing to walk when your vehicle breaks down.

On a serious side, 40-60% of failures can be prevented. The rest no one can control.

Preventive maintenance is scheduled intervals of vehicle inspection and scheduled services (like oil filter changes and belts and hoses, at predetermined times and mileage settings. For example, oil. filter, and lubrication should be done every 4 months or 4,000 miles whichever comes first. A 4 wheel brake inspection should be done annually. Once you start your maintenance schedule, you will see results in dollars and dependability.

One might think, "My vehicle doesn't get but 5,000 miles a year, so I don't have to have scheduled maintenanc." On the contrary, when vehicles sit around, the rubber components become dry rotted, and fluids become stale and chemically break down. This is as much a problem as in higher mileage vehicles.
