

Antoinette Bram Installed as Mayor

by David Morse

By unanimous voice vote, Antoinette Bram's fellow councilmembers elected her Greenbelt's first female mayor in over four decades as a number of current and former state and local officials looked on. And a grateful council and city govern-ment bid farewell to Gil Weidenfeld, Greenbelt's mayor for the last 11 years and councilmember for 22 years. Edward Putens was elected mayor pro tem.

The councilmembers, perhaps because what little official business took place at the short November 8 meeting required scant deliberation on their part, were in a relaxed, buoyant mood. After the swearing in of the newly elected members, all of them incumbents except Judith "J" Davis, Councilmember Rod-ney Roberts said, "I can now truthfully say I've been both sworn at and sworn in"-to which Councilmember Thomas X. White later riposted "Lighten up, Rodney." The audience, which included many supporters of both the successful and unsuccessful council candidates, interrupted the proceedings frequently with laughter.

A few councilmembers vied with each other in giving thanks for the support of their families. White drew chuckles when he said, "It's no secret that a lot of my support came from people who know (my wife) Helen and not me." But Bram topped them. Perhaps displaying the acumen which made her the council's top vote-getter, she pointed out that virtually her entire family, from her 92-yearcld mother down to her grandchildren, was attending the session.

Tribute to Weidenfeld

Much of the meeting was taken up by a tribute to Weidenfeld. Addressing the council as a priwate citizen for the first time after over two decades of serwice, which he called "a labor of love," he challenged the new council to "use vision when you make your decisions . . . The decisions you make have an impact over five, 10, 15 years."

· City Manager Daniel Hobbs, speaking for the various departments in the city, presented Weidenfeld with an "ex-mayor's survival kit" to ease his transition into what Hobbs called "civilian life." It included such items as a Greenbelt Junior Police Badge ("to flash when you get stopped for speeding"), toy trucks ("downsized" equipment from a "downsized" Public Works Department), a bathing cap ("to keep the hair out of your eyes" the audience was especially mirthful over this, for some reason). He also received a batteryoperated "substitute mayor's gavel" ("what you really wish you had had at all those council meetings"), which featured, among other marvels, a "death ray." The most important item, however, said Hobbs, was a large Valentine, which was to show that "our heart . . . is going with you."

Bram, in her first speech as mayor, was brief, praising the experience of her colleagues, including newcomer Davis, who, she said, had 15 years of community service to prepare her for her role as councilmember. She closed by quoting from Shakespear's Coriolanus "What is a city but the people?" Reflections

Bram said later that among her objectives in her term as mayor was to take steps to combat "daytime crime," She noted that Greenbelt has a much larger population during the day, addiing that she personally witnessed drug sales taking place in Greenbelt East and Springhill Lake while she was campaigning door-to-door.

Echoing this concern, White said the election showed that combating crime was a top priority of the city's residents. He said that the council would support police efforts to improve patrol visibility. White also said that the council would have to focus more time and attention on ensuring access to Metro than See BRAM, page 12, col. 5

ISTEA Funding Possibility For Greenbelt Bicycle Trails by Bill Clarke

A priority list of bicycle transportation projects was released last month by a Washington Council of Governments (COG) subcommittee. For the third year in row, Greenbelt was not on the list. COG's Bicycle Technical Subcommittee submits a priority list each year to the COG Transportation Technical Committee. This year's list includes 26 bicycle transportation projects totaling $14 million. The Subcommittee proposes that these receive funding by July 1994 so that work can be completed by 1996. Two of the priority list projects are in Prince Georges County. A M-NCPPC Parks and Recreation trail along Paint Branch Creek would receive $2 million and shoulder improvements on Edmonston Road in Beltsville would receive $300 thousand.

The priority list is drawn from the Bicycle Element of the Long-Range Transportation Plan for the National Capital Region approved by the COG Transportation Planning Board. The proposed 1993 revision to this plan includes 142 projects totaling $105 million.

Three projects that are proposed for inclusion in the plan are in Greenbelt. These include a trail from Cherrywood Lane to the Greenbelt Metro Station ($1 million), a pedestrian overpass on Greenbelt Road at Frankfort ($800 thousand), and a pedestrian overpass on Kenilworth Avenue at Crescent ($800 thousand). None of the Greenbelt projejcts are on the COG priority list. The Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (IS-TEA) provides federal money for transportation enhancements, including bicycle or pedestrian projects but only See ISTEA, paeg 5, col. 3

"Mr. Greenbriar" Retires, Leaves the City He Served

Greenbriar has lost one of its longest serving and most prominent citizen activists and the City of Greenbelt has lost its Chair of the Employee Relations Board. William E. Ayers, "Mr. Greenbriar," who retired recently from his executive position with Safeway Stores, has moved back to his homeland in West Virginia. as editor of the Crier newsletter.

Ayers was an original resident of Greenbriar Phase I, moving into the new condominium project 19 years ago. "Since moving to Greenbelt in 1974, I have felt the need to serve my community, which has given more to me than I to it by providing me a great environment and quality of life which I would find difficult to match elsewhere," he once advised Greenbriar residents.

Ayers served Greenbriar in many ways, according to its monthly publication, the Greenbriar Crier. He was president of both the Phase I Association and the Greenbriar Community Association (GCA). He held the latter position for seven years, resigning in September. GCA is responsible for the operation and management of the recreational facilities and other property common to all five phases of Greenbriar. Ayers also had served terms as vice-president of both associations, secretary of GCA and as GCA representative to the Social and Landscaping Committees.

In 1981 the Greenbelt City Council appointed Ayers to the Employee Relations Board and in 1987 named him the board's chair, a position he held until he resigned to move out of the city. The Employee Relations Board is a hearing board for city employee grievances and appeals of disciplinary actions. In other duties, Ayers served enfeld presented Ayers with a City Council Certificate of Appreciation for his service on the Employee Relations Board. Weidenfeld expressed his disappointment in seeing Ayers leave Greenbelt and the Employee Relations Board. He invited him to come back often to see his friends in Greenbelt. Ayers also received a plaque from the GCA. at which time he promised to return next May 4 for Greenbriar's 20th Anniversary.

Before he could tender his resignation to the Council at its August 9 meeting, the council voted to refuse to accept any resignation Braden might tender. Without giving him a chance to speak it then enacted a resolution doubling his town salary to $3,000. The new salary plus Braden's federal government salary as Community Manager would be slightly greater than what High Point had offered. When he did get to speak.

Braden reminded the council that he had formally accepted the position in a wire to High Point and could not rescind it in a gentlemanly fashion. The council then decided to seek to "freeze" Braden in his job under War Manpower regulations.

Indispensable Mayor Allen D. Morrison said that he "just can't picture a new man coming in and being able to do what you (Braden) have done." Council member Thomas Ricker stated that Braden would not be hurting High Point as much by retracting his acceptance as he would be hurt-ing Greenbelt by leaving. The council and others further con-tended that all the features that he had secured for the town that other communities lack show that Braden is indispensable.

A flustered Braden said that he was "in a hell of a fix." He had ten days of misery and sleep-less nights trying to make up his mind and didn't know what he would have done if the council had made its actions prior to his accepting the job.

In editorials the News Review criticized the council for being "slow on the uptake on the prob-lem." It also contended that Those who know the manager feel it was hitting a trifle below the belt when the council reminded him of his deep attachment for the children in his own neighborhood. They were trying everything." Still the paper's editor felt that the council's efforts had deeply touched Braden. However, the paper did feel that after six years the town had to stand on its own feet one of these days

Letters to the Editor Thanks

Gun Control

The letter in the last issue of the News Review by Charles Kendall, Jr. supporting murder weapons needs an answer.

Mr. Kendall is correct in stating that stationing police as much as every few hundred feet would not be enough to stop all crime. However, this does not mean one should keep a gun in one's home. The New England Journal of Medicine recently reported that it is 2.7 times as likely that the gun will be used against the homeowner as against the intruder.

There are two reasons for having a waiting period before purchasing a gun. One is that it gives authorities a chance to check on the would-be buyer. The other reason is that it provides a cooling off period. Many murders are committed in a moment of passion.

Greenbelt has long favored gun control. When the issue was on the Greenbelt ballot in 1969 it passed almost two to one. Again in 1988 Greenbelt voted overwhelmingly for gun control.

I would like to thank all those Greenbelt citizens who voted for me and supported my candidacy with such warmth and generosity. We are fortunate to live in a city that offers its candidates so many forums to express their views and to listen to citizen concerns. The Greenbelt News Review, GATE, Citizens for Greenbelt, GEAC and Green Ridge House should especially be commended for their efforts.

Thursday, November 11, 1993

Once more I would like to thank the candidates for a cleanly run campaign. I look forward to working with the other members of the new council and to serving all the citizens of Greenbelt. Thank you again for your trust and support.

Judith "J" Davis

That year it was on the ballot as a state-wide referendum. It passed by a good margin in Prince Georges County and in the state despite the fact that the pro gun forces out spent the gun control advocates ten to one.

The Sunrise Quartet ... Chamber Music at Its Best

by Albert K. Herling

In bringing The Sunrise Quartet before the local public, the Greenbelt Arts Center has set a musical standard it will find difficult to equal. This magnificent string ensemble demonstrated a remarkable cohesion not too frequently encountered in the finest concert halls of our area. The concert was held on October 23 at the Presbyterian Church in Berwyn Heights since adequate facilities were unavailable in Greenbelt for that evening. American University. Kivrak holds a doctorate in Viola per-

of Music.

Music

The program opened with the Mozart Quartet No. 1 in G (K.80). What a joy it was to hear this extraordinary quartet perform Mozart. Delicacy and strength were appropriately used in each of the four movements. The rendition compared favorably with that of the leading and better-known quartets.

La Oracion del Torero by Joquin Turina was next on the program. This composition and the composer were entirely new to this critic and sent him to the research shelves. First. readers should be assured that this Spanish composer provided the audience with music that was sheer beauty and superbly executed. The audience was left with a thirst for more of Turina's compositions.

Giacomo Puccini's Chysanthemums provided the quartet's cellist with an extraordinary opportunity to portray his love of the Puccini number and also the cello. While still playing within the proper confines of quartet performance, the brilliance of Marcio Botelho's soul-ful playing added to the beauty of the composition. Quartet No. 6, "American" by Antonin Dvorak concluded the program. A fitting conclusion to a magnificent program by a magnificent group.

Here are the members of the Sunrise Quartet: Violinist Teri Lazar, possessed of what the Washington Post called an ""Unusually warm tone and splendid egato" winner of several international competitions-a brilliant violinist.

Claudia Chudacoff. an active recitalist and chamber musician and presently a member of the Marine Band White House Chamber Orchestra. An outstanding violinist.

Osmon Kivrak violist has performed with chamber music groups in the United States, The Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland. and Turkey. A former faculty member of the State Conservatory. Izmir. Turkey, he is now Adjunct Professor of Viola at

According to Bruce Hancock, chairman of the COG Bicycle Technical Subcommittee, Greenbelt should complete a grant applicaticn and be prepared to defend it before Maryland's ISTEA Review Committee. Hancock has secured $2.2 million for his agency, the M-NCPPC in Prince Georges County, and has an additional $2 million project on next year's priority list.

Eric Berlin, Trails Plan Coordinator for Greenbelt, says that the city would need direction from city council before it could prepare an ISTEA grant application.

The ISTEA Review Committee is chaired by Neil Pedersen, Director of the State Highway Administration (SHA) Office of Georges County.

Planning and Preliminary Engineering in Baltimore. Pedersen, who made a presentation last year at the SHA District 3 Headquarters in Greenbelt, said Maryland planned to spend approximately $6 million each year for ISTEA bicycle and pedestrian projects. In addition, the SHA is spending its own funds for on-road improvements for bicycling. He added that bicycle projects that provide access to Metro Stations and other transit stations are being given prioriy

During the first two years that ISTEA dollars were available, Maryland approved funding for projects totaling $11 million. Of that $11 million, $2.2 million have been allocated for M-NC-PPC Parks and Recreation Department trails in the College Park, Hyattsville, Brentwood and Bladensburg areas of Prince Georges County. Awarded Tree Grant

The Trust awarded 85 grants for a total of $110,262 for community bay restoration and education and projects. Funded activities include: shortline erosion control projects, wetland plantings, creation of small oyster reefs, water quality testing, tree plantings and educational field trips.

"The trust supports community groups who are willing to dedicate their time and effort to making real improvements in the health of the bay," said Thomas L. Burden, executive director of the trust. "Our education grants are designed to get students outdoors where they can gain an appreciation for the bay and its tributaries and where they can begin to take an active role in restoration activities," he added.

The trust awards approximately 200 grants each year. Trust staff offer grant writing assistance and encourage the sharing of project ideas and methods between organizations.

The trust is funded through donations to Maryland's tax checkoff, sales of the commemorative bay license plate and corporate donations.

McCarl Dental Family takes a bite out of your tooth decay!

The Drs. McCarl are continuing their campaign to help you reduce tooth decay by the sealing of your teeth.

Many people have heard of dental sealants, a clear protective barrier that is painted on the chewing surfaces of back teeth and reduces the incidence of tooth decay. An entire mouth can be sealed in 20 to 30 minutes and lasts for several years.

The Drs. McCarls were able to provide for the month of October, 1993, a special offer to children and adults:

by Betty Timer

The 1994 budget and a new buyer's warranty program were the most debated topics at the November 4 Board meeting of Greenbelt Homes Incorporated (GHI).

GREENBELT NEWS REVIEW

The Board of Directors for GHI's apartment division — Greenbelt Development Corporation (GDC) met prior to the meeting and approved its 1994 budget. The 1994 GDC budget showed little change from that of 1993. The only exception was a $15,000 item for "balcony repairs by a masonry contractor to replace deteriorated steel lintels and block and crack repairs to seven exterior balconies at 21-27 Parkway." Acting Director Paul Sinner said this budget is "very close to the allocated dollars needed to run the operation."

Sherry Gartner presented a petition signed by 89 members requesting a special membership meeting to consider two items. The first is "that the GHI budget be kept at or below total member charges for 1993—$5,-938,605." The second item is "that GHI members assert their authority to approve or disapprove the annual budget at a special membership meeting." President Alan Freas noted that the Board could neither accept nor act upon the petition until at least 50 signatures had been verified.

The Board approved, for first reading, the proposed 1994 budget of $6.877,909. This approval followed a series of presentations on the budget at three separate meetings plus a membership hearing (attended by the Audit Committee, the Board of Directors and five members).

Garage Rents Go Up During the meeting few modifications were made. These include: (1) increase of monthly garage rents by $1.00, netting an additional $3,312 and (2) increase of membership fees and processing fees on resales by $15 each. Because the number of sales decreased from 95 to 85 last year, the rise in membership fees is expected to yield a deficit of $10,650. Management explained that the number of resales is a highly variable item. The acting manager stated that the cumulative effect of these modifications" . . . was to dewas to decrease members' charges by $7,-662. The percentage increase in members' monthly charges is reduced from 4.3% to 4.2% and the operating charge increase is re-duced from 5.9% to 5.7%."

Director Don Comis proposed at least three motions to reduce the budget, but each motion was rejected by the Board. Finally, he asked management, "If you had to cut $36.000 from the budget, where would you get it?" Warranty Program

Warranty Program The proposed warranty program, previously discussed on September 8 was revisited. The Board unanimously approved a motion introduced by Carole Levin asking the Aesthetics and Engineering (A&E) Committee to: (1) review GHI's re-sale inspection procedures, (2) recommend any improvements, (3) determine if GHI is effectively

Boring Operation

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission will be conducting soil boring within its right-of-way located through Buddy Attick Park and along Hanover Parkway. The borings are part of a project to rehabilitate eight miles of 96-inch diameter water main.

The borings will be obtained using a truck-mounted drill rig. In some holes, a 2-inch diameter pipe will be inserted to measure ground water levels. The entire operation, which began November 8, is expected to be completed within six weeks.

communicating the inspection process to prospective members, and (4) determine if a warranty program or some other program wculd be advantageous to new buyers

A request for rent with the option to buy for 36-P Ridge Road was approved.

First-reading approval was given for a $15,500 contract to repair or replace sanitary sewer pipes at 25. 37, and 51 Ridge Road, 13 Hillside, 2 Eastway. 7 Research. 10 Laurel Hill, and 6 Plateau

As part of GHI's standard roof replacement program, the Board provided first-reading approval to replace the roof on 135-B Northway with a Carlisle EPDM Membrane at a cost not to exceed $11.060.

Ironically, the last agenda item, to shorten the length of meetings, was never discussed because the Board of Directors went into executive session at 10:45 p.m., thus ending the meeting.

Roberts, who had noted his maverick role on the council during the meeting, said he would endeavor to "finish what I start-ed out," which he characterized as "looking for alternatives" in response to various issues before the council.

Other Voices

County Councilmember Richard Castaldi, whose district includes Greenbelt, was one of the local officials in attendance at the meeting. Afterwards, he spoke briefly about a matter of concern to the city: a $20,000 tax exemption the county council is offering to the United Negro College Fund to relocate its national headquarters in Greenbelt. He said that tax revenues from the 70 new jobs it would bring to the county, many of them high-paying, would make up for the exemption many times over. The county hopes that a move by a nationally-known organization such as the Fund could influence other educational and research and development institutions to relocate to the county.

reception hosted by At a Mayor Bram at her home later that evening, the hoi polloi rubbed shoulders with city officials and local luminaries. Tom Renahan, who has been spearheading drive by the Greenbelt Arts Center to win approval by the city council of a new concept plan for the performing arts theater to be built onto the Community Center, reflected that the election results were good for its prospects. "The people who favored it all won," he said. "Of the other four, three of them lost." But it still faces a for-midable hurdle. "Where does the city find the money? That's the big question." What the the-ater needs, he said, is "a professional level capital campaign." He said he remains optimistic, "but we have a lot of work to do."
