Daily Run-down on the Festival Our Reporter Tells All

by Alex Barnes Opening Day!

It's Friday, September 2, and the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival is going to open in four hours. I've been assigned the task of figuring out how to mount the Greenbelt Arts Center's (GAC) sign on top of its booth, while Marie Tousignant and Fann Kash set up the food that will be sold. The scene is the same at booths throughout the Roosevelt Center parking lot. Peope scurry about, moving food and materials, transforming the plain white wooden booths into dazzling consumer magnets. Meanwhile, back at the Arts Center booth, I've figured out how to mount the 12 foot wide plywood sign, but I lack a powered screwdriver to do it. Rodney Roberts, working to put up the "Committee to Save the Green Belt" booth, loans me his.

After mounting the sign, all my work not yet done, I go to help the Greenbelt Bicycle Coalition (GBC) set up its booth. The GBC booth is across from the stage and next to the information booth - a primo location. This booth is half the size of the Arts Center's and there is no food involved, so set-up is simple. I drive by the booth and unload a folding table and flyers. J Davis, the Festival vice-president, scolds me because the Festival is now open and therefore I should not have driven my car up to the booths. I am red-faced and leave as quickly as I can. It is about 8 o'clock that night, and I am anxiously awaiting the announcement of the 1994 Outstanding Citizen. Events seem to be running behind schedule. I wonder if this is because of the number of politicians who want to be on the stage - I remember that it is an election year. Bother, as Winnie-the-Pooh would say. The chair of the outstanding citizen selection committee (I'd mention their names, but I understand that I am not supposed to know them, even though the committee is listed in the News Review) is worried that the Outstanding Citizen, not knowing that she is it, will tire of waiting and return to facepainting with her grandchildren. Finally, the introduction comes. I must shush an out-of-town friend who does not realize the magnitude of the announcement which is about to be made. After a long list of accomplishments,

Four of us work in the booth, including Bill, who came all the way from the Eastern Shore to be a part of Greenbelt's Labor Day Festival. It is only Friday, and I feel that this will be my best festival ever because working in a booth has made me a part of it.

It's only Saturday?

Information table day. Over 20 organizations, businesses, and politicians display information about their causes. Greenbelt Park has an interesting display on the park's history, such as the plan many years ago for a golf course in the park. The weather is beautiful. I continue to check out the booths, trying to decide which food booths I want to be sure to patronize before the end of the festival. The strawberry frosty coolers will probably be a daily source of refreshment for me throughout the weekend.

I am looking forward to the Greenbelt Talent Show, which was organized by Konrad Herling. Yesterday I casually mentioned to Konrad that I had considered entering his talent show. Konrad said, "Great, you're on!"

So now I am worrying about a costume - and how the audience will receive a Shakespearean monologue. My friend Hopi manages to put together a nice, Elizabethan-looking costume for me. So there I am, on the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival stage for the first time since receiving an art show award back when I was eight. In bringing Shakespeare to the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival I am, I believe, breaking new ground. After wards, my friends tell me that I managed to keep the attention of the audience, much of which was awaiting the start of the Little Miss Greenbelt pageant. I consider the venture a success.

Later that evening, I begin my first two-hour shift in the Bi-cycle Coalition booth. "One dollar wins a chance at this 300 dollar bike!" . . . "spin the wheel!" "Win this brand new bike!" I am a little embarrassed at how much I sound like a salesman, but I suppose that's part of the festival atmosphere! I am having a lot of fun, although my voice is getting tired. I stay until the booths close. It has been such a full festival for me already and I can hardly believe there are still two days remain-

Four Kenilworth Extended Alternates to Be Presented

by Alex Barnes

The Maryland Department of Transportation State Highway Administration (SHA) will conduct an alternates public meeting concerning options for improving traffic flow in the Maryland Route 201/US 1 (Baltimore Avenue) corridor from the Beltway north to Contee Road. Successive Greenbelt city councils have fought the widening of Kenilworth Avenue since the 1970's believing that such improvements would bring increased traffic through the city, especially if MD 201 is to connect with the proposed Inter-County Connector (ICC).

In the 1970's a study was made of the proposed MD 201 extension but location approval was not given. The impact on the environment and local opposition were cited as reasons at the time for no further action on the project. Since then, however, the Capital Office Park complex and the federal courthouse have been constructed, as well as the Metro service yards for the Green Line north of the

According to the SHA the purpose of this alternates public meeting is to acquaint the public with the need for the project and with the progress of the study to date. The meeting will be held on September 20 at High Point High School, 3601 Powder Mill Road, Beltsville. Maps and photographs depicting project alternates will be on display starting at 6 p.m. A 20-minute presentation will be given at 7 p.m., then citizens will be invited to offer comments. Four Alternates

Four alternates are being considered. Alternate 1, the nobuild option, does not contain significant improvements. Alternate 2 proposes to widen US 1 from a four-lane to a six-lane divided curbed roadway, with a median allowing for exclusive left turn lanes. Alternate 3 proposes the widening of MD ed roadway. In addition, Alternate 3 would cut through the Beltsville Industrial Park and cross the railroad tracks to US 1 via a proposed overpass. Alternate 4 proposes a four-lane divided curbed roadway that would branch off to Alternate 3 just north of Odell Road and head northeast along Old Baltimore Pike to Contee Road. Alternates 2, 3 and 4 include a 16 foot raised See ALTERNATES, page 2

Unofficial Election Results

Last Tuesday's primary election turned out to be a cliffhanger for Greenbelt's favorite son, former mayor Gil Weidenfeld, who was running for a Prince Georges County Council seat as a Democrate in District 4. When all 25 precinct results were in, Weidenfeld was just 105 votes behind former Bowie City Councilman Fred Robinson. But the final tally will not be known until next Monday, when abstentee ballots will be counted.

Some 265 absentee ballots had already been received for the entire 23rd legislative district by the time the polls closed on Tuesday night, including both Republicans and Democrats. (Ballots received after the election, provided they are post-marked by the 13th, will also be counted.)

Whoever is the final winner in the Democratic primary will face Republican Audrey Scott, former Bowie mayor, in the general election in November. Scott ran unopposd in the primary.

The turnout in County Council District 4 was low, as is usual in primaries-some 10,527 Democratic voters casting ballots in the election, out of 24,109 who were registered (about 43.6%). County-wide 89,862 Democrats voted out of 217,075 who were registered. County-wide 15,450 Republicans voted in the primary out of a total registration 57,968. (Republican figures for District 4 were unavailable at the time of this writing.)

There was some speculation that changes among polling places in Greenbelt could have affected the vote here. Judges at Greenbelt Elementary School and at St. Hugh's reported that a number of voters turned up, only to find themselves in the wrong place. North Enders, who previously voted at St. Hugh's were assigned to the new school this year, while those who previously voted at the former Greenbelt Center School were this year assigned to St. Hugh's. No one knew how many of the voters who had to be directed to a different polling place on election day persisted in carrying out their voting.

Top vote getters in Greenbelt were perennial favorites Congrssman Steny Hoyer, U.S. Sen-ator Paul Sarbanes, and guber-natorial candidate Parris Glendening.

The latter, who is currently Prince Georges County Executive, garnered about 83% of the vote within the county. In the general election he will face challenger Ellen Sauerbrey, who won an upset victory against Congresswoman Helen Bentley for the Republican nomination.

Weidenfeld, who had been endorsed by the 23rd District incumbents for the State Senate and the House of Delegates, ran ahead of all of them in the pri-mary in Greenbelt. Senator Leo Green was unopposed this year. Among the delegates Joan Pitkin ran strongest in Greenbelt, over her colleagues Mary Conroy and James Hubbard. Challenger Mark Piccirilli, who had been endorsed by County Councilman Richard Castaldi, ran a strong fourth after the incum-

Of particular interest in the metropolitan area was the race for county executive to succeed Glendening. Wayne Curry, Sue Mills, and Bea Tignor, all on the Democratic ticket, ran strong campaigns. In Greenbelt Tignor, who was endorsed by the State delegation and by Weidenfeld, was the top vote getter with 958. Mills, who had been endorsed by Castaldi, ran second in Greenbelt, with 594. Curry, who won the election handily in the county at large, polled 563 votes in Greenbelt. (Il figures are unof-

Public Forum

This public forum marks the completion of the first part of the project planning phase for the MD 201 extended and US 1 project. The project planning phase began in March 1991 and included "agency and public involvement, the review of all reasonable build alternatives and the no-build alternative, as well as social, economic and natural and environmental analyses." Remaining steps in the project planning are to (1) evaluate public and agency comments, (2) refine study alternates, (3) pre-pare a draft environmental document, and (4) hold a combined location/design public hearing. Other steps are to evaluate and assess public and agency comments on the document hearing and recommend an alternate to the State Highway Administrator. If a "build" alternate is selected, the final environmental document addressing the selected alternate must be completed and distributed. The final step is to receive location and design approval.

Citizen involvement in the planning process of the MD 201/ US 1 project is encouraged by the SHA. Written comments and requests to be included on the project mailing list may be submitted to Robert Sanders, Project Manager, Project Planning Division, State Highway Administration, PO. Box 717, Baltimore, Maryland 21203-0717, or call 1-800-548-5026.

See You There!

Today I have shifts in both the Arts Center (GAC) and Bicycle Coalition (GBC) booths. In addition, my friend Lisa is coming from Manassass to run the 15K race. She is bringing her four-year-old son Murphy. While Lisa runs, I am going to be taking care of Murphy. I have a busy day.

GAC is a little concerned about the possibility of rain because the GAC theater is the rain location for the stage events. With a new show opening in three weeks (that would be Woody Allen's "Play It Again Sam" starring Lloyd Rawley and directed by Keith Brown), the Arts Center was looking, well, not ready for an audience.

A kid comes up to the GAC booth seeking four $5's for a $20. Can I afford to give up my change? While I ponder this thought, Judy Holland, a more experienced GAC booth person than I, makes the change.

and Murphy show up from Manassas while I am in the GAC booth. Now I will experience the festival as a parent, more or less. Murphy wants to play a lot of games, eat a lot of candy, and be carried. I am beginning to doubt that Murphy will be sufficiently entertained by working in the GBC booth with me. This turns out to be correct, as Murphy has a hard time letting other people spin the wheel ("Step right up!" . . . "Spin the Wheel!" . . . One Dollar Wins a 300 Dollar BIKE!") I thank Andy for his patience, get Hopi to fill in for me, and take Murphy to meet his mom at the race finish. On the way, I convince Murphy that he can only buy three cookies and not 35 or 51.

The race has changed from when my Dad was its director 15 years ago. The entry fee has quadrupled, the start has moved, and the runners get shirts instead of patches. I spot Lisa racing down the Braden field path towards the finish line. The weather is near perfect for running. Lisa finishes strong in 78 minutes. A darn good time that she is very happy with.

Monday = parade-day

Today I am going to show off the Labor Day parade to Lisa and Murphy. On the way to the parade I am bragging about how great Greenbelt is and Lisa comments that it must be nice to have such pride in one's home town. It is a warm sunny day. A great day for an old-fashioned parade of floats, marching bands and majorettes. Unfortunately, these groups had to make room for the many candidates for public office in this year's parade, or so it seems. I think a cap needs to be placed on percentage of politicians in our parade. The three pipe bands were great, The cloggers and cheerleaders were sharp. The beauty pageant contestants with the Groucho Marx glasses were funny. The dogs were impressive. The politians waving to the crowd were not very entertaining. I am ashamed to say that I did not stay for the entire parade because I was bored.

Perhaps the art exhibit will be more interesting. The photos are visually stimulating and pleasing. Doug Love has created an starlight and street lights. It does not appear to be working, but then someone points out that it is not plugged in. The youths' art show downstairs is also good. Lisa likes the Scottish Terrier sculptures.

The festival is winding down. Around five o'clock, I start taking down the Arts Center's awardwinning booth. I'm also keeping an eye on the stage to see who wins the Greenbelt Bicycle Coalition's bike raffle. Councilmember J Davis is called to the stage to draw the winning ticket. The winner is Beth Blevins of Ridge Road. ("For One Dollar, She Has Won a 300 Dollar Bike!") Returning to the booth that I am dismantling, I notice that my powered screwdriver no longer works. Dang. The electricity has been disconnected. I wonder If exhibit that switches between I can use Rodney's powered screwdriver again?
