City Hopes for Legislative Help with Current Wish List

by James Giese

With the legislative session now in full swing for the Maryland General Assembly, Greenbelt officials are busy promoting their legislative agenda for this year. Mayor Antoinette Bram and City Manager Daniel G. Hobbs have recently been to Annapolis to testify in behalf of several city proposals. As in the past, the city is not likely to come away with more than a small portion of its lengthy wish list.

The city's lobbying efforts began with a dinner meeting with its delegation to Annapolis, Senator Leo Green and Delegates Joan Pitkin, Mary Conroy and James Hubbard, and with its county council representative, Audrey Scott. At that time, the mayor and councilmembers presented a legislative program consisting of eight city items and two proposals offered by the Maryland Municipal League. Tax differential protection and the obtaining of planning and zoning authority for the city are the two top items on the city's legislative list. A second meeting with the delegation in Annapolis is scheduled for February 29.

Tax Differential

Concerned about what might come out of the county executive's office this year relating to municipal tax differentials and already involved in a lawsuit over last year's freeze of the differentials, the city council has proposed that legislation designated for Anne Arundel and Howard Counties be extended to Prince George's County. That law prohibits the county council from imposing a tax on the property of a municipal resident for services provided by the municipality. Deputy City Manager Michael P. McLaughlin indicates that two similar bills, with slightly different language, have been introduced before the legislature.

The Prince George's County tax differential is designed to reduce the county tax rate for services provided by the county in unincorporated areas but not in municipalities. For example, the county provides unincorporated areas, and some cities, with police protection. Part of Greenbelt's tax differential reflects the city's provision of police services. The amount of the differential varies among municipalities based upon a complicated formula devised years ago. County law, not state law, establishes the differentials. State law only authorizes the county to provide differentials if it so chooses and merely requires the county to meet and confer with municipal officials about tax differentials.

Faced with a lack of money and the need to curtail programs and lay off employees last year, the county council froze the tax differential at the same level as for the previous year. Under the formula that then applied, municipal residents would have received a larger differential. That would have meant lower taxes for municipal residents but also less revenue for the county.

Planning and Zoning

Three bills are in the hopper that would give Greenbelt and other municipalities greater planning and zoning authority. The bills were successfully shepherded through the bi-county committee for Montgomery and Prince George's County by Delegate Hubbard. Two of the bills have been approved by the entire Prince George's delegation, which should assure their enactment. The third, PG/MC 17, which would give Greenbelt broad planning and zoning authority, went before the delegation on Friday, February 2, when a public hearing was held, which Bram and Hobbs attended. This bill is expected to come up for a vote on February 9. "It's a major victory that the bill has gotten that far," Hobbs commented.

PG/MC 17, the most important of the three bills, is the least likely to be enacted. It would give a broad range of planning and zoning authority to municipalities that elected to do so and that met certain criteria. Only three cities currently meet those criteria: having a population of over 10,000 and having a planning board and a planning department in existence for more than three years. The three cities are Bowie, College Park and Greenbelt.

If the law passes, these cities can elect to regulate the height and size of buildings, the percentage of a lot that can be occupied, off-street parking, the size of lots and yards, population density and signage. After adopting the county's planning and zoning regulations, the cities could then modify them after holding a public hearing and notifying the county. They can also initiate and adopt their own local master plans, subject to county approval. The county council could disapprove only with a two-third's vote of its members.

The law would also require the cities to ensure new developments provide adequate public facilities and to refer the plans to the county and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for their comments as to adequacy of such public facilities. The

Could Greenbelt Police Patrol in College Park?

by Diane Oberg

At the request of the cities of College Park and New Carrollton, Greenbelt officials are exploring the possibility of providing some kind of policing assistance in those cities. Currently, the two cities contract with the county police for officers to patrol within their boundaries (beyond what would normally be provided by the county). However, the county has significantly increased the cost of these contracts from roughly $55,000 per officer per year to $92,000 for the next fiscal year, according to Greenbelt City Manager Daniel Hobbs.

At the January 16 Greenbelt City Council meeting, Mayor Antoinette Bram reported on a December 19 discussion she, Hobbs and city police staff had with the mayors and city managers of the two cities. She stressed that the issue was solely in a discussion stage at this point. A second meeting, which had been scheduled for January 12, was snowed out and as of February 5 had not yet been rescheduled.

The cities were hoping that Greenbelt could provide service for substantially less than the new county contract price. However, Greenbelt Police Department estimates for the first year cost (which includes over $25,000 for a patrol car, radios and other vehicle equipment), top $80,000 without accounting for overhead costs.

But cost is not the sole concern, at least from Greenbelt's perspective. Among the issues raised so far are: what would the officers assigned this duty be expected to do? How will administrative and investigative responsibilities (record keeping, communications, court appearances, criminal investigations) be handled? Does Greenbelt have the legal authority to police outside its boundaries? Can city officers enforce county ordinances? And, who will provide backup to those officers when needed?

In a February 5 telephone interview, Hobbs said that he still expects that a follow-up meeting will be held. There are significant practical and police issues that must be resolved. He said that the discussions were still at a "what if" stage, and that nothing is likely to arise from the talks in the short term.

Council Resumes Its Work After Two Snow Closures

by Diane Oberg

As might be expected after two significant snowstorms in one week, the Greenbelt City Council began its rescheduled regular meeting of January 16 with praise for city Public Works employees for their work in clearing the snow. There were also scattered complaints about the quality of the state's clearing of Greenbelt Road and the National Park Service's clearing of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. Otherwise, the meeting was relatively quiet. It featured final passage of changes to the city code and a variety of status reports, personnel appointments and advisory board recommendations.

Code Changes

Council gave final approval to changes in the city code governing traffic and parking, and property development and maintenance. Among other things, the new provisions prohibit residents from parking cars, boats or trailers on unprepared yard areas. They also require specific steps regarding vacant property and dead or dying trees and make owners and tenants each responsible for compliance with fire safety requirements. According to another change, vehicles with expired tags are banned from being parked on any street or parking lot. A requirement for removing snow from sidewalks was deleted from the earlier version of the ordinance.

Educators Award

The city's Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) presented a proposal for recognizing "school based adults," such as teachers, counselors, and other professional, support and building staff for their contributions to "Greenbelt students' positive school experience." The committee asked for a $100 budget for token gifts and a small reception. Council approved $250 for that purpose.

Boards and Committees

Council reappointed the following people to city advisory boards: Lida Churchillville - Board of Elections; Edward Crowley, Joe Wilkinson - Parks and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB); Sarah Lewis, Jeff Ruffin - Youth Advisory Board (YAB); Jim Maher - Advisory Planning Board (APB); and John Mongelli - Employee Relations Board.

Newly appointed were: Norene Yoch - APB; Tod Chernikoff, Reginald Smith - PRAB; Robert Snyder - ACE; Gerald Madison - Crime Prevention Committee; James Inzeo - YAB; and John Gallup - Recycling Advisory Committee.

Council referred the Greenbelt Visual Arts Coalition's request to the City Council on page 5

Wrong Bill

Thanks to Greenbelt News Review for the space given to the report of the Open Door Meeting on January 27.

Your reporter accurately quoted Senator Green's response to questions about the Fair Ballot Access Bill, S.B. 330. Senator Green, however, may have had another bill in mind when he said it received only three favorable votes in Committee.

Actually this bill was reported out of committee to the Senate with a favorable vote in committee of 9 - 2. When it was voted on in the 1995 session in the full Senate, it received 24 opposing votes and 23 favorable votes, including Senator Green's vote, and as the article stated Senator Green will again support this bill.

If passed and signed by the Governor, this bill would bring Maryland up from being one of the two worst states that excessively restrict access to the ballot.

People with Diabetes Can Tour Giant

Giant Food is now taking registrations for store tours for people with diabetes. These two hour tours introduce the new food label, the new American Diabetes Association diet recommendations and give a hands-on experience looking at foods in the store. A registered dietitian who specializes in diabetes education gives each tour and the store pharmacist reviews information about equipment and medications specific to the needs of those with diabetes.

Odonna Mathews, Giant Food's Consumer Advisor said that, "Giant has offered these tours for the past two years and over 2,500 people took them. The tremendous response to this program showed a real need to provide this kind of information to people with diabetes and that is why Giant decided to offer the tours again this spring."

Those who attend the tours will also be given a packet of diabetes information from the sponsoring manufacturers who are also providing funding for the program, as well as Giant's consumer guide, "Diabetes and Food Shopping" and a coupon for a free "Eat for Health Food Guide."

The registration forms are available in all Giant Food stores and must be postmarked by March 11. Registration is on a first-come first-served basis. There is a registration fee which Giant is donating to the American Diabetes Association. ### Hindu Lecture In Religion Series

On Tuesday, February 13, the fourteenth class of the Comparative Religion Lecture series will be held at Mishkan Torah at 8 p.m. The guest speaker will be a representative of the Hindu faith. For those that do not know, Hinduism predates and comes from different roots than the Judaic-Christian-Islamic religions with which most Americans are familiar. The class will discuss the roots and philosophies of Hinduism, their major beliefs, how they view their community and finally what their personal views are of unity and world peace. This will be followed by question and answer period. Classes canceled due to bad weather will be rescheduled for a later date.

Members of all of the Greenbelt congregations will be attending these sessions as well. The idea is to clear up misconceptions, broaden our understanding and to meet our neighbors.

Registration for the series is requested but not required. Small donations are asked to defray the cost of the refreshments. Mishkan Torah is located at 10 Ridge Road, the corner of Ridge Road and Westway. For more information call 474-4223.

quest for recognition as a "city contribution group" to the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board. The petition stated that, at this time, the group expects only to request free use of meeting rooms in the community center, not direct financial assistance from the city.

The Advisory Planning Board's recommendations for traffic calming measures to improve pedestrian safety on Crescent Road (at Northway) and Ora Glen Drive were accepted for consideration at a future meeting. In both cases, the board determined that additional traffic control devices, such as stop signs and traffic signals were not justified at these locations.

Council accepted the proposed staff policy permitting those missing aquatic exercise classes to attend the Friday drop-in sessions as make-up.

Registration Time For Children's Clinic

The Children's Developmental Clinics at Prince George's Community College and the University of Maryland at College Park are accepting registrations for the spring session, which runs for nine Saturdays starting February 17.

Volunteers work one-on-one with participants from birth through age 21 who have developmental problems in learning, delayed motor, language, or reading skills, or have physical, mental or emotional handicaps. An infant/toddler program for at-risk children and a parent education program will be provided. Limited scholarship assistance is available.

For information call Paul Hahn or Kathy Hinkal at 322-0519.

DEER

the passage of the Visual Rights Act, have seen a movement in the direction of giving artists a say in what becomes of a piece: if, for example, a painting is to be reproduced on a calendar, or an owner decides to paint a sculpture green. As Zandler pointed out, "I have no rights to ownership of the piece, but I do have a right in terms of the state of the piece. It can't be altered."

And Councilmember Roberts (not to mention the vandals) had definitely altered the Schrom Hills deer.

Zandler and Roberts Meet

At a January work session, the Greenbelt City Council asked Councilmember Roberts to get in touch with the artist and see if he could work things out. In consequence, the two (and Mayor Antoinette "Toni" Bram) met on January 23 to discuss the matter.

However the meeting may have started out (over this subject all parties have drawn a veil of reticence), the end result was amicable. "I didn't want to create a furor," said Zandler. "His intentions were perfectly good. Not being a conservator, he didn't realize the piece was badly damaged in addition to the head." As for Roberts, he has been quoted as saying, "I got very attached to (the statue) when I was working on it; I realized what a work of art it is."

What artist could resist such a statement?

The upshot of the matter is that the sculptor will repair the piece once again, free of charge—which does seem, by the way, a bit hard

Democratic Election Judges Are Sought

Democratic election judges are needed for the upcoming primary on Tuesday, March 5, and the general election on Tuesday, November 5. Anyone interested in serving in this capacity should call Sheila Padgett in the office of State Sen. Leo Green at 858-3631 (a local number) or Judy Hopkins at the Board of Elections in Upper Marlboro at 952-3270. There are vacancies in Greenbelt precincts, especially 21-13, Greenbelt East, where voting takes place at Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

on him. Some time next fall the Public Works Department, under Councilmember Roberts's supervision, will remove the concrete from around the base of the statue and truck the wounded beast to the artist's studio for surgery.

We'll keep you posted on the recovery.

Based on Information Released by the Greenbelt Police Department

Newspaper Boxes, Gardens Discussed by City Council

by Heather Elizabeth Peterson
Newspaper vending boxes were the topic of a work session held by the Greenbelt City Council on January 22.

City Attorney Robert A. Manzi reported on his research in finding ways to regulate the placement of such boxes in the city. Greenbelt has a choice between passing an ordinance, like the ones passed by Baltimore and Ocean City, or adopting a voluntary agreement with the newspaper companies, as was done in Montgomery County and the City of Alexandria.

"Most newspapers are very litigious as to where they place their First Amendment rights," Manzi told the council. "The newspapers would rather have a voluntary agreement because they don't like ordinances—they feel like you're stomping on them."

Manzi said that Alexandria has had no troubles with its voluntary agreement. "This is certainly the proverbial carrot and stick," said Manzi. He added that an ordinance could be passed if the voluntary agreement didn't work.

According to Manzi, the courts have decided that the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution allows municipalities to regulate such matters as determining where the boxes are placed in relation to crosswalks and hydrants, and requiring that the boxes be in good condition and anchored to the ground. Manzi says that the newspapers he has spoken to would be glad to enter into a voluntary agreement because "they don't want to get in a fight with their best customers."

Mayor Antoinette Bram emphasized that "we are welcoming the newspapers and their right to sale," but that safety and aesthetic issues are important to Greenbelt.

Council instructed Manzi to draft a sample voluntary agreement.

Garden Club

A work session earlier in the evening discussed another aesthetic and safety issue: the appearance of the plots of land owned by the city and used by the Greenbelt Garden Club. Councilmembers about a year ago visited the gardens off Hamilton Place beyond the offices of Greenbelt Homes, Inc., and were distressed by the appearance of the area.

Councilmembers and club representatives agreed that the club was not entirely to blame for the problems, and everyone at the meeting proved eager to suggest ideas on how the area could be brought under better control.

Club member Bill Phelan suggested a spring clean-up day, when members could come in and clean up the trash. Those at the meeting also discussed the possibility of installing a gate to prevent non-club members from driving in and dumping trash.

Councilmembers were concerned by the appearance of a couple of small sheds and fencing which have appeared on some of the plots. Club representatives agreed to discuss with their members the idea of replacing these with a single, common shed and perimeter fencing.

Club member Dottie Esher also was interested in Councilmember J Davis's idea of writing down regulations for the club. Bram cautioned, "We don't want to take the joy out of gardening by over-organizing. We want it to be something you organize yourself, rather than the city doing it."

Esher responded, in reference to the suggestion of a clean-up day: "Everybody is very thankful for this opportunity to garden and I can't think of a single person who wouldn't be willing to show up and help this effort."

Japanese Film At the Arboretum

The program will be held at the Yoshimura Center of the U.S. National Arboretum on Sunday, February 11, at 3 p.m. and is free.

GHI Yards Revisited

by Randy Crenwelge

On January 31, the Architecture and Environment (A & E) Committee of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) held a public forum allowing members to communicate to the Board of Directors and the committee their concerns about the yard inspection program. The GHI boardroom was jammed with members, the majority of whom indicated that the inspection program was a good idea, although both praise and criticism were expressed.

Support Voiced

Most members present expressed a desire to continue the program in order to maintain property values, especially since the average price per home has fallen 15% over the last year. One member stated that yard standards should be enforced 100%; another commented those homeowners whose houses have beautiful yards should receive special recognition for their efforts; and a third pushed for an augmented inspection program.

One supporter of the yard inspection program expressed the opinion that the cooperative philosophy had been lost, and regretted that the original rule permitting laundry to be hung outside on a certain day had been lost. A gardener felt the program should be named a community beautification program.

Criticism of Program

Many felt the program needed some changes. For example, compost piles should be permitted, and kept up to standards based on input from a horticulturist. Sheds, fences, and compost piles need to be treated consistently in all yards. Other suggestions included ending the program earlier, before the onset of colder weather, and checking the areas behind storage sheds to eliminate unsightly debris.

One member was concerned about "nit-picking" during inspections, such as citing yards containing children's toys. Another asked, "Why are nice looking sheds required to be covered?" New regulations require sheds to be shielded by lattice screens.

A major issue was whether or not chain link fences needed painting. Some members expressed a preference for the natural appearance, rather than the bright greens and other mandated colors.

Personal preferences were another issue. Some members prefer to rake leaves when spring arrives, after all the leaves have fallen. And it was noted that people shouldn't complain about their neighbors' grass not being cut, as long as it's within the guidelines established in the "green book."

However, at times criticism became personal, such as of appliances and other eyesores left in particular yards. This led to comments that common sense and courtesy should be a top priority, and to a suggestion that GHI offer seminars on what is expected from members during yard inspections.

The GHI A & E Committee thanked the GHI staff for their hard work on the yard inspection program. Christine Gyemfi was singled out for fielding many difficult phone calls from the membership. Gyemfi has recommended that a longer time period between initial inspection and follow-up would give members more flexibility in dealing with deficiencies.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

county also retains the right to issue building permits, although municipalities may also issue building permits, as Greenbelt is currently doing.

In an appearance before the bi-county committee in November, Bram, who noted that this was the third year she had appeared on behalf of the bill, testified that concern was unfounded about the effect upon regional planning that would result from giving the three cities authority, since the county would continue to play the leading role in county-wide planning. "The issue is not about the big picture but self determination, local control, accountability and above all, good planning," she said.

PG/MC 15 would give county municipalities some limited planning powers in revitalization overlay zones created by the county. PG/MC 16 corrects defects in previous legislation which imposes a super-majority requirement for the county council and planning commission to override municipal recommendations or the master plan on rezonings or special exceptions.

Other Issues

City Council asked for funding assistance in the amount of $250,000 to aid in the rehabilitation of the Greenbelt fire station. Although county officials have toured the facility and are considering possible improvements, no legislation has been presented to authorize a bond issue.

Part of the city's legislative program involved help from the legislators to preserve the status quo. The city hopes they will oppose further planning for the extension and expansion of Kenilworth Avenue from Cherrywood Lane north to Virginia Manor Road and the Intercounty Connector. The city also seeks full funding by the state for Greenbelt CARES and it would like the delegates to require the county to pass the full Supplemental Police Grant through to the city. In addition, it asked for help from the delegation in repairing a deteriorating relationship between the municipalities and the counties.

One city proposal involves statewide legislation. The city council would like to require that more than 50% of Program Open Space funds be used for parkland acquisition statewide. While it is possible to spend more than 50% for acquisitions, such an amount is not now mandated. These funds, derived from special revenues set aside for the program, can be used for open space improvements and maintenance as well.

Council asked its legislators for assistance in finding ways to acquire all or part of the A. H. Smith property located west of Greenbelt next to the Metro station. Council is concerned with the loss of wetlands and the potential detrimental effect on Greenbelt caused by possible intense development of the property, now used for the Smith company's sand and gravel operations.

The Municipal League proposals deal with increasing state aid for police protection and adopting a constitutional amendment to prohibit unfunded state mandates. The Municipal League, according to McLaughlin, has drafted legislation and is seeking sponsors for its bills for introduction.
