Maria Reflects on 30 Years' Service At the Beauty Shop in the Center

by Dorothy Sucher

For 30 years Maria E. Wyman has been hard at work beautifying Greenbelt — one head of hair at a time. Known to her customers simply as “Maria,” and to her friends as “Chiquita,” she is the proprietor of Maria’s Beauty Salon in the Roosevelt Center. A warm-hearted and vivacious brunette with a delicious trace of a Spanish accent, she looks too young to have a three-year-old grandchild and to be celebrating three decades as a hairdresser in Greenbelt. On Saturday, December 28, a friend will be hosting an Open House at the salon in her honor.

Recently, the News Review asked Maria about her philosophy of hair styling. Her response was more personal than theoretical. “When I have a new customer, I always take extra time to try to exactly understand her ideas about how she’d like her hair fixed. I always try to do what the customer wants, not what I want. I do give my ideas, but I listen more to their ideas.”

Born in Bolivia

Maria was born in Bolivia, where she learned hairdressing and earned her license. She practiced her art there for only a few months before deciding to come to the United States in 1969, at the urging of a brother and sister who had already emigrated. She soon found that her new customers had more money to spend at the beauty parlor than on a simple wash and set, as in her native country. Here she learned to work with colors, highlights, and many different chemicals “to make our clients beautiful,” she explained. As a result, “When my clients walked out, they always walked out very happy.”

She married an American and had a daughter who was six weeks old when Maria first came to Greenbelt in 1972 to work at a beauty shop then located in the Roosevelt Center, above what is now the Beijing restaurant. After living in Greenbelt for three years, she moved to Hyattsville and finally Bowie, where she has resided for the last 20 years.

While working at the beauty shop she noticed the barbershop downstairs, a few doors from the Beijing. It was owned by Tom McAndrew, an easy-going man who gave many a Greenbelt boy his first haircut. The two became friendly, and when McAndrew wanted to sell his shop, Maria decided to buy it and turn it into a beauty parlor.

“In Bolivia I never dreamed of things like that,” she said. “I just hoped I’d find a nice job somewhere. But I took a chance, like everyone else. And my relatives were behind me and helped me.” Buying the shop was a decision she would never regret.

Some years after coming to Greenbelt, Maria and her first husband were divorced. By then she had two children to raise without any child support. “It wasn’t easy,” she said. “But somehow we always learn how to manage. I used to work seven days a week, and I had a live-in babysitter.”

Her hard work paid off, the business prospered, and she was able to give her children the things she wanted them to have. “For this I’m very grateful to the people of Greenbelt,” she told the News Review. “The city of Greenbelt has been part of my life over the years. I love Greenbelt.”

One of the things Maria likes best about the city is the Labor Day Festival, because it is great for children. Her own children loved it, she says, and now her three-year-old granddaughter comes to the festival. “I hope that we always have the festival here. It is wonderful to see the children and the people so happy and joyful, especially in the hard times when we have to worry about recessions and war.”

Steady Clientele

Many of the patrons of the beauty shop have been coming for years, but there is also a steady stream of walk-ins, some of them

Golden Triangle Trees Expanded in Buffer

On December 19 the Prince George’s County Planning Board approved a detailed site plan for the Golden Triangle lot 27 office development. The plan was approved with a condition that the area of woodland conservation in the northeast corner stand of trees be increased from .15 acres to one-half acre within a 40-foot buffer. The designated area is adjacent to the Walker cemetery.

In addition, the Planning Board directed that the tree area be protected, rather than merely conserved. This language means that no disturbance is permitted. The conservation of the area would allow the applicant to grade into the area and then revegetate where it was disturbed. The board’s action gives the highest level of protection to save the tree area.

In order to increase the space dedicated to tree preservation, the Planning Board reduced by 50 the number of parking spaces included in the site plan.

City Manager Michael McLaughlin called the Planning Board’s action a victory for the city.

New Year’s Eve Party

Fireworks Will Kick Off Greenbelt New Year 2003

by Patti Brothers

There are only a few days to solidify New Year’s Eve plans. Those who are still awaiting inspiration for bringing in the New Year are invited to join their friends and neighbors at Greenbelt New Year 2003. The evening will start with a beautiful display of fireworks at 6:45 p.m. at Braden Field. Wintertime fireworks are a true treat so don’t wait until the 4th of July.

Community Center

The evening’s activities will then move indoors at four different locations. The Community Center will host the great rhythm and sounds of Trinidad and Tobago. Blue Sky Puppets will delight the audience with wonderful “let your imagination take you away” puppet shows. Magic Mike will intrigue children and adults with his mystical magic and balloon-sculpting skills. And don’t forget to shake McGruff’s hand when he appears in the halls. The children’s craft room, run by resident artists, will be open once again for a night full of creativity. For those who feel like dancing, the St. Columba’s Scottish Dancers will have everyone up on their feet. Lessons will be provided. John Hill will offer the party goers with a full night of music from his acoustic guitar and wonderful voice.

More Fun

The Goddard Storytellers will tell exciting, let-your-imagination-take-you-away stories for kids and adults. Get a “once in a lifetime” hairstyle - both artful and fun - in the Wacky Hair Salon.

DC Motors will begin the final celebration and ring in the New Year in fine style with their great, nonstop sounds that span the last four decades.

Youth Center

The Youth Center will have lots of “get involved” activities for everyone including a huge twister game (can people get their bodies to stretch that far and that way?) and obstacle course (try to outrun a neighbor), both provided by Talk of the Town and a karaoke deejay, provided by Sight and Sound Entertainment, who will play great music all night long for listening and/or for singing. Kids’ bingo will be going on all night in the multipurpose room with great prizes and lots of fun.

Arts Center

The Arts Center will be presenting a delightful youth play, “True Magic,” followed by the rock group “Something Completely Different.”

Theater

During the later part of the evening, the movie theater will be the setting for animated short films by GAVA.

Food will be plentiful with great desserts by Chef Lou and

Rufus Millegan, Jr. Pleads Guilty in Osborne Murder

One of the men charged with the murder of Tessa Mae Osborne, 18, of Greenbelt on May 1, 2001, has pled guilty in the U. S. District Court in Greenbelt. Under a plea agreement, federal prosecutors agreed to drop their bid for the death penalty against Rufus J. Millegan, Jr., of Greenbelt. According to the Washington Post, Maryland U.S. Attorney Thomas M. DiBaggio said Millegan will be sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole. Millegan has also agreed to testify against Cornell W. McClure, who was also charged with the crime.

According to the Washington Post, federal prosecutors allege that Millegan and McClure lured Osborne into a truck, drove her to the Beltsville Agricultural Center and fatally shot her. Millegan has now acknowledged that he and McClure both shot Osborne in an attempt to press her for information about a home invasion robbery they believed she knew about. According to a statement of facts, Osborne suffered 11 gunshot wounds.

In July 2001 U.S. District Court Judge William Connolly announced that he intended to sign an Order of Detention (without bail) in a case where he felt the evidence is strong, according to a July 12, 2001 story in this newspaper by Barbara Bonham Young. The judge went on to say “These statements show that he [McClure] went looking for Miss Osborne, enticed her into the vehicle and drove her to Beaver Dam Road.” He cited the numerous times the defendants admitted firing at her, even after Miss Osborne ran from them. He added that bullets found at the Millegan residence appear to be of the same caliber as those fired at the scene.

Still clothed in the apron worn by employees of the Greenbelt Co-op, Tessa Osborne’s body was found on the grounds of the Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville on the morning of Wednesday, May 2. She had been shot numerous times with two different types of ammunition: both 9 mm. and .32 caliber bullets. The 9 mm. ammunition included regular and hollow-point bullets.

A friend of Tessa’s dropped her off at her home on the morning of Tuesday, May 1. She was expected to work at the Greenbelt

Bone Marrow Drive Draws Many Would-be Donors

by Marat Moore

Potential donors first answer a questionnaire to see whether they qualify.

More than 175 people turned out on Saturday to help save the life of Greenbelt resident P.J. Siegel by volunteering to be screened as potential blood marrow donors. Siegel, 43, is facing a life-threatening form of leukemia and may not survive unless she finds a match for a bone marrow transplant.

“We are extremely pleased at the show of support and plan to have another Greenbelt screening, perhaps in late February,” said Julia Eichhorst, president of Greenbelt Homes Inc., who helped organize the event at the Community Center gym. She added that about 140 people had their fingers pricked for the blood sample and around 35 people did not qualify for the donation because of illness, a compromised immune system or other health problems. The phlebotomists who took the blood samples are affiliated with the National Institutes of Health Marrow Donor Center.

As reported in last week’s News Review, Siegel, who was born and raised in Greenbelt, served as the first woman president of the Greenbelt Lions Club, and also served as an army major. She is a single mother who is devoted to her 12-year-old daughter Shaine, who was Little Miss Greenbelt in 1999.

In August Siegel was diagnosed with acute myeloid leukemia (AML), a crippling blood cancer that targets the immune system. Tumors grow when blood cells, which originate in the marrow, fail to mature, and eventually the marrow fails. Siegel’s immune system is so fragile that she could die from a common cold.

Greenway Center Plans Modernization Project

by Barbara Hopkins

The Greenbelt City Council heard good news about Greenway Center on Wednesday, December 18, when it met with Brian Miller, senior property manager of Combined Properties, which manages and now owns the center. Even though there has been a general downturn in the economy, Miller said, most merchants at Greenway Center have seen sales increase in 2002 for the third year in a row. He said Safeway has had one of its best years ever. More good news followed as Miller outlined a five-year maintenance and improvement plan for the center.

Miller explained that the shopping center is 23 years old now and in need of some major repairs.

Projects Underway

Some projects have already begun, including landscaping improvements that were started last summer and will continue over the next five years.

Councilmember Alan Turnbull, who was not at the meeting, had asked Davis to make Miller aware of the efforts of the city and state to create a safe and convenient bus stop with shelter near the entrance to the center across Greenbelt Road. Turnbull asked that landscaping at the center direct pedestrians to the proper and safe place to cross the street to get to the bus stop.

Another project already underway is replacement of about 90 percent of the sidewalks.

Parking Lot

Miller revealed a three-year plan for rehabilitating the parking lot. This will be done in four phases, he said, in order to minimize a disruption in traffic flow so that customers are not inconvenienced. The changes proposed are designed to mitigate problems that stem from the lot's underlying soil base of clay. Management expects the finished product to last for 15 years.

Roofs

Miller said that the roofs in the center are still the original ones and have lasted this long because of an excellent preventive maintenance program, but at this point some do leak when it rains. Therefore, there are plans to begin replacing all the roofs in the center starting at one end of the buildings and continuing replacing some roofs each year until all are completed.

Lighting

Miller said that the lighting system is inadequate and told council it would be improved. Councilmember Thomas X. White told Miller that the city is sensitive to excessive light scatter and favors fixtures that direct the light beam downward. After discussion, Mayor Judith Davis asked Miller to have his engineers contact city planners when his firm is ready to attack this problem so that staff can provide information about the types of lighting the city deems acceptable. She informed Miller about the proposed observatory to be located less than two miles away and the need to maintain a certain level of darkness in that area.

Security

In response to a question from Councilmember Edward Putens, Miller said there were no plans to install security cameras, which carry a liability for shopping centers that goes beyond what they create for store owners. The presence of off-duty police officers, he said, provides the best security. Miller had earlier informed council that he was pleased with the relationship built up over the past three years with city officials and police officers. He noted that his company had recently agreed to increase the hourly rate paid to the officers who patrol the center.

Miller indicated there have been inquiries but no definite new tenant for the space that CVS will vacate when they move to a new location within Greenway Center. He added that it was difficult to be specific with potential merchants since it is not yet known when CVS will relocate, but that attracting merchants has not been a problem in this center. Davis said the deal to build a new post office nearby should become firm shortly and this would probably be an additional asset to Greenway Center.

Miller said that the time-line for some projects could be adjusted if others are completed ahead of schedule or under budget. Davis expressed approval for the plan, calling it "a reinvestment in a very valuable part of Greenbelt."

visitors to the Washington area who are staying at nearby hotels and are referred to her. Many of Maria's own customers are senior citizens. "I prefer to work with them," she says. "Older people know what they want and like." Many of the younger clientele of the salon come to see Donna, who is "very good with the latest stuff," or Nina and Miriam.

Not Ready to Retire

Long happily remarried to Rodrigo Fuentes, a computer analyst she met through friends, she occasionally thinks about retiring. After all, 30 years as a hairdresser is a long time. "But the thought of being in my house all the time scares me. I love my job. The shop has been like a place for social moments. It's nothing but fun, most of the time. When you really enjoy your work, the years don't mean anything."

Maria now works "only" 30 hours a week. She orders a take-out lunch every day from Generous Joe ("I love his food") and eats between appointments at the salon. She says, "I've seen many businesses come and go in the Center in the last 30 years. The only ones that are still here are the Co-op, Generous Joe, the theater, the dry cleaner, and me."

Greenbelters Are Different

Maria expressed so much enthusiasm about her friends in Greenbelt that this interviewer asked if she thought Greenbelters were really different from other people. She replied: "Greenbelters are warm people. I feel I'm related to them or something. They really make me feel I'm a friend. A lot of my customers have taken a little place in my heart. I get to see them more than my own relatives. Someday I hope I can give them back as much love and friendship as I've received from them."

Here's to Thirty Wonderful Years

I would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge a woman who is about to begin her thirtieth year in serving our community. Although I have graced her with the well-suited nickname

"Chiquita," you all know her as Maria.

I met Maria initially at the ripe old age of 12 and began working with her at the age of 17. I have quite a history with her, which I will always treasure. We've seen each other through some very good as well as very difficult times. All the while, I have watched her provide very caring and personal service for many of the women, children and men of our community. She always goes the extra mile to see that whoever patronizes her salon is treated kindly.

I would also like to proudly say that Maria's very first customer at her salon was Mrs. Libby Rice, who still comes in weekly to have her hair done.

I could not begin to tell you all the wonderful things I have seen Maria do for the people she comes in contact with, but I can tell you what a beautiful example she has set for me over the years. And I know for a fact "that which you give out, always comes back to you." Therefore, I would have to consider her a very rich woman!

With all my love to you, Chiquita, in celebrating your 30th year in business.

Please join me for an open house celebration at Maria's Beauty Salon on Saturday, December 28, to bring in the New Year of 2003 and congratulate Maria Wyman on a job well done!

Seniors' Issues Addressed

by Mary Moien

The Senior Citizen Open Forum, which was held in late September, raised a number of issues. Transportation issues led the list which also included the possibility of establishing a bereavement group and ongoing speeding problems. Kenny Hall, director of the Department of Public Works, provided city council with responses and suggestions on some of these issues which are helpful to all residents, not just seniors.

Transportation Issues

Riders on the Greenbelt Connection on Sundays reported a number of incidents where the bus did not pick them up as scheduled. Hall indicated that different drivers are now assigned to Sundays. The drivers have been given a list of Public Works Department personnel phone numbers with instructions to call specific staff immediately if there is a coverage problem on a Sunday.

Some seniors asked if the city van could take people to the New Carrollton Metro station in addition to the Greenbelt station. Because there is only one van, Hall indicated that they could not take people to New Carrollton. He pointed out that, while it is not as convenient, residents can get to the orange line from the green line. With the exception of some doctor's appointments, the van takes residents around only inside of Greenbelt.

Hall pointed out that city residents can also use the County Call-a-Bus. They should call 301-499-8603 to obtain information on that service. In addition, some residents, including seniors, are eligible for the Call-a-Cab program which provides rides with half-price coupons. They can be contacted at 301-883-5656.

Some residents asked for the Greenbelt Connection to schedule trips to shopping centers outside of Greenbelt. The Recreation Department has set up two shopping trips for seniors using the Recreation Department van. The first will be to Laurel Mall on February 13 and the next to Columbia Mall on March 12. Depending on the success of these trips, additional shopping trips may be added in the future.

Bereavement Group

A topic of great interest at the Forum meeting was the establishment of a bereavement group. It was pointed out that residents Leonie Penney and Pearl Siegel are bereavement facilitators and would assist in starting a local group. Since that time members of the Senior Citizen Advisory Group have begun working with the Patuxent Widowed Persons Service and the AARP to start a bereavement group in Greenbelt. It is anticipated that the group may begin meeting by May.

Sucher's Art at Berwyn Cafe

Many Greenbelters know Dorothy Sucher as a long-term staff member of the Greenbelt News Review and a published author, but few are aware she is also an artist. Now, however, she is showing some of her paintings in public for the first time at the Berwyn Café. Also currently there on display are the twig sculptures of Greenbelter Paul Downs.

As a girl in New York City, Sucher studied art at the Brooklyn Museum, the Art Students' League, and the High School of Music and Art, where she tried her hand at life drawing, oil painting, and ceramics. Married at 19, she moved to Greenbelt when her husband, Joe, accepted a position as a physics professor at the University of Maryland. They raised their family in Greenbelt.

Later Sucher became a psychotherapist and author. Although she had little time for serious painting, she never lost her interest in art, which for many years she expressed mainly through quilting and gardening.

For the last 20 years she and her husband have divided their time between Maryland and Vermont, where they have an old farmhouse. In the summer of 2002 she began to study watercolor with artist Kathrena Ravenhorst Adams in Barre, Vermont, and before long was painting every day. Sucher is drawn to the subjects that have always fascinated artists: landscape, still-life and the human form. She especially enjoys painting flowers, an outgrowth of her love of gardening.

The Berwyn Café is an organic vegetarian restaurant in the building that for many years housed the Beautiful Day Trading Company, an organic grocery store. It is located at 5010 Berwyn Road in College Park, and is closed on Mondays.

Amahl Production At Community Center

Warm Slice of Community Life Served Up at New Deal Café

by Anne Sucher

Over the years as I've returned to Greenbelt, the city where I grew up, I've watched the fits and starts with which the town has attempted to rise above its staunchly idealistic Depression roots to a kind of artsy, eco-conscious sophistication. At the New Deal Café, young and old, skateboarding kids, retirees and workers on their break can enjoy a coffeehouse atmosphere reminiscent of San Francisco, New York and other big cities. What a pleasure after all these years to find such a community asset thriving in Greenbelt's Roosevelt Center.

The cracked terrazzo floor, pale yellow walls and early garage-sale furniture lend the perfect laid-back unpretentious air to this little bit of California in Greenbelt. Tie-dyed fabric festoons the ceiling; Perrier bottles hold carnations past their peak; reclaimed church pews, complete with hymnal shelf, offer straight-backed repose; a mustard-yellow couch sags knees-to-chin; all conspiring to create a welcome-home, no-fuss flavor. It warms my heart.

While most New Deal food is health-oriented - fresh juice and vegetarian cuisine - there are luscious cakes and pies. Recently they got a liquor license and offer eight varieties of beer and several kinds of wine.

The walls sport vibrantly colored paintings reminiscent of the 60s. The artist apparently is a good natured "back-to-the-lander" who recently pitched a tent in a local backyard.

As I sit one evening scribbling notes for this article, a group of teens is reading aloud with great hilarity excerpts from one of the donated books about "what real women don't do." The girls go up to examine the mural behind the stage. One girl proclaims confidently, "This is definitely anarchist/pagan ... this is the most cool part of the whole thing." They settle back on the couch.

Reggae music is pulsating, followed by a Celtic CD. A blond boy with ponytail expounds what he's learned at school about segregation and then chats with an elderly woman in a green suit and fluffy white scarf, assuring her that "The coffee is very good today."

All Ages

But teenagers aren't the only customers. A freeze-frame would show a tidily dressed white-haired librarian-type in a plaid skirt, sensible shoes and prim red blazer donning her trench coat as she leaves. At the next table a contemporary in T-shirt and sweat pants finishes her coffee and Danish after exclaiming with the waitress over the Taliban's treat-

Marine Corps Cpl. Roberto Fernandez, son of Kathleen Fernandez of Hillside Road and a 1996 graduate of Eleanor Roosevelt High School, recently completed the Small Arms Repair Course at the U.S. Army's Proving Ground in Aberdeen, Md.

During the course Fernandez learned how to operate, inspect, maintain and repair rifles, pistols, shotguns, submachine guns, grenade launchers, mortars and other automatic weapons. He also studied how to prepare weapons for shipment and storage and related safety precautions.

Fernandez is now ready to work at a military base armory providing weapons support to troops deploying for exercises and operations.

Congratulations to Lynn Eppard, who does the pre-press weekly set-up of the News Review, and husband Kenny Young on the birth of son Ibraheem Abdullah, 8 lbs., 10 oz. on December 16, 2002. Ibraheem joins sisters Kamilah and Sakinah, little brother Yusuf and big brother Jarrett, who has been doing the News Review for his mother during her recuperation.

ment of Islamic women. Paul Downs, a café volunteer, begins unpacking candle holders from his backpack. After musical performances (which happen regularly), he takes them home to get off the wax.

Richard McMullin, a tall middle-aged man and organizer of the Café's music comes into prepare for the evening's musical entertainment. Yards of blue cable wiring are unrolled, tables moved, everything rearranged. He does this swiftly with a practiced air.

The band members begin to show up – some seven college kids in their early 20s. They're trying to figure out how to set up, an unexpectedly lengthy process.

It's 6:30 p.m. There are more people in the band than the audience.

The teenagers' parents suddenly appear and scoop up their offspring. The music doesn't start for another half hour, but now the place is filling up. I recognize an employee from the House of Musical Traditions in Takoma Park. He's there to help set up the sound, an iterative process. "Put that into channel one in the amp — echo one would be a bus, echo two would be a bus – that should be going into the monitor, Jeremy, how are you?" (Jeremy is the keyboard player.) The student vibe prevails.

By 8:20 the place is packed. I've never seen it so crowded. Folding chairs are set out, and tables taken outside. The air gets hot and humid. Bodies press together – expectation is high for the band to begin. Mostly it's friends or family of the band members and those who read a good review of the band's previous gig here.

Soon the music starts. Everyone is settled with coffee and cake or hummus, maybe falafel and a beer. The stage becomes the focus. We listen. Maybe we like it and maybe we don't, but you can't beat the price of admission; free.

A coffeehouse is a slice of life, a cross-section of community, a great place to hang out, listen to music, see local artists, meet, greet and discuss life at anytime. Long may it thrive!

Volunteers Needed To Deliver Meals

The work of Food & Friends does not stop on New Year's Day. Food & Friends provides home-delivered meals and groceries to people living with HIV/AIDS, breast cancer and other life-challenging illnesses. The organization delivers needed meals six days a week, 52 weeks a year, and that includes holidays.

Volunteer drivers are needed Wednesday, January 1. It will take between one and three hours to deliver meals and groceries to some clients. Come make a difference in someone else's life.

Deliveries are scheduled in the morning, so people can help deliver much-needed meals to clients and still have time for holiday plans with friends and family. Maryland deliveries will be made January 1 at 9:15 a.m.

To volunteer call the Christmas Holiday Hotline at 202-863-1859 or send an email to Christmas@foodandfriends.org.

Co-op that day, but never made it to the store. Someone saw her walk over to an older-model, full-size, light tan or beige Ford Bronco and get in on its passenger side. The Bronco then made a U-turn and drove away from Roosevelt Center at high speed, tires squealing. A witness recognized the truck.

The witness's identification led Greenbelt Police to McClure and Millegan. Although Millegan agreed to assist federal officers, he failed to contact the FBI as he had agreed to do. Agents located him on Tuesday, July 3, hiding in the closet at the home of one of his friends. He agreed to come to the FBI office in Calverton for an interview. There he admitted to the May 1 murder of Tessa Osborne, committed also by Cornell McClure. He told investigators he agreed with McClure's proposal to take Tessa to the Agricultural Research Center "and confront her with guns to scare her."

He said after they arrived there, McClure argued with Tessa and then used a 9 mm. gun to fire several gunshots at her. Millegan then fired two bullets from the second gun, the .32 caliber revolver, and gave the gun to McClure. McClure then fired more shots from the second gun.

ACT Gives Advice on Financial Aid

The start of a new year is approaching and that means students who plan to start college next fall should begin working on financial aid. Experts at ACT offer the following information to help families find the resources they need to complete their financial aid paperwork.

The most important form is the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). Beginning January 1, students will be able to submit the form that determines eligibility for student financial aid from federal programs. Students will need family income statements from 2002 earnings to complete the form. Colleges and universities use the FAFSA, but may also require students to fill out additional forms. The FAFSA is available from high school counselors or on the web at www.fafsa.ed.gov.

Tips from ACT: apply early for admission and financial aid; check with the college to determine if other financial aid forms are required; apply for scholarships and grants; look into work study programs; and surf the web for financial aid information.

Golden Age Club Takes Trip to Historic Williamsburg

Members of the Greenbelt Golden Age Club traveled to historic Williamsburg December 10 to 12, where guides gave the group a walking tour of the historic district.

The Golden Agers attended a performance at the Williamsburg Music Theater starring Tom Netherton, a frequent performer with the Lawrence Welk Show, who greeted and sang to Pearl and Ken Keeney.

Bernie McGee Giese got to ring the bell at historic Bruton Parish Church 18 times to announce the noontime service as a churchwarden and other Golden Agers looked on.

Maryland Prepaid Tuition Plan Now More Costly

by Cathie Meetre

Family members who want to tuck away some money for the future education of their children and grandchildren can take advantage of the Section 529 plans that allow favorable tax treatment for prepaid college tuition plans created at the state level. These plans permit an immediate family member to pay for a year or more of university or community college education for a designated beneficiary. When the beneficiary enrolls in college the plan will pay the then-current tuition and mandatory fees and many federal tax credits are still available even though the plan is paying the tuition. Each year the first $2,500 saved for each beneficiary in the Maryland plan is free of Md. state tax for a resident contributor. Contributions over that may be used to reduce state taxes in future years. Contributions may be made as a lump sum or on an annual or monthly basis over periods ranging from 2 years to 18 years.

This fall, when the plan was reviewed to determine the rates for participation in the open season that runs from this November through next March, the losses sustained in the stock market and the steeply rising cost of higher education (exacerbated by the gradual decrease in Maryland's contribution to undergraduate education costs) conspired to create a large increase in the cost to new participants in the program.

The cost for one year of tuition at a state university for a newborn (i.e. paying now for a year of college that will be taken in 2020) rose from $4,825 last year to $6,254 – an increase of nearly 30%. The cost of two years of community college paid up-front for a newborn rose from $4,543 last year to $5,435 – with the five-year payment schedule's monthly cost rising from $94 per month to $112. The lump sum cost of prepaying for today's newborn to attend two years of community college and two years of university rose from $14,091 to $18,036.

Individuals seeking more information can call 1-888-4MD-GRAD or use the information, forms and tuition calculator on the web site at <http://www.collegesavingsmd.org>.

City Sets 2003 Legislative Priorities

by Barbara Young

The city has set forth Greenbelt's legislative priorities for 2003 in a December 12 written presentation prepared for State Senator Paul Pinsky, Delegates Tawanna Gaines, Anne Healey and Justin Ross as well as County Councilman Douglas Peters.

Legislative priorities are listed below and summarized individually later in this story.

State legislative priorities are:

1. A bond bill to provide $300,000 in matching funds for the addition to and renovation of Springhill Lake Recreation Center.

2. Opposition to reduction in funds for income tax, police aid, youth and family service bureaus, Program Open Space and other municipal funding sources.

3. Enabling municipalities to lower the speed limit on city streets.

Greenbelt's joint state/county legislative priorities are:

1. Opposition to funding for the inter-county connector and support of funding for the inner beltway purple line.

2. Giving Prince George's County municipalities full planning and zoning authority.

Listed county legislative priorities are:

1. The overturning of CB-40 and enactment of Adequate Public Facilities legislation with no loopholes so that new development is prevented when school, transportation and/or public safety facilities are inadequate.

2. Restoring the practice of the County in paying half dues for membership in Council of Government of municipalities in Prince George's County.

Shown as "information items" in the presentation are renovation of Greenbelt Middle School, the status of the Metroland development proposal, a noise barrier study and funding and the salt dome on Kenilworth Avenue near the office park. Each of these is summarized in paragraphs to follow.

"Other issues of city interest" are support for car-sharing programs, funding for law enforcement equipment, the upgrading of police communications systems to make them interoperable between agencies, the banning of items used as drug paraphernalia and fast-fill natural gas fueling stations.

State Funds

Because of the severe deficit in the state's project budget the city is concerned about the potential loss of direct aid and shared revenues coming from the state. For example, several key state funds which the city received in fiscal year 2002 were income tax, $1,700,000; police aid, $495,000, Program Open Space, $173,765, and Youth Service Bureau grants, $77,500. Program Open Space funds have been "banked" by the city for several years, looking toward land acquisition purchases of the Sunrise property and the Jaeger tract. The city announces it is "very concerned" that the state will try to "take back" the accumulated funds.

Speed Limits

Currently an expensive engineering traffic study is required if a local government wishes to lower the state-mandated speed limit of 30 miles per hour. Greenbelt wishes to eliminate the requirement for the traffic study.

Transportation

According to the city, "... this [inter-county connector] proposed project will increase sprawl, cause significant, irreparable environmental damage, and do little to relieve traffic congestion." The city states that a better solution is the inner beltway purple line, "which would provide direct relief for traffic congestion on the Capital Beltway . . . encourage additional "smart growth" and revitalization in older inner beltway communities and would create far less environmental damage."

Zoning

Although Greenbelt, Bowie and College Park are three of Maryland's ten largest cities, all lack the planning and zoning authority that 119 other cities and towns in Maryland possess. The three cities propose a process whereby planning and zoning authorities are transferred to municipalities over a period of five years, and the county and Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission are allowed to retain control over truly regional functions such as adequate public facilities.

CB-40

The city believes that when public facilities, particularly schools, are not adequate, new development should not proceed. In the city's opinion, CB-40, passed in 2001, circumvents existing regulations designed to prevent development when adequate schools do not exist.

COG Dues

For over 30 years, Prince George's County paid half the dues for municipalities in the county who are members of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG). The rationale was that since the counties perform many governmental functions such as schools, planning and zoning for residents who live in municipalities, both jurisdictions should share the cost of membership dues. In 1995, however, the county discontinued the practice. The city believes the practice should be restored.

Middle School

The city points out that since 1988, renovation of Greenbelt Middle School has been listed on the Board of Education capital improvement's list. It also points out that the school is part of Greenbelt's National Historic Landmark District designation and as such, portions of the school are protected and must be retained. The school is one of the oldest middle schools in the county and renovation "should occur as soon as possible" and not be pushed back on the capital improvement program list.

Metroland

The city has had serious concerns about development for the Greenbelt station site proposal from the beginning, including failure to follow transit-oriented principles, environmental issues, size and scope of the development, and traffic concerns. However, despite the city's concerns, the district council has approved a conceptual site plan and the planning board has approved a preliminary plan of subdivision. The city has appealed these actions to the Circuit Court.

Noise Barriers

Although the State Highway Administration (SHA) has a program to install noise barriers along major highways in Maryland, Greenbelt has no barriers near Springhill Lake or Buddy Attick Park, both of which abut the beltway. SHA agreed to conduct a study to determine if these areas qualify for the barriers, and the outcome of the study is not yet known. However, even if the city qualifies, adequate funding is apparently not available to install the barriers.

Salt Dome

An SHA salt storage dome is located at the intersection of Kenilworth Avenue and Cherrywood Lane. While the city understands the need for this facility, located at a major entrance to Capital Office Park and the Federal Courthouse, it believes an industrial location would be more appropriate for the dome.

Drug Items

Certain products such as papers, "blunts," etc. can be used as drug paraphernalia. The city asks the state to consider banning items known to be frequently used with the use of illegal drugs.

Fuel Stations

The city has begun to purchase some natural gas vehicles. To service them, it has a slow fill station requiring 12 hours to refill a vehicle and only two such vehicles can be filled at a time. Because natural gas vehicles have a relatively short range (less than 100 miles), the ability to use them is accordingly limited. Because the cost of a fast-fill station is high (over $150,000), the city believes the state should consider some kind of matching funding or incentive program for establishing such stations.

My wife, Alhen, our family, and I wish you and yours a Happy New Year that brings Peace, Joy and Good Health to All.

We will miss our relationship with the community of Greenbelt, the many fond memories of our joint efforts and warm friendships. Thank you for the many courtesies extended to me over the years. I will always be a "Greenbelter" and a Greenbelt Booster. We join with you in praying for our terrorist victims and Armed Forces.

Senator Leo Green

Greenbelt resident Tim Murphy doesn't mind the prick of a needle, wielded skillfully by phlebotomist Starlet Barber. Volunteers helped screen potential donors by looking over their medical forms and answering questions.

ter gym from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. "People were lining up at 10:30, to be the first in line," Eichhorst said. Another screening is set for Thursday, February 6 in College Park.

The initial screening takes just a few minutes, after donors fill out a brief medical questionnaire that includes a request to join the National Marrow Donor Program. Blood samples are then screened for possible donors, which are hard to find — in some cases, only one in one million is a match. Lab results take eight weeks to process. If a match is found, the donor will receive further tests and counseling. Volunteer donors have the right to withdraw at any time. Confidentiality is maintained, with blood sample data identified only by a confidential code.

The successful donor will have marrow removed from the hip while under anesthesia. The marrow is naturally replaced by the body within three to four weeks. Following the marrow removal, donors report feeling soreness, like they "fell on the ice," for a few days and then are back to normal activities in a few weeks.
