The Festival of Lights – A Tradition of Success

by James Giese

The city's month-long winter holiday celebration has been going on enough years to become a Greenbelt tradition. While there were differences this year, the celebration was much like past years. Many Greenbelters and others enjoyed the different events that made up the festival. Its success was the result of very hard work on the part of a dedicated city staff and a slew of hard-working volunteers. All of us who enjoyed the events as watchers rather than doers owe a great big thank you to those who made it possible.

It was not possible for Bernie and me to attend every event that was held, as we were under the gun to get our own home in order for the holidays. (One of these years we're going to get ready in November so that we can spend all of December enjoying the many holiday activities going on here and in the metropolitan area.) In fact, we missed the opening ceremony on December 6. My recollection is that it was a very cold night. I wonder how the Greenbelt Concert Band's Brass Choir made out. In concerts this group has done a fine job. We have never heard the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Suspenders, but would have liked to. That school's musical groups have always performed well. It apparently replaced the Greenbelt Combined Choir that disbanded a year or two ago.

New this year was the location for the opening event — the front lawn of the Community Center. A new evergreen tree was planted there to be the city's holiday tree. We agree that the new location is a better spot to have an opening ceremony. It is further away from traffic. The smaller tree size requiring fewer lights apparently enabled the city to trim other shrubbery in front of the Center with lights, making for a nice building display.

However, the new tree was a disappointment for many. I heard more than one person comment when seeing the tree for the first time, "That's the city's Christmas tree?"

Someday it will be a beautiful large tree. Right now it isn't. We think that the city should have continued to light the old tree beside the Municipal Build-

Greenbelt's New Year's Eve began with fireworks at Braden Field which some watched from the bleachers behind the baseball field home plate fence.

A New Year's Eve Visit Before the Ball Dropped

by Dorothy Sucher

Most people have their rituals for celebrating the New Year and over the years they change. For us there used to be wild parties with champagne flowing and dancing til dawn, but that was when we were younger and more agile. Later came the fondly remembered, cozy family celebrations at home with sleepy-eyed children curled up beside us watching the Times Square ball descend at midnight, if they could stay awake long enough. Then the years of meeting special friends for a New Year's bridge party at a distant hotel — only this year one of our friends is having a knee replacement. As for me, I'm gearing up for a hip replacement, my second.

Definitely, a quiet New Year's was called for — in fact, a Greenbelt New Year's Eve. Even though we now live in Westchester Park, which technically is College Park, why not see what dear old Greenbelt had to offer?

Quite a bit, as it turned out.

Champagne Dinner

Siri's Chef's Secret on Greenbelt Road was our first destination. Siri's is our nominee for the best restaurant in Prince George's County, with an excellent menu of both Continental and Thai specialties and a full bar. The restful ambiance, with candlelight, white tableclothes and Siri's interesting collection of Thai art objects, instantly transports you far from the noisy

Mayor Judith Davis (center) welcomes the honored guests along with other councilmembers at the reception to honor past state and county legislators who have represented Greenbelt for many years. (l to r) County Councilmember Audrey Scott, who has just been appointed Maryland Secretary of Planning, Senator Leo Green, Councilmembers Thomas White, Edward Putens, Rodney Roberts and Alan Turnbull and Delegate James Hubbard. Because of the January 5 snowstorm, honorees Mary Conroy and Joan Pitkin were not able to attend.

Warm Remarks on a Snowy Day Express Gratitude to Delegates

by Mary Moien

An unexpectedly heavy snowfall could not keep Greenbelters from coming out last Sunday to a reception in honor of the city's former state delegation and county council member. State Senator Leo Green and State Delegates James Hubbard, Mary Conroy and Joan Pitkin were honored for the years that they represented the city prior to redistricting last year. Also honored was County Councilmember Audrey Scott, who was unable to run for reelection due to term limitation.

Green, Hubbard and Scott joined the city council and residents to share stories, laughter and thanks for the many years of representation. (Pitkin told the News Review that she was on crutches following surgery and turned back from her drive to the reception due to slippery roads.) Everyone mingled and munched on desserts from Chef Lou's.

Feelings were festive, yet sad, as Mayor Judith Davis introduced the honorees. She commented that they had been "through thick and thin" together and that redistricting "did a dirty deed." Councilmember Ed Putens added, "Just when we got them where we want them," they leave.

A comment was made that they always listened to the city and were receptive to the city's ideas. Green responded that he'd continue to listen, causing

Davis to state that "maybe we'll have two delegations" in Annapolis. Davis praised Scott as being extremely good on constituent issues and hoped that the city will have someone as good in the new council representative.

Gifts

As a lasting gift, the city has planted two star magnolia trees near the city offices dedicated to the five leaders. The plaque records their names with the message: for years of outstanding service to the Greenbelt Community. In addition, each representative was presented with a green gift bag ("of course it's green,"

Audrey Scott Appointed To Cabinet by Ehrlich

by Virginia Beauchamp

Audrey Scott, Greenbelt's former Prince George's County Council representative, let us in on the secret on Sunday that a piece of news the next day would reveal what her new job was to be. It would come, she said, in the form of an announcement by Governor-elect Robert Ehrlich.

Scott's own revelation came at the end of a statement of appreciation for her two-term relationship with the citizens of Greenbelt. The occasion was the Greenbelt City Council reception for both Scott and the city's former 23rd District state delegates and Senator Leo Green.

Sure enough, on Monday we learned that Scott would become a member of the Ehrlich cabinet as state secretary of planning.

As reported in Tuesday's Washington Post, she was seen as "the most qualified" for the position. She was a "highly seasoned" professional, according to Ehrlich spokeswoman Shareese N. DeLeaver.

Scott told the News Review: "I'm very excited and looking forward to this new phase of public service. The planning department's mission is like the state's census and provides all overall statistics and strategic planning and programming for agencies." The Smart Growth program is part of the department of planning.

Scott, a former teacher, served as mayor of Bowie from 1976 to 1982 before her election as the

THANKS!

I wish to thank all the good Samaritans who helped search for my seven-year-old nephew when he disappeared one recent evening. I don't know your names but you were a group playing hide-and-seek, you were a woman who called the police to report a lost-looking boy and you were the policeman who brought him home safe in a police car. We are very glad to have him back.

THANKS!

I would like to thank Donna and Jackie as well as everyone that helped put on a 30th Anniversary Celebration that I will never forget. The celebration would not have been complete without all my clients that I have Friends gathered all day at Maria's Beauty Salon on December 28 to congratulate the owner on 30 years in Greenbelt. known these many years.

My day started on Saturday, December 28, welcoming my clients and Greenbelt to an Open House at my place of business. As the day went on, I started to realize that the day was put together by Donna Price, my co-worker who has been there for many years not just as a co-worker, but my friend. Donna had put together a party full of decorations, food, drinks, entertainment; and even Elvis stopped by to serenade me. I am a very modest person, not looking for anyone to go out of her way to show me a great deal of friendship. I deeply appreciate Donna, and have always noticed her to be a vivacious and giving spirit. On Saturday during my party I saw a side of her that made me admire her even more. The party was a hit and all who arrived seemed to have left happy. Donna, you will never know how much I love working with you and most of all your friendship.

I would also like to send my deepest gratitude to Dorothy Sucher who wrote such a heart-felt article about me and my life. I could not have had it written for me any better.

To everyone who has sent me gifts, cards and flowers, I send my many thanks.

Much love,

Maria Wyman

laughed the mayor). Inside each was a miniature replica of the Greenbelt Community Center, the third in a series of wooden miniatures of Greenbelt.

Reminiscences

The state senator spoke first remembering what "a wonderful journey" the years together had been. He added that those present would not want to see a grown man cry. He commented that in his first public position as mayor of Bowie, he shared many of the same ideas and concerns with Greenbelt. He then recognized former Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, who was present. Green ended by stating that he will "always be a Greenbelter, always be a supporter."

Scott commented that her relationship with Greenbelt also began when she was mayor of Bowie during the 1970s. She said that while president of the Maryland Municipal League, she often looked to Greenbelt and Bowie because of their council expertise. Since she had to drive slowly down Greenbelt Road due to the snow, Scott commented that she had a chance to revisit a number of issues at locations she passed on the way. These included funding for the Owens Science Center, the possible closing of Goddard and the challenge of the realignment of Soil Conservation Road.

Scott commented that her district was the busiest in the county and the reason was that the people here are "so active and so involved." Scott stated that she had attended so many meetings that on her tombstone they might write, "She's gone to a meeting." However, she indicated that there would be an announcement of a new position for her shortly. (See separate story.)

Hubbard spoke last reminding those present that he had once lived in Westchester Park and considered himself a Greenbelter. "Greenbelt is my home away from home." He spoke briefly of his focus on education during the 10 years that he represented the city.

Delegate James Hubbard admires the miniature replica of the Greenbelt Community Center presented by the Greenbelt City Council as a token of the city's appreciation for his efforts on behalf of the city while representing it in the Maryland General Assembly as Councilmember Alan Turnbull looks on.

He concurred with Green that he will also be looking out for Greenbelt even though he will no longer be the city's official delegate.

Talking with this reporter during the reception, Green reminisced on his many years of association with Greenbelt. Before going into public office, he had worked as general counsel for the U. S. Postal Service with Greenbelt's then-postmaster Emory Harman. Green said that in losing Greenbelt, he felt as if he were "jilted by my sweetheart." He added that in reading the top stories in last week's paper, he was reminded of how many issues that are top stories now that have been projects that he has been working on with the city for years.

Many residents crowded the honorees to speak with them and wish them well. Greenbelt resident Lori Moran summed up the feelings, "I'll miss these guys. I'm sorry they changed our district." Mat Amberg, another long-time Greenbelter, trudged through the snow to thank all of the representatives for proclamations that they had prepared for his wife Rose on the celebration of her 80th birthday.

Miniatures Available by Mary Moien

A miniature wooden Community Center building was the gift that former Greenbelt representatives received at a recent reception. The Greenbelt Museum has contracted with The Cat's Meow company to produce custom-made Greenbelt miniatures. According to Julia Eichhorst, who is in charge of the museum's gift shop, the Community Center is the third of the Greenbelt series. The first was, of course, the Greenbelt Museum house itself, followed by the Mother and Child statue in Roosevelt Center. The Greenbelt miniatures can be seen and purchased at the Greenbelt Museum gift shop which is open on Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m.

Obituaries

William H. Klein

William H. Klein, Ph.D., former director of the National Weather Service System Development Office (SDO) and renowned in the field of meteorology for his work in developing weather forecasting techniques and improving long-range forecasting, died on Thursday, December 26, 2002 of complications related to Alzheimer's Disease. Dr. Klein was 83.

A graduate of City College in New York, Dr. Klein received his masters from Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) in meteorology, graduating number two in his class in 1944. Beginning as a weather officer in the Army Air Corps, he had a distinguished 37-year career at the U.S. Weather Bureau and National Weather Service. In 1959, he was named chief of the Extended Division's Development and Testing Section. In 1964, after receiving his doctorate from New York University, Dr. Klein became the first director of the Techniques Development Laboratory (TDL) of the U.S. Weather Bureau.

His colleagues and family remember "Bill" as an extremely humble man, though his many contributions to the science of meteorology were recognized numerous times through the years.

Dr. Klein published more than 100 papers during his career.

The family moved to Greenbelt in 1946 where they raised their two boys who attended North End Elementary School.

They lived first on Plateau Place where Dr. Klein set up a weather station at the edge of the woods. He helped in the boys' sports programs. Later, the family moved to the 2 court of Northway. When Mrs. Klein's parents moved to the 54 court of Ridge, Dr. Klein received permission to move his weather station to the common area behind 54 Ridge.

Dr. Klein and his wife were active members of the Greenbelt Sitters Club. She was the first director of the Co-op Nursery School and he helped construct the Jewish Community Center building that is now Mishkan Torah.

As devoted a scientist as Dr. Klein was, he was also a devoted husband, father, grandfather and uncle. He loved theater, chamber music and travel and was a formidable doubles tennis player. Dr. Klein cared deeply about the communities of Greenbelt, where he lived for 12 years until 1958 and Bethesda, where he lived until his death. He was married to the former Jenni Witkowski, who resides in Bethesda. Dr. Klein died on the day of the couple's 60th wedding anniversary.

He is also survived by two sons, daughters-in-law and six grandchildren: Richard Klein, M.D., Debra and Rachel, Samantha and Noah of Pittsburgh, Pa.; and David Klein, Ph.D., Angela and Daniel, Margaret and Michael of Ann Arbor, Mich. Survivors also include Dr. Klein's sister-in-law, Sonia Garin formerly of Greenbelt and now of Bethesda, his niece and her husband, Eva Garin and Jim Cowan and great nephew Ethan of Lakeside Drive, Greenbelt.

The family gratefully requests that any remembrances be made in the form of donations to the Alzheimer's Association.

Peter Bryan Hoffman

Former Greenbelter Peter Bryan Hoffman, 55, died of cancer on December 28, 2002, in Las Vegas, Nev.

Born in Muncy, Pa., he attended Greenbelt Center School and was a crossing guard at the school. He also played baseball in Greenbelt. He graduated from high school in Hughesville, Pa. Mr. Hoffman owned a pumping company in Las Vegas.

His father John Hoffman and his sister Susan preceded him in death.

He is survived by his wife, Julie of Las Vegas; sons William and Eric of Tyras, New Mexico and mother Joyce of Greenbelt.

Hilda Orleans Yontz

Hilda Orleans Yontz, 92, of 2 Court Eastway died of complications of congestive heart failure on Saturday, January 4, 2003.

Honoring Dr. King

On Sunday morning, January 19, noted area singer and actor, Karl Gipson, teams up with pianist David Chapman to present a "recital-drama about the life, achievements and memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. This powerful portrayal will be featured as the 10 a.m. service at Paint Branch Unitarian Universalist Church.

A Washington, D.C. resident for the past 25 years, Gipson studied at the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts, Hunter College in New York City, and the University of Vienna.

only Republican member of the Prince George's County Council, where she served two terms. Unable to run again because of term limits, she put her hat into the ring last fall as Republican candidate for county executive, which she lost to the newly elected incumbent, Jack Johnson.

As Greenbelters already know, Scott is well-grounded in issues concerning development through her participation as councilmember in the planning controversies involving the projected Greenbelt Station development on the Metro site and the A. H. Smith property immediately beyond the city's western boundary. Concerning this development Scott and her council colleagues have not always seen eye-to-eye with city representatives.

NEW YEAR

chaos of Greenbelt Road. As always, we were met at the door by the delightful hosts, Siri and her husband Suttee, who treat their guests like family. They seated us at one of the few available tables, where we waited for Jean-Paul, the friend who would be sharing New Year's Eve with us.

All of us were in the mood for fish, so we ordered the grouper and salmon stuffed with crabmeat. It was excellent and the complimentary champagne, provided in honor of the Eve, added a festive note. Between courses I studied the art brought by Siri from her native Thailand. Three carved elephants in a frame hang on the wall to bring good luck, for in Thailand they are considered auspicious beasts because they live a long time and are peaceful. I was intrigued by the miniature bamboo water-wheel, based on a traditional peasant design for lifting water from the river to irrigate the rice fields. And Siri pointed out the triangular wooden carvings in the front of the restaurant, in the corners of the doorway. When you pass through them you will have good luck, she said – which we felt we'd already experienced by coming to Chef's Secret for dinner.

Community Center

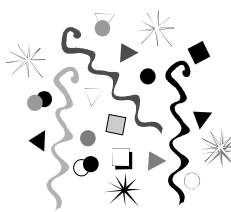

After dinner we headed to the Greenbelt Community Center, where a family-style celebration was in full swing. The place was full of adorable kiddies and their families, many sporting wild hair styles, crowns and masks, all of which had been created on the premises. We watched the children dancing in the gymnasium and peeped in on the Magic Mike show and the Goddard Storytellers – quietly, so as not to disturb the rapt audiences.

My husband led Jean-Paul down the hall, regaling him with descriptions of the historic photographs that line the walls. Meanwhile, I stopped by the Community Center art gallery to see the show by Helga Thomson called "Garden of Earthly Delights." To my delight I found the show to be outstanding with its darkly whimsical images of half-human creatures. Thomas uses a mixture of media to produce her pictures, which are layered with a haunting, sometimes surreal symbolism that repays careful study. I also loved her tinted cut-paper pieces, airy creations that hang from the ceiling.

We left the Community Center well before midnight and would have headed over to the New Deal Cafe if that not-yet-replaced hip hadn't been telling me it was time to go home. So we did, turned on the TV and watched – what else? – that ball dropping at Times Square yet again, marking the start of 2003.

Next day we went to a New Year's Day party, in Greenbelt of course, where we ate black-eyed peas and collard greens – a Southern, or maybe African, prescription for insuring good luck in the coming year. With all this good luck, my hip replacement should be a breeze.

Happy New Year!

70th Birthday of Alice Brings Donahue Reunion

by Evelyn Hillier

Family of 6: (from l to r) Evelyn Donahue Hillier; Gerard J. Donahue; Linda Donahue Kessler; Anne Donahue Landis; William G. Donahue. Alice Donahue - seated.

Thanksgiving weekend is a popular time for families to get together and celebrate our national holiday and have family reunions. This was just the perfect weekend for the Donahue family to get together and celebrate their mother's 70th birthday. Alice Donahue, a resident of Greenbelt since 1957, turned 70 on December 1. All of her family and friends came together at the Greenbelt American Legion on November 30 for a party in her honor. Mrs. Donahue has lived in her GHI home at 14-F Ridge Road, in GHI, since April 1957.

Her husband, William E. Donahue, who died in 1996, worked for the National Park Service, in Washington, D.C. for 30 years. Mrs. Donahue worked at home raising their five children.

After Mr. Donahue's death, Mrs. Donahue went back to college for about two years to study music and decided to branch out on her own. Now, in addition to composing music, producing CDs and managing a band, "Person to Person," she also plays keyboard in the band. They have produced three CDs and a fourth one is in production. She also assisted in the composing of the music for another CD being produced by Diane Copeland. "Person to Person" has performed at the Greenbelt Arts Center, the U.S. Capitol, National Park Service events, the Department of Transportation and private parties and events.

Mrs. Donahue is a member of St. Hugh's Church in Greenbelt. In her spare time she travels to visit family and friends. She plans on having many more years of life, love and fun with her family and friends, feeling that 70 years is not enough time to do all that she wants to accomplish. She says Greenbelt will always be "home sweet home."

The Family

The children, Evelyn Donahue Hillier and William G. Donahue (both of Greenbelt); Anne Donahue Landis of Milwaukee, Wis. and her family; Linda Donahue Kessler of Orlando, Fla. and her family; and Gerard J. Donahue of Methuen, Mass. and his family, came home for the great event. Mrs. Donahue's oldest grandchild, Donna Hillier Vermillion of Linthicum and her family also attended. Mrs. Donahue has seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Also in attendance was her sister-in-law, Blanche Balzer of Arlington and her family and local friends.

by Dorothy Sucher

The Riverdale folk group, The Jones Family, will perform at the New Deal Café in Roosevelt Center on Saturday, January 11 at 8 p.m. The Joneses – father Chuck, mother Brenda, and 18-year-old daughter Chenoa – will perform songs from “Unquiet,” their debut CD on Shambling Gate Records, as well as new material. Joining them on percussion will be ten-year-old Trevor, who is said to have a “very good sense of the beat,” according to Lawrence Paulson, the group’s producer.

“Unquiet” was recently hailed by “Sing Out!” magazine as “a debut CD of unusual beauty and confidence” and “a rare treat.” “Unquiet” was named “CD of the Month” by a public radio station in the Midwest and has been receiving air play throughout the country.

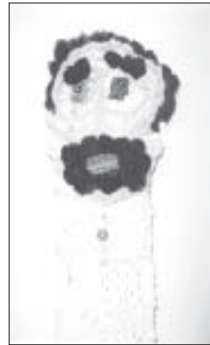

The group, which sings both traditional and contemporary folk music, is indeed a family, and like many families they began singing together in the family car. Both parents were musical: mother Brenda was a French horn major and father Chuck sang professionally while in college. Their daughter Chenoa, now 18, has a “tremendous talent,” said Paulson and is very much interested in visual art as well as music.

Chuck Jones is a professor at Catholic University where he teaches Asian Religion, mainly Chinese Buddhism. The family began singing at church affairs and talent shows at St. Andrews Episcopal Church in College Park. It was there that Paulson heard them for the first time. “I thought they were as good as most folk musicians I’ve heard, and I’ve listened to a lot of them. So I decided to invest some money in them.” He found studio space and a good co-producer and music engineer and when the CD was a reality, he began sending it to radio stations where it earned good reviews from disc jockeys.

Greenbelters will have an opportunity to hear this local group and their “strong, unpretentious singing,” to quote “Dirty Linen” magazine, at the New Deal Café on Saturday night.

Morisette at Hoopla

Greenbelt Community Center Artist in Residence Elizabeth Lundberg Morisette will have a solo show of her “People Totems” at Hoopla

Traders in Washington from January 11 to February 7. “People Totems” are woven figures representing individuals from all walks of life. This show includes portraits of over 40 individuals woven from recycled materials. Many of these portraits are of people Morisette knows best: Greenbelters.

The exhibit opening and a reception will be Saturday, January 11 from 5 to 7 p.m. at Hoopla Traders, 524 8th Street, SE, Washington D.C. For information call 202-544-3620.

Blood Donors Are Desperately Needed

The Greater Chesapeake and Potomac Region of the American Red Cross reports it has been unable to collect sufficient blood to meet local needs. It has been forced to limit distribution to local hospitals, causing some surgeries to be postponed.

Old and new donors are urged to call 1-800-448-3543 to make an appointment to donate blood and find donor sites. All blood types are urgently needed. Donors must be in generally good health; be at least 17 years of age, or, in the state of Maryland only, 16 years of age with parental consent; weigh no less than 110 pounds; have not received a tattoo within the past year; have not donated whole blood within the past 56 days.

The next blood drive scheduled specifically for Greenbelt is set for February 25, from 2 to 8 p.m. at the Municipal Building, Coordinator Janet Goldberg told the News Review.

The Rotary Club is sponsoring a blood drive January 31 at Doctor's Hospital (see ad on p. 2)

Bereavement Support

Hospice of the Chesapeake, which provides hospice and services to people in Prince George’s and Anne Arundel Counties, offers a widow/widowers bereavement group. This will be a six-week support group for those grieving the loss of a spouse. The group will meet on Tuesdays starting January 14 through February 18 at 8724 Spectrum Drive in Landover. ing as well. Besides being much showier, its location is more visual. You see it coming into town on Southway or approaching Southway on Crescent when you come from the northern part of Greenbelt. It also is easily seen from the doorways of the stores on Centerway and from the west parking lot of Roosevelt Center. The new tree is visible only from the front of the Community Center, a less traveled area.

Also, we wonder what happened to the reindeer and sleigh

At the Greenbelt Community Center dance room the Highland Fling and other Scottish and ethnic dances were being performed by first-timers and experienced dancers alike.

that used to be on the Municipal Building.

Pancake Breakfast

We were happy to make the Community Pancake Breakfast on December 7. We saw many familiar faces there, but maybe not as many as past years. The pancakes and sausages were great as usual, and plentiful. It has become part of our tradition to negotiate the purchase of some of the leftover sausages to take home and freeze. They are great for special breakfasts. A quick zap in the micro is all they need as they are already cooked and nicely browned. The Lion's Club and American Legion are to be commended for offering this community service as well as for doing all their many other community services.

From the pancake breakfast we headed straight to the Community Center for the Art and Craft Fair. Once again there was an interesting display of items for sale, many of them the same as what was offered in previous years. After receiving some good advice from my fair lady, I decided to buy earrings there as gifts for her. She bought a lighthouse pillow throw as a gift. I bought her a ticket for Greenbelt New Year. She, catching wind of what I had done, bought me a New Year tee shirt. We bought an ornament for the tree from the Greenbelt museum.

We did not make our own wreath as we had already bought one from the scouts. Nor did we partake of the childrens activities that day. We also missed seeing Santa Claus or the exhibitions at the Community Center art gallery.

Band Concert

We did make the Holiday Lights Concert by the Greenbelt Concert Band. There was a good crowd in attendance, but we think that they were mostly friends and family of the band members. We saw few familiar Greenbelt faces there. The concert consisted mostly of traditional holiday pieces previously performed by the band with a few new ones. The band performed to its usual high standards. We particularly enjoyed the saxophone quartet of Caroline Cherrix, Carol Winckler, Sy Zucker and Andy Pogan of Felix Bernard's Winter Wonderland in a special arrangement by band Conductor Tom Cherrix. While maybe not the best singing in the world, it is always a pleasure to hear the children of band members sing with the band. This year they sang Edelweiss and Frosty the Snowman.

While bands can play many types of music, the big sound of the brass, wind instruments and drums does not work as well with some as with others. Much of the holiday music, I feel, sounds better played, for example, by an orchestra. Bands do their best with marches and other stirring airs. Thus, the Greenbelt band pleases me more on the occasion of the Fourth of July than it does during the winter holidays. Perhaps there are some more rousing holiday pieces it could consider for future concerts. Yet what would the holidays be without the traditional holiday music, and what would Greenbelt be without its traditional holiday band concert?

New Year

Last, but not least, is the Greenbelt New Year. Although we felt that we had fewer venues to choose from this year, we still had a good time ringing out the old and bringing in the new. The fireworks once again were excellent. My wife wonders why they are so much better than the Independence Day ones and so much cheaper. I try to remind her that the summer display lasts much longer and includes huge booming skyrockets that shoot high in the air and burst in magnificent displays. She likes the continuous display of silvers and golds that take place in the frosty chill of each New Year's Eve.

As with much of the Festival of Lights, much of Greenbelt New Year has become traditional. In the Community Center the evening begins with the Trinidad and Tobago steel band. My experience with steel bands has been on cruise ships headed for Caribbean Islands. Hearing that sound in Greenbelt, takes me away from the cold of our winters to a warm tropical clime. I don't know what the little ones think of when they hear the band, but they have a great time out on the dance floor jerking and jumping about, running and rolling on the floor.

Last year we saw the magic show at the movie theater and heard the Chromatics at the New Deal Café. This year, the movie theater showed a regular feature and was only opened late at night for animated shorts that we were not interested in. The Café no longer is a part of the New Year and its offering also did not appeal to us. Nor were we interested in Bingo at the Youth Center or the Teen Scene held there, so we missed that venue where last year we heard the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Brass Ensemble.

Instead, we stayed at the Community Center. We skipped the children's programs and magic shows there, although we noted the very active participation in them by Greenbelt kids. There were some spectacular balloon sculptures and more than one balloon sword fight taking place in the gym

Wacky Hair

My wife did try the Wacky Hair Salon. She actually came out looking pretty good. Of course you have to be open to women with red, white and blue hairdos to be able to say that, but hers was in subtle shades and glittered nicely. Well the glitter was nice until we got home and she took off her coat and dumped a pile on the floor. I sent her outside to brush her hair well before I would let her come to bed. Now our yard glitters and sparkles.

Maddy Henderson and Katie Zukauskas give Micki Weidenfeld a glittery, colorful hairdo in the Salon as Carrie Heimpel and Clay Harman look on.

Next we went to make masks and crowns. We decided masks were not our thing as we wanted to see what was going on. Instead, Bernie made me a crown. I thought it was fitting. We received no help in our endeavors, but found a template for an imperial crown. We had to think hard to remember what you did in kindergarten, but we managed to cut out the crown and apply glitter to it. Surprisingly, it turned out well. I might wear it again for the appropriate ceremonial occasion. Although proud of what Bernie and I accomplished, there were other crowns that evening that were far superior to mine.

We next went to hear John Hill. John Hill has been to previous Greenbelt New Years and has become another tradition. We liked him before and like him now. He has a broad repertoire of songs and an amazing electronic backup that gives him the effect of being accompanied by a full orchestra. If John Hill were not enough to make the cabaret our favorite venue, there were the desserts in back to assure that it would be. The only problem was to choose from the many and not become a glutton.

At 11:30 we returned to the gym to hear the countdown with D.C. Motors. That band, too, is becoming a tradition. There is no question that it was a crowd pleaser, and more were out dancing than sitting and watching. For our tender ears, they are a bit too lively and loud, but it is obvious that we were in the minority that evening.

When twelve o'clock came, everybody hollered and the balloons tumbled down from the ceiling. Couples kissed. The band played on but the crowd quickly dispersed as parents took their tired children (or was it the other way around?) home. We wished that the band had played just one slow piece after midnight for the lovers and us old folks. I've noticed that many young people avoid the dance floor as well unless the band plays a slow piece.

Although this year's Festival of Lights once again offered many different events to please the citizens of Greenbelt and although it is important that we need traditions for our holidays, I felt that this year's attendance overall was down from previous years. Perhaps in planning for future festivals, some thought should be given to adding some new sparkle to the events. It is hard to say what must stay as tradition and what should go. Somehow, those who do plan must decide what is important tradition and what has just become same old, same old.

Greenbelt's Festival of Lights has become an important part of life in Greenbelt. The involvement of the many volunteers who put the event together and the many others who participate have helped to bring Greenbelters together and to enjoy a sense of community and good will. We hope that that is one tradition that will continue forever.
