New Council Meets in Love Fest, Selects Mayor, Thanks Supporters

by Sandy Smith

New councilmembers were welcomed, returning councilmembers greeted and departing members thanked for their service at the charter meeting of the newly-elected Greenbelt City Council on November 10. There were warm wishes, poignant farewells, hearty welcomes, sentimental remembrances, frequent applause and a few standing ovations as long-time Councilmember Tom White and six-year veteran Alan Turnbull said their farewells and newly elected members Konrad Herling and Leta Mach took their places at the council table. As top vote getter, Mayor Judith Davis was re-elected to that position and next-in-line Rodney Roberts selected as mayor pro tem. Councilmember Ed Putens served as temporary chair while this transition took place.

Farewells

Before the new council was sworn in, departing members White and Turnbull spoke. White thanked voters for their support in his 15 elections and during his 30 years of service. First elected to the council in 1973, he highlighted many achievements over that time, from the construction of the parkway overpass, Green Ridge House and the Aquatic Center to the more recent Schrom Hills Park and the acquisition of the Old Greenbelt Theatre. He credited the citizens of Greenbelt who organize and make the initial push to make the good things happen. He said council can often stand back and let Greenbelt residents and groups take charge. He thanked a very able city staff for its hard work and his wife Helen for her patience and support.

Alan Turnbull also had thanks for the family, his parents and his wife Wendy, whom he said made it possible for him to serve on the council. He was grateful to Julia Eichhorst and Barbara Havekost, who had initially encouraged him to seek a seat on the council. He was gratified to have been able to work with people for the common good. Turnbull had good words for the democratic process and the participation of citizens in their city's government. When some people asked him, "How did you stand it this long?" he said he replied that he cared about the city as so many in Greenbelt do. Davis invited those present and those watching at home to the reception for White and Turnbull immediately after the meeting.

Certification and Oaths

Kathleen Gallagher, city clerk, certified the election results. She said that 2,073 ballots were cast and five candidates were elected to council. In order of the votes received, they are: Judith F. Davis, Rodney M. Roberts, Edward V. J. Putens, Konrad E. Herling and Leta M. Mach. Davis administered the oath of office to councilmembers. Rosalyn E. Pugh, clerk of the Seventh Judicial Circuit Court, administered the oath of office to Davis upon her re-election.

Forest Preserve: Some History And How Parcels Were Acquired

by James Giese

On October 27 the Greenbelt City Council created a forest preserve out of 214 acres of city parkland. The forest preserve is located east of the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) properties and west of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. The city's boundary with the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC) forms the northern border of this somewhat triangular shaped property. Property not included in the forest preserve that is in this area consists of a five-acre tract once used as a city landfill and now used for ball fields (Wolfe Field), a 10-acre tract withheld for city recycling use and for an observatory and the right-of-way for Northway which runs from Ridge Road to the ball fields.

The Greenbelt forest preserve is second-growth woodland of uncertain age. As with the rest of the land within the Greenbelt city limits, the original woodlands, inhabited only by nomadic Native Americans, was cleared for the most part to permit farming. Early European settlers in this area were the Hamilton family. The family dates back to the era of the Revolutionary War. Their family burial ground lies near the end of Hamilton Place within the forest preserve. At the time these lands were purchased in the 1930s by the federal government for the planned community of Greenbelt, the Oldham farm was located in that area and Hamilton Place was known as the Oldham Farm Road.

Tobacco farming was the principle agricultural industry. This crop took a lot of nutrients out of the soil. The marginal farmlands here were pretty much abandoned and the land allowed to lie fallow and return to woodland. Only a small part of the existing woodland was being used for farming in the 1930s. A United States Coast and Geodetic map showed that there was once a lead mine on what is now the forest preserve property.

When the federal government bought five square miles of farm-

City Voters Are Queried On Our Election Coverage

by Carla Ferris

Two-thirds of people questioned by this reporter after casting their ballots in the November 4 Greenbelt City Council elections reported that coverage of the candidates by the Greenbelt News Review assisted them in their decision on who to vote for.

Thirty people were interviewed in exit polls at Precincts 3, 6 and 13. Of those who answered questions, only four said that deciding who to vote for was difficult.

Running for election were Judith Davis, Rodney Roberts, Edward Putens, Konrad Herling, Leta Mach, Richard Santos and James Inzeo, Sr. The winners of this year's elections were Davis, Roberts, Putens, Herling and Mach.

The Greenbelt News Review published biographies submitted by candidates in the weeks after the candidates filed for election. The paper also gave questions to the candidates and published their responses as well as covering candidate question nights.

"I like the Greenbelt News Review, I read it cover to cover every week," said voter Mark Gitlis, after casting his votes.

One election judge, who declined to be named, said that the coverage was "excellent."

Of the one-third of voters who said that the News Review did not help them to make their decisions in the election, half indicated that they felt the coverage was inadequate.

Four people said that while the coverage was good, they are active in local politics and already knew the positions of the candidates. Only one person said that he did not read the paper.

"The coverage of the candidates was excellent, it was very well done. I was impressed," said voter Pauline Grant.

One voter who said that the News Review did not help in the decision making process went on to say that the coverage was good, but did not go beyond what she already knew as a po-

The Write-ins

Fifty write-in names were recorded on official ballots in last week's election, including those of retiring Councilmembers Tom White (2) votes and Alan Turnbull (4). Most of the 50 were Green-belters. "Hillray" Clin-ton, John Wayne and Mickey Mouse, all on absentee ballots, were also listed. Names of two employees, Chris Cherry and Kenneth Hall (2), also appeared in the write-in list.

Others receiving more than one vote are Paul Downs, 6 (probably), Bob Auerbach, 2, Steve Moore, 2, Silke Pope, 2, Lola Skolnik, 2 and Bill Wilkerson, 2.

Almost all write-ins came from Precinct 3, though 13 were recorded in Precinct 7 and 10 in Precinct 13.

litionally active citizen.

"The paper did a wonderful job with it, but it is for voters who do not already know who the candidates are," said the voter, who declined to be named.

Voter Dan Byrd said that despite coverage, the decision was difficult.

"They were all good candidates. The paper helped some, but the decision was still hard," said Byrd.

Only one person, who declined to be named, expressed distaste for the paper.

"The News Review didn't help my decision at all. Whatever they are for, I am against," said the voter.

For the most part, voters were enthusiastic about the paper.

"Coverage was very good, it was excellent. I love my News Review," exclaimed one anonymous voter.

Letters to the Editor

THANKS

First I wish to express my sincere thanks to all who voted for me in the council election on November 4. My deep gratitude also goes to those who contributed to my campaign and/or worked on my behalf.

In addition, thanks to all six other candidates whose qualifications gave such a wide choice to Greenbelt's voters.

Finally, I join with all who are wishing well to both Tom White and Alan Turnbull in all their future endeavors. I pledge to work hard with the new council to serve the changing needs of our city and I remain "Committed to Community."

J Davis

THANKS

I want to thank my fellow Greenbelters for the opportunity to serve Greenbelt at a time of great challenge. I also wish to express my thanks to those who helped give shape to my campaign: Marc & Shane Siegel, Robert Shafer, Rachel McMullin, Leonie Penney, Tom Renahan, Richard McMullin, Tom White, Suzanne Plogman, Jack and Betty Maffay, Rennie Mihalovic, Carolyn Karch, Marian Holland, Bob Zugby, Rick and Barbara Ransom, Chris White, the Hammett family, the Habermans, the Keplers, John Henry and Elaine Jones, as well as Kelly Ivy and Paul Downs. Yes, I said both Kelly Ivy and Paul Downs. While never in the same room at the same time, I listened to both of them and benefited from their respective viewpoints.

I feel very fortunate to have been elected by my fellow citizens and am committed to making a positive contribution to the well being of our city. As an integral part in decision making, I will be seeking the input from each of you on a continual basis. My decisions will be guided by these principles:

I will listen with respect to the wide array of opinions we have in Greenbelt. Not only is it the fair thing to do, it's part of the homework we must perform in order to come to a reasoned decision.

My conclusions will be based on reason, and will take into consideration our budget, the impact on the environment and the impact on our quality of life.

I will use common sense and try to nourish with the community at large, a common sense of decency.

And when I disagree with others, I hope to disagree without being disagreeable.

It is my contention that these principles will serve all of us when we discuss the variety of issues before us. If we truly listen to each other, we will increase the chances that we'll see that there is more that unites us than what separates us and allow us to develop the consensus necessary to effectively address our challenges. Let us be committed to work together for a greater Greenbelt.

Konrad Herling

THANKS

A couple months ago, I accepted the challenge of running for the Greenbelt City Council unaware of what to expect. The experience was truly rewarding and educational and would have been regardless of the outcome.

I'd like to again thank all those who advised me and supported me. I'd also like to recognize the work of the News Review in keeping citizens informed during the campaign. The News Review is truly the glue that holds the city together.

As I take on the role of your new Greenbelt City Council member, I will strive to always listen, consider and act in the best interests of the city. The spirit of Greenbelt is great and together we can make it better.

Need Rent Control

It is a fact that apartment complexes are increasing their rent with not much thought of the monetary means of their tenants. I lived in a Greenbelt apartment complex which I really loved for 11 years, but in 2001 I was socked with a $70/month increase and then again in 2002 I was socked with another $70/month increase. The second $70/month increase was becoming a hardship as I had to dip into my savings to make ends meet. The years before those increases, the rent only went up $10/month.

Sad to say, when the rents went up in that community, many of the old timers left and found more affordable housing. So this year I too took the plunge and moved. My monthly expenses are less than what my new rent per month would have been.

I believe the Landlord-Tenant Commission should be reinstated with rent control. Many people are not able to buy or to move and also many people enjoy the amenities of apartment living. In either case, something should be done to limit tremendous rent hikes.

Only One Side Of the Story?

James Giese's article on the city election results in the November 6 News Review did a disservice not only to the citizens of Greenbelt, but to himself and to the other News Review staff members. In the article, he reports that ". . . there were a number of write-in votes for Lola Skolnik and Mark Siegel . . ." and from that concluded that "This apparently reflected dissatisfaction by some to council's enactment of a forest preserve ordinance . . ." What he did not report was that Paul Downs, who spearheaded the citizen effort to enact the forest preserve legislation, was the highest write-in vote getter. Mr. Downs received five write-in votes, to Ms. Skolnik's two votes and Mr. Siegel's one vote. It is striking that Mr. Giese chose to focus only on the three write-in votes apparently opposing council's action.

This should alert News Review readers that they may only be getting the one side of the story that the News Review wants them to hear. I can only hope that this paper will soon improve its journalistic standards and remove such glaring bias from its reporting.

Charles P. Hagelgans

Editor's Note: Actually Paul Downs may have received six votes as a vote was cast for "Paul." Not mentioned were four votes cast for former council member Alan Turnbull. Some others receiving two votes were Bob Auerbach, Steve Moore, Kenneth Hall and Tom White.

The late night story had some verbal information in it that was to be verified by receipt of an expected listing of absentee ballots. The list was not received and the information, as written, should have been deleted. It was not.

The journalistic efforts of this paper are dependent on an adequate staff of dedicated volunteers. Those willing to help are always welcome.

THANKS

I want to thank you for your repeated coverage of the candidates before the recent elections for the City of Greenbelt. I used the information provided by your paper as my sole source to compare the candidates. Because you provided more than one series of articles on the candidates, I had the confidence to vote.

Thank you for your comprehensive coverage.

Corrections

The three photographs that accompanied the story about the Springhill Lake Elementary School Hispanic Heritage festival in the November 6 issue were taken by Rachel Freedenberg (previously misidentified).

The photograph of the ghost and pumpkins on the front page of the October 23 issue, which accompanied the "Trick or Treat" announcement was taken by Karl G. Pena.

The News Review regrets the errors in crediting our photographers.

In last week's review of the GAC play "Brainstorm," the statement at the end of the story that the show would be extended through November 14 and 15 was incorrect. The play, which had closed after the October 31, November 1 weekend, was extended through November 8. The News Review regrets any inconvenience the confusing information presented.

Local Artists' "Birds" Will Be Auctioned

Five artists with connections to Greenbelt will have their sculptures sold this month, as birds-i-view, one of the largest public art exhibits ever mounted in the county, winds up its experience with an online and live auction to benefit the Prince George's Arts Council education grant program.

On November 20, 14 of the over 70 five-foot-tall bird sculptures that have dotted the area over the past few months, including in front of Greenbelt's Community Center, will be auctioned at a gala reception. A total of 50 birds will be sold.

The online auction (on www.birdsiviewauction.com) has already begun, but the group of 14 will be sold the night of the gala only. Nora Simon, Dick Brown and Sandy Dwiggin - Greenbelt artists - will watch their birds being auctioned. Resident Sheril Ann Gross and former Miss Greenbelt Alice Plaster, now living in Bowie, will have their creations sold online through November 25.

This past week, the entire bird collection was brought together for viewing at the Arena Showplace in Upper Marlboro.

Holiday Ad Deadline

To have notice of special Thanksgiving worship services appear in the paper in advance of the holiday, those events need to be printed in the November 20 issue. Any special Thanksgiving service information must be provided to the News Review before 10 p.m. next Tuesday, November 18 to accommodate our print deadlines.

NAMI Workshop On Enabling

The Prince George's Chapter of the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill (NAMI) will present a workshop, "Enabling: When Is It Helpful? When Is It Not?" on Thursday, November 20 from 7 to 9 p.m. at 6016 Princess Garden Parkway, New Carrollton.

The workshop will address the fact that in trying to be helpful, family members of the mentally ill may act in ways which prevent growth in these persons. How this pattern develops and prevails will be discussed.

This workshop is free and open to the public and refreshments will be served. For more information, call 301-577-6026.

Greenbelters were saddened to hear of the death of former Greenbelters Allan Foxwell and Arthur Horsman. Our sympathy to their families.

Many messengers have been sent, but they all had the very same message.

"And We did not send any apostle before you (O Muhammed) but We revealed to him that there is none who has the right to be worshipped but I (God) so worship Me (alone and none else)."
- The Holy Qur'an, 21:25

Muslims believe that Prophet Muhammed (peace be upon him) was the last in a long line of prophets who were sent to guide mankind. Twenty-five of these prophets are specifically named in the Qur'an, including Noah, Abraham, Ishmael, Isaac, Jacob, Moses and Jesus. Though they came at different times to different lands and people, all were sent with signs of their divine inspiration and the same message - There is no one worthy of worship but one God. PRESERVE continued from page 1 land for Greenbelt there was no clear delineation of what was to be the greenbelt. The greenbelt concept of Ebenezer Howard, who first promulgated the concept of greenbelt towns, was that of small farms surrounding a planned community. The farms would provide fresh produce for the community.

The original planned community, built in 1937, was surrounded by woodland and abandoned farms purchased by the government. However, the planners expected that there would be other neighborhoods of the town built at a later date. While there were some concept plans for expansion of the original community, there never was an official plan. When the government built additional housing in 1941 (the GHI frame homes), the homes were built immediately adjacent to the original housing without any buffer.

Not long after Greenbelt and its two sister cities were built, Congress declared that the government should not own the towns and directed that they be sold off. War, however, delayed selling the land until the 1950s. By that time there was no official concern about preserving the town's greenbelt.

When Greenbelt was sold in 1953 most of the original housing was sold to the Greenbelt Veterans Housing Cooperative (the name of which was later changed to Greenbelt Homes, Inc.). At the same time, the government sold to the cooperative 709 acres of vacant land surrounding the town. This land could have been considered to be a greenbelt, but there were no restrictions placed upon its use and most people at that time regarded it as developable land.

Much of the remaining vacant land was sold in large tracts for private development without any restrictions. One large tract, however, was withheld from sale and became Greenbelt Park of the National Park Service. Other land was withheld for the Parkway and the Beltway.

Second Sale

After the residents of the housing cooperative received their first tax bill (as renters from the U.S. there were no taxes to pay) and found that the many services provided by the city cost a lot of money, a great demand arose to cut home-ownership costs. Many of the residents were war veterans going to the University of Maryland under the GI Bill while trying to raise new families at the same time.

In 1955, GHI sold most of this vacant land to Warner-Kanter, a large private developer who later resold the land to others. Those who favored the sale argued that the cooperative should not be in the land development business. Preservation of the land as a greenbelt was not a significant issue then. Included in this sale were two large parcels, 1 and 2, which later were bought back by the city and now have become (except for 10 acres), the city's forest preserve along with another 13 acre parcel.

Repurchase

Buying back the forest preserve land was a long process that began in 1972 and was not completed until 1990. The acquisition of this land was a piecemeal effort. The city councils that first bought some of the land never expected that the city would be able to afford buying all of it. Fortunately, past city councils were able to seek and get financial help from other jurisdictions.

The first acquisition in this area was a 13-acre parcel of surplus BARC land in the northeast corner. It was given to the city under a Nixon Administration Legacy of Parks program with a condition that it be developed as an actively used park. Due to this land's separation from the city by a stream and floodplain, the city was never able to honor this commitment. Next, 28 acres were purchased by the city using state and federal Program Open Space grant funds. This enabled the city to connect the 13-acre parcel to city streets and provide the access needed for it to be used by the public. Located along the northern boundary of the city and next to the Parkway, the plan at that time was to provide a perimeter trail park, a narrow greenbelt of woodland with a walking trail and picnic shelters extending from Laurel Hill Road to Northway, and later, to McDonald Field near Southway.

The central part of the forest preserve on both sides of Northway was purchased by the county board of education for a three-school complex, including a high school for the city. When, after strong citizen protest, the school board bought land east of the Parkway for Eleanor Roosevelt High School, the school board abandoned the use of this land for schools. The land was later declared surplus and, as a result of city and citizen efforts, ownership was transferred to the county and then to the city in 1989. The county has required that the 72 acres be used for public uses.

The 20-acre southern part of the forest preserve located south of and at the end of Hamilton Place was purchased by the city, half of it to replace parkland used to build the city police station. A Program Open Space grant funded the purchase of the other half in 1988.

This still left a large piece of land privately owned. When development plans for single-family homes were presented to the city for review, citizen protests, led by the Committee to Save the Green Belt, spurred the city council to buy this land even though it did not have the money to do so. A complicated deal was put together with the aid of the city's representatives in Congress and the state legislature. Half the money needed came from Program Open Space funds designated for woodland preservation for which the city was required to give a woodland preservation easement to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The National Park Service provided another $553,050 for which it received a scenic easement adjacent to the Parkway. The city bought this last piece of land in 1990 at a cost to the city of only $396,472 or 18 percent of the total purchase price.

Since the land was acquired by the city it has remained unused. One small area is used for the city's leaf recycling program. Other small areas are being used for resident garden plots, a use that began when the town was built and has continued to this day. It is believed that a portion of the Wolfe ball fields and adjacent parking lot are also located on designated forest preserve land.

At its regular meeting on October 27, 2003, the City Council adopted a resolution to amend the City Charter. As required by state law, this resolution will be posted in its entirety for forty (40) days, until December 6, 2003, at the Municipal Building. It can also be found on the City's Web site at <http://www.ci.greenbelt.md.us>. A copy may also be requested from the City Clerk. The charter amendment resolution will become effective on December 16, 2003, unless a proper petition to submit the amendment to the voters on a referendum is filed as permitted by law. This notice is to provide a fair summary of the resolution, as also required by state law.

Charter Amendment Resolution Number 2003-1

A Resolution of the City of Greenbelt Adopted Pursuant to the Authority of Article XI-E of the Constitution of Maryland and Section 13 of Article 23a of the Annotated Code of Maryland, (1957 Edition as Amended), Title "Corporation-Municipal," Subtitle "Home Rule, to Amend the Charter of the City of Greenbelt Found, in Whole or in Part, in the Compilation of Municipal Charters of Maryland (1983 Edition as Amended), as Prepared by the Department of Legislative Reference Pursuant to Chapter 77 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1983, by Repealing and Reenacting with Amendments Section 8, Titled "Same—Quorum, Procedure"

This resolution will amend the Charter to require a vote of at least four members of the five-member City Council to remove lands from the Greenbelt Forest Preserve, as established in Ordinance Number 1243. The purpose of this amendment is to require a stricter standard for removing lands from the Forest Preserve designation than is required by the Charter for most Council actions.

The Forest Preserve Ordinance is also posted on the Web site and in the Municipal Building. For additional information, call Kathleen Gallagher, City Clerk, at 301-474-8000.

Doug Sappington in Iraq To Train Local Police

Retired Greenbelt Police Sergeant Marr "Doug" Sappington is now in Iraq after a 16-hour trip, according to Public Information Officer George Mathews of the Greenbelt Police Department.

Sappington, 60, will be spending a one-year tour of duty in Iraq, where he will serve as a police advisor. He will join more than 1,000 other advisors coming from the United States, England and Australia to help train new police forces for the country.

"I gather from what I've read that the citizens are really afraid of the police there and I have some ideas about how to gain their trust again," he told the News Review.

Sappington knows computers, having started learning in 1963 during two years in the Air Force Strategic Air Command.

During his years in the Greenbelt force, Sappington sampled many police specialty units, spending 12 years in the Patrol Division and 13 years in the Criminal Investigations Unit as well as working in crime prevention. At various times he served as commander of both Patrol and Criminal Investigations.

Ten years ago he had occasion to work long and closely with the State Department and other government agencies to arrange the return from Iraq of eight-year-old Greenbelter Quassay Luay Nuaimy, who was abducted and taken to Baghdad by his father in 1992. It took three years of careful work, but in 1995 Sappington was at JFK Airport in New York when the little boy was returned to America.

His wife will not be permitted to go to Iraq, but if all goes well, the couple plans to meet in Europe about every four months.

Mayor's Statement

Mayor Judith Davis began by thanking all the candidates who ran for council. She said they offered voters an excellent field of candidates and sparked a good discussion of the important issues. She also had good words for those who ran the election – Greenbelt judges, workers and, of course, voters and the Prince George's Board of Supervisors of Elections.

She welcomed Delegate Tawana Gaines and former councilmembers Bob Zugby and Elizabeth Maffay (after prompting by Emory Harman when Davis failed to see Maffay sitting in the back). Maffay responded to the late acknowledgment by saying, "Why are the women always neglected?" She reminded the audience that she was the first woman elected to the council. (In fact, the first female member of council was Ruth Taylor, who was elected to the third council – 1938-39. Elizabeth Harrington, the second to be elected, became mayor in 1949. Maffay was the first woman to be elected in many years.)

Davis thanked her family in far-flung locations – Arizona, Pennsylvania, California and Egypt – for their support and also thanked her significant other, Neil, and her effective campaign committee with a long list of members. She hailed door knocking as an essential part of the campaign and an opportunity to meet and hear from voters.

The mayor declared she was ready to take on the challenges, to reach out to all neighborhoods and to ensure that city services are provided on an equitable basis to all parts of the city. She said that in her meetings with other government officials, Greenbelt is held in very high esteem. Greenbelt is such an innovative city that she's often tempted to say, "been there, done that," when people suggest a "new" approach.

There is no shortage, she said, of challenges – the Greenbelt Station plan, Springhill Lake redevelopment, the economy and cuts in funding and the urban pressures of traffic and crime. Davis praised the excellent city staff – city manager, assistant to the manager, city clerk, department heads – for their loyalty, experience and expertise. She said she also looked forward to working with citizen and citizen organizations to get things done. "Greenbelt is my home," she said. "I can't imagine living anywhere else."

Council Remarks

Promising shorter remarks, Mayor pro tem Rodney Roberts began by thanking his mother and other special women, including campaign treasurer Yoni Siegel. He also thanked the citizens of Greenbelt. He said, "You can't do the job unless people communicate with you." He said you don't always "get the smiling face when you go door-to-door, but many times people take the time to talk with you, tell you what they care about and that makes it all worthwhile."

Roberts related that he was somewhat of a "black sheep" when first elected to council and that he often had trouble getting a second on any of his motions. He thanked White for his guidance in those early days and both White and Turnbull for their service on council. He welcomed the new members and said he was ready to go to work.

Actually giving shorter remarks, Ed Putens thanked the citizens of Greenbelt, his family and re-election committee headed by Sheldon Goldberg. He said he looked forward to helping bring the new councilmembers up to speed. He said with White's retirement he was now the "old man" of the council.

Konrad Herling also began by thanking the citizens of Greenbelt who make Greenbelt even greater. He read a long list of committee members and supporters and thanked them. He also introduced his two sister, who were present. He recalled two special Greenbelters when he remembered his parents, Al and Fran Herling, whom he credited with giving him the principles to apply to life in general and his work in city government.

Herling said that those principles called for listening and respecting a wide array of opinions – and there's no shortage of opinions in Greenbelt – evaluating fairly and using common sense. He said that many important issues are now challenging the city and singled out affordable housing as critical. He thanked voters for their support and said he was glad he had won on his fourth try for office or otherwise he would be known as the "Harold Stassen" of Greenbelt. He envisioned that the good things that have been, and can be, achieved in Greenbelt can send ripples of hope to cities throughout the nation.

Leta Mach described the past few months as rewarding. She thanked all of the candidates who ran, all those who helped with her campaign and her family. She said it was an honor to be elected and represent the citizens of Greenbelt. She promised to act in the city's best interests. She said Greenbelt is great and can be even greater.

The meeting adjourned and the reception began, with much celebration and good will.

GIVES to Meet, Plan Leaf Raking, Brown Bag Projects

by Virginia Beauchamp

All GIVES members are invited to attend the next quarterly meeting of the organization, to be held on Saturday, November 15 at 10 a.m. in the Community Center. In the spirit of the group's full name (Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service), its next major project, to be discussed at that meeting, will bring together some of Greenbelt's young people and some of the GIVES membership to deal with an annual autumnal chore – clearing leaves away.

President John Taylor has already been lining up young volunteers – primarily students of Eleanor Roosevelt High School – to do the raking on behalf of GIVES members no longer able to do such work. Members seeking help with leaf raking are asked to call GIVES at 301-507-6580 to get their names on the list. Work will be done on Saturday, November 22, weather permitting.

How many requests can be accommodated will depend upon the size of the work force available. Senior members of GIVES will supervise the young people.

Food Program

GIVES has already agreed to assist with the Brown Bag Food Program for low income Greenbelt seniors. This program, jointly sponsored by the Capital Area Food Bank and the City of Greenbelt's Assistance in Living Program, has been arranged by Community Resource Advocate Christal Parker Batey. Non-perishable food items and toiletries will be distributed on the third Tuesday of each month, beginning November 18, for those who have signed up for the program.

Some GIVES volunteers and members of other organizations will assist in assembling items for the bags, which will be distributed at the Community Center. In a few cases volunteer GIVES drivers will also take bags to homebound recipients, primarily at Green Ridge House.

At the October 30 GIVES board meeting, Taylor reported that the recent AARP-sponsored refresher driving course drew some 25 participants. Those attending were especially pleased that the course could be completed in one day. (In previous years a format of two half-day sessions had been scheduled.) Taylor said he would make arrangements for a second training course, also on a full-day schedule, sometime early in 2004.

At present about 196 members belong to GIVES. The group is a cooperative. Each member provides services for another member measured on an hourly basis. The provider is then repaid in similar or different services offered by another member. The exchange is arranged and recorded through a central booking office. For information on how to participate, call 301-507-6580.

Hogwarts at Owens Science Center

On November 21, 7:30 p.m., the Howard B. Owens Science Center, 9601 Greenbelt Rd., will present "Lessons from the Great Hall of Hogwarts." There is a fee. Harry Potter fans are given a second chance to take lessons from "Professor Trelawney" and "Professor Sinistra." This is a repeat of the October 31 performance. To learn more call 301-918-8750.

Scary Halloween Displays Boys' Frightful Project

by Judy Bell

Many trick-or-treaters got the chance to experience "things that go bump in the night" this past Halloween at an elaborate haunted yard in the 11 court of Ridge Road. For the last four years Kevin Matovich, 21, and Anthony Ladnier, 17, have worked tirelessly for weeks before October 31 to create an impressive Halloween display.

At the entrance to the yard a dummy appeared, hanging out of a court-side window. Scarecrows with hand-painted faces were seen throughout, as were tombstones. A wooden electric chair, complete with occupant, was rigged up on the porch with lights. The creators used a fan motor attached to dowel rods coming up through a hole in the seat to shake the victim's chest. This was my favorite.

The path then led to a fog-filled hallway with "spider webs" and strobe lights flashing to eerie music. The hall had been set up using wood and black plastic Curses, it's the guillotine!

Next was a handcrafted wooden coffin over six feet long that was filled with a real body (Matovich's dad Nick) who popped up wearing a Chuckie mask whenever a "victim" went to get candy. "This is cool," a trick-or-treater was heard to say.

Seven beautifully carved pumpkins adorned the yard as well as many colored lights and candles. A rubber hand that walked around when touched was creepy. Toward the back of the yard was a cage containing a tiny hanging skeleton; sounds of a baby's cries could be heard.

Each year, after all the tricksheeting and as the "victims" passed through a figure in an evil clown mask reached out through a wall with bars.

While passing out candy Matovich's friend Jamie Bailey saw a mother come through with her young son, who was afraid to enter. The mom told the boy not to be scared, that she would go first. As she proceeded through the hallway the clown reached out through the bars and she screamed. "I guess I'm a bad mom now," she lamented.

"Every year they build something different," commented Ladnier's mom, Patty Ladnier. A "bloody" guillotine equipped with plexiglass was this year's project. When the blade was released, it made a realistically loud bang. A severed head could be seen in the basket below.

or-treaters are gone and Halloween comes to an end, the display is taken apart and stored in Matovich's attic. It takes up half the space, according to his mom, AnnaMarie. "We may have to look for someone's attic to rent next year," she said, as the display continues to grow and become more elaborate. If you missed it, there's always next Halloween.
