Many Technical Issues Resolved As Skateboarders, Designer Talk

by Thomas X. White

Plans for the proposed Greenbelt Skate Park advanced at a Greenbelt City Council worksession held on Wednesday, July 14 at the Community Center. The worksession was council's first opportunity to review the most recent design and development concept for the proposed skate park to be constructed on the sloping grassy area between the Youth Center and the Community Center (see the Preliminary Layout Plan for the proposed skate park on page 6).

Attendees at the worksession included local skateboarders, their parents, skate board park supporters, skate board advocates from the metropolitan area and representatives from other recreation and parks agencies considering skate board facilities for their areas.

Joe McNeal, assistant director of Recreational Facilities, Greenbelt Recreation Department, briefed council on staff efforts since April, which he outlined to City Manager Michael McLaughlin in a July 7 memorandum. The briefing covered the preliminary layout plan, updated projected costs for the project and staff work with California Landscape and Design (CLD) on developing the proposed design concept.

McNeal also described a May meeting with the principal designer for CLD, Wally Hollyday, to review design and construction issues and an additional public meeting on May 19 to solicit ideas and suggestions from skateboarders from Greenbelt and the surrounding area.

He projected a timeline for the skate park's development, assuming council approved on August 5 the design concept, negotiated purchase for construction by CLD and a necessary geological and technical survey of the proposed site by Giles Engineering.

If council agrees to move the project along at that meeting, the geo-tech survey would take about six weeks, CLD would begin development of construction documents on September 30, the city staff would file for permits with Prince George's County and construction would begin at the end of April, 2005 and take about three months. A projected "Grand Opening" of the Greenbelt Skate Park could take place on July 30, 2005.

Projected costs for the completed 7,000 square foot facility range from $195,000 to $220,000, depending on site, landscaping or other changes made in the ultimate design. The McNeal memorandum estimates $180,000 for the CLD

A New American Citizen Also Becomes a Volunteer

by Pat Davis

On June 8, 2004, Agnes Conaty, along with 50 others, took the oath of citizenship in Baltimore to become a citizen of the United States. When asked about how she feels as a citizen, she replied, "I love the freedom in this country. I know I can be whatever I want to be." She also stated that she is "proud to be an American and I want to contribute as much as possible to the American way of life." She added that she loves the diversity in this country.

Born Agnes Pasco on Luzon island in the Philippines, Conaty came to the U.S. for the first time in 1990 to attend school for a short time. She returned in 1995 for a two-month U.S. Information Agency tour of environmental facilities. In 1997 Conaty came once again for 16 months to study and write her doctoral dissertation in environmental sciences. At this time she also worked at the Goddard Space Flight Center.

In November 1997 the former Miss Pasco met Austin Conaty at Goddard. Although they had worked in the same building for 11 months, they had never met. Then over the course of three days they ran into each other three times: at St. Hugh's Church, at Goddard and at a dance class. Deciding that fate had intervened, they started dating.

Agnes returned to the Philippines in April 1998 to defend her dissertation, to receive her degree from the University of the Philippines and to teach at the university. During this time Agnes and Austin continued a long distance romance by email.

In February 1999 he went to the Philippines to meet her family and in June her cousin brought Agnes a gift from Austin with a message to email him when she got it.

Proposal

When she did, he called back and proposed and she accepted. The "gift" was an engagement ring. They were married on December 30, 1999, in the Philippines.

The following January Conaty came to the U.S. and started work on getting her citizenship.

Austin was so happy that Agnes was becoming a citizen that he arranged a surprise party on July 2 at the College Park Aviation Museum. She found out about it on the day of the party. About 80 friends, family

"Middle River" Is FOGM Topic

by Sandra A. Lange

In celebration of the Year of the History of Flight, the Greenbelt Museum is sponsoring a free lecture on Tuesday, July 27 at 7:30 p.m., in the Multipurpose Room of the Greenbelt Community Center. Entitled "Middle River: The Town that Bombers Built," a slide lecture by Loyola history Professor John Breihan will describe the Maryland suburb of Middle River planned by Hale Walker. Walker also designed Greenbelt in 1935. Museum members and friends are invited to an ice cream social preceding the lecture at 7 p.m.

Middle River, located 10 miles north of Baltimore, was home to the Glenn Martin Aircraft Assembly Plant. In 1939 the plant began gearing up for war. By 1943, over 53,000 workers were employed there. A new planned community outside the factory gates became a wartime

Nominations Are Crucial For Outstanding Citizen

by Joe Timer

First given in 1973, the Outstanding Citizen award is presented annually to a Greenbelt citizen who has provided exemplary volunteer service, past and present. Greenbelt's 2003 Outstanding Citizen - Emory Harman - and the 30 recipients of the Outstanding Citizen Award that preceded him have provided countless hours of un-publicized service. When asked about his reaction to being selected Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen, Harman responded, "I felt honored to be recognized and to be Grand Marshal of the Labor Day Parade."

For more than 50 years, this Greenbelt resident has been active in various organizations. Harman stated that he enjoys volunteer work. This has involved PTA activities, neighborhood crime watch, playing Santa Claus for the city's Recreation Department and announcing both the Labor Day Parade and the Greenbelt Concert Band. He remains active, particularly in the Lion's Club, the University of Maryland and the

by Barbara Hopkins

Eight Hungarian mayors recently spent a busy day in Greenbelt during a visit sponsored by the U. S. Department of State. The visitors were welcomed by Mayor Judith Davis and Councilmember Leta Mach, who also shared with them information on the local educational system. Later, the group met with the other three councilmembers and City Manager Michael McLaughlin who addressed them about the structure and workings of the city government.

Celia Craze of the city's planning department spoke with the mayors about the planning decision process and Christal Batey talked with them about senior programs. MPO George Mathews introduced the Hungarians to the basics of the Greenbelt Police Department. They learned of the city's history from the museum curator and had a tour of the city.

A Paper Trail Is Needed

Stephen Jascourt's letter in the July 15 News Review raised some important points about the necessity of adding a voter-verified paper trail to the electronic machines, manufactured by the Diebold Corporation, that will be used in the upcoming election in Maryland. I would like to add a few more points in favor of adding a paper trail.

Firstly, Diebold has admitted that the software in its machines that Maryland used in the 2004 primary election failed to meet federal qualification standards, which Maryland law requires for certification by the State Board of Elections (BOE). Ironically, the BOE has been objecting to a paper trail on the grounds that "there are no federal standards" for such a provision. Yet the BOE doesn't seem concerned that the Diebold system itself failed to meet federal standards already in place. In contrast, the California Secretary of State has banned Diebold for similar offenses.

Moreover, the Diebold machines in use in Maryland already have printers to print closing tallies. Diebold had agreed in 2003 to modify their machines for free for San Diego County to have paper receipts for each voter.

A citizen's group, Campaign for Verifiable Voting (<http://www.truevotemd.org>), has filed a lawsuit to require a paper trail for the Diebold machines but the BOE has called for dismissal of this lawsuit.

The BOE continues to use taxpayer money to disseminate publicity attempting to convince concerned voters that the Diebold system needs no improvement. Their new "educational" pamphlet, "Electronic Voting: Myths vs. Facts," is now being contested by national computer security and elections expert Professor Douglas Jones of the University of Iowa, who has issued a point-by-point corrective to this pamphlet. He says the pamphlet contains so many "misleading assertions, straw-man arguments and outright errors that it may well do more to fuel public distrust than it does to assure the trustworthiness of the system it defends."

Having a receipt for our vote is a no-brainer. No one in their right mind would trust their hard-earned money with an ATM machine that provided no receipts or independently auditable backup system and there is no reason that we should trust our hard-earned vote with such a system either. Maryland law requires that our vote be auditable and recountable; the current paperless system provides neither.

Conserve Water and Save Money

A great deal of money can be saved by taking simple steps to save water, the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) notes. Even small changes can have a big effect on water resources and environmental quality. Fixing a leaky faucet, toilet or lawn sprinkler can reduce water use. Changing to water-efficient plumbing fixtures and appliances can be major water and energy savers as well. Nationally, an average of 14 percent of the water bought is lost through leaks without being used.

Using less water on the lawn and garden can help too. Roughly 30 percent of the water used in urban areas on the east coast goes to irrigate plants, mostly lawns. To use less water, gardeners can select plants that are adapted to their home (consider climate, soils, sunlight and exposure); cluster plants together and mulch them with compost to conserve moisture; avoid planting or transplanting during the summer; water in the early morning instead of mid-day so that less water evaporates; water once deeply rather than several times lightly to encourage the development of deep roots and use a rain gauge and timers to avoid overwatering.

Explore Australia

The Explorations Unlimited travel video scheduled for July 30 is "Touring Australia." Australia is a continent, a country and an island, slightly smaller than the United States, with 18 million people. From native aborigines to Melbourne's Greek population (the largest outside of Athens), Australia is home to over 160 different nationalities. The country was colonized in 1788. The Aussies have a strong belief in democracy, a marvelous enthusiasm for sports and a love for high adventure. This 60-minute video captures life in the cities (Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Darwin, Hobart, Perth, Adelaide and Alice Springs), the rugged beauty of Kakadu and Daintree, the Great Barrier Reef, the Gold Coast and Ayers Rock.

This video is one of the Explorations Unlimited travel videos being shown this summer every Friday beginning at 1 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center. All videos will be shown in the senior lounge. Everyone is welcome to attend. Call 301-397-2208 for more information.

Water Polo

On Thursday evenings from 8 to 10 p.m. water polo practice takes place at the Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center. Water polo is attracting players from other swim teams to give a greater variety of skills. Brian Steen and Mike Steen from Suburban Aquatics; and Dylan Berry, Johnny Berry, Patrick Berry, Maggie Abernathy and Mat Abernathy of Garrett Park all attended on July 1. Greenbelt is still the largest group in the area. Dems Club Hosts Convention Party

The Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club invites all Prince George's County residents to attend a Convention Night Party on Thursday, July 29, 7:30 p.m. at the Greenbriar Community Building, 7600 Hanover Parkway at Greenbelt Road (Rt. 193).

The event will mark the final night of the Democratic Party National Convention, the evening when Senator John F. Kerry accepts the Democratic Party's nomination for president. Senator Kerry's speech will be shown live on the community center's large-screen television, beginning at about 9 p.m.

According to Roosevelt Club President Bill Hunt, prior to Kerry's speech, "We will have a number of activities, including a conference call message direct from Boston from Senator John Edwards, the Democratic Party's expected nominee for vice president. Hearing directly from Senator Edwards will make an already special evening even more exciting. The evening is simply an opportunity for Democrats from all parts of the county to come together, share some refreshments, engage in some political chat and networking, get energized, have a lot of fun and, of course, to hear from our party's national ticket. If you are not going to be on the convention floor in Boston, then join us for a good old-fashioned Convention Night Party. Wear your campaign gear, dig out those wild hats and come prepared to have a great evening."

Beverages and munchies will be provided and guests are asked to bring a favorite snack to share. Admission is free but a nominal voluntary donation would be appreciated to help defray the evening's costs. Everyone who is interested in learning more about the Democratic ticket and how to help with the upcoming election is welcome. RSVP by calling 301-982-0111 or via email to wmhunt@starpower.net.

Baha'i Faith

"A power above and beyond the powers of nature must needs be brought to bear, to change this black darkness into light, and these hatreds and resentments, grudges and spites, these endless wrangles and wars, into fellowship and love amongst all the peoples of the earth. This power is none other than the breathings of the Holy Spirit and the mighty inflow of the Word of God."

necessity. The Martin Company and its architects, Albert Kahn of Detroit and Skidmore, Owings and Merrill of New York, planned a town with curving streets and superblocs using garden city principles. When building costs rose, the architects turned to prefabrication of single-family cottages. In 1942, seven years after he worked on the Greenbelt town plan, Hale Walker laid out a neighborhood of 1,000 prefab cottages along curving streets and cul-de-sacs. The new town housed about 20,000 people by war's end.

Breihan will discuss the various planning principles used in wartime Middle River, as well as offer reflections on how they have worked out over time.

Breihan is professor of history and former department chair at Loyola College in Baltimore. Educated in British history at Princeton and Cambridge, he has for the last decade studied architecture and planning of the 1940s in Baltimore.

The lecture is open to the public. For additional information call the Greenbelt Museum at 301-507-6582.

This preliminary plan for the 7,000 square foot Greenbelt Skate Park prepared by California Landscape Design was given tentative approval with some changes by the Greenbelt City Council.

construction contract, including the preparation of county building permits; $2,200 for the geological-technical survey of the site if council accepts the staff recommendation to engage Giles Engineering, based on their low bid.

Although $10,000 has been estimated for fencing or some sort of barrier around the skate park, staff is continuing consideration of other alternatives combining landscaping and fencing that could cost less and be more attractive. Current council thinking is to pay the costs of the proposed facility through the use of a State Public Open Space (POS) development grant.

Walkway Access

The first hour of the worksession focused on McNeal's presentation of the updated design and the staff report, pending the expected late arrival of Hollyday due to delayed air travel into Washington. Council raised questions about the design, about appropriate public access around the facility and whether the facility would adequately meet the needs and preferences of the Greenbelt skateboarding community.

A lot of attention from Councilmember Rodney Roberts was directed to the most appropriate separation of the facility from the public walkway to go from the Community Center to the Youth Center and vice-versa.

Staff noted that they will continue to address that issue as well as public access from the parking area behind the Youth Center to the Youth Center itself as they consider landscaping and barrier alternatives.

Skateboarders and others from the audience commented that they were not sure the updated design reflected input from Greenbelt's skateboarding community that the park design have more so-called "street" or "plaza" style skating features. These issues and others were addressed more fully with the arrival of Hollyday at 9 p.m.

Skateboarders present were invited to come up to the front and use the preliminary layout plan to describe their concerns that there appeared to be too much emphasis on the "bowl" or "vertical" type features and not enough on "street" type features. Hollyday was able to defend the balance in his design and his philosophy that the park should provide opportunities for all ages, abilities and interests and challenge skaters to improve their skills. He felt it was important to provide opportunities for skaters to grow and expand their interests in other skating styles.

After an interchange of ideas between Hollyday and the skaters and council, several minor modifications to the design were suggested and he agreed that modifications to enhance the "street" type features in the design could be made to the preliminary layout plan with little disruption of his overall concept.

Agreement Reached

By the end of the worksession there appeared to be general agreement on the preliminary plan with certain suggested modifications. Council asked for staff to add a discussion of ongoing maintenance issues with a new park as well as further discussion of materials for park features. They were also directed to begin development of use guidelines, rules and regulations for the park operation. Skateboard advocates in the audience indicated to council that they may be able to donate time and materials for the park, such as installation of tile or coping.

Mayor Judith Davis thanked everyone for their participation, especially the great effort made by Hollyday to get to Greenbelt in spite of the delayed airline operations due to that day's storms. She reiterated that "the city is faced with designing a skateboard facility with limited space and limited funds. We are looking forward to the development of a good, local, neighborhood-oriented park."

Leta Mach echoed the mayor's remarks, describing it as "a park designed for the future."

Farmer's Market Celebrates 25th Anniversary

by Carolyn Price

The Farmer's Market in College Park is celebrating its 25th anniversary this summer. Since 1979 a number of farmers, bakers and flower growers have been setting up their stands every Saturday morning from 7 a.m. to noon, May through Thanksgiving, on Paint Branch Parkway.

Phil Miller from Clinton owns the largest farm and is the present manager. His farm has been in the family for several generations. He has a large variety of fruits, vegetables and potted plants in season. His children all work at the stand, restocking and checking out.

"If it's July, it must be peach season!" a customer squealed, seeing the Swisher's stand. They have a peach orchard nearby and each year customers chat with them about the progress of the fruit. You couldn't eat a fresher peach unless the tree was in your own yard.

Mildred has her own homemade baked pies and cakes for sale and Uptown Bakery brings a variety of breads and pastries for their stand.

Greenbelter Donna Almquist sells parsley, chive plants, garlic and more. A visit with her is an education in gardening and herbs.

Suzanne has a variety of fresh cut flowers from her own extensive garden in Glenn Dale. She has recently taken over the stand from her next door neighbor, Bill Preston, who just retired. He had been manager of the market since its beginning and most regular market-goers have stopped every week to visit with Bill, get some advice on growing their own flowers and pick out a bouquet. Suzanne has just as green a thumb!

To round out this whole picture of activity, a quartet of Eleanor Roosevelt student musicians may be playing "Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home," or other musicians "of note" could be playing.

How to Avoid Waits for MVA Services

The Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) reminds Marylanders that a number of service alternatives are available to avoid making a trip to one of its branches. By logging on to <http://www.marylandmva.com>, one can complete many transactions including changes of address, applying for background scene license plates, PIN management, obtaining duplicate registration cards, replacement titles, driving record, temporary registration and downloading and printing specific MVA forms.

Twelve kiosks in high-traffic locations throughout the state offer a quick, secure alternative to visiting a full-service branch. The kiosks nearest Greenbelt are at the Beltsville MVA, Beltway Plaza, Largo MVA and Columbia Express MVA (24/7). Some transactions can also be performed by mail.

For transactions on the internet, log onto <http://www.marylandmva.com> and click on "Online Services." For vehicle registration renewal, the vehicle title number, license plate number and a Visa card, MasterCard or check are needed. If necessary, the option to print a temporary registration is available, which enables drivers to operate their vehicles until the registration card and sticker arrive by mail.

There is no fee for a VEIP extension. Upon approval, MVA will send the newly-assigned expiration date to the driver's current address on file with the MVA. All that is required to extend the time needed to obtain VEIP inspection by 120 days is to enter some basic information about the vehicle.

For those whose MVA business cannot be accomplished through internet, kiosk or mail, the MVA recommends visiting or scheduling an appointment during the middle of the month (between the 7th and 21st) on a Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday between 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Avoid high volume days – Monday, Friday, Saturday and the days before or after a holiday weekend. If none of those alternatives is feasible, the MVA points out that rural offices tend to be less crowded.

Illinois Students Tour Here, Learn about Cooperatives

by Leta Mach

Thirty high school students and their four chaperones from the Illinois Farm Bureau toured Greenbelt on Tuesday, July 13 to learn more about consumer cooperatives.

Leta Mach, current or former member of many of Greenbelt's cooperatives, guided the group. The students were selected for the Cooperative Activities Tour after winning a rigorous contest consisting of projects, speeches, essays and a test for their Future Farmers of America (FFA) section. They came from all over the state – from urban Chicago to rural areas in southern Illinois.

The tour began July 12 with visits to the Adams Electric Cooperative, Knouse Foods and the Mason-Dixon Farm in Pennsylvania. After Greenbelt, they planned to visit the National Telephone Cooperative Association in Virginia.

The Greenbelt visit began with a box lunch at the New Deal Café. Kitchen Manager Ellen Siegel answered a few questions about the café and why the cooperative was established. The students also used their lunch time to converse with people in the Roosevelt Center and ask them about Greenbelt's cooperatives. As a result, the students were anxious to see the Co-op food store and learn more about the patronage refunds they had heard people receive.

But first, the group walked to Greenbelt Homes (GHI) for a presentation from General Manager Gretchen Overdurff. The presentation provided an overview of Greenbelt's history and GHI's role in the city. The students were curious to learn more about such issues as pets, yard lines and maintenance as well as how to become a member of the cooperative. On the walk back through the inner walkways the students looked for examples of brick, block and frame homes and identified additions to the original homes.

Bob Davis, Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative manager, discussed operations at the food co-op. The group seemed surprised that people could join the co-op for as little as $10. They were even more surprised that these members were eligible for patronage refunds even though they had not contributed $100 to become a voting member.

Before leaving Greenbelt the group also walked through the Community Center and viewed the location of two more cooperatives – the Greenbelt News Review and the Greenbelt Nursery School.

FFA was organized nationally in 1928 in Kansas City, Mo. It operates on local, state and national levels. Student members belong to chapters organized at the local school level. The Illinois FFA president Kacy Baugher and vice president Cliff Dolbeau helped lead the tour of Greenbelt.

work and family make it difficult to recruit new volunteers, Harman commented that volunteers gain a sense of satisfaction from their efforts, and society also wins. He added, "Organizations bring people together; they solve problems and create a better sense of community."

Anyone talking to Harman detects his passionate support for the University of Maryland. Following Army service in North Africa during World War II, Harman attended the university, where he played tackle on the football team. He was a co-founder of the University of Maryland College Park (UMCP) Veterans Club, whose first president was William Hoff, Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen in 1981.

Harman fondly recalls homecoming activities on campus in 1945, when he presented a football to General George C. Marshall. His UMCP connection has spanned 50-plus years and has involved leadership roles as a student, alumnus and booster. He was recently nominated to the Alumni Association's Hall of Fame.

Nominations

Harman was aware that friends have been nominating him for Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen for the last eight years. He acknowledges that this is a testimony to the number of deserving volunteers in Greenbelt. He thanks those who nominated him and conveyed encouragement to other nominators. Harman added, "Keep the faith. Continue to send in those nominations and hopefully your candidate will be selected."

The Outstanding Citizen award honors all of Greenbelt's outstanding citizens, even though it may be presented to only one of them each year. The process of identifying that special person in a city of citizen volunteers is difficult and requires input from citizens like our readers. Some outstanding citizens are easily spotted because of their creative leadership and high visibility within their organizations. But sometimes such individuals touch others in a quiet way.

This award is bestowed annually during the opening ceremonies of the Labor Day Festival. While a committee will select 2004's Outstanding Citizen, that selection is made from nominations submitted from the community. Nominations are due on August 9. Help the committee identify 2004's outstanding citizen by completing the nomination form elsewhere in this paper.

and co-workers celebrated Conaty's citizenship.

At the end everyone recited the Pledge of Allegiance and sang "The Star Spangled Banner." Conaty said, "I was deeply moved by all the people who came to the citizenship party. I want to thank Austin for coming up with this special party to celebrate."

It was fitting that the party was held at the aviation museum, since Conaty works there part-time. She had interviewed Cathy Allen, director of the museum, for a News Review article about the "Centennial of Flight" and expressed interest in working there. Subsequently she applied for a job and now conducts school and college tours, Scouts programs, parties, tours for seniors and special needs persons.

Conaty says of the museum, "I am so happy to work there because of its historical significance. The Wright Brothers represent the American spirit, the hard work under difficult circumstances. They give us an inspiration for what we can achieve as ordinary people."

News Review

Conaty also volunteers at the News Review as a writer and photographer. She is involved with the Prince George's Running Club, meeting Saturdays at the Sweetgum Picnic Area of Greenbelt Park. She helps with the Knights of Columbus at St. Hugh's Church. Conaty photographs nature and paints with watercolors and charcoal. She has become her family historian, documenting family activities.

Conaty is fond of Greenbelt, its people, the Art Deco architecture and feel of the town. She likes living in the D.C. area because of the museums and galleries. In fact, she volunteers as a docent on Sundays at the Corcoran Gallery and hopes to take art courses there in the future.

The majority of Conaty's family, including her mother, live in the Philippines. There are cousins in California and Ontario, Canada. Her late father, Abelardo Pasco, was an engineer and she has established a foundation in his name to enable family members to obtain higher education in the engineering field. She hopes to extend this aid in the near future to Philippine students outside her family. Conaty, who also wants to spread information about Philippine culture to others, gives talks on this subject to various groups.

One wonders where she finds the time to do everything she does and still be looking for more.

New Deal Health Exhibit Sparks Praise, Nostalgia

by Jim Lara

"Beautiful" and "colorful" are words being used to describe the Greenbelt Museum's current exhibit of "Living the Health Life: Sports, Health and Fitness in the New Deal Era." For some visitors, it sparks a sense of nostalgia. How things have changed for how we stay fit, from the 1930s and 1940s to the present. The exhibit, which opened on May 21 at the Greenbelt Community Center, has won praise from adults and children as well as from residents who donated some of the objects on display.

"I think the response has been very positive from everyone, especially the kids from the creative camps," said museum curator Jill St. John.

Photos and Posters

Walking into the exhibit, one notices the many posters and old photographs displayed on the walls. The posters were created by the Works Progress Administration from 1936 to 1943 to help promote projects relating to health, safety, education and community activities, such as the benefits of milk for strong bones and teeth and better housing to prevent infant mortality in the slums. Look also for a woman dressed to play tennis for Field Day.

Greenbelt's sports history is documented from black-and-white photographs from the 1954 Greenbelt baseball team of the Babe Ruth League to the 1950 Greenbelt High School Grizzlies basketball team. All photos and posters were obtained from the Library of Congress. St. John explained that she and fellow curator Katie Scott-Childress wanted to show guests something different. "We wanted to appeal to men (through sports), since past exhibits have dealt with fashion or domestic objects," said St. John.

In keeping with the sports theme, visitors will see an old Greenbelt Grizzly jacket from before 1950. The green corduroy jacket has the image of a bear with Greenbelt sewn at the top and grizzlies at the bottom. Other antiques include a Louisville Slugger baseball bat used by Hall of Famer Mel Ott and dumbbells and tennis rackets made from wood.

Another item is the scorebook from a game played by the city's baseball team, given to the museum by Bob Sommers, a Greenbelt pioneer. As a batboy for the city's first baseball team in 1939, he was given a glove during his first season as a player; he also donated it to the exhibit. He echoed the sentiment of the exhibit, saying, "It brings back memories and shows people how we did things when we were young," said Sommers.

Marion Hastings, 78, who was 12 years old when she first lived in Greenbelt, donated an old pair of ice skates, the type that people attached to their shoes.

Greenbelt High School (now Greenbelt Middle School) sports jacket, circa 1939, featured in the Greenbelt Museum exhibit on "Living the Healthy Life" in the Community Center.

Swimsuits, circa 1940s, featuring modern era styles, are part of the Greenbelt Museum's new exhibit on "Living the Healthy Life" in the Community Center.

"My dad got the skates for me but they didn't fit my shoes, so I couldn't use them," she said with a laugh.

Staying Healthy

Other displays showed how to stay healthy and fit. One poster explains that syphilis can strike children, who should be protected with Toxoid. Viewers can observe an old-style first aid book by the American Red Cross, a pill box, a package of Tums and a photo of a doctor examining a child.

Beauty kits were popular in the late 1920s, with information on weight loss, makeup, exercise and healthy eating. The Dubarry Success Course gave beauty advice by claiming people could fix body defects with special isolation exercises and posture corrections.

The Detecto Charm Box, created in 1928, consisted of cards providing exercises and diet plans that could be done in a few minutes. St. John remarked that similar methods are still used today. "Now the charm box has morphed into online diets giving you the tips instead of having cards sent to you," said St. John.

There are also hands-on objects like a thumb-wrestling ring and treadmill for the kids. Different fabrics from tweed to rayon show how materials used for athletic uniforms have evolved through the years.

The penny scale has been the most popular attraction so far. People can put a penny in the slot to learn their weight and receive a card telling them what's in store for them in the future. St. John and Scott-Childress purchased the scale on eBay for $200.

St. John credits the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum for their donations to the exhibit and the City of Greenbelt and the Maryland Historical Trust for their funding. She says the exhibit will be open at least through November 2005. "People seem to be getting a fun experience out of it and they're taking with them some knowledge when they leave, which is great," said St. John.
