Greenbelt Skater Enjoyed Long Island Performance

by Jim Lara

When she was six years old, Alice Murphy took up ice skating at the suggestion of her mother, who thought it could be a nice extracurricular activity. But it was three years later when Murphy wanted to learn skating professionally that she took private lessons. The hard work culminated for the 15-year-old in her selection to skate at a benefit performance in New York this past December.

Greenbelter Alice Murphy, 15, has been perfecting her talents for the past nine years.

Like any beginner, Murphy had slip-ups of falling down on the ice but eventually she settled down and learned to do different things. She had a coach at age 10 who taught her various movements, such as jumps while skating forward and backward. Murphy started practicing two to three days a week for an hour after school and now does it five days a week.

According to Murphy, who is a sophomore at Eleanor Roosevelt High School and a Lakeside Drive resident, it was tough putting in the extra time practicing in addition to going to school but she's adjusted to it. During the past few years she has participated in competitions around the area with other local skaters. She says that she doesn't get pre-performance jitters.

"Usually before I step on the ice, I just think how cold it is out there and how dorky I might look in my outfit," said Murphy, laughing about it.

The performance that Murphy was honored to be part of was the third annual Stars, Stripes and Skates tribute in Long Island, N.Y. The event was created to pay respect to the families affected by the 9/11 attacks. Proceeds went to 9/11 Families Give

Mother of Eagles Player Talks about Her Son

by Matt Johnson

Of the many fast food managers who work 50-hour weeks to keep their stores functioning and bacon on their family tables, a notable standout is the mother of Derrick Burgess, defensive end of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Meet Boston Market manager and Greenbelter Priscilla Burgess, 45 years old and mother of two. Her eldest, Derrick, was drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles and now starts for the team as defensive end. This year's Super Bowl was a tight match-up ending with the New England Patriots edging out their feathered foes 24-21. Mother Burgess did not attend. "I had tickets, but I didn't go because I'm afraid of flying," she said.

Instead, Mother Burgess stayed home with her grandchildren - Derrick's month-old son and four-year-old daughter. The kids were dressed in the jersey of their father, number 56, watching as he battled the defending world champion in the biggest game of his NFL career.

With pride, Burgess admitted that she scans the television screen looking for her son no matter what is going on during the game. She said it's hard to believe Derrick's playing with "the big guys" such as Emmitt

Smith and Donovan McNabb. She mentioned Smith because she was a Dallas Cowboys fan before her son entered the NFL.

"Derrick used to like the [Washington] Redskins and his father liked the [Miami] Dolphins," she said. The family was united on draft day 2001 when Derrick was claimed as the Eagles' first overall pick in the third round. "Everybody loves the Eagles now," she said.

Draft day for the Burgess family was reminiscent of the 2004 movie "The Cookout." The family gathered in the backyard of their Riverdale home for a big

Designer Needed For Memorial

The city is seeking professionals with experience in exhibit design, architecture and the arts to plan and oversee construction of a community memorial to honor Greenbelters who demonstrated a high level of service, dedication and commitment to the community. The project has become known as the "wall of honor."

The Greenbelt Community Center has been chosen as the site for this commemorative list of honoree names displayed on a large sculpture or plaque. The preferred location is a first-floor elevator vestibule.

Three second-choice locations are: a site on the front lawn that would also require an indoor kiosk to provide information about each honoree, the rear wall of the Community Meeting Room or the Community Center lobby.

Selection Criteria

The city reserves the right to reject all submissions. Responses to the call for designers will be evaluated using criteria that include: description of design and construction management process; knowledge of the City of Greenbelt and this memorial project; experience with design processes including community input; project team composition, credentials and experience in designing and implementing community memorials; the estimated total cost for the design work and project management and proposed completion schedule.

Questions should be addressed to David Moran, assistant city manager, by phone at 301-474-8000 or by email at dmoran@ci.greenbelt.md.us.

Local Potters Make Bowls As Benefit for Food Bank

by Carol Griffith

Greenbelt's first annual Empty Bowls Project will be presented by Greenbelt Pottery, Inc., on Saturday, March 12 from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Church. A ticket purchased in advance from members of Greenbelt Pottery will provide a choice of bowl, made by the group for diners to keep, and a simple meal of soup, bread, a light dessert and beverage.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Help-by-Phone, a non-profit organization that has served Prince George's County by providing emergency food and shelter for nearly 38 years.

Diane McDaniel, a member of Greenbelt Pottery had the idea for this charitable project. Assisted by fellow member Carol Wisdom, a graphic artist by profession, McDaniel made tickets and posters and sent letters to Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association to promote the event. Jeri Holloway was instrumental in arranging for the event to take place at the Community Church and in choosing the charity the event would benefit.

The 15 to 20 members of Greenbelt Pottery with some assistance from other potters, are making approximately 230 bowls for the event. Even with 200 tickets for sale, diners will be able to choose their souvenir bowl.

Each bowl is unique in appearance, even among those created by the same artist. Some are hand-built, others wheel-thrown; some have a decorative edge or design and all are glazed and stamped with the Empty Bowls logo. The time

Greenbelt Supports Bill To Lower Electric Costs

Greenbelt Assistant City Manager David Moran joined representatives of 11 other municipalities in Montgomery and Prince George's Counties at a meeting to support proposed Maryland legislation on electricity rates. The legislation would allow municipalities to use the purchasing power of a large group to negotiate lower electricity rates for their residents.

Officials from Greenbelt, Rockville, Laurel, Takoma Park, Gaithersburg, College Park, Kensington and several other municipalities met to sign a Municipal Aggregation Letter of Interest at the Takoma Park City Council Chambers on February 15. Several other representatives, including Greenbelt Mayor Judith Davis, went to Annapolis to testify in support of Senate Bill 39, Electric Industry - Aggregation - Counties and Municipal Corporations.

Frederick Smalls, president of Prince George's County Muni-

pal Association (PGCMA) and councilmember from Laurel, stated, "As a Maryland Municipal League priority, the PGCMA fully supports this enabling legislation. By removing the current prohibition of local governments, we may be able to explore benefits to our constituents with lower energy costs and improved service offerings which are becoming available through deregulation and competition in the electric industry."

Senate Bill 39 and the similar House Bill 670 would allow municipalities to negotiate and purchase electricity on behalf of citizens using the method known as "opt-out" aggregation. If a municipality chooses to become an aggregator, its residents would be included in the aggregation pool unless they inform the local government of their desire to opt out.

Supporters Rush to Appeal ERHS Coach's Suspension

by Jim Giese

Controversy continues to embroil the Prince George's County school system over the recent suspension and possible dismissal of the highly successful Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) basketball coach, Glen Farello. Farello was suspended with pay for the remainder of the basketball season on January 25 over an incident that took place March 1, 2004, when he reportedly provided his team players with a sports drink supplement, EM-PACT.

A lawsuit filed November 12 seeking damages of $25,000 by Cassandra Samuels alleges that her son, Matt – Roosevelt's leading scorer that season – was hospitalized after consuming the drink, according to a Washington Post January 26 story by Josh Barr. The basis for the suspension by school Principal Sylvester Conyers, following a meeting with senior school administrators, is a violation of the intent of the school system's rules prohibiting the administration of medications, the article reported. Subsequently, school officials drafted a policy under review by attorneys that would also ban employees from dispensing or recommending that students consume performance-enhancing supplements such as steroids, androstenedione, caffeine and creatine. According to Rebecca Sanchez, Customer Service Department of Manatech, Inc., EM-PACT contains a small amount of creatine, comparable to that consumed by eating a serving of meat or fish.

Supporters of Farello will be appearing at today's meeting of the Prince George's Board of Education to seek his reinstatement as coach. Organized by Alick Dearie, ERHS graduate and former varsity player. Dearie is now a volunteer assistant boy's basketball coach for the school. The group contends that the coach violated no rules and that no adverse action was taken against him until there was publicity in the Maryland Journal and other newspapers in January of this year although administrators were aware of the incident last spring. They also contend that newspaper accounts exaggerated the use of EM-PACT as a creatine supplement, noting that the drink's purpose is to combat dehydration. They also contend that the family filing the suit has been feuding with the coach over the handling of their son as a player. They also claim that the symptoms reported that resulted in Samuel's brief hospitalization, cramps and nausea, were the result of dehydration or failure to take sufficient liquids and that Samuels was able to attend practice the next day.

As a contract "emergency" coach, Farello is not a teacher and works only part-time in that capacity. His supporters contend, however, that he has worked many extra hours to make certain that the ERHS players pursued their education, made contact with coaches at the college level who could provide college-level scholarships and helped to get players into summer basketball camps.

According to Barr's story, Conyers declined to comment on whether the suspension would affect Farello's prospects of returning to coach next year. These contracts are on a year-to-year basis.

Cherry's "Joy Gods" Brings Tears and Joy to Audience

by Kristina Bigby

Aphrodite, Apollo and Dionysus are just a few of the Greek gods who graced us mere mortals with their presence last weekend. Okay, well not really but these are a few of the celestial characters in the play, "The Joy Gods Return."

"The Joy Gods Return" is a musical written and directed by Chris Cherry, starring 30 teenagers, showing at the Greenbelt Arts Center. It is a modern day musical with old Broadway style and flair.

"Joy Gods" is an uplifting story about the return of joy to New York City. The play takes place in New York 2002, the year following the September 11 attacks. The central character is struggling young actress Felicity Knox.

Felicity's fiancé, Tom, was an up-and-coming playwright who dies in the 9/11 attacks before his first show is produced. Fast forward a year later and Felicity is still trying to cope with Tom's death. She decides the best way to honor his memory is to produce on Broadway the play Tom was working on prior to his death. Tom's play is about Greek gods who come to New York during the Depression to spread joy and lift America out of the blues.

The Theme

"The Joy Gods Return" is a show within a show, seamlessly transitioning between New York 2002 and the depression era New York of Tom's play. The theme of the show is that although we live in dangerous times, i.e. the era of terror, we don't have to stop living. There is also a scathing critique of the media's journalistic integrity. The play even takes a jab at America's government. The play implies that the government helps contribute to the public's feelings of being terrorized through constant terror alerts and seemingly false alarms. This comes out in the song "Department of Homeland Security" where the character exclaims, "I'm feeling a bit insecure."

Cherry, who produces many local plays, was both writer and director. He had help from Stefan Brodd, musical director; Laura Schandelmeier, choreographer; Madeline Bell, assistant director/stage manager; and Jesse Goldberg-Strassler, assistant director/lighting.

The Mood

The mood of the play is communicated through the characters' song and dance numbers. During the first act when characters are still very sad the musical numbers are more somber but after the intermission one can see and hear the joy returning to New York City because the musical numbers are more dynamic and inspiring.

The Talent

What makes the play so interesting is the talent of its young actors. Although all of the actors can sing, I found myself immediately blown away by Annie Loutsch who plays the central character Felicity. She has by far the strongest voice of the cast and an amazing stage presence that should serve her well in her acting career.

Loutsch was not the only bright spot in this play. Each teen did a great job helping the play run smoothly, not forgetting lines and expressing emotion. The person who completely sold his role was Michael DiMarco who plays Zack, the television news producer. This young Hugh Grant look-alike was animated, believable, funny and in short unforgettable. He might as well have picked up his scenes and put them in his pocket to take home because DiMarco stole every scene he was in that night.

The trio Loutsch, Mason Trappio and Marla Martin had a fantastic chemistry. They played the characters of Felicity, Miles and Marla respectively. Martin had the sassiest character of the three, and you knew it as soon as she hit the stage. She nailed her character's personality. Cody Sanders, who plays Brian Banning, and Vikram Ivatury, who plays Dionysus, are also fun to watch.

The Audience

The audience was made up largely of family and friends. They loved the play, in part because they were watching their sons and daughters but also because this play has the power to make you laugh, think and cry. Michael Barnes, who played Tom, Felicity's dead fiancé, moved his parents to tears during his solo performance of "It's Time to Say Goodbye."

This reviewer was pleasantly surprised at the amount of emotion Barnes and Loutsch demonstrated in their scenes together. Barnes plays Tom and he was largely in dream sequence scenes, which can typically be hard to sell. Together Loutsch and Barnes convincingly portrayed a strong love connection, lasting beyond death.

The Reviewer

This reviewer really enjoyed the play and related to the message. The songs were catchy and fun. There could have been more movement and dance. During most of the solos the actors seemed glued to their marks, moving slightly here and there but not always looking natural. During the ensemble scenes everyone seemed more comfortable and really let loose.

"The Joy Gods Return" has love lost, love found, joy lost and joy found, amidst a stirring tribute to New Yorkers and America in general. The play is sold out.

Our Neighbors

Our sympathy to the family of longtime Greenbelter Dottie Teske who died February 12, 2005.

Navy Seaman Jeff M. Conley, a 1998 graduate of Eleanor Roosevelt High School, recently participated in "New Horizons," a U.S. Navy humanitarian assistance exercise in Haiti. Stationed on the amphibious assault ship USS Saipan, homeported in Norfolk, Conley and his shipmates delivered 1,200 tons of construction equipment and supplies for Seabees and U.S. Army Reserve MPs supporting the 90-day exercise. New Horizons will assist in the rebuilding of schools and wells and will also provide medical assistance to victims of Hurricane Jeanne.

Congratulations to proud grandparents Eddie and Peggy Byrd who are announcing the arrival of their second grandchild, first grandson Tobias (Toby) Jerome Yeager. Parents Wes and Lisa Yeager live in Elkridge, Md. Toby weighed in at 5 lbs., 11 oz. on February 19, 2005, five weeks early.

"Buckle-up Bear" Visits St. Hugh's

"Buckle-Up Bear" and Traffic Officer Scott Kaiser visited St. Hugh's kindergartners, first and second graders on Valentine's Day to remind students to always use their booster seats. Each child received a certificate that had on it a Hershey Kiss, with the message to always use your booster seat so you can "Go home and kiss someone you love."

Motor vehicle crashes are the number one killer of children ages 2 to 14. "The use of belt-positioning booster seats lowers the risk of injury to children in crashes by 59 percent compared to the use of vehicle seat belts," states a study of children ages 4 through 7 by Partners for Child Passenger Safety, a State Farm-funded research project at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia. This is the reason why the Greenbelt police joined the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the Ad Council and others on Valentine's Day to commemorate National Child Passenger Safety Week (February 13 to 19) to place special emphasis on reminding all parents and other adults responsible for children traveling in motor vehicles, "if they are under 4'9", they need a booster seat."

While 94 percent of America's toddlers are now regularly restrained, only 10-20 percent of children ages 4 to 8 who should be using booster seats to protect them are actually in them. This puts children at an unnecessary risk of being injured or killed in crashes because they are simply in the wrong restraint for their size.

One study showed that children ages 2 to 5 who are moved to safety belts too early are four times more likely to sustain a serious head injury than those restrained in booster seats. In a crash, the shoulder strap of an adult safety belt will hit a child shorter than 4'9" across the neck or face rather than the chest and there is also a greater risk of internal injury because an adult lap belt hits across the child's stomach rather than his/her lap. These children need a booster seat which raises them up so that adult safety belts fit over their chests and hips properly and protect them in the event of a crash.

As children grow, how they sit in a car, truck, van or SUV should also change. For maximum child passenger safety, parents and caregivers need to remember and follow these steps. Use rear-facing infant seats in the back seat from birth to at least one year of age and at least 20 pounds. Use forward-facing toddler seats in the back seat from age one and 20 pounds to about age four and 40 pounds. Use booster seats in the back seat from about age four to at least age eight unless the child is 4'9" or taller. Use safety belts in the back seat at age eight or older or taller than 4'9". All children age 12 or younger should ride in the back seat.

Many parents are under the false impression that children who have outgrown child safety seats can move right into safety belts but nothing could be further from the truth. Safety belts, which are designed to fit adults, won't fully restrain a child in a crash. Using a booster seat will better protect a child from being thrown from the vehicle or thrown around inside it during a crash. For more information about the proper use of booster seats, visit <http://www.boosterseat.gov>.

What do Muslims say about Moses?

Muslims respect Moses as one of the greatest Prophets. It is believed that he spoke to God directly. This is what He, the Almighty, says about Moses in His book, "... O Moses! I have chosen you above (other) men, by My Messages and by My speaking (to you). Take then the (revelation) which I have given you, and be of those who give thanks."

Md. College Plans Open Enrollment

The College Saving Plans of Maryland announced that the Maryland Prepaid College Trust, offering families an opportunity to lock in tomorrow's tuition at today's prices, has opened its 2004-05 enrollment period. This open enrollment will continue through March 18.

New Initiatives

Included in the new enrollment period, the College Savings Plans of Maryland board announced that for the first time since its inception, the Prepaid College Trust is open to 10th through 12th graders. They are now eligible for enrollment and may begin to use their account benefits after three years of investment maturity.

The Prepaid College Trust is also offering two new tuition plans: a one semester plan at a four year university and a one year plan at a community college. These options now offer more affordable ways for families to provide educational opportunities and help to promote gift giving by grandparents and other relatives.

In addition, down payment options have been reduced to 25 percent, 35 percent and 55 percent of the lump sum, with the remainder paid monthly or annually. Annual payments have been extended to allow for more affordable payments over more years.

"Based on our projections, today's infant who will graduate in 2025 should plan to pay more than $109,000 in tuition and mandatory fees at a Maryland public college. By enrolling now in the Prepaid College Trust, families could pay one-third to one-half of this projected tuition, even if they pay monthly until their infant graduates from high school," says Nancy K. Knopp, board chairman and state treasurer.

The Prepaid College Trust will pay full in-state tuition and mandatory fees at any Maryland public college or university when enrolled children reach college age. Tuition benefits may also be applied to nearly all other colleges and universities, public or private, around the nation.

New Rules

The board also announced new rates for the prepaid tuition contracts, with an increase of approximately 10.3 percent, the smallest for the past three years. Payments may be made in a lump sum, annually or monthly. The tuition and mandatory fees at Maryland public colleges, typically set each fall by the University System of Maryland Board of Regents, are key factors in determining rates.

The College Savings Plans of Maryland, an independent state agency, administers the Prepaid College Trust and another tax-advantaged 529 plan – the Maryland College Investment Plan, managed and distributed by T. Rowe Price. The College Investment Plan offers a choice of 12 investment portfolios with no sales commissions or loads. Families may enroll in one or both plans and may be eligible for a Maryland State income tax deduction of up to $2,500 per account or beneficiary, depending upon the plan.

Because enrolling in a 529 plan is an important decision, the College Savings Plans of Maryland recommends that consumers read all materials carefully. Visit the agency's website at www.collegesavingsmd.org or call 1-888-4MD-GRAD.

needed to create a bowl depends on the artist but in general the process of creating the bowl, allowing it to dry, trimming excess clay, firing it, glazing and firing again can take about a week.

Studio manager John Norden has provided a great deal of assistance to the artists during the process of creating the bowls.

Origins

The Empty Bowls Project was created in 1991 to provide support for food banks, soup kitchens and other organizations that fight hunger. The nonprofit organization Imagine/RENDER was created to promote the project. It has held events throughout the world, raising millions of dollars to combat hunger, with the goal of creating "positive and lasting social change through the arts, education and projects that build community."

In addition to the Empty Bowls Project, Imagine/RENDER sponsors garden projects to contribute to emergency food providers, workshops and seminars on such topics as sustainable and extended-season gardening and social justice through the arts.

Greenbelt resident Marsha Voigt is one of several hundred volunteers with Help-by-Phone. She serves on its board of directors. She explains that in addition to providing emergency food, Help-by-Phone sponsors two homeless shelters: Safe Haven, which can house up to 15 men; and Warm Nights, which provides temporary housing for families. The locations of these shelters rotate among volunteer churches, which provide meals and bedding with Help-by-Phone providing the cots.

Voigt states that there is a "tremendous shortage of shelters" in the metropolitan area and that Help-by-Phone receives no funds from Prince George's County.

nations of food and money, with some assistance from Help-by-Phone. Clients calling Help-by-Phone are directed to a food pantry, the location is determined jointly by the Help-by-Phone volunteer and the client, depending on the client's transportation resources and location. So as to serve as many people as possible, there is a limit on how many times per year a client can receive emergency food.

Last Year

This is not the first such event Greenbelt Pottery has sponsored. In May 2004 the group raised over $1,300 for Miriam's Kitchen, an organization that serves the homeless of Washington, D.C., by participating in the "One Hundred Bowls of Compassion" event.

Begun as a day program with the renovation of the Community Center in 1996 and incorporated in 2000, members of Greenbelt Pottery are quick to acknowledge the group's relationship with the Recreation Department and note that "they wouldn't be here without it." Member Pam Hagerhorst calls the pottery studio a "heart and soul place."

Greenbelter Hosts Book Launching

Peggi Jenyl Trusty has written a book of poems entitled "Unshackled." The book is a collection of 53 poems varying in subject matter. The poetry captures images from spirituality to love and from 9/11 events to abuse and single parenting. It demonstrates the depth of her thought and her ability to choreograph linguistics in a fanciful dance that appeals to not simply the heart but the lives of readers.

Trusty is a graduate of Bowie State University and Oakwood College in Alabama. She currently lives in Greenbelt. Her interest in writing became clear as a child when she won her first poetry prize in the sixth grade for a poem entitled "Dreams." She is currently working on her first novel, "Crucified," which tells a story of conversion during the time of Christ. Excerpts will be available on her website in the near future. Both poetry and story writing have become a realized, long-awaited goal.

Trusty will host a book launch party on March 3 from 6 to 8 p.m. for poetry lovers at the Hyattsville Branch of the Prince George's County Library System, Adelphi Road, Hyattsville.

Museum Offers Tours in Spanish

College Park Aviation Museum will offer guided tours in Spanish on Saturdays, March 5, April 2 and May 7 at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. The museum tells the story of the historic College Park Airport, founded by the Wright Brothers in 1909. The state-of-the-art museum features vintage aircraft and interactive, family-friendly exhibits. The Spanish-language tours will be led by museum volunteer Dina Louvis, who is a native of Coahuila, Mexico. There is a fee. Free parking is available at the museum at 1985 Cpl. Frank Scott Drive, College Park.

cookout while Derrick sat inside awaiting his destiny.

Waiting

"We had an idea he was going to get drafted but we didn't know," said Burgess. As draft day stretched on, no word was heard until Derrick rushed outside and grabbed his mother, proclaiming, "God is good. God is good."

"That was the time of our life," she said with a smile. Though an NFL salary and signing bonus for her son meant a new house for her in Greenbelt and sound financial security, Burgess stayed in the fast food business, taking the job of manager at Boston Market in College Park.

While her kids were growing up, she worked at Wendy's for over 19 years, contributing well beyond the average number of hours for a manager.

"We were supposed to work 50 hours a week, but I know I worked 60, 70 hours a week," she said. "Both of my kids [were] raised up in Wendy's." A highlight for Burgess was seeing founder Dave Thomas when he came to her store.

"I love what I do. I love managing. I love dealing with people," she said of her current position. "I'm doing this really for me." Burgess showed her work ethic during the interview - getting up several times to help a customer or co-worker in need despite her willingness to talk about her son.

Derrick, while a student at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, told her he was "going to get a good job because [he didn't] like to work hard," she fondly remembers. Whether this was a planned irony on Derrick's part is unknown.

Worries

Of injury worries before Derrick's professional career, Burgess said that staying healthy was more important than the money involved.

"[For] two seasons he was injured real bad," she said. "Every time he gets out there I'm worried about him." The worry stems at least partly from past occurrences - Derrick's father, Willie Cooper, played college football in North Carolina until he separated his right shoulder - never playing again. Derrick's cousin suffered a similarly devastating injury and Derrick's own football career has been marred by injury.

When Derrick was young, his mother was wary of the danger involved in football and wanted her son to play basketball instead. Her rationale changed when Derrick received a full scholarship to the University of Mississippi, among other offers.

"When my baby started playing, that made me a fan," she said.

As a fan, she attended this year's NFC Championship Game between the Atlanta Falcons and the Philadelphia Eagles. She erupted in cheers as her son sacked Michael Vick to help lead the Eagles to the Super Bowl.

"Everyone was yelling his name. I was yelling, 'I'm his mom!'" she recalled.

Though her son is 26 with a wife and two kids, Burgess doesn't fail to take a large role in her son's life, teaching him to be humble despite his successes.

"I tell him to put God first and go ahead on," she said.

A short time later, they returned to the store, with one of them displaying a handgun and announcing a robbery. The suspects are described as two black males in their twenties, one is 6'1" with a heavy build and black hair, wearing a camouflage jacket, a white T-shirt, blue jeans and tan boots. The other is 6'2" with a thin build, wearing a gray sweat jacket and blue jeans.

Hybrid Car Parade Supports Clean Cars

On Saturday February 26 a caravan of hybrid vehicles from Prince George's County including a contingent from Greenbelt will leave for Annapolis to join over 100 hybrid cars from the region to show support for the Maryland Clean Cars Act. The cars will drive in circles around the Maryland Statehouse and the Governor's Mansion and then drivers will meet on foot for a rally to promote the bill.

The parade, to begin at noon, will come just days before the Maryland House of Delegates holds a hearing on the Clean Cars Act. This bill would add Maryland to a list of eight other states, including California and New Jersey, that require the sale of cleaner cars within their states.

Separate caravans of hybrid vehicles will leave rendezvous sites on Saturday morning from Frederick, Salisbury, Washington, D.C., Montgomery County and Baltimore. The caravans will converge in Annapolis at the Navy football stadium parking lot for the parade through the capital. The post-parade rally, set to begin at 1 p.m., will feature elected officials, health experts and environmental leaders.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter. Citizens may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 301-507-6522.

Fire & Rescue Log

The Fire Department Log is a bi-weekly report of the activities and news from the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, Inc. (GVFD). The report includes recent incidents, GVFD news and upcoming events, fire safety and other fire department related information.

Incident Report

From February 5 to February 18 the GVFD responded to a total of 51 engine and 76 ambulance calls. Among those calls were 17 reports of smoke or fire, one automatic fire alarm, 24 motor vehicle accidents and 61 medical calls.

Emergency Vehicles

Maryland law requires vehicle drivers to move to the curb and stop when an emergency vehicle is approaching. On a divided highway vehicles should move to the nearest shoulder but not cross in front of the emergency vehicle. When an emergency vehicle using its lights and sirens approaches, motorists should not panic, not make rash moves that can be dangerous and not pull back out into traffic without first checking rear-view mirrors to make certain other emergency vehicles are not approaching. At an intersection motorists should make every effort to get out of an approaching emergency vehicle's way but not enter the intersection in front of on-coming traffic on a red light. Most importantly motorists should never pass or ride alongside an emergency vehicle with its lights and sirens on and should remain well behind the vehicle.

Volunteers Sought

The GVFD seeks volunteers age 16 and up to become firefighters, emergency medical technicians or perform administrative work. All training is provided and the time commitment is flexible. For information call the station at 301-345-7000, visit the website at www.engine35.com or stop by the station to speak with an officer.

Questions and comments regarding this report or any fire department issues can be directed to public-info@engine35.com or to 301-345-7000.

Metzger Invites Jazz Lovers to Class

Delve into the mind of jazz vibist and composer Jon Metzger, who coaches University of Maryland students in a music master class on Monday, February 28 at 10:30 a.m. The free program takes place in the Gildenhorn Recital Hall of the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center.

Back Fund, a nonprofit group that raises funds for future terrorist victims. Performing were about 100 skaters, young and old, from amateur to former Olympians like Nancy Kerrigan. Murphy had sent an audition tape to the organizers last summer and had the good fortune several weeks later to be chosen to perform.

For the Murphy family, there's a special meaning for taking part in the event. Alice's younger brother was friends with a young girl who, along with her family, was on the plane that crashed into the Pentagon that morning. In the end, Murphy felt it was a proper way not only to honor her but everyone else who died that day.

As Murphy goes back to practicing with her coach for a local competition this February, her mother Susy is proud of her daughter. "She's always done a good job balancing different things. It's great. Since skating requires strong focus and discipline, she uses that approach to other tasks like her schoolwork," she said.

Her coach, Christine Brinton, also praised Murphy for her work ethic. "She practices hard on every lesson and tries her best to perfect every new movement she learns," said Brinton.

In addition to her practices, Murphy volunteers to help instructors teach figure skating to young children at Wells Ice Rink in College Park. When asked what makes a good skater, she thinks a combination of training hard and good coaching are important. "You can be a talented jumper but your spins might not look good. It's all about skaters looking artistic and graceful in their form," said Murphy.

Wells Ice Rink Holds Sunday Competition

Six different ice rinks ranging from Maryland to New Jersey are sending skaters to compete at Wells Ice Rink on Sunday, February 27 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Beginners to advanced skaters will compete in this free event. Among the participants are Greenbelters Charlie and Alice Murphy, Chris Bonnell and Abby Feresten.

A group from Wells Ice Rink won first place at another competition last weekend with a production number of "Oklahoma." Suzy Murphy, mother of Charlie and Alice, told the News Review, "we hope to win again this Sunday."

Wells Ice Rink is located at 5211 Paint Branch Parkway, College Park.

Opt-out aggregation allows for a large enough pool of customers to negotiate favorable terms and avoid marketing costs. The reduced expenses of opt-out aggregation are passed on as savings for residents.

Under terms of the legislation, the Public Service Commission could not approve an aggregation request by a municipality (or group of municipalities) unless the city or town can provide lower electricity rates than the standard offer service rates.

Legion Oratorical Contest Has Only One Presenter

by Matt Johnson

Last Sunday four local high school students were invited by the American Legionnaires of Greenbelt to participate in their annual oratorical contest for a chance to win money for college. None showed up.

However, all was not lost. A junior orator from Eleanor Roosevelt High School stepped in to save the day. College Park resident Deborah Shroder represented American Legion Post 217 with a prepared speech on the U.S. Constitution and an analysis of the Fifth Amendment.

Shroder, a chemistry lover, took up oration at the urging of her neighbor Bill Robertson, also present at the event.

While not an official contestant, she delighted the audience of Knights (of Columbus) and Legionnaires, stressing as important such democratic practices as voting and paying taxes.

"If you do not vote, you become like unto a slave," she said, mindful of her 10-minute cutoff time in the contest simulation. Shroder received a $100 donation for her presentation.

A panel of five judges presided, including Mayor Judith F. Davis. Davis saw the contest as a good way for a young person to "get involved in being an American" and become a future leader. Other judges included a board member from Prince George's County schools and a local attorney.

Presentation

Immediately following the oration was the Pete Labukas Tootsie Roll Bowl game ball presentation. The ball, exhibiting the signatures of those who played in the Tootsie Roll Campaign's fifth annual flag football game last Veterans' Day, was presented to Fidelia Nwachukwu and her daughter Ucee.

"I feel so proud," said the widowed Nwachukwu, whose husband Ignatius died last October. Brother Knight Ignatius Nwachukwu was honored along with Labukas, a former college football player and high school football coach who died in 1998. The late Labukas was also a World War II veteran and founder of the Tootsie Roll Campaign.

The Tootsie Roll Campaign is a state project to raise funds for the mentally handicapped, explained Pete's daughter Kathy Labukas, who was present on Sunday.

Larry Hilliard, a warden in the Knights and an event organizer, said he would choose the word "irony" above all others to describe this event. Among other ironies, the game ball presentation took place on the same day in which the New England Patriots defeated the Philadelphia Eagles to win its third Superbowl in four years.

When the presentations were over and the refreshments served, the question still remained as to why the contestants did not show up, knowing they would have the opportunity to win money for college.

"Out of 14 years only one has been successful," said Legionnaire Tony Sanchez, the official timekeeper, regarding the oratorical contest's history at the Greenbelt Legion. Sanchez and others were confused as to why local high schoolers, who have what it takes to compete, would pass up the opportunity to do so.

Shroder said with some certainty that the lack of show was due to "lack of efficient communication between the [American Legion] Post and the high schools."

Despite the contestant turnout, Davis commended Paul Durance and the rest of the Legionnaires for their determination in organizing the contest.

"It's got to be a big disappointment but they're going to be willing to do this again next year," she said.
