City Supports State Legislation On Mansions, Police Bonuses

by Barbara Hopkins

At the Greenbelt City Council meeting on February 13, council looked with favor at three bills before the state legislature this term – one concerning building regulations to control the size of new housing in existing neighborhoods, one concerning bonuses for police officers and a third permitting municipalities to purchase and operate street lights.

House Bill PG/MC 106 would add structural dimensions and lot coverage to the features for which a municipality in Montgomery County may adopt stricter building regulations than those of the county itself. An amendment to the bill in process would expand its application as well to Prince George's County.

According to city staff, the Prince George's County Municipal Association considers this bill an attempt to control the building of mansions in existing single-family neighborhoods. The association supports the bill with the proposed amendment.

Police Bonuses

Council considered a bill that would establish a special fund for sign-on and retention bonuses for county police officers. The bill would increase by one percent the Homestead Property Tax Cap to raise money for the special fund.

Delegate Justin Ross introduced the bill and then proposed amendments that would share 50 percent of the revenue generated within a municipality with that municipality if it has its own police department. Half the money in the special fund would be used for sign-on bonuses and half for retention. Municipalities would control how shared funds could be used within their departments.

Assistant City Manager David Moran expressed concern about the bill's chances for success. Achieving equity in pay within a police department would be difficult, he said, in that newer hires would receive bonuses not available to seasoned officers.

The bill mandates a county tax increase, which may also make passage difficult, he said. Still, staff recommended council support for the bill and its amendments.

Street Lights

The Town of Kensington has requested Greenbelt's support for Senate Bill 296 that would permit municipalities to purchase and operate street lights from the local electric company. Kensington officials believe its passage would save money for municipalities.

Moran said city staff had not yet researched the fiscal effect of this bill on Greenbelt but information supplied by Kensington Councilmember Al Carr declared that the town of Lexington, Mass., expects operation of its street light system to be less than $300,000 annually, a savings of more than $200,000 compared to what it had paid the local utility.

George Mathews and Glen Ivey Discuss Police Work with Dems

by James Giese

Crime was the topic of presentation by this year's "Sweethearts" to the Greenbelt Democratic Club. Each February the club selects a career city employee and a Democratic elected official as Sweethearts, giving each selectee an opportunity to talk about his or her work. This year Master Police Officer George Mathews and Prince George's County State's Attorney Glen Ivey were chosen. They spoke at the club's February 17 meeting.

President Pat Unger introduced Mathews, a nearly 20-year member of the Greenbelt Police Department. He is now serving as its Crime Prevention Officer and Community Relations Officer. She noted that Mathews would go to a resident's home or to any meeting to which he might be invited in order to help residents take precautions to protect themselves against crime. Unger noted that he was also the person seen on television speaking for the department about any crime incident.

Mathews said he felt fortunate to be able to talk to the people that he's been working for in Greenbelt. He called Greenbelt a very caring community and took note of the city's many citizen committees.

Class 1 Crimes, the most serious, have dropped more than two percent in 2005 as compared with 2004, he told the group. He particularly noted the significant drop in stolen vehicles over the past five years: down from 435 in 2001 to 296 in 2005. That trend is continuing with only 12 thefts reported this year for an annual rate of 87.

He attributed the decline to luck, a change in crime activities and the use of anti-theft devices.

MPO George Mathews, this year's Greenbelt Democratic Club city employee "Sweetheart," receives from club president Pat Unger the traditional box of candy after his February 17 talk to the group.

Mathews is able to make group purchases of steering wheel locking devices at a greatly reduced price. He has been able to get a number of employers and community groups to make combined purchases of more than 25 devices and urged those interested to contact him.

Mathews noted the disturbing increase in Class 1 crimes against

Local Potters Create Works Of Art for "Empty Bowls"

by Virginia Beauchamp

For the second year in a row, members of Greenbelt Pottery, Inc. and pottery students who work out of the Community Center will sponsor an Empty Bowls project as a fundraiser for Help-by-Phone, which provides funds for eight Prince George's County food pantries.

In preparation for the event, which will take place at the Community Church on Saturday, March 11 from 4 to 7 p.m., local potters are creating dozens of individual bowls in many different colors and shapes. Some are wheel-thrown, some hand-built, some have a decorative edge or design and all are glazed and stamped with the Empty Bowls logo. Last year participant potters made altogether something over 230 bowls.

Each attendee who arrives for the simple meal of soup and bread on March 11 may then choose from among this wide array of bowls for one to take home. With help from Community Church members, the supper last year, which offered a wide variety of soups to choose from, also included salads, desserts and coffee.

Empty Bowls is a project of the Imagine/Render Group, a nonprofit organization that seeks "to create positive and lasting social change through the arts, education and projects that build community." Last year's event, considered a great success, raised over $3,600 for the charity.

Advance tickets will be available

Council Approves Changes Sought by Advisory Boards

by Barbara Hopkins

The Policy and Information Guide for Recognition and Contribution Groups and associated application materials were amended on February 12 by the Greenbelt City Council, acting on the recommendation of the Arts Advisory Board (AAB) and the Park and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB). The two boards had reviewed the materials and policy in anticipation of the budget process for Fiscal Year 2007.

The changes clarify that political and religious organizations are not eligible for consideration as contribution or recognition groups. The guide defines political organizations as those with a mission that includes the effort "to affect law or public policy at the local, county, state or federal level."

Religious organizations are defined as groups "having both an affiliation with a religious organization or tradition and a mission which includes proselytizing activities and/or the facilitation of worship practices."

Historically, religious or political groups have not been considered as contribution or recognition groups; nevertheless, after reviewing the application materials and policies, AAB and PRAB recommended that this fact be explicitly stated in the associated written materials.

Eligible organizations may petition the city for support during each budget cycle. That support can be financial or in the form of access to city venues and services. While discussing

Thanks are given to the Red Cross personnel and volunteers for their outstanding service.

Thanks Greenbelt

I would like to thank the city of Greenbelt for the replacement of the plaque for Justine Shoop.

The mayor, city manager and Public Works Department were wonderful and very understanding.

This is what many of Justine's friends and family wanted me to relate to the city staff. Many heartfelt thanks.

Rick Calhoun

THANKS

My husband Robert and I want to thank the two young men who came to our rescue last Thursday, February 16. We were walking toward the underpass leading to Roosevelt Center at about 8 a.m. when we slipped on some ice. Robert was knocked unconscious and while I was wondering what to do two young men rushed up to help. None of us was carrying a cell phone, so when Robert was able to walk, they helped him back to our house. I was then able to drive him to the emergency room.

I neglected to get their names but I want them to know how much their assistance on that cold, cold morning warmed my heart.

Sylvia J. Lewis

P.S. Robert has recovered but is sporting some spectacularly colorful bruises!

Puppet Performance Rescheduled Mar. 4

The Black Cherry Puppet Theatre free performance of "Billy Goats Gruff-kin" on February 12 was snowed out. It has been rescheduled for Saturday, March 4. The show is ideal for youngsters ages 3 to 8. The show is at 3 p.m. at the Old Parish House (4711 Knox Road at the corner of Dartmouth Avenue in College Park).

The performance features lavishly designed puppets performing a classic Scandinavian story as interpreted by Michael T. Lamason. It also uses a sound track by the performance art group "Laughing Tree."

Advance registration is appreciated. For more information contact the College Park Arts Exchange at 301-927-3013 or by email at info@cpae.org.

Correction

In last week's obituary for David L. Evans, gremlins were at work turning Evans' recognized, well-known trade of printer into "painter" somewhere in the editing process. He might have laughed but we're embarrassed. The News Review regrets the error.

GROUPS

the recommended changes, Mayor Judith Davis said that political or religious activity may not be central to an approved organization's mission, yet approved groups may occasionally engage in activities of a political or religious nature.

The revised materials indicate that approved groups would not be eligible for city funding or for free use of city facilities for even occasional political or religious activities. City facilities may be rented for such use.

The information guide now contains language expecting groups to uphold Greenbelt's Community Pledge, which says: "The strength of Greenbelt is diverse people living together in a spirit of cooperation. We celebrate people of many cultures, faiths and races living together. By sharing together all are enriched. We pledge to foster a community which is respectful, safe and fair for all people."

City Manager Michael McLaughlin explained that a requirement for groups to provide a financial report from a certified public accountant has been removed because of the expense involved for groups to comply. The revised policy gives the city the option to require such a report but does not mandate it from all groups. In addition, new applicants for contribution/recognition group status will now be required to send a representative to meet with the advisory board that reviews the group's application.

The revised policy and application papers will be distributed to requesting groups for the FY 2007 budget cycle.

March's Artful Afternoon To Feature Latin America

The Artful Afternoon program on Sunday, March 5 at the Community Center will offer participants a musical tour of Latin America. In addition to other offerings, a free, family-friendly concert will take place at 3 p.m. featuring musical duo Cantaré.

Cantaré will perform at 3 p.m. on Sunday.

Artists Patricia Vergara of Brazil and Cecilia Esquivel of Argentina draw audiences into the fusion that results when diverse traditions come together. The duo shares music shaped by Latin America, Europe and Africa with jazz, reggae and indigenous influences.

Cecilia Esquivel, originally of Ecuador, trained in both music and social work, has a perspective on bringing musical influences and traditions to reach diverse people with a rich melding of culture. Vergara, who trained as a classical pianist since age 7, was raised in Brazil and Bolivia and has been teaching and performing worldwide. The artists comment, "through music we can learn about the many things that different people have in common with each other, how we interrelate and how we can make beautiful music when we learn from each other. Through a song we can relate to people from other countries, get to know them better, learn about their customs and traditions and even about their geography, flora and fauna."

Concert-goers are encouraged to arrive early at the Community Center and join Artist-in-residence Elyn Weiss for a surrealist drawing activity from 1 to 3 p.m. Weiss says, "I believe that the best art, like music, speaks directly to the heart without mediation or explanation."

The Community Center Art Gallery will be displaying the new exhibition "Lifelines: Photography by Lynn Silverman," which is on view from February 25 through April 7. Silverman, a faculty member at the Maryland Institute College of Art, offers a series of meditations on the origin and transmission of energy and light. Daily Art Gallery hours are: 9 a.m. through 9:45 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 9 a.m. to 6:45 p.m. on Sundays, whenever the room is not reserved (to confirm access call 301-397-2208).

A Review

Doctor/Playwright/Actor Debuts Off-Broadway

by Elizabeth Jordan

James Jordan, son of Stuart and Elizabeth Jordan of Lakeside Drive, was the author, producer and actor of a one-man, multimedia production held throughout January in an off-Broadway theater near Times Square. His play, "CJD," was based on Cruetzfeldt-Jakob Disease, a neuro-degenerative condition similar to Mad Cow Disease. "CJD" was part of NEUROfest, a festival of avant-garde plays relating to neurological disorders.

James, a neurologist in his second year of residency at Case Western Hospital in Cleveland, also holds an undergraduate degree in dramatic writing from New York University. In addition to entertaining his rapt audience during the 90-minute performance, Jordan had three clear objectives: to pay homage to Mr. Small (pseudonym), one of his patients who died of CJD; to ridicule the ignorance, superstition and greed that impede scientific and medical progress around the world; and to educate the audience about CJD and other Prion diseases that afflict humans and animals.

Tracing these diseases and their treatment through history, Dr. Jordan graphically described their effects, which include involuntary jerking of the muscles, an unsteady wobbly gait, a pronounced startle reflex, heightened apprehension and a growing dementia as the brain turns quickly into a malfunctioning spongy mass. There is no known treatment. Prion diseases are always fatal.

Jordan chose "Performance Art" as the vehicle for his production. Performance Art is an individualistic, often unstructured theatrical genre that may employ many means of creative expression, including narration, unexpected actions, sights, sounds and bizarre props to convey the author's intent.

Wearing a crisp white lab coat, Dr. Jordan was at times a calm, compassionate physician demonstrating the medical procedures he had performed on his patient. At other times he was an impersonator who changed hats as he moved frenetically around a stage that consisted of a piano, a drum stand supporting a pair of bongo drums, a stark-white model of a human head that rose on a pole behind the piano, a blacked human skull stuck on a staff surrounded by a primitive grass skirt, an Indian chief's horned-buffalo headdress, an executioner's mask, a magician's top hat, party noisemakers, a revolver and various other props.

Film from a projector was continually displayed on a screen at the back of the stage. Images of serious scientific studies were mixed with cartoons and symbols of pop culture familiar to everyone: vampires, hangmen, cannibals, ads from pharmaceutical companies, etc. Jordan's performance suggested that a physician often experiences helplessness and anger when confronted with the tragicomic human condition.

As an image of the troubled Beethoven appeared on the screen, Jordan, a pianist, played a Beethoven piece on the piano. And he played a piece he had composed himself to illustrate another scene.

But always throughout the performance, the doctor returned to his intense interaction with his patient. The two men had bonded during Mr. Small's lucid period. They shared a love of baseball and Mr. Small frequently expressed loyalty for his beloved Cleveland Indians. The possibility that the Cleveland Indians had a chance to get into the World Series that particular year was their mutual topic of conversation. Near the end of the play, Dr. Jordan said in a soft voice, "But Mr. Small was dying. And he was a good man." Then he turned to the audience, saying, "Let's all sing one for Mr. Small." And as the lights dimmed, he began playing the piano and singing a joyous rendition of "Take Me Out to the Ballgame."

James Jordan was born in Greenbelt and attended public schools here.

Who is Muhammad? Part 1

Muhammad (570-623 AD), peace be upon him, is not worshipped by any Muslim, nor is he the "founder" of Islam.

The Greenbelt City Council voted unanimously to support each of these three state bills.

City Ordinances

Council introduced two new ordinances that would streamline the city's budget and accounting processes. One ordinance would close the Temporary Disability and Unemployment Compensation Fund at the end of Fiscal Year 2006. If the ordinance is adopted, transactions now accounted for in these funds will be shown in the non-departmental account of the General Fund beginning in Fiscal Year 2007.

According to materials prepared on the subject by Moran, the change will streamline accounting methods without jeopardizing "the quality of the city's financial records." The change will have no effect on payment of temporary disability and unemployment compensation benefits provided to eligible city employees.

A second ordinance introduced would simplify purchases of less than $1,000 by allowing them to be made at the departmental level instead of by written purchase order. Currently the upper threshold for departmental purchases is $500. Purchases must still be within the budget appropriation and approved by a department head.

Both ordinances will come before council on February 27 for second reading and adoption.

Truck Repair

Council also introduced for first reading a resolution for repair of the hydraulic arm on the city's aerial lift truck by RMS of Westminster. This repair, already done, has extended the life of the truck, according to City Manager Michael McLaughlin. The resolution is necessary because the repair, which involved replacement of all hydraulic hoses in the boom and repair of the emergency letdown system, exceeded $10,000 by $382.

Street Repair

While money from the city budget and from a Community Development Block Grant has been allocated for road work on Breezewood Drive and parts of Ridge Road, these amounts will not cover the full cost of the projects. The city depends on contributions as well from the state through Highway User Funds and other sources.

However, McLaughlin explained that state officials have backed off this year from the offer of such support saying the funds are just not available. He encouraged council to approve the award of purchase for $330,000 to NZI Construction Corporation of Beltsville for the work.

If the questioned state support does fall through, he said, the city would need to scale back projects for 2007 to cover the insufficiency. Council agreed to this arrangement.

Councilmember Edward V.J. Putens asked that staff distribute flyers throughout involved neighborhoods prior to the onset of concrete work so that home-owners could undertake their own contracts with NZI, if they so desire. This could enable home-owners to accomplish concrete work on their property at a reduced rate, since the contractor would be in the area working anyway.

persons, up by 40 percent. He said residents need to be aware of what is around them. "If something doesn't look right, turn around, go away and call the police," he said. He noted that homicides did not appear to be on the rise, however, with an average of less than two a year.

The time spent by officers patrolling on bicycle has increased by nine percent.

Certification

Mathews said that the Police Department is working very hard to become certified, something that has been accomplished by only a small number of police jurisdictions. The certification is done by the Committee on Accreditation of Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA), with 438 criteria required. In May the department will go through a preliminary three-day assessment by CALEA. MPO Carl Schinner is in charge of the certification program, ongoing for three years.

Mathews announced that the officers of the police department are getting old. Within five years, 40 percent of the uniformed personnel will be eligible for retirement, which will present a challenge to the city. A fierce competition exists now to recruit new officers among other departments and Homeland Security as well.

Mathews is one of two officers teaching the D.A.R.E. (Drug Awareness and Resistance Education) program in elementary schools. He works at Springhill Lake. He loves working in the elementary schools, he said.

He wants to reach out to as many kids as possible and carries with him little badges to pass out to kids. He gave out one at Wendy's recently, he said, while getting something to eat and was soon surrounded by a group of kids wanting their own badges.

For the culmination of the D.A.R.E. program, the participants are asked to write essays. Kids with the best essays were taken bowling at Jillians at Arundel Mills. Capitol Cadillac provided the department with two Hummers to transport them. Mathews was as pleased to get to drive one as the kids were to ride in them.

Keith Chernikoff asked about the department's approach to drug trafficking. "We have a low tolerance," Mathews responded. The officers aggressively enforce the laws against illegal drug use. "We will lock up persons for possession or for having drug paraphernalia," he said. The department has an undercover narcotics officer who looks very different from other officers, he said.

He works to get intelligence to investigate a case.

When asked, Mathews noted that over half of the city's crimes occur in Greenbelt West, the area west of Kenilworth Avenue and south of the Beltway including the Springhill Lake apartments, Beltway Plaza Mall and the Greenbelt Metro Station. He said the biggest problem was with young people committing crimes there.

With the expected replacement of the Springhill Lake apartments with new mostly luxury buildings and the development of Greenbelt Station at the Metro Station, he expects an amazing change in the area, including an increase in the size of the department by five or six officers.

In response to another question, Mathews said that Greenbelt used to be free of gangs, but that he couldn't be sure of that now. "You don't have to go far down the street [away from Greenbelt] to see gang activity," he said.

Glen Ivey

The second honoree, State's Attorney Glen Ivey, picked up on analyzing the crime situation from where Mathews left off. He said that one of the challenges is that people are getting drugs and guns at a younger age. "It used to be that kids got into fist fights," he said. "Now they are shot or killed."

Ivey deals with homicide cases resulting from simple insults. In one case, the killing resulted because a person was called a "clown."

"There are too many guns, too many people losing their tempers over trivial things," he said.

Ivey announced that "If it's illegal and you're carrying a gun, I ask the judge for another year of sentence." He is trying to get gang members to stop carrying guns. He is really pushing the prevention side of dealing with crime, he said. "It's better to stop it from happening than to prosecute for doing it."

Providing kids with positive role models is the key, he said. He told how Juan Dixon, who grew up in a dysfunctional family in Baltimore, had been able to become a Maryland basketball player because of the wonderful support system for good athletes.

The same is needed for kids who do not have athletic skills and who go to schools such as Forest Heights, he pointed out, where only eight students made the honor roll and only two were boys. "We need to give the same level of support to kids if they are academically inclined as if they are athletically inclined."

Unfortunately, for too many youths, he pointed out, the support system they find is with gangs such as MS13 and Crips. "If you're not an athlete and Latino, MS13 will come after you. They set the standard. Once you've been beaten for initiation, they are there to help each other. There is active gang recruitment across the county," he said.

Not much is offered as an alternative to gangs, Ivey said. He is trying to get the churches involved and to offer weekday programs for youths.

"We accept excuses for poor students that we wouldn't accept for those participating in athletics. At schools, the percentage of kids in food programs is not an excuse for fielding poor sport teams. However, he said, it is

Open Workshop On Orchids

What type of potting medium do orchids prefer? How large a container should they be in? At what stage of growth should they be repotted?

Clive Atyeo, an expert gardener for the U.S. Botanic Garden orchid collection, will present a workshop on orchids. Atyeo will demonstrate orchid repotting and answer questions about orchid culture.

This event will take place on Friday, March 3 from noon to 2 p.m. in the conservatory jungle. No preregistration is required for this free program.

in Room 305, the ceramic studio in the Community Center, on Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. and on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Since last year's event was a sell-out, the sponsoring group strongly recommends purchasing tickets in advance. Having a known headcount is also crucial for those preparing food for the event.

For ticket information contact Marsha Voigt at 301-345-7631. Voigt, a Greenbelt resident, is one of several hundred volunteers with Help-by-Phone, where she serves on the board of directors.

Besides providing emergency food, the group sponsors two homeless shelters, which rotate among volunteer churches where they provide meals and bedding for cots, which are provided by Help-by-Phone. The organization receives no funds from Prince George's County.

Volunteer churches engaged in the project maintain food pantries, largely through donations of food and money from Help-by-Phone. Clients calling Help-by-Phone are directed to a food pantry, the location determined jointly by the Help-by-Phone volunteer and the client, depending on the client's resources and location.

In order to serve as many people as possible, clients are limited as to how often per year they may receive emergency food.

Pruning Basics Workshop Offered

Late winter to early spring is the best time of year to prune many plants in temperate landscapes. Join Gardener Shaun Abell of the U.S. Botanic Garden for a discussion of pruning techniques. This workshop will take place on Friday, March 3 in the Botanic Garden Conservatory Classroom from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. This event is free but pre-registration is required.

For more information and/or to register call 202-225-8333.

ERHS Student Designs New Logo for Police Car

by Cathryn Simon and Miki Haber, ERHS Students

Eleanor Roosevelt High School senior Dillon Powell designed the new logo that is on the front hood of School Resource Officer MPO John Rogers' police car.

Last year in Computer Graphics 2, Powell used high-end drawing software to create the new Roosevelt Raider logo (the school's mascot) as a joke, to show his friends that he could do it. "I didn't really like the current logo and I was bored," says Powell when asked why he decided to create it.

The new Raider logo is on the Eleanor Roosevelt website and on the new student identification cards. "I feel proud of myself," says Powell when asked how he feels whenever he sees his logo around the school.

About the same time the Greenbelt Police Department wanted to create a unique design that would reflect the relationship between the school and the police department. Rogers said that "the department decided it would be neat for students to design the logo." School Resource Officer Marty Parker turned to Linda Cunningham, the graphic design teacher at the school. She in turn put Parker in contact with 17-year-old Powell. His design was displayed at the front of the school for everyone to see. When Rogers first asked, Powell was not sure he wanted to accept the job because he did not think he was up to it. After a few days, he decided to accept. Powell's design includes the best of the "Roosevelt Raider" mascot, with a large "R" for Raider in the school colors adorning almost the entire hood. He also created an "Eleanor Roosevelt High School Resource Unit" decal for both the left and right rear quarter panels.

Powell also designed the logo for "Suessical the Musical," the website for the football team and is currently working on a design for the football team jerseys.

PGC Schools Survey Nutrition, Wellness

Prince George's County School Board member Abby Crowley reported that efforts are underway to develop a School Wellness Policy.

There is a widespread recognition that childhood obesity is reaching epidemic proportions and that building healthy eating and physical activity habits is important to the long-term health of the nation. The U.S. Congress enacted legislation last year mandating that all school systems develop comprehensive student health and wellness policies to be implemented no later than the first day of the 2006-2007 school year.

"The Board's Instruction and Accountability Committee, which I chair, has taken on the leadership for this effort, in conjunction with the Prince George's County Student Health Council, a multidisciplinary body made up of professionals and stakeholders," said Crowley, a Greenbelt resident. "The federal government has given school boards guidance on what the policy can include but we need the public's help in designing a policy that will best fit the needs of our students."

"To this end, we are asking students, parents, school system staff and members of the community to take a few minutes to go on-line and complete a survey indicating your preferences and opinions regarding health education, foods served at school and physical education," Crowley said.

In early spring the draft policy will be presented to the full board and posted on the website. There will be opportunity for public comment at a board worksession prior to final board approval. In addition, the board is working with student and parent groups to fully engage the community in development of a policy that will have long-term impact on the health of children.

School wellness policies include goals for nutrition education and physical activity, school-based activities designed to promote student wellness and nutrition standards for all foods and beverages available on each school campus.

The Prince George's County Public School system invites parents of children in the system and all stakeholders to give their opinion about issues to include in a School Wellness Policy through a web survey sponsored by the Board of Education and the Prince George's County School Health Council. Responses are anonymous and confidential.

Visit <http://schools.pgcps.org/wellness/selectsurvey.htm> and select the Parent Survey, Student Survey or the Community/PGCPS Staff Survey.

Those who do not have ready access to the internet can contact a local public school or library for assistance in completing the survey.

Written comments regarding the nutrition and wellness program in the Prince George's County schools may be sent to Daniel Townsend, director of Student Nutrition Services, Department of Food and Nutrition, 13300 Old Marlboro Pike, Room 8, Upper Marlboro, MD, 20772.

FY07 Education Budget Set at $1.5 Billion

A $1.5 billion operating budget request approved by the Prince George's County Board of Education for Fiscal Year 2007 would expand pre-kindergarten, increase special education and provide additional personnel and resources to better prepare students for critical state assessment exams.

Emphasizing the need to continue funding programs that have raised student achievement over the last two years, the Board of Education submission to the County Executive provides a 9.3 percent increase in funds over Fiscal Year 2006. The Maryland High School Assessment is a major point of emphasis as the school system seeks to help students meet new graduation requirements. For two years in a row Prince George's County elementary and middle school students have made significant gains in their reading and mathematics scores on the Maryland assessment.

The budget development process included three public forums in October and November to receive public input on budget priorities. The Board of Education held three public hearings in January and public work sessions on the budget in January and February. Additionally, the school system surveyed public opinion on its website.

The County Executive will consider the Board's budget request along with other county services in developing his proposed FY 07 budget for Prince George's County, which must be presented to the County Council by March 31. The County Council will hold public hearings and work sessions on the County Executive's proposal in April and May before adopting a budget for the county by June 1. The Board of Education will meet in June to reconcile its FY 07 budget request with amounts approved by the County Council and adopt a final budget by June 30, submitting any related transfers to the County Council for approval in June or July.

The FY 07 proposed budget includes more than $109.6 million in program improvements. Included is funding for improved performance on Maryland High School Assessments; expansion of pre-kindergarten and early childhood programs; increased compensation for teachers and staff, additional special education teachers and services, guidance counselors, fine arts, middle and high school teachers, elementary library media specialists and school nurses. There is also funding for new textbooks, library media books and technology refresh; increased summer, evening, Saturday and alternative/extended learning opportunities; English language learners' parent liaisons and specialists; new schools and school instructional resources; mandatory in-school suspension centers in middle and high schools; athletic equipment and uniforms.

Following enactment of the Bridge to Excellence Act, the county school system developed a five-year strategic plan to serve as the organizing document and driving force of the school system. The Quality Schools Program Strategic Plan presents a long-range action plan for improving the achievement of all students; maintaining a safe, orderly and productive environment within all schools; improving management efficiency, effectiveness and accountability; improving business and community partnerships and creating and retaining a quality work force. The strategic plan is available to the public online at www.pgcps.org.

Registration Deadline For ACT Test Nears

College-bound high school students can take the ACT Assessment on April 8, the next nationwide test date. The registration postmark deadline is March 3. Late registration postmark deadline is March 17.

Students can receive registration and fee information from their high school guidance counselors or they can register online at www.actstudent.org. The website also features test tips, practice tests, online test prep and a database for students to find out if a prospective college requires a writing score.

ACT scores are accepted by virtually all colleges and universities in the nation, including all Ivy League schools. Scores are used, along with a student's high school GPA, high school courses taken, extracurricular activities and other information to help determine if a student is academically ready for college-level course work.

The ACT Assessment is an achievement test that includes four exams; English, reading, math and science. Students who take the optional writing test will add 30 minutes to the 3-hour normal testing time.

Greek Myth Revival Becomes New Musical at Arts Center

by Anne Gardner

The new musical "Perseus and the Gorgon," written and directed by Chris Cherry and performed by a talented group of teenagers, opened at Greenbelt Arts Center on Friday, February 17 to an appreciative audience.

There was much for the whole family to enjoy, with witty dialog and humor delivered very well by the young cast and songs ranging from the clever lyrics of "Off to see the Oracle" and "Here in the Hallowed Hall of Handsome Heroes." These songs and some beautiful lyrical numbers were expertly accompanied by Stefan Brodd on piano and Jeff Morissette on percussion.

A previous version of the musical, the enjoyable "Snakehead and Stoneface," was performed last summer by the Creative Kids Camp as a narrated story with songs. The new version features more songs and dialog to replace the narration and includes costumes and props as well.

While some of the dancing was a little self-conscious and the singing a little weak at first, there was no denying the talent of the young performers and the hard work put into producing the show.

Annie Loutsch displayed

a beautiful singing voice as Queen Danaë, Mason Trappio was a charismatic Dactys and the engaging Perseus (Ian Brown-Gorrell) and the Gorgon (Elise Flynn) showed particularly good acting skills. Dayna Burrows and Cody Sanders also did a good job as Queen Cassiopeia and King Acrisius. And the underground rock band of moles is not to be missed!

The story involves two kingdoms and two royal babies: a princess who disappears shortly after birth and a prince who is shipwrecked and raised as a fisherman's son. The Gorgon is a monster so hideous that the mere sight of it turns people to stone and Perseus sets out on a quest to slay it, armed with three magical gifts he must use in unexpected ways in order to succeed.

Cherry shows remarkable talent in keeping the entire audience amused and enthralled, from adults to the youngest child. He manages to take a sometimes grisly tale from Greek mythology and give it a romantic, magical ending, leaving the audience humming "Life is Beautiful" as they head home after the show.

Other performances will be presented on February 24 and 25 at 7 p.m. For tickets call the Greenbelt Community Center at 301-397-2208.

Science Center Seeks Nominees for Award

The Maryland Science Center is seeking nominations for "Outstanding Young Scientist (OYS)," its annual recognition and celebration of the extraordinary scientific contributions of a Maryland resident under the age of 35. Nominations are due March 1, 2006. Forms and details are available online at <http://www.marylandsciencecenter.org/community>.

The OYS award includes a cash prize of $2,500 and the Allan C. Davis Medal.

The OYS program is managed in conjunction with the Maryland Science Center's Scientific Council, the 50-member advisory group providing expertise and content review to the institution. Members of the Scientific Council will select the winner.

Past recipients of the award include 1982 winner William D. Phillips, who received the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1997 for his work at the National Institute of Standards and Technology, and 1995 OYS winner Jeremy Berg, currently the head of the National Institutes of General Medical Sciences at the National Institute of Health. Other OYS award winners are presently working at such prominent institutions as Goddard Space Flight Center, National Bureau of Standards and University of Maryland.

The award has not been made in the past few years and is being reinstated in 2006 as part of the events marking the 30th anniversary of the Maryland Science Center's location in Baltimore's Inner Harbor.

City Notes

Planning staff discussed redevelopment of Greenway Village Apartments with an attorney for a contract purchaser and assisted Greenbelt Lake Village in permit processing for reconstruction of a fire-damaged building.

Recreation advertising for summer camp staff is ongoing. Staff has revised/updated camp hours to include after-care for all camps until 6 p.m. this summer. Information is posted online and will be in the upcoming spring 2006 brochure.

Recreation staff met with Planning and Zoning to discuss recreational needs for the new development in Greenbelt West.

The Community Center experienced fire extinguisher vandalism in the same basement area as last week. While damage was not as extensive as last week, it was still time-consuming to clean. Staff is researching several options to prevent access to stairwells. Unfortunately, no one witnessed the incident.

City Information

Public Financing Assistance – Tax Incremental Financing

This article is the fifth in a series to ensure that Greenbelt residents are aware of the development and redevelopment proposals being considered for Greenbelt West. Greenbelt West is that area of the city west of Kenilworth Avenue, east of the Metrorail tracks and between the Capital Beltway and Greenbelt Road.

This week's article is about the use of public financing assistance and in particular, tax increment financing.

In the discussions related to the proposed development at Greenbelt Station and the redevelopment of Springhill Lake, the city was asked whether it would be willing to provide financial assistance to make the proposals a reality. In both cases, the discussions have centered on the use of tax increment financing or TIF. Public financial assistance on large scale developments is not an uncommon practice nationwide and has been done before in Greenbelt. Sometimes, assistance is offered in exchange for concessions on a project. Other times, it serves as an incentive to generate interest in an area that needs redevelopment.

When Greenway Center and the Maryland Trade Center office park were proposed in the 1980s, the City of Greenbelt provided financial assistance for the construction of the public roads to serve the area – Hanover Parkway, Greenway Center Drive and Hanover Drive. The assistance took the form of bonds that were sold by the city and paid off by the property owners. This saved the property owners money because the bonds were municipal bonds making them tax-exempt and providing a lower interest rate than commercial bonds. In exchange, the property owners agreed to annex to the city along with other concessions.

In the early 1990s, the city was seeking to have the original buildings in Roosevelt Center upgraded and the parking lots improved. An agreement was reached with the buildings' owner to again sell tax-exempt municipal bonds that would be paid off by the owner. The proceeds went to upgrading the buildings including the façades and roofs. In exchange, the owner gave the city a façade easement to protect the exterior of the buildings and used a portion of the proceeds to help pay for improving the parking lots which are city owned.

The developers of Greenbelt Station have sought and the city has agreed to provide public financial assistance to construct the public road which will run north and south through the entire property from Greenbelt Road to the Greenbelt Metro Station. As before, the city will sell municipal tax-exempt bonds, but instead of the bonds being paid off by the developer, they will be paid off by taxes generated by the increased value of the property in Greenbelt Station. The increased value, or tax increment, will occur as the property develops and buildings are built. If the increased value is not sufficient to pay the debt on the bonds, the property owners have agreed to allow the city to place a special tax on the property to make up the difference. Existing residents are not responsible for any of these costs. In exchange, the developers gave the city the right to approve the site plans for the Greenbelt Station development, agreed to petition annexation to the city of the South Core area (the old Smith sand and gravel operation) and made numerous other concessions including recreation amenities.

A similar public financial assistance arrangement has been raised by AIMCO, the owners of Springhill Lake, to pay for the rebuilding of the roadway network within Springhill Lake. Discussions are very preliminary at this time. No commitments have been made by the city.

If there are questions about this article, please forward them to the Planning Department at 301-345-5417 or email pcd@greenbeltmd.gov. The next article will describe the impact that these Greenbelt West developments may have on schools.
