OCTOBER 30, 2008

Polling Locations

The five Greenbelt polling locations will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Election Day.

Precinct 3 – Greenbelters from the center city will vote at the Greenbelt Community Center, 15 Crescent Road.

Precinct 6 – Residents from the North End will vote at Greenbelt Elementary School, 66 Ridge Road.

Precinct 8 - Emperian Village residents will vote at Springhill Lake Elementary School, 6060 Springhill Drive.

Precinct 13 - Greenbelt East residents will vote at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, 7601 Hanover Parkway. Precinct 13 contains all of Greenbriar Condominiums. Greenwood Village and Glen Oaks north of Greenbelt Road. To the south of Greenbelt Road the new boundaries of Precinct 13 follow Hanover Parkway south to Ora Glen Drive, east on Ora Glen Drive to the end at Mandan Road and then back to Greenbelt Road. The centers of the streets listed are the dividing line between the two precincts. This area includes most of the Windsor Green development and a piece of Greenbrook Village.

Precinct 18 – the remaining parts of Greenbelt East will vote at Turning Point Academy, 7800 Good Luck Road. The new precinct contains all of the area south of Greenbelt Road except for that part between Hanover Parkway and Mandan Road north of Ora Glen Drive. Precinct 18 includes the developments of Green Spring, Greenbelt Lake Village, Hunting Ridge and parts of Greenbrook Village and Windsor Green. The Hanover apartments east of Hanover Parkway are also within Precinct 18.

Turning Point Academy is within the corporate limits of Greenbelt despite its Lanham postal address.

V-Day Looms at Long Last, Time to Express Opinions

by James Giese

Tuesday is V-Day. Vote Day. Yea! At long last you can cast your vote and end those endless, repetitive campaign ads and campaign speeches. No longer will Barack Obama confuse John McCain with President Bush. No longer will John McCain warn that Barack Obama will tax Joe the Plumber into the poorhouse. No longer will Sarah Palin find herself in a place that is more patriotic than any other place. No longer will Joe Biden hop around with one foot in his mouth.

Tuesday, November 4 is the day that Greenbelt voters will help to choose our country's next president and vice president as well as our representative to Congress, seven judges and one school board member. Voters will also be faced with ballot questions concerning two state constitutional amendments, a county tax measure, a county charter amendment and five bond issue authorizations.

With overwhelming Democratic voter registration in Maryland, Prince George's County and Greenbelt, political pundits agree that Democrats Obama and Biden should easily win in these parts. All that remains to be seen is their margin of victory. The same holds true for Democrat Steny Hoyer's effort to be reelected to his 15th term in Congress. All judges and the school board member are running unopposed.

The more interesting contests to watch, locally, may be the ballot questions, led by the proposal to authorize slot machine gaming at five locations in Maryland to raise additional funding for education, money which proponents say is greatly needed in view of projected state revenue shortfalls. A second state constitutional amendment (Question 1 on the ballot) to permit early voting, voting outside a designated polling place and easier absentee balloting has received less attention and will probably be approved by voters.

With little publicity, but some negative campaigning going on, county officials will be anxious to learn what voters do with the county proposal to increase the sales and use tax on telephone and other telecommunication charges from eight to 11 percent with the added money going for education. Normally county bond issue authorizations are handily approved by voters. Will that still be the case in this time of financial uncertainty?

Turnout

Maryland residents are expected to turn out in large numbers based on the exceptional enthusiasm for Obama's candidacy shown especially by black and young voters. The Prince George's County Board of Elections recommends voting between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. to avoid lines. The board warns voters to expect delays after 4. In Greenbelt, voting waits are expected to be improved over the 2004 election for Greenbelt East residents since the county has split that precinct into two.

Greenbelt Primary Re-Cap

by Bay Woods

As Greenbelters return to val, Mike Hethmon. the polls on Tuesday, it may be worthwhile looking at how we istered Democrats and 29 pervoted during the primaries.

Overall 47 percent of regcent of registered Republicans voted for a total of 76 percent of Greenbelters eligible to vote in primary elections. Residents of Greenbelt's North End, who vote at Greenbelt Elementary School, managed the best turnout in the city with 91 percent. Of those who vote at the Community Center, 86 percent turned out for the primaries. Seventy-eight percent of precinct 21-13 voted at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. The new precinct 21-18, which polls at Turning Point Academy, had a 72 percent showing. Precinct 21-8 had the smallest turnout in the city with only 46 percent of registered voters in that precinct turning out to cast a primary ballot at Springhill Lake Elementary School.

Panel Honored the Legacy Of Delegate Pauline Menes

by Anke Bettina Irgang

On Friday, October 17 the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at the University of Maryland celebrated the legacy of former Maryland Delegate Paulene Menes with the panel event "Creating a Voice for Women in Public Affairs." Menes served in the House of Delegates from 1967 until her retirement in 2007; she was the official representative for Greenbelt until districts were redrawn in the 1970s.

Menes is known in particular for her work in the field of women's rights. "She really showed what difference a woman can make. Her passion and commitment make her a genuine role model," longtime friend Linda Shevitz said.

The event began with an introduction into Menes' achievements during four decades of legislative work. A panel of four speakers detailed the delegate's work for women's rights, civic engagement, education and healthcare.

When asked about her position on education Menes said, "I was lucky to have been born in New York City. I used to think the kind of education we got there was available to everyone. Then I came to Maryland and I realized there were no kindergartens and people could not afford to pay for college. It was quite a shock; I believe everyone should have equal access to education."

Panelist Sherry Saylors emphasized Menes' commitment to human rights, reminding participants that the delegate had once spent a night in prison to experience life in Maryland prisons. "She did everything the prisoners did, including preparing a meal of pigs' feet in the kitchens. She wanted to improve living conditions for women prisoners in particular."

Upon request Menes shared a

Volunteers Were Up Early To Clean Buddy Attick Park

by Jon Sham

Many like to spend their Saturday morning sleeping in after a long week of work or school or both. But despite the cozy offering from their pillow and blankets, about a dozen volunteers showed up at Buddy Attick Park on a brisk Saturday morning, October 18 to get themselves dirty while helping to make the park clean.

Luisa Robles, recycling coordinator for the City of Greenbelt was there with Nate Rozier, a refuse and recycle worker, to hand out trash bags, recycling bags, gloves and, of course, picker-uppers.

Ireti Fabunmi, a six-year-old girl, participated for the first time grab it!" she said as she demonstrated, picking up a piece of trash and placing it in her bag.

Fabunmi was there with her sister, her brother, her brother's friend and her mother Jennifer Tschabrunn. Tschabrunn took her kids to get them active. "I've been looking for something for my kids to volunteer," she said. Plus, her son and his friend got Boy Scout volunteer credit.

Her son Dylan Tschabrunn, 12, and his friend Kaamil McIntosh, 11, both in sixth grade, made good progress as they collected trash at the lake's edge. "A lot of people don't walk around the lake and pick up trash," said Dylan Tschabrunn, who brought Absentee ballots can still be obtained and voted through election day by going to the Prince George's County Board of Elections Office, 16201 Trade Zone Ave. (off Md. Rt. 301) in Upper Marlboro and filing a late application (telephone 301-430-8020).

Completed absentee ballots must be returned to the election board by 8 p.m. election day unless mailed. Ballots mailed and postmarked on or before November 4 and received by the board by no later than 10 a.m. November 14 will be counted.

Only those persons who will be absent from their voting precinct or unable to vote in person on election day will be permitted to vote early by absentee ballot.

Some 2,243 Democrats voted for Barack Obama or 65 percent of voting Democrats - more than twice as many as voted for Obama's closest competitor, Hillary Clinton, who received 1,116 votes.

John McCain won the Republican primary with 182 votes or 49 percent of voting Republicans.

Obama received 12 times as many votes as McCain in Greenbelt precincts, where Democrats far outnumber Republicans. The Democratic turnout was also far higher, partially because Mc-Cain was already the presumptive nominee of his party by the time of the Maryland primaries.

For the 5th congressional district, citizens awarded Steny Hover 84 percent of the Democratic vote while his rival Collins Bailey received 37 percent of the Republican vote, coming in only 11 votes ahead of his closest ri-

Editorial Your Vote Needed

Even though the political prognosticators may have entered Maryland's 10 electoral votes in blue ink in the Obama column and re-elected Steny Hoyer to Congress to again be Majority Leader of the House, your vote remains important. It is your chance to speak out, even if yours is only one voice among millions. It is your chance to say what you feel and to vote for whomever you wish. It is your opportunity to assert your rights and responsibilities as a United States citizen and to help choose your country's leaders. We urge you to vote on Tuesday, November 4.

Your vote is also needed on nine ballot questions that will significantly impact how the state and county raise money, how future elections are held and how the county finances future public facilities.

Receiving most publicity is the question about authorizing slot machines in Maryland. Opponents question its reliability as a source of revenue for education and express concern about the impact of gambling upon society; proponents find the proposition to be needed to provide added revenues to the state. This newspaper has sided with the opponents.

At the county level, your vote is needed on whether or not to raise sales taxes on telephone, cable and other telecommunication charges from eight to 11 percent, with the added money raised being dedicated to funding education.

Your vote is also needed on the important state question of amending the constitution to permit early voting away from your precinct and to make absentee voting easier. A county charter amendment proposal would extend the time for public hearing notices on legislation to increase from five to 10 days. Five other ballot questions need your vote on whether or not to authorize additional county bond issues for library, public safety, county building, public works, transportation and community college facilities.

Vote on Tuesday, November 4.

ACLU Has Hotline For Voting Problems

On Tuesday, Nov. 4 the Maryland ACLU will maintain a nonpartisan toll-free hotline to solve problems at the polls on Election Day: 1-800-496-ACLU (2258).

The hotline will be staffed with volunteers trained to assist voters experiencing problems and to investigate complaints at the polls. Attorneys will be standing by prepared to go to court if necessary. Also a field team of volunteers in every county will be available to investigate problems as they occur.

Correction

In the Election 2008 story on candidates by James Giese in last week's issue two inaccurate statements were made. The correct information follows:

• Barack Obama was raised in Hawaii and for a time in Indonesia by his mother. In Hawaii his grandparents also helped to bring him up.

• Green Party Presidential Candidate Cynthia McKinney no longer serves in Congress, having been defeated for re-election in 2006.

On Screen

"Changeling" Thriller of the 1920s

Based on the true story of the Wineville chicken-coop murders, Changeling tells the story of a mother's quest to find out what happened to her son, even as she is thwarted by a corrupt system that refuses to believe her son is actually missing. Clint Eastwood directs Angelina Jolie, Michael Kell and John Malkovich in this 1920s period thriller.

With a runtime of 140 minutes, this film is rated R for disturbing content (serial killer targeting children) and strong language.

Bad Public Policy

Greenbelt and Prince George's County have a one-time opportunity to help the entire State of Maryland.

How? Our solid vote against the slots scam could balance much of the mixed voting in other parts of the state.

Why don't I support $600 million "new" revenue for education?

1. Do you really think the licensees are ready to spend millions for new gambling facilities now?

2. Won't the casinos and slots parlors in other states compete for their current Maryland customers?

3. Are Maryland residents ready to drop over one billion dollars annually into slot machines (education only gets 50 percent of the gross)?

4. Do you know that funds from slots won't start for two to five years? Where does education get the money it needs until then?

5. How much will the statein lottery lose when the new slots are ready? The already in place lottery was justified as raising funds for "education" also.

track owners getting $129 million annually from slots, rather than more for education?

7. Would you support closing corporate tax loopholes and raising the very top tax brackets, instead of "taxing" the poor with lotteries and slots? Are you progressive or regressive?

8. What is the probability of some increase in government costs to deal with increased crime, gambling addiction, spousal and child abuse, foreclosures and bankruptcies?

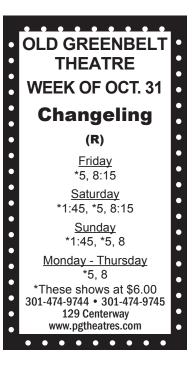

9. Do you really think that the 6. Do you support the race state government will allocate the entire "50 percent" to education, without taking away some of the current educational funding and use it for other needs?

> Are the above nine enough for you to agree with our state senator, Paul Pinsky, that the slots initiative is "bad public policy" and is "a scam"?

Then let's help the state get real and vote against the constitutional amendment listed on the November 4 ballot as "State Question 2."

In Memoriam

A Tribute to Patty – She Gave A Lot

Another of Greenbelt's children has passed from our midst. If you read the recent obituary in this paper, you know that Patty Bailey Ladnier spent all of her too-short 51 years right here in our little burg, which is what Greenbelt was when she arrived. Patty was 10 years younger than I but she was a friend in later years. We crossed paths here and there, more recently at some of the Bailey gatherings at the home of my niece Jennifer and her husband Ricky Bailey. I spoke with her in the Co-op (you see everyone there, don't you!) and in Roosevelt Center or at the Labor Day Festival. These are the communication centers for old Greenbelters (and new ones, too).

Patty, in the spirit of her mother and family, was quite involved with many of the people and activities of the city. She coached baseball and helped with other sports and attended the soccer games of her daughter Lisa as well as events involving her two boys and her church. She also served on the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee (dear to my heart) and probably attended every Festival throughout her life. Her brother Earl mentioned in his eulogy that she liked to go camping. He noted that she often said "If you're not sleeping in a tent on the ground, then you're not camping!" That was Patty. Quite the lady but formed with the toughness that comes from growing up around six brothers.

As a Bailey, she didn't back down easily from a challenge. Cancer had taken on quite a fighter when it attacked her. But true to her nature, I never heard her complain on my occasional visits during the later stages of her bout. I think she was determined to be a part of two important landmarks in her own family's development. She wanted to see the birth of Lisa's second child and she wanted to see Anthony graduate from Basic Training in Texas and wear his Air Force uniform. She faced down her cancer long enough to see both and to ensure that Brian would be OK. Anthony wore his uniform to Patty's wake and he looked splendid.

Earl mentioned that Patty brought some sweetness and light into the family to soften the tone a little for the boys. Her smile and laugh were like light on a winter's day. She shared them often and freely with all who knew her. The best part is, she passed that trait on to the three children. She accomplished a lot in a shortened time, like someone on a mission. The last time I saw her in the hospital, I detected a glow, even in her sickness, as she held her Mom's hand and looked over at her new grandbaby. I read it as if she was thinking "OK, now I'm ready, because I'm going on my terms!" And she did, except for having to give up her long braided hair. She probably accepted that as part of the deal. Her grace was not affected. That was Patty.

It should be noted that Patty's husband Charley was there quietly with her at every turn, every test and treatment and at her very worst. They truly were best friends. He lost his sister last year (Diane King) as well. If you see him or any of the Baileys who grieved the loss of Patty's brother Ray last year, please give them a tip of your hat and a smile of support. It's the Greenbelt way.

About Every breath that we breathe is a Islam blessing from God and we learn from the Prophet Solomon (peace be upon him) to recognize these blessings each day. A new sculpture exhibit opens at the Community Center on Sunday, November 2. Civil Defense: Sculpture by David Page will have its opening reception and artist's talk in the Community Center Art Gallery at 2 p.m., during the November Artful Afternoon.

Baltimore artist Page received a warm welcome on a chilly morning last week in Greenbelt by representatives of the Public Works Department with a forklift, which helped install his artwork.

Page's sculptures and drawings will be on view through December 12. As well, the City of Greenbelt has installed two outdoor sculptures by the artist which will remain on view through April 2009. Page will be present at the opening of both exhibits to talk about his work.

The sculptures all relate to concepts of safety and security, which loom large in public discourse and household management. Page's keen wit takes on the slippage between viewers' sense of comfort, security and strength and their perceptions of threat and danger.

The featured sculptures are oversized representations of sugar tongs and a tea ball and cozy. The initial impulse for the series came from a late night radio news story Page heard that said "some and other materials, Page's sculptures have a strong, if ambiguous, military effect. Suggestive dangers of tea paraphernalia subvert the drinker's expectation of comfort. Characteristically, the artist extrapolates his thinking into a global framework, here embracing tea as an emblem of Imperial Britain. For this native of South Africa, colonialism is a subject with deep personal resonance. The rituals of tea strike the artist as displays of power and means while also signifying hospitality and pleasure.

Visitors to the Greenbelt Youth Center will discover Page's sculpture "Surrogate" on the rear patio overlooking Braden Field. Created in 2007 for Baltimore's Artscape festival, this piece incorporates a Southern Greenbelt East, mostly south of Ora Glen Drive, now has become a new precinct, 21-18, with its polling place located at Turning Point Academy on Good Luck Road west of Hanover Parkway. Because of the split, Precinct 21-13 no longer is Greenbelt's largest precinct. If still combined, a Greenbelt East precinct would have had over 4,300 registered voters.

Now 21-13, North Greenbelt East, with its polling place at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, has around 2,250 registered voters; 21-18, will have about 2,100.

Greenbelt Center, Precinct 21-3, with its polling place at Greenbelt Community Center, is now the largest precinct in the city with over 2,600 registered voters. Precinct 21-8, Springhill Lake/Empirian Village, remains the smallest precinct for registered voters with about 2,000. Its voting place is Springhill Lake Elementary School.

All registered voters should have received voter registration cards providing the name and address of the voter's polling place. Anyone with questions about where to vote or whether or not registered should call the Board of Elections at 301-430-8020.

Expectations

The presidential candidates have all but ignored Maryland, expecting it to vote Democratic based upon past elections and voter registrations. Registered Democrats exceed Republicans by more than two-to-one, true also for Congressman Steny Hoyer's Fifth Congressional District. In Prince George's County, registration is eight-to-one in favor of Democrats; in Greenbelt, over six-to-one.

In this election, the only way that Greenbelters have had a chance to see a candidate in the flesh is to have crossed the Potomac into Virginia or the Mason-Dixon Line into Pennsylvania, two key states.

Still, your vote remains important. It is your chance to say what you really feel and vote for whomever you wish. It is your opportunity to assert your rights and responsibilities as a United States citizen and help to choose your country's leaders.

Other Parties

Voters who do not like either McCain or Obama can put their votes elsewhere. The Green Party has an all-female ticket with former Congresswoman Cynthia McKinney and Rosa Clemente running for president and vice president. Close to 80 Greenbelt residents, mostly residing in central Greenbelt, have declared themselves members of this party.

Greenbelt's 25 or so Libertarians, and anyone else who wishes to do so, can vote for former Congressman Bob Barr for president and Wayne A. Root for vice president. Most of the city's registered Libertarians reside in Precincts 21-3, Center and 21-18, South Greenbelt East.

Independent Party members, of whom there are about eight in Greenbelt, can choose to vote for consumer advocate Ralph Nader, now on his third try for president, and his running mate Matt Gonzalez. There appear to be no registered Greenbelt members of the Constitution Party, but anyone so inclined can still vote for that party's presidential ticket of Reverend Chuck Baldwin and Darrell L. Castle.

Voting machines give voters the opportunity to write in another name if none of the above is to their liking.

Congress

Voters who do not wish to see Hoyer serve another term can say so by voting for either Republican Collins Bailey or Libertarian Darlene H. Nicholas. Again, if none of the above works, a space to write in a name is available. Judges

Five judges of the Circuit Court are to be elected from a list of five candidates. If a voter doesn't like any one of these five, the alternative is to write in a name, as Maryland procedures for selecting judges discourage election contests. Two questions asking voters whether of not two judges of the circuit court should continue in office are also on the ballot. The only choice is to vote yes or no.

School Board

The last office up for election on the ballot is that of a member of the Prince George's County Board of Education. Amber Waller, already temporarily appointed to serve an unexpired term, is running unopposed to serve out the balance of that term. Writing in a name is the only other choice.

Adoption Author Burton Reads at Artful Afternoon

British-born playwright Nicole J. Burton had no idea of the drama she'd uncover when at the age of 21 she returned to England to find her birth parents. The story of her reunion odyssey is told in her book "Swimming Up the Sun: A Memoir of Adoption," published by Apippa Publishing Company this year. She will be at the November Artful Afternoon at the Community Center on Sunday, November 2 from 3 to 4 p.m. reading and signing copies of her book.

"It took two trips, six years apart, to locate my birth parents and, eventually, six siblings, three on one side, three on the other. I also found myself at the heart of a huge secret," said Burton. Her reunion confirmed what she'd always been told, that her father was a Jewish businessman and her mother an artist, both from Nottingham and that they hadn't married largely because of religious differences.

After reading selections from her book, Burton will respond to questions about adoption – "There are always questions," she said – and sign copies of her book.

The first three chapters of the book can be read at www. NicoleJBurton.com.

Reviews

"Swimming up the Sun" is a powerhouse of a book – at once graceful and strong. People touched by adoption will find it affirming and insightful; everyone else will learn a lot about the world around them, even as they simply enjoy Nicole Burton's wonderful writing," said Adam Pertman, executive director, Evan B. Donaldson Adoption Institute.

well-known anecdote on her early days in the House of Delegates. "When I was first elected, there were no restrooms for women in the legislature. We had to leave the floor and walk all the way to the next public restroom," Menes said.

She described the problem to Thomas Hunter Lowe, House Speaker at the time. "At one of the next sessions, Lowe went up to the speaker's platform and declared me chairwoman of the Ladies' Restroom Committee. He'd brought a box with him containing a fur-covered toilet seat."

When Lowe started to walk toward where Menes was sitting, apparently trying to present the toilet seat to her, the delegate asked to come up to the speaker's platform instead. "When I got there, I said, 'This is the first time a woman has been up here. I take pleasure in receiving this gift from you, Mr. Speaker," Menes said. "I think the whole thing opened people's eyes to the fact that women's issues weren't being addressed in this legislature."

Other Speakers

The event continued with short speeches by current Maryland Delegates Barbara Frush and Tawanna Gaines, who addressed the audience with personal memories of Delegate Menes. Subsequently audience members were invited to share stories and ask questions regarding Menes' work.

As the event drew to a close Menes addressed the panel and the audience. "I enjoy all this appreciation but I feel I should explain that I did none of this alone. Every step of the way, I needed and got help from many women and men. I have to thank everyone who let me do the job I love for so many years," she said.

When asked what advice she would give to young women entering the business world today, Menes said, "Decide what you're good at and never mind what other people think. Times have changed radically but young women should be aware of the fight we had to go through to get here."

Love Lessons from Abu Ghraib To Be Performed Here Nov. 6

by Vicki Kriz

On November 6 the Greenbelt Arts Center will feature an eyeopening performance of "Love Lessons from Abu Ghraib," a one-woman play starring Jennifer Schelter that presents the tragic stories of former Iraqi detainees in Abu Ghraib prison.

In her three trips to Turkey over a span of three years, Schelter, a Philadelphia-based artist and yoga instructor, heard the horrific stories of more than two dozen men imprisoned at Abu Ghraib.

Schelter presents stories of the men she interviewed as if the audience is in her head, listening to her stream of consciousness. Stories highlight the detainees' incredible courage, as well as their vulnerability - traits that Schelter says wiped away stereotypes she previously had held about male Iraqis and instilled the idea of the interconnectedness of all people.

"We all have our secret prisons. We all have our torture,' she said. "I would love for the audience to feel that vulnerability is our greatest strength. Success is vulnerability. Success is opening your heart. Success is opening your mind."

She sat in and took notes on interviews with former detainees in order to help Philadelphia attorney Susan Burke, of Burke O'Neil LLC, build her case as lead council on behalf of Abu Ghraib torture victims. Burke was Schelter's student at her yoga studio, Yoga Schelter. Burke used yoga to cope with the stress of hearing the torture stories from the Iraqi men she had interviewed.

"It's such toxic work to listen to that type of pain," Schelter said.

Burke sought Schelter's help in her interviews, asking her to be a "compassionate witness" while she conducted interviews in Turkey. According to Schelter, a compassionate witness is an individual who listens to another's story but is not emotionally involved - an outsider.

The men she heard ranged in age from their thirties to their sixties and came from all walks of life.

Detainee Profiles

"They were taxi drivers to engineers, rug salesmen to car dealers," she said.

According to Schelter, all of the men were picked up for associating with terrorists: however, none of them were found guilty of crimes.

"They were just at the wrong place at the wrong time," she said.

After hearing the accounts of the former detainees, Schelter said she was depressed but confident that she would become an activist for this cause.

"I felt really sick and I felt disillusioned and I felt, for the first time, ashamed to be an American," Schelter said. "It was an awakening.'

Schelter first compiled her information into short stories. After reading those stories aloud to a friend, she was inspired to create her one-woman play. Schelter wanted to explore not only the stories of the detainees but also the emotional experiences that she had had while partaking in the interviews.

"That's why it's called 'Love Lessons'," she said. "It's opened up more love in my life than I could ever imagine.'

Arts Supervisor for the Greenbelt Community Center Nicole DeWald saw a performance of "Love Lessons" in Philadelphia in the spring. She was impressed by the play's unique perspective and worked to bring it to Greenbelt.

"The play is an excellent example of how the arts can provide a safe space for the exploration of difficult issues and enhance our humanistic understanding of the world around us," DeWald said. "The piece struck me as a good fit with the value Greenbelters place on vibrant civic dialogue as well as social justice."

The one-night-only show is at 8 p.m. at the Greenbelt Arts Center. Tickets are available at www.greenbeltom.com, by visiting the Greenbelt Community Center business office, or at 301-397-2208. Advance purchase is recommended.

This production is co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Arts Center, the Greenbelt Recreation Department, Greenbelt Om Community Yoga and Amnesty International U.S.A. - Mid-Atlantic Regional Office. The theater is located at 123 Centerway beneath the Co-op. For more information about this show call 240-542-2057.

Artful Afternoon Hosts Craft, Music & Author

The November Artful Afternoon at the Community Center on Sunday, November 2 from 1 to 5 p.m. will include lantern making, a performance by the musical collective Circus of Saints and a book signing and reading for Nicole Burton's book on adoption.

From 1 to 4 p.m. Artist-in-residence Sherill Gross will lead a lantern-making workshop where participants will create decorations for the city's Festival of Lights tree lighting ceremony and others to keep for themselves. Gross is a cut-paper illustrator and graphic designer living in Greenbelt. Last year she challenged herself to create a work of art every weekday, resulting in a book of the year's works.

At 4 p.m. Circus of Saints will present a concert of improvised and composed music. The group is a quirky ensemble that will surprise and delight with woodwinds, brass, percussion and more. Circus of Saints writes, records and performs simple and complex songs to spread the joy of improvisation of melody, harmony, beats, ideas and spirit. Their website is www. circusofsaints.com.

From 3 to 4 p.m. a reading and book signing will be held with local author Nicole Burton for "Swimming Up the Sun: A Memoir of Adoption," written from the adoptee's perspective. At age 21 Burton set out to find her English birth parents, a Jewish father and a mother believed to be an artist. The adventure led to parents, grandparents, and siblings, a kaleidoscope of relationships with one dark secret at its center.

Artist Reception

In the Community Center Art Gallery the exhibit on display is "Civil Defense: Sculpture by David Page." With wit, intrigue and craftsmanship, Page creates sculpture and performance evoking the tension surrounding personal and national concepts of security. Meet the artist at a reception from 2 to 4 p.m. The exhibition continues through December 12.

Every month Greenbelt's Artful Afternoon also includes a studio open house with the Community Center artists-in-residence, Greenbelt Museum historic home tours and current historical exhibit. These activities are open to the public and free with the exception of a nominal fee for the house tour. There are free tickets to be won for live performances at the Greenbelt Arts Center and the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center at the University of Maryland.
