

Council Supports Changes To Bus, Liquor Contract

by Barbara Hopkins

If Greenbelt City Council member Rodney Roberts prevails, the city one day will direct its own bus service. At council's regular meeting on September 27, Roberts suggested that the local legislative delegation be asked to introduce a bill that would allow municipalities to access funding currently used by the county to run TheBus service. He believes this change could develop an intra-city transportation system that could better serve Greenbelt residents.

Roberts has expressed dissatisfaction with TheBus service before. His suggestion came as council considered proposals for local or bi-county (with Montgomery County) legislation for the next legislative session.

Several other councilmembers supported planting a seed in support of Roberts' idea.

Mayor Judith Davis asked Roberts to write down his specific ideas so they would be presented accurately. She said she would bring up the idea to a commission of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments currently studying transportation issues.

Liquor Control Board

The discussion of proposing legislation began with concerns about a bill that went into effect July 1 giving increased powers to the liquor control board with respect to entertainment permits. Council had

Annual Utopia Film Festival Kicks Off October 18 at Café

by Susan Gervasi

Lights, camera, action! Greenbelt's annual Utopia Film Festival will kick off with a special free "Best of Utopia" screening of the documentary "Green Towns U.S.A." at 7 p.m. on Monday, October 18 at the New Deal Café, 113 Centerway in Roosevelt Center. "Green Towns U.S.A." being shown in collaboration with the Café's "Reel and Meal at the New Deal" program, won acclaim at Utopia 2009.

The 57-minute movie explores challenges faced by the historic cities of Greenbelt; Greenhills, Ohio; and Greendale, Wisc. — all experimental "utopian" communities built during the Great Depression. The film is free, with food available for sale from 6:30 pm.

Utopia Film Festival, now in its sixth year, is primarily sponsored by the nonprofit Greenbelt Access Television (GATE) and annually searches for films reflecting the "utopian" quest for social harmony, innovation and creative expression inherent in Greenbelt's founding — though the festival doesn't shy away from controversial or provocative subjects.

"It continues to amaze and impress me, the amount and quality of entries we get every year," said Utopia Executive Director Chris Haley. "It proves that this world will never be short of new Spielbergs, Hitchcocks and Scorceses."

From Thursday, October 28

October 14 Forum to Host New Board of Education Candidates

by Kathleen Gallagher

Greenbelters who voted in the September primary election will see many familiar names on the general election ballot on November 2. They will also see two new names, Mark Cook of College Park and Peggy Higgins of Greenbelt, candidates for member of the Prince George's County Board of Education from District 2.

Because only these two candidates filed to run in the non-partisan race to represent District 2, they did not have to run in the primary. Neither candidate is an incumbent.

Greenbelt's Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) will hold a forum for residents to meet the two candidates on Thursday, October 14 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Room of the Municipal Building. In addition to opening and closing statements from the candidates, there will be questions from the moderator and ample opportunity for questions from the floor.

Changes

With the 2010 election, the size of the county Board of Education will remain the same but its structure continues to evolve.

Instead of the existing composition of four at-large members and five single-member districts, the new board will consist of nine single-member districts.

As a result of the near-doubling of the number of districts, boundary lines have changed. District 2 which now includes Greenbelt also includes College Park, Berwyn Heights, Riverdale Park, New Carrollton and parts of Lanham.

The incumbent from existing District 2, Heather Iliff of College Park, is not running for reelection. Greenbelt's current board member, Rosalind Johnson, is a resident of Laurel, which remains in District 1.

The nine representatives elected countywide on November 2 will have terms of different lengths in order to establish staggered terms for board members for the future. State legislation directs that the four members elected with the highest percentage of votes cast in their districts will have four-year terms. Members representing the remaining five districts will have two-year terms, with those seats holding four-year terms beginning with the election of 2012.

Candidates

Both candidates for District 2 work for the City of College Park. A resident of College Park, Mark Cook is serving his second term as an elected member of the College Park city council. His campaign materials indicate he has worked as a chief information officer, a technology and performance management adviser and a media commentator on technology and society. He holds an associate in arts degree and has taken additional college courses.

Peggy Higgins has lived in Greenbelt for 18 years. For 20 years she has served as director of the City of College Park's Youth and Family Services Bureau, which, like Greenbelt CARES, is a counseling and community outreach program for children and families, as well as housing the city's program for seniors.

According to her campaign literature, her prior work in the county includes child protective services. She has a bachelor's degree in sociology and master's degrees in both social work and

by Thomas X. White

All seven members of the Greenbelt City Council were on hand to host a Stakeholder Session on Wednesday, September 29 with the staff of Combined Properties, managers of Greenway Center in Greenbelt East. Representing Combined Properties were Vice President of Property Management Lucy Frazier, Senior Property Manager Michael Fleming and Vice President for East Coast Construction Kurt Meeske. City Manager Michael McLaughlin and James Sterling of the Planning and Community Development Department also attended the meeting.

Old Issues

While a preliminary agenda was available, as the meeting proceeded it seemed like déjà vu all over again when the focus of council commentary dealt mainly with lingering unresolved issues with Combined Properties. These concerns dated from a previous stakeholder meeting with the group in July 2008 and another earlier meeting.

Among outstanding issues noted by Mayor Judith Davis were needed repaving of the center's parking lots and improved landscaping based on the center's original site plan. Council had also requested a bench for center patrons in front of or near the Safeway.

Other issues Davis listed were promised action on a bus shelter project and a more convenient entry to the shopping center property by pedestrians walking to the center or taking the bus.

Councilmember Leta Mach suggested either a kiosk or a glass-enclosed bulletin board providing general information on Greenbelt to Greenway Center shoppers.

Councilmember Konrad Herling suggested that Combined Properties consider placing a temporary stage in the center for promotional events either by Combined Properties, their tenants or community groups. He also passed on a request by a Greenbelt East citizen to modify the speed bumps at locations near the Safeway store by making them more gradual speed humps.

The two newest councilmembers, Emmett Jordan and Silke Pope, who were not on council at the time of the previous meetings, joined in expressing concerns over pedestrian safety and security issues.

Response

Frazier explained the lack of action on several issues as not always the fault of Combined Properties, but due to the need for approval, in some cases, by the center's largest anchor store, Safeway.

The parking lot repaving had been held up, she said, because Safeway had not signed off on a proposed location for a new "pad" in the parking lot between the Chevy Chase Bank (now Capital One Bank) and the CVS store. The request for the bench near the Safeway also needed their approval, as did modifications of the speed bumps adjacent to the store. Frazier noted, however, that much of the parking lot has been repaved. An ongoing program to continue repaving will continue but at a reduced rate because of the slower economy.

Regarding landscaping, Frazier said they have been mainly back-filling where landscaping problems occur and replacing missing or dead plants. She also indicated that Combined Properties was considering a range of options for landscaping.

through Sunday, October 31 about 40 new independent documentaries, short films, features and works of animation will screen at the Greenbelt Municipal Building, 25 Crescent Road, and at the historic P&G Old Greenbelt Theatre at 129 Centerway in Roosevelt Center. More than 20 of this year's works are by local filmmakers but Utopia also includes movies from filmmakers across the U.S., as well as Australia and Germany.

"There are so many great films out there," said Utopia Programming Chair Erica Ginsberg, who runs a documentary film nonprofit. "But it's not always easy for filmmakers to get them on TV or in theaters, especially for short films and documentaries."

In the Halloween weekend spirit, Utopia will partner with the P&G for three late-night screenings of the campy "Rocky Horror Picture Show." The shows will be on Friday, October 29 and Saturday, October 30 at midnight and at 10 p.m. on October 31. Costumes are enthusiastically encouraged.

The October 18 New Deal Café kick-off event will provide movie-lovers with schedules for the upcoming festival and offer a sneak-preview promo of some Utopia films.

GHI Is a Winner In Wind Program

Clean Currents has named four winners of its "Green Neighborhood Challenge," including Greenbelt. Launched in 2009, the pilot program offered Greenbelt Homes, Inc. a financial incentive for each resident who signed up for wind power. More than 90 such groups also enrolled, purchasing a combined 12,000,000 KWH of clean wind power, or the equivalent of offsetting 16,213,235 pounds of CO2 emissions. The other top performing groups in the Challenge were the Chesapeake Climate Action Network, All Souls Unitarian Universalist Church and Wootton High School. Blair High School also performed well.

A second Challenge has been announced, covering topics from energy efficiency to climate change to leading a more sustainable lifestyle. Area experts in these topics will be invited to orientations. Participants will be asked to spread the word about sustainability and green energy. For each new wind power sign-up that a group receives, Clean Currents says, it will donate money back to that group to go toward financing a green project of their choice.

Corrections

It's that day-date bugaboo again. In the voter registration article on page 7 last week what we meant to say was that voter registration closes on Tuesday, October 12 – so there are a few more days left for voters to register before registration closes until after the General Election.

Funny Is as Funny Does

Opening at Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday, October 8 is the first-run "It's Kind of a Funny Story." Without telling his parents, troubled 16-year-old Craig (Keir Gilchrist) checks into a mental health clinic – where he's soon thrown in with the adults when his ward is shut down. Listed as a comedy-drama, it's kind of an updated "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Writing/directing duo Anna Bowden and Ryan Fleck's third film follows "Half Nelson," about a drug-addicted school teacher and "Sugar," which tracked a teenage baseball player from the Dominican Republic boonies to heartland USA.

PG-13, for sexual content, mature thematic issues, drug material and language. Running time is 101 minutes.

The Golden Age Club members are strong and active but we can't fight Mother Nature. The trip to Great Falls and the C&O Canal had to be canceled due to the rain. I understand the mules that tow the boat on the canal don't like the rain either. The trip will be rescheduled for spring.

We're looking forward to the apple-picking trip on October 11 at Shaw's Orchard, Penna.

GCAN to Meet Wed., Discuss Solar Co-op

The next meeting of the Greenbelt Climate Action Network (GCAN) will be held on Wednesday, October 13 at 7:30 p.m. in Room 114 at the Community Center, 15 Crescent Road, to discuss forming a Greenbelt solar cooperative.

The proposal arises from efforts by residents who recently met to consider a Greenbelt solar cooperative similar to University Park Community Solar LLC.

In the kind of community solar cooperative envisioned, a group of residents forms an LLC and contributes funds to purchase solar panels for installation on a community building or host site such as a church, school or municipal building. The LLC pays for installation by a regional solar energy company, which maintains the panels. The LLC owns the panels and sells solar energy to the host site at a rate slightly below market cost and also sells renewable energy certificates earned from generating renewable energy to the external solar energy company. Similar projects are spreading in the area and around the country.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Donald R. Schoeb of Chestertown, Md., on September 22, 2010. He was the son of the late pioneer Greenbelters Catherine and William Schoeb. A retired foreign service officer, he was an alumni of Gonzaga High School class of 1952. His siblings Joan Butler of Timonium and Richard Schoeb of Damascus survive. His older brother, Bill Schoeb (Greenbelt High School class of 1944) died in 1992.

Congratulations to Greenbelt's Congressman Steny Hoyer, who has been recognized by the bipartisan First Focus Campaign for Children as a "Defender of Children" for supporting legislation and advocating policies to protect America's children.

The deadline to submit applications for the 5th Annual Jim Cassels Community Service Award is October 15. The $1,000 grant is awarded by the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative, which seeks to recognize an organization or group that has made significant contributions to the Greenbelt community. The grant is to be used to initiate and implement a new project or activity during the following year and will be awarded on the basis of the application and subsequent consideration by a panel comprised of members of the cooperative. Last year the award was made to the Friends of the New Deal Café Arts for the Eileen Peterson Youth Music Series Project.

Throughout his many years in the Greenbelt community, Jim Cassels was an outstanding co-operator. Whether helping local groups, mentoring new cooperatives, guiding the formation and realization of senior housing or getting up at the crack of dawn to deliver newspapers in Green Ridge House, he was tireless in making Greenbelt a great place.

Applicants should complete the application form, available at the Co-op's office or online at http://fd2.formdesk.com/coop/cassels_award. Applications must be returned to Co-op's main office by October 15. The award will be announced at a ceremony to be held at the annual meeting of the cooperative on November 6.

Councilmembers were firm on this issue and pressed management officials for some kind of plan they could review to assure compliance with the site plan requirements when the center opened 30 years ago.

Current Occupancy

Overall, Frazier said the past two years have been tough for Greenway Center but they had fared pretty well. Two or three vacant spaces totaling about 11,000 square feet currently exist. One may be taken by a Pollo Cabana Mexican Grill, she said. She and Fleming said they are actively seeking new tenants for those spaces.

Council asked about the status of Jasper's Restaurant, which now appears vacant. The Combined Properties officials said they were not at liberty to discuss that situation.

Meeske reported they are still working on the proposed pad location but that needs Safeway approval. There is nothing firm as of yet, he said.

Davis, Councilmembers Edward Putens and Pope questioned the Combined Properties decision to locate a "dollar store" in the space recently vacated by Pier One. Davis asked, "... why did you accept that then?"

Putens noted he had a lot of comments from citizens and he asked, "How do you choose your tenants?" Pope echoed, "Why here?"

Frazier responded that the new store is a Dollar Tree and that the space vacated by Pier One is a critical corner space. A tenant was needed in that location, she said.

Mach suggested they look for stores such as Michael's or a hardware store that may be more popular in the community.

Jordan then changed the subject. He complimented Greenway Center on how they managed to stay open during the "Snomageddon" event last winter. Fleming said they were fortunate that utility wires had been placed underground at Greenway Center. They have fared well during severe storms, he said.

Pedestrian Issues

Jordan also pressed for safe pedestrian-marked lanes for the shopping center. He noted that access to the center was difficult for pedestrians walking from the southwest (Greenbelt Road), as well as for bus riders getting off at the Greenway Center stop on Greenbelt Road since there was no good way to get from the sidewalk to the center.

Because of an earlier lack of follow-up on the previous discussions with Combined Properties and the city on a bus shelter at that stop on Greenbelt Road, Jim Sterling offered to be the city contact to assist with the bus shelter project and the issue of a safe access for riders to get to the stores in the center. Officials from Combined Properties appeared to be willing to work out these issues.

Council asked Sterling if any outstanding violations for the property existed. He indicated that for the structures at Greenway Center there were no issues.

He noted that sometimes issues with areas of the parking lot and landscaping occurred and that management had always responded.

Combined Properties representatives also said they are pleased with the use of off-duty Greenbelt police officers for added security for the center and its tenants.

Wrap-up

In wrapping up the session, Combined Property representatives made a few requests. They asked if council would support a new pylon type sign for Greenway Center with names of the tenants listed.

Davis suggested they might fare better if they proposed a "monumental" type sign rather than a pylon type. Whatever they came up with would have to be submitted to the city's Planning Department for approval. The city has been favoring monumental type signs for commercial centers, she said.

Meeske asked for the city's help in addressing an overgrowth of vegetation at the western boundary of the center adjacent to the eastbound off-ramp of I-495. He said that had been a big problem with Jasper's because it greatly reduced the visibility of the restaurant from that off-ramp.

McLaughlin suggested they contact either the U.S. Park Service, who may control some of that area as right of way for the Baltimore-Washington Parkway or the State Highway Administration Regional Office, which may have jurisdiction over the off-ramp. He noted that both offices are located in Greenbelt.

Combined Properties representatives also raised an issue of recent problems with birds in the center, mainly their droppings. City officials, not aware of such a problem, had no suggestions.

A resident questioned the Combined Properties representatives if they knew of the Greenway Center location being on an U.S. Environmental Protection Agency so-called brownfields list? Management representatives said they had no knowledge of such a designation. Davis said such a listing is usually placed on a vacant site that might be suspected of some kind of chemical spill.

The last action of the evening was to make clear to Combined Properties that for any information or follow-up actions after the meeting McLaughlin would be the appropriate city contact.

already expressed an interest in having this bill amended so that infractions would be referred to municipal police departments where they exist.

As written, the bill calls for referral to county police. Staff believes such an amendment would require a significant lobbying effort by the city.

The law applies to establishments with a Class B liquor license. Discussion focused on the requirements to enact such a law, including the need for a public hearing, implementation of a security plan and restrictions on the type of entertainment offered.

City Solicitor Robert Manzi called the law vague and very poorly drafted. Just what the bill requires and to what types of venues it applies to is unclear. He considers its definition of entertainment also unclear.

Manzi said he would try to get some feedback on interpretation. Davis asked that the local delegation be made aware of the city's various concerns.

Brush and Floss Your Teeth For a Longer, Healthier Life!

Dr. David McCarl, Dr. Clayton McCarl, Dr. Monica Mattson, Dr. Jay McCarl
McCarl Dental Group

Your oral health is connected to many other health conditions beyond your mouth. Sometimes the first sign of a disease shows up in your mouth. In other cases, infections in your mouth, such as gum disease, properly known as periodontal disease, can cause problems in other areas of your body. Periodontal disease is a chronic bacterial infection of the gums, and the byproducts of oral bacteria can enter the bloodstream. When oral bacteria escapes into the bloodstream it increases inflammation throughout the body and can injure major organs. Chronic inflammation is recognized as a significant factor in aging and disease.

Over 75 percent of Americans over the age of 35 have some form of periodontal disease. Do you notice any of these signs of periodontal disease - bleeding gums when brushing or flossing; red, swollen or tender gums; loose teeth; persistent bad breath; or receding gums?

Bacteria and inflammation from periodontal disease is associated with a number of serious health problems including:

- Heart disease
- Diabetes
- Dementia
- Rheumatoid arthritis
- Premature birth

Sometimes there are no obvious signs of periodontal disease. That is why routine professional dental exams are so important to your overall health.

Periodontal disease ranges from simple gum inflammation, called gingivitis, to a more serious disease, called periodontitis that causes gum tissue to pull away from the teeth forming pockets that become infected. Periodontitis results in damage to the bone supporting your teeth, and ultimately the loss of your teeth. The American Dental Association recommends preventing periodontal disease and its associated medical complications with proper diet, brushing, flossing and routine dental visits.

If you have symptoms of periodontal disease, please take it seriously and contact a dental health professional for a thorough dental exam!

Get My Drift Team Shovels Up Humor Award

by Tom Jones

The all-volunteer Greenbelt Get My Drift Society Drill Team (G2MDSDT) won the Most Humorous trophy at the 2010 Labor Day Festival, in support of their theme celebrating community spirit during the February blizzards.

Tom Jones, who played the role of the Blizzard, said "The Labor Day parade is our celebration of what it means to live in Greenbelt." The Drill Team performance was dedicated to Tom's brother, Mike Jones – the Greenbelt taxicab driver who died during the blizzard.

Karen Wallace (II), choreographer and Head Snow Ballerina, said, "It was delightful creating a summer routine with the winter blizzard as a villain."

Other team members were Alan Duda, Sean Eustis, Martha Heil, Johanna Goderre Jones and Karen's mother, also named Karen Wallace (I). The society was formed to march in the parade but holds no regular meetings.

The seven-member team included five snow ballerinas wielding snow shovels while wearing blue elfin shoes and striped red socks. Lacking hips, the two male ballerinas supported their tutus with suspenders. Jones played the role of the Blizzard, with a giant staff and cape. Karen Wallace I pushed a shopping cart (loaned by Greenbelt Consumer Co-op) loaded with milk, toilet paper, and water – items locals seem to suddenly discover lacking whenever a storm is forecast.

G2MDSDT performed their full routine at intersections where Crescent Road meets Northway, Hillside Road, Gardenway and in front of the judges at the reviewing stand. In the routine the blizzard marauds the snow ballerinas to the theme of Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Overture. The ballerinas initially retreat from the blizzard but regroup to overcome the storm, who runs off yelping.

Several team members were also part of the 2009's Greenbelt Sun-Dried Garmenture Society Drill Team and 2008's Greenbelt Reel Lawnmower Society Precision Drill Team.

Snow Shovels

G2MDSDT celebrates the simplicity of snow shovels over noisy, heavy contraptions like snow blowers. Snow shovels never need a tune-up, don't wake neighbors, never run out of gas and never emit deadly fumes. The Consumer Product Safety Commission reports almost 6,000 emergency room visits every year from snow blowers, including an estimated 590 finger amputations. Snow blowers have been directly responsible for 19 deaths since 1992.

The Get My Drift Society encourages everyone with a yard, sidewalk or automobile to obtain a snow shovel before the next blizzard comes, to avoid creative but ineffective alternatives.

Why I Live in a Cooperative

by Anna Socrates

Back when I was a graduate student, on an impulse I answered an ad for holiday help at a local Cambridge craft gallery. I would be spending Christmas with my family and I wanted to bring nice Christmas presents. I worked weekends and evenings and was able to purchase a mosaic mirror for mom, a woven scarf for dad, hand-thrown pottery mugs and whimsical Christmas ornaments for siblings and friends and a delicate pair of earrings made out of seed beads and flower petals for me.

The gifts were beautiful and much appreciated but that's not what made the experience so memorable. This was not just any gallery; it was an artist-owned and operated cooperative. The artists themselves owned the craft gallery and worked together to run it.

I stayed for eight years, the artists became a second family and I learned much from them. I've incorporated new phrases and words into my vocabulary: raku, shibori, hot glass, Provincetown white line prints. I truly appreciate fine craftsmanship. I've experimented in fiber arts and multi-media. I buy hand-made goods whenever I can and I realize how difficult it is for craft artisans to make a living.

In the days before online Etsy "shops" and independent craft fairs, craft artists had few outlets for distributing and selling their work. They could participate in an exhausting round of juried craft shows, like the big American Craft Council shows. They could hope that a gallery owner would show their work on consignment (the artist gets no money until a piece sells) or, even better, buy some pieces outright, which the owner would then sell at a 50 percent or 75 percent mark-up.

They could try opening up their own gallery – a venture that requires considerable start-up capital. Or they could do what this group of Massachusetts artists did, which was to combine resources, collaborate and form their own art gallery. These artists pooled their "treasure, talent and time" to create a successful business that is a model of what individuals, united to pursue a common goal, can achieve.

Yes, it meant countless Sunday evening work sessions to paint the gallery walls or set up the lower level for a special exhibit. It meant time away from their studios and at the cash register ringing up sales during the holidays. It meant patiently and knowledgably educating customers about the finer points of artisan-made objects. It meant monthly meetings to decide policy and direction.

But it also meant direct ownership of an attractive exhibit space that became a popular tourist destination and the winner of several craft association niche awards. It meant more resources and more ideas to market and promote the gallery, including setting up a website and eventually an e-commerce site and a Facebook page.

It meant a chance to develop and refine their craft in a community of like-minded artists. It meant more opportunities to make a living and profit from doing what they loved. It meant spreading the risks and expenses of owning a business among several individuals. In this case, the sum of the whole has been truly greater than the individual parts and the gallery has thrived for a very long time and will – I hope – weather the current economic crisis.

Fast forward 10 years. In 2007, again on an impulse, I purchased a GHI house and I am now connected to another kind of cooperative – a housing cooperative. Of course, not everyone who lives in this cooperative community is an artist and few cooperative members are even work colleagues. But some of the same lessons that my Cambridge artists learned apply here too. The combination of treasure, talent and time allows the cooperative to collectively tackle problems that would be large burdens on individual homeowners, like roof and heater replacements. The cooperative ownership structure allows members access to playgrounds and green spaces.

The attached houses and interconnected walkways foster far more neighborly interaction than is customary in a contemporary suburban development. Involvement in the cooperative and engagement with a wide variety of people have given me the opportunity to grow and develop new skills.

Yes, just as the artists found out, there are obligations to cooperative membership, like the monthly cooperative fees. We members are asked to vote in annual elections and attend meetings from time to time. Members are also called upon to volunteer to serve on the board and on committees and special task forces and some of them even answer that call. It seems vaguely "socialistic," amid the Tea Party rhetoric, to talk about communal benefits and burdens. What has happened to the American tradition of an individual taking responsibility for his or her own destiny?

I think Americans of the past, living closer to the edge in a harsh country, knew that they had to rely on their neighbors to survive and thrive. Countless barns were raised, quilts stitched and crops harvested because a group banded together and got things done more quickly and efficiently than one or two people could have accomplished on their own. Remember that most American of holidays – Thanksgiving – commemorates a communal feast and a communal endeavor, the Plymouth colony.

I choose to live in a cooperative because, together with other members, I can accomplish more than I would on my own. I don't have to set aside a fund to replace the roof. I won't have to figure out which form of insulation will most efficiently keep my house warm in the winter. I can enjoy beautiful green spaces. And I've gotten benefits beyond the quantifiable and pragmatic benefits of common maintenance and co-ownership. I've developed new skills, made many wonderful friends and contributed to an endeavor greater than my immediate concerns.

But there's something more. A character in a detective novel that I just finished, Alexander McCall Smith's The Miracle at Speedy Motors, described her community as one "where people looked for and valued those invisible links that connected people, that made for belonging" (p. 5). In this community of Depression-era townhouses, I've found connection, creativity and contentment.

There are many ways to live in this country. Living in a cooperative is the path that I have chosen.
