

Last 2012 Council Meeting Sees WSSC, Forest Preserve Issues

by Kathleen Gallagher

Perhaps because of a sense of time's winged chariot closing in on the end of 2012, the Greenbelt City Council, who were all present, completed its last regular meeting of the year on Monday, December 11 in barely more than an hour and a quarter. An absence of presentations and an otherwise light agenda allowed for an early departure, even though an opportunity was taken by the six councilmembers who attended the annual National League of Cities Congress of Cities earlier this month to share reports on the sessions in which they participated.

This year the activities of the Congress of Cities were organized by three strategies for municipalities: promoting strong local economies, building sustainable communities and strengthening neighborhoods and families. Greenbelt's delegates, Mayor Judith Davis and Councilmembers Emmett Jordan, Edward Putens, Konrad Herling, Leta Mach and Silke Pope, deployed themselves to separate conference sessions to cover all the bases.

Forest Preserve

Ruth Kastner, chair of the Greenbelt Forest Preserve Advisory Board (FPAB), had submitted a written petition to the city council under the "petitions and requests" section of the agenda regarding what she described as a "significant clearing of trees and vegetation" in the Hamilton Place Tract of the Greenbelt Forest Preserve. Kastner, who was unable to attend the meeting, said there was conflicting information regarding the authority for this clearing and she asked that a statement be made to inform the public on whether or not it was undertaken with the permission of the city. If it was, she asked that information on the reason for the clearing be provided to the board, which has oversight responsibility for the Forest Preserve.

Because an FPAB meeting was scheduled for Thursday, December 13, Roberts asked to add this matter to council's agenda at Monday's meeting. Instead, Davis proposed that council discussion wait until an investigation of the matter had been completed, since she did not think adequate information was available to permit any statement from council tonight. She said Celia Craze, director of planning and community development, and Lesley Riddle, assistant director of public works for parks, would attend the December 13 meeting and share information at that time. Craze also functions as the city's staff liaison to FPAB. Davis added that she believed this action was an error not an intentional violation of the city's legislation protecting the Forest Preserve.

WSSC Letter

Two letters were approved to be sent from the mayor on behalf of the city. One was in follow-up to a worksession the city council held with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) on December 3, during which WSSC representatives stated they were at a stalemate with Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) regarding plans for waterline replacement work.

At issue is what has become a multi-year dispute between WSSC and GHI over WSSC's intention to change the location of water meters in a fashion that would leave GHI responsible, at significant ongoing cost, for the maintenance and eventual replacement of substantial lengths of waterline that are now WSSC's responsibility and for which GHI holds no existing reserves. The city's letter urges WSSC to continue to work with GHI and makes the point that since a tri-party agreement exists among WSSC, GHI and the City of Greenbelt for provision

75th Anniversary

Speakers at Tree Lighting Look Back to City's Start

by Chris Cherry

Ornaments made by little hands at the Greenbelt Nursery School decked the towering tree, stocking caps decked the resolute figures of the historic Lenore Thomas friezes on the outside of the Community Center and smiles decked the faces of Greenbelters young and old, as they waited for Santa Claus to arrive and light the municipal tree to kick off the city's annual Festival of Lights celebration.

Under the direction of Tom Cherrix, the Greenbelt Concert Band Brass Choir played seasonal selections, setting a festive tone. As they listened to the music, residents sipped hot cocoa and nibbled on cookies provided by the Greenbelt Recreation Department.

Speakers Rodney Roberts of city council and Lois Rosado of the 75th Anniversary Committee linked the celebration to the city's Depression-era history. Roberts read an article from the December 29, 1937, issue of the Greenbelt Cooperator, describing Santa's visit to what was then the primary school. The school children had each received an orange, which Roberts pointed out was a luxury item at the time. Rosado read a letter written to Eleanor Roosevelt in 1937 by a young boy, asking for a coat for his mother. The heartbreaking letter is among many collected in a book titled "Dear Mrs. Roosevelt: Letters from

by Cora Enoch

On any given day, students can watch Eleanor Roosevelt's drama teacher Megan Elliot work hard to make the school's drama program a success.

Elliot has taught at Eleanor Roosevelt for six years after teaching and working at Imagination Stage and at Roundhouse Theater. Her favorite part of teaching is working with beginning drama students and after-school student productions.

"With my Drama 1 class," she says, "I get to be the first person (in some cases) to introduce acting to these students. I love seeing them connect with it for the first time, the spark that lights within them."

Elliot earned her undergraduate degree from St. Mary's College in Indiana and a master's

by Allison Lehman

Many students label math boring and impossible to understand. But this common opinion is not the case for those in Michael McRae's Algebra II and geometry classes. For his students math is taught in an understandable way, then broken down and analyzed until the concepts have been grasped by each student – all of this and more from McRae, the well-known math teacher at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS).

McRae, born and raised in Hamilton, Mass., graduated from Springfield College with a degree in physical education with minors in math and coaching. McRae then joined the Peace Corps and taught in the Philippines. It was there he got his certification for teaching math.

After moving back to the U.S. and teaching at DeMatha High School for a few years, McRae was applying for jobs to teach high school math. At the same time, his oldest daughter was in 8th grade and had been accepted into the science and technology program at ERHS, which, coincidentally, was a school trying to hire him as a math teacher. On visiting, he decided ERHS was not only the place for his daughter but for himself as well. He has now been teaching there for 17 years.

His lessons are famous for being taught complete with a "McRae Way" which, according to many students, is the most understandable way a lesson can be taught. Normally after one of his lessons, there is a symphony of voices saying "Oh!" and "I get it!"

EditorialOur Carriers Bring Holiday Greetings

Around this time of year those who deliver the News Review traditionally leave holiday envelopes at the homes they serve. The News Review does not pay our carriers much, so your generous holiday donations and expressions of appreciation help make their jobs worthwhile.

Most carriers range in age from pre-teen to the middle teens. For the younger boys and girls, delivering the News Review is their first job experience. Many older carriers started at a young age and continue to deliver the News Review mainly as a service to their neighborhood. It is a learning process for all these youngsters and in some cases the instillation of responsibility takes time and patience.

In the past there has been confusion and possibly also some instances of wrongdoing by non-carriers misusing old donation envelopes. Another confusion may occur to people who receive more than one paper. To resolve the problem, we now include the current year on the envelopes – make sure the envelope has 2012 on it for your News Review carrier and is printed in green.

The holiday season affords all of us a chance to show appreciation and at the same time to show understanding for any failings that may have occurred during the year.

Again this year, the carriers will leave envelopes. We hope these envelopes, identified with the carrier's name and address, will be helpful to you. If your carrier's name or address is in doubt, mail your envelope to the News Review, 15 Crescent Road, Suite 100, Greenbelt, MD 20770-1887 for forwarding. Please include your address so we can identify your carrier.

Letters to the EditorPepco Pillages City's Trees

With the leaves off the trees, it is a little harder to see just how much appalling slash and grind Pepco is doing to keep the lights on in Old Greenbelt. Pepco crews are cutting huge "L"-shaped gouts out of mature trees which will look sadly ridiculous and ugly come spring. And guess what, Pepco! Trees grow and you'll just be doing it all over again.

Almost every foot of power line in Greenbelt is within the falling range of multiple trees. Merely cutting the branches that cup the lines is a futile gesture that might stop 10 percent of the impact of falling trees and branches.

I'm sure Pepco has statistics proving something of the sort. But the fact is, trees will fall in high winds. Some of them will fall on the power lines. It's a gravity and wind pressure sort of problem inevitable when a power line is within 100 or so feet of a tree! Unless Pepco takes out every tree that is within falling distance of the power lines, some will still get downed.

The real solution, the lasting solution, the solution that doesn't desecrate trees and make our community laughable is to bury the power lines. As it is now, the huge poles and the big cans on them sprouting wires make Greenbelt look like it has been tipped end-over-end from Kansas and may blow away at any second. We filter these warts from our vision because we're used to them. But look – really look – and it's only the fact that these blights on the landscape are hidden by the trees (though not so much anymore) that saves us from looking like the community where Frankenstein's creator got loose in a substation.

So, please – let's stop Pepco's ludicrous and ineffectual desecration of our environment and do something about burying these wires. Issue bonds, raise the tax rate, forge an agreement with Pepco – get some political will behind it. Our community would have more value and, what's more, the lights might stay on when the wind blows.

GES Grandparents Day

Where can you find classrooms filled with actively engaged, well-behaved students in bright, spacious, well-equipped learning environments?

I found them at Greenbelt Elementary School (GES) on Grandparents Day last Friday. After a lovely breakfast, these grandparents observed our first- and fourth-grade students' classes. As former teachers we checked everything out with a critical eye. We saw teachers who were well prepared, actively using Smart Boards and engaging students using excellent motivational techniques. Bulletin boards were neatly arranged with student work and additional activities to perform. Having been a science department chair in suburban N.Y., I was pleased to note the spacious table areas and the organized packages of materials on those tables ready for student use.

When my daughter moved to Greenbelt there seemed to be a lot of concern about the schools and they looked into several private schools. But the decision to attend GES was a good one – we were impressed with the students and staff and we see that our grandchildren are getting a good education. Old Greenbelt residents considering other schools for their children should make an opportunity to observe all the good work going on in their neighborhood school.

Mrs. Turnbull was born on July 2, 1926, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to parents Harold and Gladys (Current) Smyth. She married Alan J. Turnbull, Jr. on August 29, 1952, in Arlington, Va. A sister, Barbara, preceded her in death.

Mrs. Turnbull was married for over 60 years to Alan Turnbull, Jr., with whom she had three children: Beth Green (Dan) of Westcliffe, Co.; Judy Guerrieri (Mike) of Bowie, Md.; and Alan Turnbull, III (Wendy) of Burlington, Vt. She was proud of grandchildren Danielle (Green) Pedersen, Matthew Green, Olivia Guerrieri, Sara Guerrieri, Barbara Turnbull and Kathryn Turnbull. She leaves behind a host of other relatives and devoted friends.

The Turnbells lived in Bowie for over 40 years before moving to Greenbelt in 2002 to enjoy its many activities and to live next-door to Alan, Wendy, Barbara and Kathryn. She participated in the Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club and GHI meetings, loved attending Reel and Meal events at the New Deal Café and never missed a Creative Kids' Camp production. She enjoyed fitting new Greenbelt-centered activities and groups into her calendar and often commented that her only regret about Greenbelt was that she waited so long to move here.

Mrs. Turnbull was a graduate of Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Iowa, and her varied work roles included teacher, legal secretary and registrar at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. She was an activist for women's rights, public education, family planning and open and good government. She served organizations that supported these causes, principally the American Association of University Women (AAUW) and The League of Women Voters. She loved literature, the arts and music and encouraged others to create as well as experience art in all forms.

A celebration of Mrs. Turnbull's life will be held on Tuesday, December 18 at 1 p.m. at Paint Branch Unitarian Church in Adelphi.

Donations in Mrs. Turnbull's memory may be made to Hospice of the Chesapeake and the AAUW.

Reel & Meal to Show Mayan Prophecy Film

Monday, December 17 at 7 p.m. the free monthly Reel and Meal at the New Deal will screen "2012 The Mayan Word." Held the third Monday of the month, it explores environmental, animal rights and social justice issues and is sponsored by the Beaverdam Watershed Watch Group, Green Vegan Networking and Prince George's County Peace and Justice Coalition. A vegan buffet is available for purchase preceding the film at 6:30 p.m.

The Mayan Word is a message of hope and call to action featuring testimonies from contemporary Mayans throughout Mesoamerica – spiritual guides, activists, community leaders, farmers, artists, teachers and children. The Melissa Gunasen film gives voice to the Mayan people sharing their perspectives on the prophecies of their ancestors and their fight to defend the earth and their culture from destruction. The discussion afterward focuses on who is listening to the Mayan people.

This month's Reel and Meal is collecting donations for animals impacted by Superstorm Sandy.

Where's Greenbelt's Zip Car?

by Peter Gray

Green Ridge House lost a dear friend on November 18. For roughly 10 years, a Zipcar has sat outside the Green Ridge senior living community, available for use by residents and nonresidents alike. Now due to low usage, the faithful Zipcar has moved on to greener pastures or at least to pastures outside of Greenbelt.

In 2002 council approved an agreement between Zipcar, Inc. and Greenbelt to station a Zipcar outside Green Ridge House as part of its parking management program. Additionally, another Zipcar would replace the Municipal Building car. With this agreement Greenbelt became the first community in Maryland to provide a car-sharing program.

A year later, according to the News Review, the Green Ridge Zipcar was considered successful. Fourteen Green Ridge members had signed up and two of them had even sold their personal cars. At that point, users complained only of extraneous reservations. Many members would reserve the car for far longer than their actual use of the vehicle, limiting other members' potential use.

The Municipal Building Zipcar experienced similar problems, yet when discussing coping strategies, councilmembers had stressed there was no interest in cutting the Zipcar (then slated in the city budget at $10,000 dollars).

Nevertheless, in the next few years the Municipal Building's Zipcar disappeared and now, a decade later, so goes its Green Ridge sister. What went wrong?

Apparent Problem

The problem doesn't appear to be the Zipcar itself. By making reservations online or by phone, Zipcar users can rent a car by the hour. The single-digit hourly rate includes insurance and gas, and drivers simply return the car to its designated parking spot when finished with it.

A magnetic Zipcard unlocks thousands of cars around the world and in the past few years, this cost-effective, ecologically friendly transportation option has surged.

Currently Zipcar boasts 700,000 members and over 9,000 vehicles in North America and Europe. Each Zipcar vehicle generates roughly $63 a day. Sales have made double-digit percentage gains in each quarter since the company went public in April 2011.

In the past few quarters, revenue and membership have both grown at more than 20 percent and most recently Zipcar launched its 20th major metro market in Miami. Even economists with a gloomier view of Zipcar's lasting power have cited growing competition (Car2GO, etc.) as their main concern.

Car-sharing, they agree, is sweeping the nation and will continue to do so. With the young company's current market domination and eye to the future, Zipcar, Inc. promises to flourish in the coming decades. (Zipcar places particular value in hiring product users, known as Zipsters, to keep its staff sympathetic and relevant.)

With the company's eye on the future, the Zipcar is designed and marketed for a younger generation. Such 18- to 34-year-olds (or millennials, as the company dubs them) make up more than half of Zipcar's members.

Challenges to Seniors

Senior citizens looking to use a Zipcar face an enormous challenge. Most have been dependent on cars for 50 years. The words "fossil fuel" and "global warming" were not bandied about in their adolescence. To rely on a Zipcar means changing beliefs, shifting priorities and abandoning a system that has worked well for 50 years.

Can it be done? Certainly. One particularly innovative member of the Green Ridge community championed the Zipcar at every opportunity. With his death six months ago, however, the statistical truth cannot be ignored: change is hard. Change in transportation is downright excruciating.

Zipcar targets millennials in their ad campaigns because millennials must change nothing in adjusting to Zipcar life. The ownership of a car, once considered an indispensable teenage milestone, is now merely a luxury. With audacious parking prices, sometimes it's even an inconvenience.

Zipcar CEO Scott Griffith contends that millennials would rather have a Smartphone than a car if given the choice. With recent breakthroughs in technology, this is hardly surprising. One need not leave home to see friends when Skype and Facebook beckon. Top brands no longer include car brands in the eyes of millennials.

Capitalizing on a generation of less than car-crazy teenagers, Zipcar currently runs programs on 300 college campuses. The University of Maryland, for example, allows current students to join Zipcar, listing an annual fee of $15. Faculty, staff and alumni also get discounts.

University users note that Zipcars reduce parking pressures and allow the less affluent more license to roam. Zipcar hopes the Zipcard tucked away in a student's wallet will serve as a reminder when she next needs a car, whether it is 10 days or 20 years from now.

Young, malleable users are the bread and butter of Zipcar's industry. With this youthful bent, Zipcar unsurprisingly never took off with Green Ridge's senior community.

But the Green Ridge Zipcar was not available just to community residents.

Are We Too Old?

Are Greenbelters in general also too old to benefit from a nearby Zipcar?

Not at all. According to recent Census data, Greenbelt's median resident age is 33.7. (Maryland's is 41.7.) Greenbelt's median age fits neatly into Zipcar's target millennial criteria. Furthermore, Greenbelt's most common occupation is computer specialist (11 percent vs. Maryland's 5 percent).

Surely computer specialists could handle, even delight in, a car dashboard that looks "like an iPhone with apps that they can add and throw away," such as the one CEO Griffith envisions for future Zipcars. Median age and occupation aside, Greenbelt has always prided itself on its environmental consciousness and cooperative living community. The Zipcar seems a natural fit.

City Manager Michael McLaughlin thought so 10 years ago when he helped bring the Zipcar installation deal into being. He's been involved with the Greenbelt Zipcars from the start and was sad to see the Green Ridge car go. "Green Ridge was actually breaking new ground for Zipcar and, in my view, helped lead them to marketing the vehicles to universities," McLaughlin observed.

He expressed his belief that Greenbelt ought to be a receptive market for Zipcars. So, once again, why wasn't it?

"I suspect there are many reasons," McLaughlin said noting that some Green Ridge residents no longer drive and other prefer the convenience of their own car, so they know it is available whenever they need it. "Technology may have had something to do with it," he added.

The Green Ridge car is gone; no one can argue that. But if economists and Zipsters are right, this won't be the last time something Zips in Greenbelt.

of water service to GHI, WSSC cannot unilaterally change the terms of the agreement.

Also approved on the consent agenda was a letter to the members of the city's Congressional delegation urging the enactment of legislation to avoid the sequestration required by the Budget Control Act of 2011.

Legislation

Two pieces of legislation were reviewed. An ordinance was unanimously adopted to amend Chapter 14, "Planning and Development," of the Greenbelt City Code. The State of Maryland delegates enforcement authority to Greenbelt for enforcing sediment and erosion control regulation within the city. The code revision was required to bring it into compliance with the state's current regulations on sediment and erosion control.

A resolution was introduced for first reading to authorize purchase of a used aerial lift truck. The city's existing bucket truck was more than 23 years old and failed its last state inspection. The Department of Public works has been renting a 2007 Ford truck with an aerial unit. Most of the rental fees will be applied to the purchase, leaving a balance of $34,595. The City of College Park will pay 20 percent of the cost of the bucket truck since their staff will use it to hang banners. This resolution will appear for final adoption at the first 2013 regular city council meeting on January 14.

“All of my summer jobs always dealt with teaching, theater and music and I really enjoyed it. To me I didn’t consider it teaching,” said Elliot. She explained she became a teacher because she realized during her senior year of college that not everyone can teach. She decided to apply to graduate school and get qualified to teach what she loved most, drama.

Preparing for “Grease”

During the time of this interview, Elliot was preparing for the upcoming school musical, “Grease.” In one area of the theater people were at work with costumes and props, making each detail perfect.

On the stage, students worked vigorously to finish last-minute stage set fixes. The pit musicians were practicing their pieces and actors were practicing their lines and doing warm-up activities together. The auditorium was filled with excitement and anticipation for the pending performance.

Everyone, in fact, seemed to know exactly what to do without direction. But there was the occasional question, “Ms. Elliot . . .” this and “Ms. Elliot . . .” that. Otherwise she sat back, watching, listening and interjecting comments only when she felt it necessary.

Cora Enoch and Allison Lehman are journalism students at Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Over the years McRae has perfected his lessons with his “all-time favorite ever” warm-ups and stories to go along with what he’s teaching. These lessons are unique and the concepts stick with students years after they have left his classroom.

McRae’s favorites about teaching are the students themselves and “the day-to-day challenges” that come with being an educator. He loves to “fool around and tell stories; it makes all the difference,” he says. “And then seeing their faces when they apply concepts and finally understand something. It’s priceless.”

McRae not only jokes and tells stories in class to make it fun; he does it to teach math in a way that everyone will understand and also have fun in solving problems.

“The one thing I will never like about teaching is the paperwork,” he says.

McRae makes up for the stresses of paperwork with all his hobbies. He takes great pride in the improvements he has made on his house. Recently he remodeled his kitchen and likes to show pictures to anyone who will stop and look.

He is also the coach of the wrestling team at ERHS, where his wrestlers in training are always raving about his patience and positive attitude. Of course the wrestling coach has to stay in shape, which he does by running and kayaking.

St. Hugh's Sodality of Our Lady Celebrates 65th Anniversary

by Kathleen McFarland and Mary Moien

St. Hugh's Sodality of Our Lady celebrated its 65th anniversary with a Mass and reception on November 7, exactly 65 years after founding pastor of St. Hugh, Rev. Victor Dowgiallo, inducted almost all the Catholic women of Greenbelt into the organization.

Margaret Zanin, an original Sodality still active in the group, remembers receiving her manual and Miraculous Medal from Father Dowgiallo on the stage of the Old Greenbelt Theatre, which in 1947 was where the Catholic Mass was held. St. Hugh's School was built in 1949, with services held in the school auditorium until the church was built in 1962.

The Sodality is an international organization of devotion to the Blessed Mother, founded in the 16th century by a Belgian Jesuit priest. The word "sodality" means "fellowship," and at St. Hugh's the Sodality has traditionally been an organization of women who band together for religious and charitable purposes to meet the needs of the parish community. The current Sodality is flourishing, with many new members, including even a few men, as in the original 16th century concept. In addition to activities in the parish, St. Hugh's Sodality participates in programs of the Sodality Union, a federation of many parishes in the Archdiocese of Washington.

The special 65th anniversary Mass was concelebrated by the Most Reverend Martin D. Holley, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington, and St. Hugh's pastor Rev. Walter Tappe. At the reception that followed, Sodality members had the opportunity to view many pictures and other mementos of the early days of the organization. There were pictures of early retreats, annual dinners and fashion shows with Sodality mothers and daughters, as well as religious articles from the early days, such as older prayer books and organizational letters.

The Sodality's 65th Anniversary Committee, chaired by Mary Wade, met all year to organize special events, such as publishing a brochure listing all Marian feast days and scheduling a rosary marathon on October 7, the Feast of the Holy Rosary. Committee members interviewed older Sodality members and collected materials for the exhibit and attempted to find names of all former prefects (presidents) of the organization, which were printed in the program. The 65th anniversary Mass was the culmination of their efforts.

Margaret Zanin, an original member and past prefect, and JoEllen Sarff, current prefect, with Bishop Martin Holley and Kathleen McFarland, a longtime member.

Indian Springs Dedicated

by Miriam G. Johnson

Indian Springs historical Revolutionary War burial site, known to Greenbelters as a picnic cove near Greenbelt Lake, will be dedicated to Greenbelt in the near future. This landmark, as well as the lake and surrounding picnic area, will be made a legal part of Greenbelt prior to the city's sale by the Federal Government. This should insure post-purchase residents fine recreational facilities for a bit of "roughing it."

The three springs have long been known as Indian Springs because local tribes held conclaves in its sheltered recess. Warlike Seneca and Sinnehanna Indian tribes were among the last to live in this area.

Following the Indians in the latter 1700s were settler Isaac Walker and his family who also appreciated the drinking water and the shade. Isaac Walker, then 35 years old, received a patent of land for 200 acres of the southwestern portion of what is known today as Greenbelt, in the year 1756. One of the five Lords Baltimore then living presented it to him as a result of his past loyalty to the Stuart kings. Mrs. Lucy Walker Lester, Isaac's great granddaughter (long-lived family) sold this property to the Government when Greenbelt was a twinkle in the eyes of Rexford Tugwell. She had been living in the third house on the same site, not far from the American Legion building on Greenbelt Road, which is still there. The second structure, which had much in it of historical significance, burned to the ground in 1900.

The name of the first house, as well as the original grant of land, was "Toapping Castle, after Isaac Walker's family castle in Scotland which had been confiscated at the time "Bonnie Prince Charlie" (Charles Edward Louis Stuart), pretender to the throne, lost the Battle of Culloden Field in Scotland, April 16, 1745. At that time Walker, a Highlander and Stuart supporter, had a price put on his head and he had to leave family, property and fortune, escaping via Holland to America. Lord Baltimore, also having been devoted to the Stuarts, inclined to present him with the sheepskin parchment which designated him as owner of the "patent" of land.

The enterprising Scottish émi-gré turned his cleared land into a profitable tobacco farm. He was finally able to send passage money to his wife and child whom he had been forced to leave in his desperate haste. He met them at the port of Alexandria on the Potomac River (water travel was used whenever possible, since horses had to be so frequently changed) and after a week of travel they were all together at Toapping Castle on land that is now a part of Greenbelt.

The Revolutionary War brought political troubles to him in a different form. He became a lieutenant and his youngest son Nathan a private. Two sons were killed and buried on battleground. The graves on top of the Indian Springs hill are those of Isaac who died in 1807 and Nathan who died in 1842, as well as their wives and several of the children of Isaac and Elizabeth who died in infancy. There are sixteen graves in all, but the Daughters of the American Revolution monument erected there in 1938 is dedicated to the two Revolutionary War fighters. A rustic fence surrounds the burial area.

The three Indian Springs flowing from this hill were enclosed in stone at the time the monument was placed there. The refreshing drinking water flows approximately 150 feet into a ravine below, easily accessible to picnickers enjoying the barbecue pit and picnic table facilities, a far cry from the secret Indian conclaves held there a couple of hundred years ago. According to Mrs. Elizabeth Singer who supplied much of this historical information, however, until recent years arrowheads could often be picked up in the woods.

— Greenbelt Cooperator, June 1, 1950.

Picnic Area Action

The road to Indian Springs picnic area has been blocked by a locked gate, it was disclosed by City Manager Charles T. McDonald. Complaints about the area's abuse caused the city to take this action. Necking parties and general nuisance incidents that caused near-riots were mentioned as contributing factors. The path to the picnic grounds from the lake has been cleared and picnickers are urged to use this method of entering the grounds. A general cleanup of the area has been made.

Labor Day FestivalBas Relief Characters Came to Life at Festival

by Tom Jones

“What better way could we honor Greenbelt’s 75th anniversary than to bring some of its most recognizable figures to life?” said Frank DeBernardo, Greenbelt Homes board member and member of the city’s 75th Anniversary Committee.

DeBernardo was part of the all-volunteer Greenbelt Society for the Preamble Friezes of History as a Foundation for the Future (GSPFHFF) which won “Best in Parade” at the 2012 Labor Day Festival. The team reenacted Lenore Thomas’ bas relief Indiana limestone friezes from the Greenbelt Community Center.

DeBernardo (“Man in Overalls”) and Greenbelt pioneer descendant Tom Jones (“Man in Hat”) portrayed the “Insure Domestic Tranquility” tableau – a conversation between a farmer and a factory hand – also featured in the New Deal Café logo.

The team, dressed in light brown clothes that mimicked the Indiana limestone of the original sculptures, moved from one still-life image to another to display eight themes from the Preamble. Three men, two women and a boy smoothly traded props and places, while a red-white-and-blue hostess (Martha Heil) rolled out a series of title banners.

The team also had to anticipate what Thomas might have sculpted for the Preamble’s two closing phrases.

For “Secure the Blessings of Liberty,” a new scene was created in which Luisa Robles held her hand raised in a solemn ceremony as Alan Duda and Tom Jones stood before her. Another couple watched with a child bearing flowers. “We were glad Lenore left one phrase for the future and think she would have been proud to see our performance,” said Duda.

“Reenacting ‘Ourselves and Our Posterity’ was easy: the ‘Mother and Child’ sculpture from Roosevelt Center,” said Johanna Goderre Jones, who played the role of “Mother.” Duda’s eight-year-old son Stephen enjoyed his role of “Child” in the “Mother and Child” reenactment saying, “It was a lot of work but I’d do it again!”

At the end, a banner suggesting Greenbelt’s original signature house stripes also wished the city a happy 75th as the statues came to life and shouted, “Happy birthday, Greenbelt!”

A video of their performance is available at <http://spril.com/Preamble>. The society was formed to march in the parade with a creative theme but holds no regular meetings. Several team members were part of last year’s Greenbelt Recycling and Sustainability Society, 2010’s Get My Drift Society, 2009’s Greenbelt Sun-Dried Garmenture Society Drill Team and 2008’s Greenbelt Reel Lawnmower Society Precision Drill Team.

Children of the Great Depression,” edited by Robert Cohen.

Just as had occurred in 1937, Santa arrived this year to the sound of “Jingle Bells.” The Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department provided transport for Santa on a fire truck, so that his reindeer could rest up for December 24. Upon reaching the platform, Santa was assured by the master of ceremonies that Greenbelt was home to well-behaved boys and girls. After a rousing countdown, the tree was lit and Santa and his elves distributed candy canes to everyone.

75th Year

Councilmember Roberts said, “This is Greenbelt’s 75th anniversary year. Santa Claus has been visiting Greenbelt every December since the town was founded in 1937.

“It took place only a few feet away, inside the auditorium of this beautiful New Deal building, which we know today as the Greenbelt Community Center. In 1937 it was Greenbelt’s primary school and this is what the Cooperator tells us happened that first December in Greenbelt:

“On Thursday evening, December 20, a crowd gathered at the school auditorium to herald the arrival of that grand old man from the North Pole. To the tune of ‘Jingle Bells,’ Santa Claus was presented and some 300 children literally broke loose. Each child was presented with a box of candy and an orange.

“Now many of the kids in tonight’s audience might be thinking that the box of candy was the best gift, but during the Great Depression, it was a big treat to get a fresh orange all the way from Florida or California. Many things that we take for granted today were luxury items in 1937.

“As we celebrate this festival of lights during Greenbelt’s 75th anniversary year, I hope that we’ll all take time to remember Greenbelt’s roots in the Great Depression and to give thanks for what we call the simple things, like the orange in the toe of your stocking.”

High Point HS Graduates Celebrate Class Reunion

by Judy Bell

The 1956 and 1957 classes of High Point High School, which in those days was attended by most Greenbelt teens, celebrated graduation anniversaries together on September 22, a beautiful Saturday afternoon. About 100 mostly gray-haired people gathered at Meadow Fox Farm, a large estate in the countryside of Leesburg, Va.

The event was hosted by estate owners, classmate Sheila Graham Heider and her husband Albert. A tent was erected, complete with tables, chairs and appetizers. The occasion was informal, which provided the opportunity to mingle freely without any loud background noise to distract from the conversation.

Several of us – Joan Rexrode Welsh, Esther Stedman Bond from San Diego, Judy Kasko Myrick and this reporter – carpooled down to the party together, chatting all the way, making the trek an adventure in itself. Quite a few attendees came from long distances such as Arizona, South Carolina, Texas, Michigan and Florida. One person said he was persuaded by another classmate to come because this could be the last reunion for our group.

A number of classmates who grew up in Greenbelt attended, including the aforementioned Judy Kasko Myrick, Terry Wiram, Bob “Chotch” Cherry, Ellen Crofford Kosireski and Pete

Boggs. It was a pleasure to see one of our teachers there, 89-year-old Frankie McMillan, escorted by her husband.

The Class of 1956 was the first to graduate from the newly built school in Beltsville. Most of the students in this class had spent their sophomore year at Northwestern High School in Hyattsville and were transferred to High Point as juniors; there was no graduating class in 1955.

Delicious pulled pork sandwiches, grilled chicken, baked beans, coleslaw, lemonade and beer were on the menu, along with a cake and many yummy pies to gobble up. A three-piece string band played quietly in the background while we indulged our appetites.

We whiled away the lovely fall afternoon connecting with old friends and classmates. While it was wonderful to catch up on each other’s lives, I was struck by the sad fact that more than a quarter of my 1956 classmates have died; 52 by my count. There were 51 gone in the 1955 class. The old axiom, “Make every day count because you never know which one will be your last,” really hit home for me that afternoon.

Our classes have had several reunions together and for this reporter this last one was the best. Here’s to another.
