ACE Educator Awards Presented At Greenbelt City Council Meeting

by Mary Moien

Presentation of the Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) Educator Awards was the first item of business at the April 8 Greenbelt City Council meeting. ACE Treasurer Janet Mirsky and Committee Member Don Rich led the awards ceremony.

Mirsky began by thanking council for sponsoring the Awards. ACE inaugurated the Educator Awards in 1996, making this the 18th consecutive year. Mirsky stated that "This record is a testament to the council's continued and energetic support of our schools and education."

Formed in 1994, the purpose of ACE is to serve as a liaison between the Greenbelt community and the council, addressing education issues and promoting high quality schools. ACE works primarily with the council, school principals and the PTSAs to address these issues.

Educator Awards

The ACE Educator Awards recognize school-based adults who each have made exceptional contributions to the area schools that Greenbelt children attend. Many individuals contribute to the school experience of students. A recipient may be any dedicated, capable member of the school team whether a teacher, a guidance counselor, other professional staff member, support staff or building staff. ACE selects one award recipient from each school, based on nominations from the school's administration.

The awards were announced and citations read and each recipient came to the podium to say a few words.

(Material about each awardee was provided by the school's administration.)

Greenbelt Elementary

Andrew Karnes is the Instructional Lead Teacher at Greenbelt Elementary School. In his role as Instructional Lead Teacher, Karnes provides guidance and instructional expertise to teachers. He conducts informal observations of the teachers, provides immediate feedback and makes suggestions for improvement. This is his first year at the school; he has worked in education for nine years.

Although he is new to the staff at Greenbelt Elementary, he has built a collegial relationship with Principal Monica Gaines based on their shared instructional goals and a desire to build the capacity of the teachers.

Karnes is self-motivated, knowledgeable and always willing to give a helping hand. In addition to his other responsibilities, he has taken on the tasks of being the Testing Coordinator, TAG Coordinator and Math Chairperson.

Ordinances and Resolutions Put Before City Council

by Barbara Hopkins

At its regular meeting on Monday, April 8 the Greenbelt City Council introduced two ordinances and two resolutions for first reading. For one resolution, the rules were suspended and it was read a second time and adopted. The other legislation will be introduced for second reading and adoption at council's meeting on April 22.

Amending City Code

Councilmember Emmett Jordan introduced for first reading an ordinance to amend city code to provide that appointed members of the Advisory Planning Board, Board of Appeals and others identified from time to time by city council be required to complete an Annual Report of Financial Interest, which is described in the ordinance.

A second ordinance amending city code provides a definition of confidential information and prescribes a course of action to be taken when such information is improperly disseminated. It was introduced by Councilmember Edward Putens. (See separate story.)

A resolution is required for a negotiated purchase that exceeds $10,000. Council, at its last meeting, asked staff to purchase an organizational assessment of the city from The Matrix Consulting Group for $49,900. Mayor Judith Davis said Councilmember Leta Mach, who was not at the meeting, had sent her approval to suspend the rules so the resolution could be adopted that same night.

This was done and the resolution passed with a vote of five to one. Councilmember Rodney Roberts was the sole dissenter, saying that everyone he had talked to about such studies had said they were not worth the money. He thought in tight budgetary times council should not spend money this way.

Davis said the study may show some organizational changes could provide savings. Citizen Bill Orleans said he thought that council and the city manager could assess the city's organizational structure at a considerable savings.

Orleans also took the opportunity to say he thought citizens should have access to city legislation when it is introduced so the public is aware of it before council enacts it. His requests to speak earlier went unrecognized by the mayor because discussion

Proposal Made to Punish Violations of Confidence

by Mary Lou Williamson

An ordinance prohibiting the disclosure of confidential information by a member of council or a city employee will be considered by the Greenbelt City Council at its next meeting on Monday, April 22. The ordinance, which was brought up for first reading at the April 8 meeting with no discussion, will now be considered for final passage.

The proposed ordinance defines "confidential information," prohibits disclosure of such information by a member of council or a city employee and proposes an investigation by the city manager and potential penalties that include a fine of up to $1,000 and up to 30 days' incarceration.

Incident

In a May 29, 2012, meeting of council reported in this newspaper, the issue of improvements to the Sunnyside Avenue bridge sought by county officials prompted Councilmember Rodney Roberts to make this disclosure concerning the city's interest in the bridge project. "All of a sudden, the county, just out of nowhere, said: we need to do this project," [Roberts] said. "And then I see this communication where the county has decided that they've settled on essentially two sites for the FBI, trying to lure them here to the county: one being the North Core of the Metro Station and the other being BARC itself." The story goes on to report, "Ultimately it was Roberts' reference to the 'communication' . . . which drew council's fire and a sharp expression of concern from City Manager Michael McLaughlin," who then asked council to stop the discussion "seeking protection for the contents of the email he said the county sent in confidence as 'an opportunity for council to get briefed.'"

This issue is referred to in the city's minutes of the July 9, 2012, meeting. Council then referred the matter to the city's ethics committee and to the city solicitor "requesting clarification on proper handling of confidential information."

On September 10, 2012, City Solicitor Robert A. Manzi responded with a memorandum first publicly released as a part of the April 4 staff agenda comments. Manzi offers some definitions for "confidential" and then discusses two ways to proceed "if a person breaches information given to the city." One is by addressing the issue

EditorialVote of No Confidence

The Greenbelt City Council should unanimously reject the proposed ordinance to penalize any city councilmember or city official or employee by "incarceration up to a period of thirty (30) days" for "disclosing confidential information." In the institutional memory of News Review staff members, a memory span far longer than that of any councilmember or member of city staff, there has never occurred an instance of violation of confidentiality so egregious as to warrant jail time. Certainly imprisonment is not warranted for the revelation of information last year that has brought this proposed ordinance before the council, information which in our judgment should not have been confidential in the first place.

In fact, if there has been an error on the part of any council or staff member, we believe it has been the withholding of information that should be public. The City of Greenbelt is a public body expected to conduct its business openly and with full participation of its citizens in a democratic process. Operating in secrecy, particularly as it relates to development of property, is the enabler for corruption in government, as has been recently demonstrated by the bribery convictions of Prince George's County officials. There is very little reason for any matter coming before council to be treated as confidential. Indeed most such matters are already regulated by state law.

We further consider the proposed ordinance as too broad and open-ended in its definition of confidentiality and for directing the city manager, an employee of the council, to investigate councilmembers who may have violated this law, and thus placing the manager in the middle of what could easily be a political squabble. We also object to declaring such offenses misdemeanors "punishable by incarceration up to a period of thirty (30) days and a fine not to exceed $1,000.00."

If council feels it necessary to legislate, may we suggest instead of the proposed ordinance an ordinance making it an offense with suitable penalties for any city official, elected or appointed, to withhold public information from the public?

In Our OpinionA Poorly Crafted Ordinance Is Drafted from a Bad Idea

by Thomas X. White and James Giese

In the more than 50 years that we have been following Greenbelt city government, one as a city councilmember for 30 years and the other as city manager for 28 years and both as observers and reporters, we have never seen as bad a piece of legislation proposed as the ordinance on confidential information now before the city council for adoption. We strongly support the editorial position of the Greenbelt News Review on this matter.

Every citizen of Greenbelt who believes in an open democratic process should make known to the members of the Greenbelt City Council that this ordinance should be forthrightly rejected. Instead of fostering secrecy, Greenbelt City Councilmembers should be expanding open participation by all citizens in the conduct of the business of the city.

The incident last year in which Councilmember Rodney Roberts disclosed information about efforts of county and other public officials to secure the relocation of a public facility, the FBI headquarters, to the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, another public facility, was not an appropriate matter to be undertaken in secrecy, in our opinion.

There are very few city matters that require confidentiality. Much that must be treated as confidential is already regulated by law. Violations of confidentiality by councilmembers should not be treated as violations of law but rather as violations of council procedures.

We also find the proposed ordinance to be poorly crafted. There are absolutely no criteria set forth as to what kind of information is appropriate to be withheld from the public by a public agency. The proposed ordinance further charges the Greenbelt city manager with investigating his or her bosses, the city council. Under no circumstance should a city manager be put in such a position, and particularly so when it is one councilmember accusing another of impropriety.

Correction

The first person to catch and notify us of last week's blooper in the front page lead article "Revenues Are Focus of First City Council FY-14 Budget Worksession" was City Manager Michael McLaughlin, who correctly informed us the proposed 2 cent tax increase would raise $365,200 and that the wrongly stated $3.6 million resulted from too many zeros. Correcting the record right after him was Councilmember Konrad Herling, who added "too bad it is not true."

LettersTHANKS!

I want to thank my friends for coming to my 95th birthday party. It was so good to see you all and to be able to talk to each other.

I also want to thank you for the lovely gifts you gave me, such as beautiful plants and delicious boxes of sweets. Unfortunately, I do not know who brought what: it all was a little overwhelming. So I am using this letter to let you know how much I enjoy and savor your gifts! And of course how much I loved your company!

As you may remember, I moved back to Greenbelt a few days after the party, on April 1. It is a wonderful experience to be back home. And I am so very fortunate that one of my grandsons is staying with me.

So let me close with what we all know and which I can now again experience firsthand: Greenbelt is Great!

Thanks to All Donors To Scholarship Fund

The David Craig Memorial Scholarship Fund (DCMSF) was established in 1986 to honor and perpetuate the memory of David R.S. Craig, a Greenbelt resident and ERHS 1979 graduate who was killed in an automobile accident. Known to his friends and classmates as "Maggs," Craig's legacy was as a community volunteer, athlete, person of faith and a loyal and kind friend. It was his "well-roundedness" that formed the scholarship mantra of "Well Rounded, Well Rewarded."

The scholarship, in its 27th year, has paid out over $110,000 since the first May 1987 recipient was selected. The DCMSF is totally funded by private contributions whose loyal donors — many of them with connections to Greenbelt, ERHS and the Craig family make it a uniquely local charity. Its mission of providing financial assistance for education

Council Worksession Explores Concerns of Local Religious Groups

Carol Griffith

The Greenbelt City Council worksession with Greenbelt's clergy and religious organizations, held on March 18, was both a forum in which each entity could highlight its activities and the springboard for a lively discussion of how these groups and the city can best work together for the common good of all residents. All councilmembers attended, as did Rick Ransom, representing the Community Relations Advisory Board.

Mayor Judith Davis opened the meeting by requesting an update of current activities from each entity. The Greenbelt Baha'i Community introduced their Junior Youth Group for young men and women ages 15 through 25, which endeavors to increase spiritual and individual development and to serve as a "catalyst for unity." The program uses spiritual concepts common to all religions as well as emphasizing service to others.

The Rev. Bobbi Troyer of Streetlights of Bethany gave a snapshot of her work in Greenbelt, Hyattsville and Riverdale. She described her services as "rescue with a spiritual basis," aimed at assisting the homeless and the mentally ill, regardless of whether these individuals accept her spiritual advice. These services include such practical tasks as providing free produce.

The Catholic Community, which meets in the Municipal Building, was represented by Trudy Conrad. As a member of the Greenbelt Interfaith Alliance, Conrad listed the events for which it is best known – the sunrise nondenominational Easter service, the Thanksgiving interfaith service and the baccalaureate ceremony at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Conrad listed the Catholic Community's work with the Ladies of Charity and Greenbelt CARES in providing assistance to persons in need.

Safe Haven

Conrad then described their assistance with the Safe Haven/Warm Nights program. Warm Nights is a fixed-location homeless shelter for women and children. Safe Haven is a seasonal homeless shelter for men that rotates its location among churches in the county, including Greenbelt Baptist Church, Holy Cross Lutheran Church, Good Samaritan Church in Lanham and the Greenbelt Community Church. Several other groups, including the Catholic Community, assist with providing meals.

Gloria Cline-Smythe of Good Samaritan Lutheran Church then discussed her church's ongoing activities. She ended by noting the importance of the various religious groups working together to coordinate services to the community.

St. Hugh of Grenoble Catholic Church was represented by Larry Yore and Mary Ann Tretler.

Yore discussed the church's food pantry, which is run by St. Hugh's Ladies of Charity with assistance from other groups, including the Mishkan Torah Synagogue and, as Davis then added, the Democratic Club. Yore reported that the "need has greatly increased" for food. He said the pantry is now serving about 21 families a week and many of those have members who are employed full time.

Eviction Relief

Davis then pointed out the role of the city's Eviction Relief Fund as complementing the work of the food pantry. She said the fund is in need of more contributions. The Rev. Clara Young, interim pastor of the Community Church, then added that the Good Samaritan Fund, now administered by Greenbelt CARES, also needs funds.

Davis asked Yore about uses, current and proposed, for the now-closed Catholic school. He replied that it was being used for the youth group and other meetings.

Yore also discussed the Gabriel Project, by which the church provides assistance to women in crisis pregnancies. He requested, but was denied permission, to discuss "the abortion clinic in Berwyn Heights."

Matilda Banga and Emanuel Daramola of the Restoration Center began their presentation to council by announcing the church's move to the old post office site underneath the Co-op Supermarket. The move will add 250 more seats for the church from the current capacity of the movie theater where the church now holds services.

Banga listed the church's activities as running a food bank program, "This Too Shall Pass," which feeds about 265 people. The group also works with residents of Franklin Park and hosts several youth activities that provide training to increase job skills that also help in preparing them for college. The church is now considering the feasibility of opening a school in its new space.

Community Church

The Rev. Young spoke of the activities of the Community Church. She mentioned its work with Safe Haven and assistance provided during Christmas week by Mishkan Torah, as well as donations to Help-by-Phone, a group that operates several food pantries throughout the county and organizes the Safe Haven/Warm Nights program, as well as various other outreach activities such as donating eyeglasses to Springhill Lake Elementary School.

Mowatt United Methodist Church was represented by Ellen Noll, who drew special attention from council with her description of the church's outreach to youth crossing the Spellman Overpass after school. In order to give a "personal touch," she said, members of the church greet each child with some cookies and a friendly question about his or her day at school.

Noll invited others to help, as there were several days a week when not enough volunteers had been available to go to the overpass. She also mentioned providing yoga classes and sponsoring a Boy Scout troop as other church activities.

The last group to provide an update of its current activities was Paint Branch Unitarian Universalist Church, represented by the Rev. Diane Teichert. The church works for social justice and environmental issues, she reported, and sponsors an Earth Scouts troop, an alternative scouting program. Its community activity center offers many classes, such as yoga and meditation, and also provides tutoring in English and preparation for citizenship.

Davis then asked the groups to describe their activities for senior citizens, given the aging of Greenbelt. No group was able to name a specific program that cared for such groups.

Community Concerns

Davis then asked each group to name concerns it had for the community. The Rev. Troyer mentioned "genteel care," that is, care for those who are newly impoverished, who are afraid to ask for help and who don't know who or how to ask. She also discussed her experiences in caring for seniors who are mentally ill and homeless.

Marjorie Owens, also representing Paint Branch, named domestic violence as a significant concern. Jobs, especially for young people, and assisting the homeless in finding jobs were also mentioned.

The Rev. Young then added that a large problem with hunger still exists in our area. The demand for food is too great for the combined services of the religious organizations, she said. Noll added that more volunteers are needed and that the organizations must work together. The Rev. Teichert suggested that creative housing solutions, such as group homes, might help the homeless problem.

The Rev. Troyer suggested accessing and possibly partnering with the Food Recovery Network, a group recently publicized for its efforts to reclaim food from restaurants for distribution to the poor.

Councilmembers then offered suggestions. Konrad Herling suggested that GATE might be able to assist in advertising services; Leta Mach suggested that the groups seek intergenerational help with their programs; and Silke Pope asked the groups to allow the city to assist in getting information about services to city residents.

Edward Putens summarized the day's discussion as "the start of something big." He noted the "unique opportunity" for the city and the religious groups to work together to resolve the problems of the city's vulnerable citizens.

He manages to keep all of the plates spinning with a positive, respectful, collaborative and humorous attitude and is effective in his many roles. Every day he brings to school an enthusiasm that he shares with staff, students and parents alike. His commitment to the students at Greenbelt Elementary School has earned him the respect of the community he serves. He promotes a challenging and productive learning environment for the staff and students and ensures that all students are successful as they strive for academic excellence.

Karnes came to the podium and indicated he had no prepared comments. "Dad, you're going to have to wing it," he said his daughter told him. He said that while a Bowie resident, Greenbelt is his second home and that the teachers and PTA have been very supportive.

Springhill Lake

Shana Sterkin is a proud teacher for third grade students and has been in this school for over 11 years. She is a wonderful asset to the students and staff of Springhill Lake Elementary.

This school year, Sterkin orchestrated a mock presidential election for the school and led professional development sessions for the staff on Common Core Reading content.

She developed and presented Professional Development at the Prince George's County Systemic Principal's Meeting in January and fosters a classroom environment that is rich in learning.

Sterkin's students have thrived this year in all subject areas due to her creative and inventive approaches to presenting the curriculum. A reading specialist, her students performed at 95 percent proficiency on the FAST 2 reading benchmark assessment.

Her colleagues respect and appreciate the work she does for Springhill Lake. That's why they selected her to receive an ACE Educator Award and are proud to have her at this school.

Sterkin thanked everyone and commented that the principal and school encourage the use of new ideas.

Magnolia

Leonor Fernandez is a fourth grade teacher and has worked in education 21 years, the last two years at Magnolia Elementary School. Fernandez is a committed educator who is continually looking for ways to perfect her craft. She is the lead teacher for the Frameworks for Learning at Magnolia. In this role she teaches faculty how to apply these frameworks to their teaching but, most importantly, she leads by example as she designs lessons and activities that meet the needs of her students.

If you ask her about any student, she has a chart, form or notes on which she has detailed the strengths and weaknesses of the child. She is dedicated to differentiating her instruction. With this strategy she has taught her students how to work independently (sometimes in the hallway) while she re-teaches a small group of students that need a little extra help. It is not unusual to find Fernandez at Magnolia in the early morning hours or late into the evening.

The time that she spends here shows the dedication and commitment to her students. She is also a dedicated teacher in the Robotics Club. Fernandez is a shining example of what it means to be an outstanding educator.

Fernandez stated that she is dedicated to the formation of every child entrusted to her care. Thanking Phyllis L. Gillens, the principal, she said "I found a home I enjoy living in."

Turning Point Academy

Brenda Mayo is a fifth grade Language Arts and Social Studies teacher who has been at Turning Point Academy for two years, though she has worked in education for 25 years. She has proven herself to be dedicated, determined and dependable. With her students, Mayo is innovative, creative and motivating. With parents, she communicates in a consistent manner. She is a team leader and works well with other staff.

Mayo sets high expectations for all students and manages her classroom with a firm but friendly demeanor. She herself is eager to learn, is easily coached and effectively reflects on her teaching practices. The data substantiates Mayo's success; her students receive proficient to advanced ratings. Brenda Mayo is truly an asset to the Turning Point family.

Mayo, a petite woman who said she was afraid she couldn't be seen over the podium, was very appreciative of receiving the award. She loves teaching and loves the students.

Greenbelt Middle School

Robert Stradford has been with Greenbelt Middle School since August 2012. During his short tenure at the school he has single-handedly changed the dynamics of the educational program because of his innovative methods of teaching mathematics and how he incorporates technology within mathematics.

Stradford has created a learning environment that is exciting, rigorous and captivating because he uses 21st century technology to engage and stimulate the minds of his students. He also conducts weekly professional development opportunities for his colleagues so that they can incorporate the same practices within their classes.

Stratford commented that it is hard to accept recognition for his work. The award is a tremendous honor.

Eleanor Roosevelt

Sally Wagner is the ACE Educator awardee for Eleanor Roosevelt High School. One of her students describes her this way, "Ms. Wagner is an utterly amazing and downright inspiring woman. She is a teacher, mentor and friend to generations of students at ERHS and constantly gives more than she ever receives with no complaint." Wagner lives passionately and enjoys sharing her passion about music and life with those who enter into her sphere of influence. In the 32 years that she has been a part of the Roosevelt family, she has devoted herself to developing the whole self for each of her students. Each year she raises the school's bands to new heights.

Wagner, using fruit sales and other fundraisers to cover costs, is always looking for ways to broaden her students' foundations through various concerts and by taking field trips around the county, state, country and the world. She brought joy to millions when she had the privilege to take one of the bands to China to perform during the 2008 Olympics.

she has encouraged several members of the band and orchestra to go with the delegation from Eleanor Roosevelt to Kenya, Africa, to begin the music program at the Marmanet Secondary School. The students will bring music textbooks to use for teaching students to play the recorder.

The highlight of the year for her is the last concert; she alternates between the All Band Concert and the Mass Band Concert. She invites former Eleanor Roosevelt band members to come and play with the current students on the years that she has the All Band Concert. The performance is always delightful and helps show our students that their love of music and what they are doing will continue to help them in the future.

ERHS Principal Reginald McNeill accepted the award for Wagner, who was in South Carolina at a ceremony where her daughter was receiving a school honor.

Each award winner will receive gifts and certificates to commemorate his or her success. From ACE, there is an engraved red and gold apple, the well-recognized symbol of education. Mirsky commented that "We also have an ACE T-shirt, which, as a long-standing tradition, we invite all award winners to wear when they walk with us in the Labor Day Festival Parade in September. Certificates of recognition are from the city, county and state."

Among those present to congratulate the awardees was Prince George's County School Board Member Peggy Higgins and Greenbelt's representative on the Prince George's County Council, Ingrid Turner. As it was also the last day of the Maryland General Assembly Legislative Session, State Senator Paul Pinsky and State Delegates Anne Healey, Tawanna Gaines and Alonzo Washington were not able to attend. Sarah Verbofsky, community liaison for Washington, represented them. Members of council also congratulated the winners.

Mirsky noted that in addition to the certificates, Turner annually has donated $2,000 to the ACE scholarship fund and Healey has awarded a House of Delegates Scholarship at the annual ACE Student Awards. Mirsky added, "I think it is also important to thank all of the family members, school staff and parent-teacher organization members who are here to support the awardees. The success of each of us is dependent on the help and support that we receive from family and team members."

ASG Meeting Talk Is With Tim Livengood

The next meeting of the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt will be on Thursday, April 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Howard B. Owens Science Center, 9601 Greenbelt Road (adjacent to DuVal High School in Lanham).

Planetary astrophysicist Dr. Tim Livengood is the featured speaker and will present "Beneath the Watery Moon," using neutron remote-sensing to explore the tenuous but real water cycle of the Moon. Livengood, a graduate of Washington University in St. Louis, received his Ph.D. from the Johns Hopkins University Department of Physics and Astronomy. All are welcome.

in the council's Standing Rules. The other approach would be to address the issue by ordinance. Manzi found the first to be easier, but it would not provide for any penalty other than censure. The second, he said, could provide a penalty and also could apply to city employees. Manzi said neither procedure was "perfect."

In his agenda comments, McLaughlin says, "Last fall, council indicated the need for an ordinance providing a definition of confidential information and a defined course of action to be taken for individuals who disseminate confidential information improperly."

A search of city council minutes by News Review staff finds no record of council consideration of this matter at any public meeting between the July 9 referral and the April 8 meeting at which McLaughlin submitted the drafted ordinance.

does not occur until legislation is introduced for second reading and adoption.

Another purchase requiring a resolution is that of a new emergency back-up generator. The current one, only 12.5 kW, was purchased in 1978 when the need was essentially just for emergency lighting and for the fire alarm system. Insufficient for today's needs, staff says it is no longer serviceable.

An amount of $90,000 has been allocated in the Fiscal Year 2013 Building Capital Reserve Fund to replace the generator. Staff had hoped to purchase one that would provide enough emergency power for the entire Municipal Building, which houses the city's information technology (IT) hub, the public access TV channel and an emergency videoconferencing system.

The cost for a 350 kW generator was $190,000 for one that runs on diesel fuel; a natural gas unit would cost an additional $100,000 according to staff notes. A natural gas unit, would not have to be refilled during an outage and is therefore preferred.

Gas United Preferred

Instead, staff recommends a 60 kW natural gas unit that could power essential systems such as emergency lighting, alarms, essential IT systems, public access channels and possibly a few other uses. It will be insufficient, however, for running the HVAC system or the elevator. Staff recommends that such a unit be purchased from Cummins Power Systems for $48,916 with some additional costs for site preparation and landscaping.

Jordan introduced the resolution for first reading.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts asked what will be done with the old generator. He said since it is mechanical it is probably more dependable than the new one will be. He hoped the city would either find another use for it or would sell it, since it probably had not run enough to have worn out. He felt confident parts would still be available. The mayor then asked Assistant City Manager David Moran to find out why Public Works thinks it is unserviceable.

Police Signage

A report from the Senior Citizens Advisory Committee concluded that signs around the city are inadequate for directing people to the police department. Betty Timer and Ginny Jones of the committee, present at the meeting, addressed the report.

Timer pointed out that people are advised to go to a safe place, such as a police department, to get out of their car when being followed or when they find themselves in another suspicious situation.

Jones said someone had stopped her one day to ask for directions to the police department and she noted it had not been easy to describe how to get there. Councilmembers agreed that this is an important public safety issue, which they then referred to the Public Safety Advisory Committee, the Advisory Planning Board and the Planning Department.

BCWWG Quarterly Meeting Is Apr. 25

On Thursday, April 25 the Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch Group (BCWWG) will hold its quarterly meeting in Room 103 at the Greenbelt Community Center from 7 to 9 p.m. All are invited to come learn about issues affecting the watershed and meet local activists and researchers working to improve local quality of life. The meeting is co-sponsored by BCWWG and the GHI Woodlands Committee.

The speaker will be Susan Harris, who will give a spring talk on "Reducing, Replacing or Growing a More Natural Lawn." Harris is a gardening writer and coach who has written articles for the News Review and is a member of the national Lawn Reform Coalition, which advocates for less lawn and more natural care for the remaining turf grass.

Greenbelt Police Join MADD Annual Walk

Greenbelt's police department has formed a team to participate in the Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) annual "Walk Like MADD" event starting at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, May 11 on Federal Hill in Baltimore.

Almost 40 cities around the country will hold MADD walks, with thousands of people participating in 5K walks that day in a stand against drunk driving and underage drinking. Those interested in forming a team or who want to make a donation to the Greenbelt police team are asked to visit the walk website at www.walklikemadd.org. Select Baltimore, Md. The next screen provides options for starting or joining a team or making a donation. To contribute, search by team name and enter Greenbelt Police, then follow instructions.

Vandalism

April 10, 10:34 a.m., 5900 block Cherrywood Terrace. A sliding glass door was damaged.

Vehicle Crime

A theft from an auto occurred in the 6300 block Ivy Lane (set of Md. tags).

The Department is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter. Call 1-866-411-TIPS. People may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 240-542-2145.

We were sorry to hear of the death of longtime Greenbelter David Schalet, 77, on March 26, 2013. He was predeceased by his wife Alberta and daughter Clarissa. A graveside service for Mr. Schalet was held at the Greenbelt City Cemetery on Friday, March 29.

Congratulations to:

– Eleanor Roosevelt High School students Modibo Abbo and Carmin Chappell, who are among three county students and 800 nationwide receiving $2,500 scholarships from the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

– exceptional school employees, one for each public school serving Greenbelt students, awarded ACE Educator awards at a ceremony at the beginning of the April 8 Greenbelt City Council meeting, who include Sally Wagner, Eleanor Roosevelt High School; Robert Stradford, Greenbelt Middle School; Shana Sterkin, Springhill Lake Elementary School; Leonor Fernandez, Magnolia Elementary School; Brenda Mayo, Turning Point Academy; and Andrew Karnes, Greenbelt Elementary School.

– Greenbelt's Congressman Steny H. Hoyer, who received the Congressional Champion for Real and Lasting Change Award from Save the Children on April 10 and the Bright Beginnings' Champions for Children Award in recognition of his work in promoting the safety and well-being of children here and abroad.

2001 Eleanor Roosevelt High School graduate, U.S. Air Force Captain Karen Mealey, the daughter of Carol and John Mealey of Ridge Road, will deploy this week to the Middle East for six months. A veteran of an Iraq tour, she is stationed at Joint Base Charleston in South Carolina.

Send us your reports of new babies, awards, honors, etc. to share with our readers. We'd especially like to hear more from neighbors in Greenbelt East and Greenbelt West (Franklin Park). To send information for "Our Neighbors" email us at news-review@verizon.net or leave a message at 301-474-6892.

Print-making and Puppets Entertain Sunday Crowd

by Jessica Suss

A creative time was had by all at this month's Artful Afternoon, featuring a pottery sale furnished by the Greenbelt Pottery group, a sculpture exhibit by Matthew Janson, puppet performance art by Leila Ghaznavi and a print-making workshop run by resident artist Nora Simon.

Trafficked that afternoon by well over 80 people according to its founder Nicole DeWald, Artful Afternoon is in its 13th year and growing stronger, she says.

"Artful Afternoon offers people a gateway experience to come in and really get a feel for all the different things that happen in the building," DeWald said. "We have a great time and we're really grateful for the community's interest."

All of the exhibits were busy with community members buying pottery and experimenting with screen printing.

Attendee Lola Skolnik was especially looking forward to Ghaznavi's performance entitled "Beyond the Light," a piece that included shadow puppetry and dance.

"I like the performances because it's a great thing I can take my grandchildren to," Skolnik said. "They absolutely love them."

Simon's room of screen printing was a hive of activity.

Greenbelters dipped celery, green peppers and apples into paint and decorated muslin bags and colored paper. Resident artist Simon, whose craft is screen- and block-printing, wanted to have a craft that kids could do outside of Artful Afternoon as well.

"This project incorporates the ideas [of my craft] using simple techniques the kids can do at home with fruits and veggies," Simon said.

In the pottery room, studio participant Kathy Groen was happy she decided to participate in her first Artful Afternoon this month and can't wait to return.

"I've seen Artful Afternoon advertised a lot, I just hadn't been yet," Groen said. "I want to bring my kids next time."

Resident Artist Mary Gawlik, who is also a ceramic tile artist and a pottery instructor in the studios upstairs in the Community Center, feels that Artful Afternoon is a great way to give back to the community.

"They're an incredible value to families and people," Gawlik said. "All the people come away with a great art experience. [All the events] are high-quality and I think it really makes the arts accessible to people, I think it makes it really friendly."

A Review

Arts Center's Big River Brings Us Tom and Huck

by Jim Link

To paraphrase Mark Twain: "Persons attempting to find a motive in Big River, the big musical now playing at the Greenbelt Arts Center, will be prosecuted; persons attempting to find a plot in it will be banished; persons failing to be completely thrilled by it will be shot."

Driven by Roger Miller's ("King of the Road") Tony Award-winning bluegrass and country music and lyrics, this retelling of Huckleberry Finn's and runaway slave Jim's picaresque journey down the Mississippi is both haunting and joyous.

Veteran director Mary Lou Fisher has assembled a big orchestra – filling the pit inside with fiddles, harmonica, trombone, trumpet, percussion and piano [inside our itty bitty black-box theater] – to celebrate Huck's awakening conscience regarding his slave buddy's basic decency and humanity and his increasing awareness of the lurid, uncouth hypocrisy of 1840s slaveholding America.

All of Twain's chestnuts are here: Huck and Tom Sawyer's adventuring in Indian Cave, Miss Watson and the Widow Douglas trying to "civilize" Huck, his drunken abusive Pappy, Huck and Jim bonding under the stars on Jackson Island and drifting on their raft, those philistine frauds the Duke and the King with their hilarious Royal Nonesuch and Jim's eventual, miraculous manumission.

Choreographer Kathleen Moors uses her small space and numerous characters to great effect. The stage is always crowded with calico dresses and bonnets, cowboy hats and coverall jeans constantly entering and exiting, singing and dancing. (Live actors are in the clothing.) Crowded, yes, but never cluttered.

The chemistry between Huck and Jim is excellent. Mike Culhane's adolescent, aw-shucks, male ingenue Huck is very convincing, while Kevin Sockwell's Jim is powerfully superb.

Sockwell has a wonderful bass-baritone voice and can really act. His Jim is vulnerable, tender, intelligent, strong and nuanced – never a caricature. Sockwell and Culhane are excellent together singing "Worlds Apart" and "River in the Rain."

Sockwell and the other slaves give a boffo rendition of "Free At Last" and the whole company ends with a rousing performance of "Muddy Water."

Some memorable lines include Miss Watson's (the versatile Penny Martin) warning to Huck: "You have to read and write to get to heaven!" And Huck's crisis of conscience when he decides to break the law by not turning Jim over to the authorities – "All right then – I'll GO to hell!"

And Huck's farewell to the audience, none of whom were shot and so must have been completely thrilled: "Aunt Sally wants to adopt me and civilize me – I been there before. I'm lightin' out for the western territory!"

Big River plays through May 4 at 8 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, with Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. on April 21 and 28.

Peace & Justice Seeks Peace Month Activities

This city has agreed to again proclaim June as Peace Month in Greenbelt according to the Prince George's Peace and Justice Coalition.

The Coalition encourages local organizations to sponsor peace-related activities of all kinds – lectures, discussions, videos, music, art or service projects. Events can be as simple as giving a usual gathering a special peace theme and inviting the community to attend. The hope is that many groups will participate so Peace Month will be a vital reality throughout the city.

City facilities are available or can be reserved for events – to arrange events, groups can contact Assistant City Manager David Moran at dmoran@greenbeltmd.gov or through the city office at 301-474-8000.

Each group may publicize its event in whatever ways it thinks best. To have it included in the city's Peace Month printed calendar, send basic information – what/where/when/contact person – by April 30 to Peace & Justice Coalition member Lucy Duff at justpeacepg@earthlink.net or 301-577-2350. Until late May additional details or information may be sent on later-planned events for coverage in a Peace Month 2013 preview story intended as an article for the beginning of June.

Nat'l Gallery Offers Free Classical Concert

On Monday, April 22 at 6:30 p.m. the National Gallery of Art invites the public to a free concert by Mykola Suk, pianist, with National Gallery of Art and Phillips Camerata resident musicians. The program features Beethoven's Concerto No. 5 and will take place in the West Garden Court.

of local students could not be achieved without the generous contributions of this family of donors. The DCMSF has minimal administrative costs so that virtually all money collected goes for the award.

As the end of the donation year approaches and we shift to selecting this year's ERHS student recipient, we thank our supporters who believe in assisting local young people in their educational goals. We are excited to be able to sustain our presence at ERHS and share David Craig's story again this year. The scholarship will be awarded on Thursday, May 16 at 6 p.m. at the school at the Senior Awards Ceremony.

We also encourage those who believe in helping others reach their goals to consider donating before April 30 or in the coming year's drive. To contribute to the fund, send checks to: DCMSF, PO Box 761, Greenbelt, MD 20768.

Temporary Tax Increase For Short-Term Needs

Some have insisted the proposed increase in city property taxes is a grudging duty, undesired but necessary to sustain local government while property values remain "low." Yet surely a temporary problem requires only a temporary solution? If the city wants to spare residents a permanent additional burden, instead of a short-term gap-closing measure, leaders have other choices to make, beyond the obvious and arguably overdue belt-tightening.

First, I am confident – despite the claims of contrarians – that the higher tax rate could be made temporary. It could include a sunset clause to expire in, say, two years or maybe when some index of property values returns to a level which restores city revenues to their current, generous volume.

Naysayers will insist a sitting council cannot compel a future council to cut taxes. Perhaps, but I see no reason why a sitting council cannot make its own actions temporary if it wants to. Besides, barring a fatality, the membership of the next Greenbelt City Council is almost certainly going to be identical to the current council. Can't these same seven people keep a promise that lasts longer than two years? Where there is a will, there is almost certainly a way; as much as some will try to claim the will but deny the way, the reverse is more likely true. After all, a sunset clause would hardly prevent any future council from renewing the temporary tax hike if they saw the need.

Second and additionally, to further protect the vulnerable from the brunt of yet another increased government bill if home values continue to climb as forecast, council could adopt the Homestead Tax Credit (HTC) that applies in all unincorporated portions of this county: currently 2 percent instead of Greenbelt's state-compelled 10 percent, a lesser protection. In other words, if council acted to place our HTC in line with the county and assessed values rose, residents would be buffered from and not buffeted by steep increases in property tax bills, as year-to-year surges in taxable values would be capped at 2 percent. Thus Greenbelt's elderly, the unemployed and those on limited incomes would be shielded from pernicious future bubbles, all the while sparing the city budget from volatility. With the citizenry at heart, how could our leaders oppose that?

Predictably, to find serious solutions, it's necessary to look under rocks, leaving none unturned. Assuming charitably, of course, that a solution to higher taxes is being sought by our local leaders and their editorial allies. Forgive me if that sounds too positive amidst all the tactical gloom emanating from our tax-raising politicians lately.

So council can hold off the pending tax rate increase by cutting spending (appropriate but unlikely) or make the increase temporary (advisable) and bring our Homestead Tax Credit in line with the rest of the county (foresighted and compassionate). Gone is the excuse that our local government doesn't want to raise taxes permanently but somehow "must."

Andy Carruthers

Editor's Note: All property tax levies are made for a one year period only, therefore each tax increase is already grandfathered. A city council could commit itself to a future tax reduction, but that commitment would not apply to any newly elected councilmember and would solely be enforceable by the electorate at city elections.

City Fitness Teacher Puts It All in Writing in New Book

by Jim Link

Nancy Cox Shaffer, popular longtime Senior Fitness teacher at Greenbelt Community Center, is very excited about the publication of her new book. "Accidentally On Purpose: 50 Thoughts on Living Life" is "designed to promote holistic lifestyles; its greatest benefit is to encourage confidence in your body," Shaffer explains with her characteristic enthusiasm.

"My routine for over 25 years in the gym at the Community Center has included music, stretching, modified cardiovascular movement, using weights (strength training) and occasionally walking around Greenbelt Lake. This has proven to me the benefits of exercise and social interaction as we age, because I've seen it."

Shaffer is a certified counselor and Healing Touch practitioner who has been teaching in Prince George's Community College's SAGE program (Seniors Aging with Grace and Excellence) since 1984.

Some of her students have been with her for over 20 years, moving from their 60s into their 80s. "They show me that many chronic diseases can be prevented by our choice of lifestyle," she says.

Shaffer's book is only 100 pages long with 50 photos on the left, faced with an appropriate thought on the right. "The picture draws you into the emotional side of the thought on the opposite page. For example, I have a cute kitty with her eyes closed, thoroughly relaxed, facing onto the thought, 'Our natural state is to be at ease.'

"You can open the book to any page any day and snatch a thought to reflect on as you live a healthy lifestyle."

You can buy "Accidentally On Purpose" at Amazon.com or Createspace.com or by calling Shaffer at 301-552-1490 or emailing stretchingbeyond@gmail.com.

Shaffer was delighted that "my mom was at my first book signing in March in Erwin, Tenn."

Come see Shaffer accidentally on purpose, so to speak, at her next book signing on Friday, April 26 from 4 to 6 p.m. at the New Deal Café. There will be music and refreshments. Stretching is optional.
