

Re-write Raises Questions: Zoning Devil in the Details

by Kathleen Gallagher

When the Greenbelt City Council met with representatives from the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) nearly a year ago to be briefed on the county's ambitious and long overdue plan for rewriting its zoning ordinance and subdivision regulations, everyone agreed that the devil would be in the yet-unknown details.

Council's other major concern at that worksession was that in attempting to streamline the review process by tilting it more toward the administrative level, M-NCPPC would reduce or even eliminate the steps that currently allow for formal review and comment by municipalities. (For a detailed account of that meeting, see the April 23, 2015 issue of this paper.)

On February 29, five members of the council met with City Manager Michael McLaughlin, Planning Director Celia Craze and Assistant Planning Director Terri Hruby for a briefing from city staff on the status of the county's work on the zoning re-write. Councilmembers Judith Davis and Silke Pope were unable to attend. As a result of this worksession, direction was given to staff to prepare a letter to M-NCPPC conveying the city's concerns. The letter was approved at the council's March 14 regular meeting.

The four phases of the re-write project are 1) public outreach and input, 2) evaluation and recommendations, 3) drafting the new ordinance and regulations and 4) implementing the new ordinance and regulations. Hruby explained that county staff are now working on phase 3, the writing of the draft document.

The impetus for the timing of this briefing was that the county just released Module 1 of the draft document, titled Zone and Use Regulations and Interpretations. Module 2 will be released later this spring. According to Hruby, it is Module 3, Administrative Process and Procedures, that city planning staff believes will be most important regarding issues of municipal participation and review.

Despite the progress made by the planning staff at M-NCPPC on their work plan, which has proceeded according to schedule, the council's concerns remained essentially the same. The devil was still in the details and in the role of municipal review. A third significant concern was the elimination of the existing Residential Planned Community (RPC) Zone with no provision for a replacement in the new ordinance that would protect Historic Greenbelt and its original plan, including Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI), in a fashion comparable to that provided by the existing RPC Zone.

As it turned out, Hruby and Craze had already met with county staff to discuss the latter issue, and conversations will continue regarding whether the Neighborhood Conservation Overlay (NCO) Zone defined in the new draft ordinance could be used as a tool to preserve the historic planned community principles. Hruby and Craze believe there may be potential for that to work. The NCO Zone, overlaid on the historic district, could have special standards and may be able to preserve the superblocks and the original plan for Greenbelt. It could also control density and land use. Hruby said both the city and GHI will need to explore

Transit Consideration Hitch Complicates Potential FBI Move

by James Giese

The efforts of city, county and state officials to obtain the proposed Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) headquarters facility to a site at the Greenbelt Metro Station may have been significantly thwarted by a decision of the General Services Administration (GSA) to discount the importance of access to Metrorail transit service. An article in the Sunday, March 13 Washington Post Business Section by Jonathan O'Connell reported that "William Dowd, who oversees the project for the GSA, told the National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC) recently that his agency would not give greater consideration to a site close to a Metro station when determining where to put the FBI headquarters and which company would build it."

Instead, the article reports, the GSA is requiring the proponents of the Greenbelt site to provide nearly 2,500 additional parking spaces. The article does not indicate how this modification would affect the plans of Renard Development Company, LLC for the development of the existing parking lot at the Metro station into a mixed-use development with the proposed FBI headquarters occupying a significant portion of the site. The story does report that Garth Beall, spokesman for Renard, challenged the GSA findings as to the use of Metro and urged the GSA to "provide a 'clear incentive' promoting public transit access."

While the story quotes some members of the NCPC as expressing opposition to the GSA findings, it remains unclear as to what action that body might take and whether or not such action would be effective.

The Greenbelt site's primary advantage is its proximity to a Metro station, although it would also have direct access to the Capital Beltway and I-95 just a short distance away from the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. The Landover Mall site also would have direct access to the Beltway but would require shuttle bus service to Metro stations (Largo and New Carrollton).

Possibly the greatest beneficiary of the GSA decision is the Springfield, Va. site, which is within walking distance of a Metro station but does not have direct access to the Beltway. This site is already owned by the federal government and would be the closest site to the FBI training and other facilities in Quantico, Va., a possible consideration. There is also the possibility that, like the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Administration, the FBI would want a less prominent location.

2016 Presidential Primaries Come to Maryland April 26

by Kathleen Gallagher

It seems unlikely that anyone in the U.S. with access to the Internet, a television or a radio could be unaware that this is the season of primary elections to select the presidential candidates for the two major political parties. Knowing when it is time for Maryland's primaries could be a bit more obscure. Just when election wonks think they have a bead on primary elections in Maryland, something changes. This year voters will go to the polls on Tuesday, April 26.

Marylanders are still grappling with the notion of holding primary elections for state offices in late June in non-presidential election years rather than mid-September. The presidential primaries were moved to February in 2008 as part of a short-lived Potomac Kum-bay-a moment of shared regional voting with nearby states and the District. For the 2012 presidential election, a law was passed declaring the first Tuesday in April to be Maryland's official presidential primary date. So is that what's happening this year? Nope.

This year, holding the primary on the first Tuesday of April would have required that polling places be open for early voting on Easter Sunday. To avoid that situation, state legislators voted during last year's General Assembly to move the 2016 primary to Tuesday, April 26, the middle of Passover week, when Maryland voters will share the stage with voters in Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Connecticut. Other dates to know include April 5, the last day to register to vote or change registration information; April 14, the first day of early voting; and April 19, the deadline for requesting an absentee ballot.

Registering/Changing Party

Greenbelters who are not currently registered to vote at their residence address or who need to make corrections to their voting information must do so by the registration deadline of Tuesday, April 5 if they wish to vote in the primary.

In a primary election, that deadline can also carry other significance for some individuals. In Maryland, persons who are 17 years of age may vote in the primary if they will turn 18 by November 8, the day of the

Backyard Composting Has Many Benefits

by Erin Josephitis

On March 5, 27 community members participated in a compost workshop at the Department of Public Works. Luisa Robles, sustainability coordinator, led the free lesson covering the basics of composting, a way to turn your yard and kitchen wastes into a valuable resource. Composting is good for the environment because it reduces the volume of waste sent to landfills for disposal. Likewise, it holds 20 times its weight in water, acts as a filter and a sponge, reduces soil erosion and prevents stormwater runoff. Composting is good for the garden because it is a great soil amendment and can be used as top dressing during the growing season. It inoculates the soil with beneficial microbes, such as bacteria and fungi. Microbes extract nutrients from the mineral part of the soil and pass the nutrients to plants.

Among the fundamentals Robles described was that microbes need air, water and food to make compost. First, it is important to make sure there are plenty of air passageways into your compost pile. Straw, dried leaves and shredded newspaper are all good materials that allow for aeration of the pile. You can also turn the pile to get air into it or to fluff it up.

Second, a compost pile should be as moist as a wrung-out sponge. Your bin should have good drainage. Too much water prevents air from getting in the pile. Too little water slows the process. You might need to water the pile in the dry months.

Third, composting microbes need two major kinds of food: 'browns' and 'greens.' Browns are dry and dead plant material such as straw, dried weeds, leaves, wood chips, sawdust, shredded paper and cardboard. Greens are fresh plant materials such as kitchen fruit and vegetable scraps, green leaves, grass clippings, coffee grounds, tea bags, etc. Mixing equal parts of greens and browns by volume approximates the ideal ratio of carbon to nitrogen, and moisture range for microbes to thrive.

After describing what should go into a compost pile, Robles mentioned the importance of avoiding meat products, fats and dairy products. They do compost, but take longer and might attract unwanted pests. Also, she recommended that you do not compost the following: chemically treated wood products (pressure treated wood – arsenic, chromium, copper; wood treated with creosote or 'penta' preservative); diseased plants; pernicious weeds (unless they are dead and dry but no weeds that have gone to seed); and human and pet wastes which contain disease organisms.

Participants learned about various composting methods, from vermi-composting to using wooden pallets or a composting bin. Following the presentation, the remaining 12 discounted compost bins were sold to Greenbelt residents. Those interested in being put on the waiting list to purchase a discounted compost bin, email lrobles@greenbeltmd.gov.

On Screen

Two new films begin this Friday, March 18 at the Old Greenbelt Theatre: Embrace of the Serpent and 45 Years.

Embrace of the Serpent

Embrace of the Serpent, written and directed by Colombian Ciro Guerra, depicts the catastrophic effects of European colonialism on the Amazon rain forests and waterways. At the center is Karamakate, a shaman who is the last surviving member of a tribe wiped out by white invaders. A cross-cultural masterpiece filmed in stunning black and white, it is an elegiac meditation on how (not) to interact with the mysterious "other."

Not rated. Running Time: 125 minutes.

45 Years

45 Years is the story of a happily married couple - the "beyond superb" Charlotte Rampling and Tom Courtenay - on the brink of celebrating their 45th anniversary when the discovery of the frozen corpse of the husband's lover 50 years earlier, casts the marriage into crisis. Is it possible that even after decades together, two people can remain perfect strangers?

Rating R. Running Time: 95 minutes.

Obituaries

Martha Patton by Kathleen Baum

Martha Patton

Martha Patton, who retired as assistant director of Career Development for the University of Maryland in 1984, and was one of Boxwood Village's first homeowners, died peacefully in her sleep on March 6, 2016 at the age of 91.

Mrs. Patton was born in Parma, Ohio, the younger daughter of Kathleen (née Mullen) and Frank H. Kimball, who was in advertising. Like so many members of the "Greatest Generation," she learned thrift, self-reliance and tenacity growing up in the Depression. She also understood the importance of seizing the moment and, in 1942, just after her high school graduation, Mrs. Patton applied for and won a position in the War Department's Cleveland Ordnance District. She was promoted and transferred to the Services of Supply Office, International Division, in Washington D.C., where she worked in the newly completed Pentagon through the early days of the occupation.

Mrs. Patton's intelligence so impressed one of the colonels in the department that he offered her a position at his New York law firm, Milbank, Tweed, Hope and Webb. She accepted, and it was in New York where she met John H. Patton, a decorated, recently returned veteran. They married in 1946 and moved to the Washington area following the birth of their first child, living in College Park before moving to Greenbelt.

Despite the challenges of raising four children, in 1957 Mrs. Patton was ready to return to work. She took a position at the University of Maryland, initially as a secretary, and took on a number of increasingly responsible administrative roles before joining Placement and Credentials (the predecessor of Career Development). Her get-it-done attitude and warmth proved to be assets as the department grew in scale and importance. She was named Recruiting Coordinator in 1976 and Assistant Director in 1982. She also worked slowly but steadily towards her college degree and was awarded a B.S. in business and management in 1979.

Mrs. Patton retired in 1984 after 27 years at the University to spend more time with John and explore their shared interests, including travel. The couple took several trips to Europe, investigating John's French roots and wandering across the continent at their own pace. Following her husband's death, Mrs. Patton continued to travel, often choosing itineraries around her love of the arts, especially classical music and opera, and attended performances around the region until her late 80s. She took full advantage of courses offered for older students at the University of Maryland as well as here in Greenbelt to feed her intellectual curiosity, studying everything from ancient philosophy to contemporary literature.

An open, engaging woman with a gift for friendship and quiet but intense religious faith, she will be remembered with love by her family, many friends and devoted neighbors.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held for her on March 10 at St. Hugh's Church, where she had been a parishioner since 1964. She is survived by her son Michael, daughters Kathleen Bright and Mary Connell, five grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and a niece. Her husband John, and younger son, John Andrew, predeceased her.

Kathleen Baum is the niece of Mrs. Patton.

Our sympathies also to the family and friends of Beatriz Mayoral, a former board member of Greenbelt Arts Center member and director of plays in Greenbelt.

Our thoughts go out to Martha Patton's friends and loved ones. Mrs. Patton was an original member of the Boxwood community.

Their father Lee Rose, who was also in the accident, is recovering at Brooke Grove Rehabilitation and Nursing Center.

Congratulations to Eleanor Roosevelt High School boys' basketball team who won the class 4A state championship and to ERHS senior Chibueze Onwuka who won the 4A/3A 220-pound weight class state championship.

Further congratulations to ERHS senior Jan Knutson who played with the highly selective 2016 Jazz Band of America.

And congratulations to Greenbelt teen Megan Winner, who was one of 12 members of the Children of the Gospel Choir who sang with Sara Bareilles at the White House on March 10 for the state dinner honoring Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau.

MakerSpace Labradoodles Compete in FIRST Lego League

by Dinah Cohen

In the gym at DeMatha High School, the tension is mounting. The third and final round of the robotics competition is about to begin. The countdown begins: Three, Two, One, LEGO! The robot begins its mission, and cheers erupt on the sidelines: “Labradoodles! Labradoodles! Ruff! Ruff! Ruff!” This is the cheer of the Greenbelt Labradoodles.

A labradoodle is a mix between a labrador retriever and a poodle. The Greenbelt Labradoodles are a FIRST Lego League team at the Greenbelt MakerSpace. A FIRST Lego League team is a group of children ages 9 to 14 who work together to complete a challenge thought up by the epic alliance between Lego and FIRST. (FIRST is an organization dedicated to inspiring young people’s interest and participation in science and technology and part of it is to think up challenges for children to complete using robots).

According to the FIRST Lego League website, each year FIRST Lego League releases a challenge based on a real-world scientific topic. Each challenge has three parts: the Robot Game, the Project and the Core Values. Teams participate in the Challenge by programming an autonomous robot to score points on a themed playing field (the Robot Game), and developing a solution to a problem the Project has identified. Teams may then attend an official tournament, hosted by the FIRST Lego League Partners.

The Greenbelt Labradoodles is a three-year-old all girls team that practices at the Greenbelt MakerSpace. This year, there were seven girls: Alexandra (11), Maia (9), Ryley (11), Julia (9), Kate (11), Dinah (12) and Holly (9). Alexandra and Dinah have been with the team all three years. Ryley and Kate joined for the 2014 World Class Challenge. Holly, Julia and Maia joined during the off-season training classes held at the Greenbelt MakerSpace and taught by Michael Cohen and Laura Lising. The point of these classes is to sharpen the team’s programming skills. Those wishing to find out more details should email George Boyce at george.r.boyce@gmail.com.

Here is this year’s challenge from the FIRST Lego League website: “To begin your TRASH TREK project, choose a piece of trash and identify a problem with the way it is currently handled. Look for problems with the way we make, transport, store, or turn trash into something new. Then find out what is being done to solve the problem.” Labradoodles chose the problem of trash in waterways, specifically Greenbelt Lake. Our solution was to make a paddle boat with nets on the sides to catch trash. We plan to make a working paddle boat and help clean up the lake for the summer of 2016.

Another part of the competition is the team building exercise. The point of this contest is to see how well the team works together. Although long-term projects are a relatively new Labradoodles specialty, the team is very good at working together. We were required to make an interpretive dance, and after a few minutes of discussion, we decided to make a dance about ourselves: two of us pretended to be a boat, in reference to our project and everyone else barked in reference to our team name. The interpretive dance was very fun and the judges really liked it.

The Labradoodles practiced every Tuesday and (when it got close to competition) Saturday. Tuesdays were generally dedicated to working on the project and Saturday was more about robots and programming. On our team everyone had a specialty. In our project division, Kate was the artist and Julia was the little-bits-that-nobody-notices-but-are-essential person. Alexandra was expressly in charge of the speeches. Ryley did programming, and Holly or Kate usually helped her. Dinah was our main programmer, and Maia was her assistant. Even though everyone had a specialty everyone also had a chance to work on everything.

So, now you know everything

there is to know about the Greenbelt Labradoodles!

Dinah Cohen, 12, is a founding member of Labradoodles and its lead programmer.

Foundation Seeks Grant Applications

The Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) is seeking grant proposals from non-profits or cooperatives that serve residents. Grants range from $500 to $5,000 and are given for new projects in the arts, education, environmental preservation, youth empowerment and technology which “celebrate, respect and build upon the legacy collaboration and cooperation.”

For example, GCF provided seed funds for the Green Man Festival, an event that has continuously grown and is enjoyed by many. A GCF grant enabled the Eleanor Roosevelt High School band to go to China and recently helped them purchase guitars and pianos for music classes. GCF helped to fund new sculptures, which can be enjoyed in the Three Sisters’ gardens, as well as a light dance theater that performed in the gardens. It enabled the Farmers Market to purchase signs located throughout Greenbelt and provided funds for the Community Arts Center to meet ADA accessibility standards. St. Hugh’s was also funded by GCF to start a food pantry.

Application materials are available on the website: greenbeltfoundation.net; submissions are due by April 15, 2016.

R5 Stands for Reduce, Reuse, Recycle, Rethink, Reimagine

by Eva Fallon

On Saturday, March 5, the R5 team of local students from the Greenbelt MakerSpace and Magnolia Elementary School competed in the Maryland State FIRST Lego League Championship held at University of Maryland, Baltimore County, in Catonsville. Through the 12-hour day, 72 teams competed in four areas: core values, research project, robot design and robot games.

The R5 team has been working for six months on team building skills, researching styrofoam reuse, robot building and robot missions. In the judged sessions, they earned top marks in several robot design and research project areas but not quite enough to place for an award. They started off strong and eventually finished 19th out of 72, just short of medal status.

Our competitors are young for this program – ages 9 to 12, the maximum age being 14 – and it was the first time for most of them. It was a thrilling day and the team did well and gained valuable experience for next year.

Remembrances of Andy

Our resident gadfly is gone. Almost all of us knew Andy Carruthers, some resented him, a few of us loved him.

Improbably, I had a warm, cordial connection with Andy. Our chess games in the back room of the New Deal Café were models of ignorant bravado, swashbuckling ignorance. But they facilitated great conversation, fueled by Andy's crackling intelligence, good humor and fierce articulateness. It was pleasure to be in his company.

If we lived in a rational, reasonably fair world, our connection would have blossomed, blazed up even, into a permanent friendship. But the world has a habit of breaking our hearts. I will miss Andy deeply.

To paraphrase a few words of Philip Larkin: "The next morning I got up and he did not. The first day after a death, the new absence stuns us. We should be careful to be kind to each other while there is still time."

Jim Link

I was very saddened by Andy's death. My sincere condolences to his family and those of you who are caring and loyal friends. While I had never met Andy in person, I had one "go-around" with him on the listserv, and I'd have to agree with many that his razor sharp intellect, prodigious curiosity, and presence will be missed. I know I will miss reading his comments and thoughts on community issues, far and near. Even though I never again dared to respond in writing, his ability to engage me in exploring my own thoughts and perceptions never failed. He was a rare and treasured member of our flock. May he fly with ease and grace.

Cynthia Swan

Andy lived two doors down from me. I can see his empty chair on his porch, and I am sad I will never see him sitting there again. I loved to stop and talk with Andy because he always had something interesting to say, and also because he was always interested in what others thought and had to say. I think he had the sharpest mind of anyone I have ever known. I will miss this vibrant, engaged, smart and witty man. And I will miss his many kindnesses to me and my family. Rest in Peace, dear friend. May we be neighbors again one day in that better place.

Christina Kavanagh

Andy was a great neighbor. He always greeted me with a smile. He had that cute blue convertible which he decorated every couple of months.

We would often see Andy out in his garage fixing his bike or helping a friend. On a few occasions, we would ask him to check a flat tire or help us put air in the tires. He would never accept payment, other than a request to share a beer the next time he saw us at the New Deal. He preferred friendship over money.

Every time it snowed, while we were still in bed, enjoying a snow day, Andy would already be outside, shoveling the walkways for our entire row. He made sure all of his neighbors could venture outside, when they were ready.

The only time I saw his mean side was during the city council election of 2009. He didn't like the candidate I was supporting and dug up some very ugly records. Although I did not appreciate it, I admired his ability to do criminal research. I had hoped he would turn it into a career in investigative journalism.

His life was cut short. I don't think any of us will ever understand why.

Lore Rosenthal

It is with great sadness that we share the news that Greenbelt has lost one of her passionate citizens, Andy Carruthers. The Museum was fortunate to work with Andy on a 2007 exhibit called Recent Relics, when Jill St. John was the museum director. We asked Andy to photograph items in the museum collection as if they were fine art pieces, to inspire another look at these everyday improvements. The results were beautiful and a testament not only to his great skill as a photographer, but also to his creative spirit. RIP, Andy, and thank you for all that you brought to Greenbelt.

In Memoriam

Andrew Carruthers

by Bill Cornett

I met Andy when we both joined the Neighborhood Watch. Aside from working to help the community, one of the greatest benefits I got from joining the group was the marvelous conversations I'd have with Andy when we were doing our multi-hour patrols around Old Greenbelt.

Andy was far more open-minded than many Greenbelters might think. His conclusions were always based on his deep grasp of statistics and logic. If some facts didn't fit his conclusions, he'd study them and figure out why, and then change his way of thinking. From current events to sociology to physics - and of course to politics - he was well-versed and erudite, and always willing to consider information coming from the other side of the argument. However, if you held an alternative view, you'd better be ready with the facts to back it up, that was for certain! No worries, though, even if you disagreed with his views, Andy was always willing to play tennis or chess and have a good laugh with anyone. If you needed help, and he could provide it, he would.

For a while I was putting out a news blog, which featured videos from breaking news stories in the Greenbelt area. One evening I covered a gang attack on Gardenway. How did I know that the victim was Andy? Simple. As he lay on the pavement while the paramedics attended to him, he started smoking a cigarette, launching the puffs of smoke straight into the air. While he did manage to quit smoking for months at a time, his friends never quite got him to kick the habit for good.

I sometimes described Andy as a "lost soul." He had worked at several different careers throughout his life, including a stint in the Navy and as a photojournalist. The photojournalism industry declined along with local newspapers, and he found himself in need of a different direction. After he was attacked, he got interested in criminology, and earned a masters' degree in the subject.

Andy started up the Greenbelters Group on Yahoo. Although he was constantly stirring up controversy, he was never mean-spirited. He loved getting a good brouhaha going and then seeing where it led. It was not that he liked to create animosity, but he did like to see people airing their views, and boy did they ever!

Andy knew more people than even I was aware of. The day he died my phone rang constantly, with calls from city council members and mutual friends and even people I had never met, needing to talk.

Even though it has been a short time since Andy's death, I find that the hole left in my life is much bigger than I thought it would be. There were times when I needed a hand with a project, or even just company when I needed to run an errand, and if Andy was able to come along I'd be assured of some sort of enlightenment during the process. There was always some tidbit of community news or statistic or current event that he knew I'd be interested in hearing about. That, along with his great ability to connect on a deep human level, will be sorely missed, I'm sure by everyone who knew him.

In Memoriam

Andrew Carruthers

by Stan Zirkin

During the early morning hours of Friday, March 11, a brilliant, multi-talented, troubled young man died near the Mother and Child statue in Roosevelt Center of a self-inflicted gunshot wound. Greenbelt resident Andrew Carruthers, age 51, known to his many friends as "Andy," was probably best known as moderator of the Greenbelt Yahoo Group, a social/political media group that he founded in 2000. A recent survey showed that the group had at least 1200 members and generated between 180 and 240 messages per month. Andy described the group as an email forum in which Greenbelters are encouraged to freely express political and social views, including "independent minority views" and in which "spirited, courteous dissent of all kinds is often celebrated."

This reporter had the occasion to personally debate some political issues with Andy in between tennis matches. Our political views couldn't be more different but Andy had the unique ability to express his sometimes controversial opinions with such wit and panache that it was impossible to become angry with him. This was a classic case of reject the message but respect the messenger.

Andy also had many other interests. He was very active in civic affairs in the Greenbelt area and was a frequent attendee at city council and GHI meetings. His background in criminal justice (he had a master's degree in criminology from George Mason University) led him to various endeavors in this field, including active participation in a Neighborhood Watch program. He was a gifted photographer, and served as a professional photographer for the Greenbelt Museum and the American Visionary Art Museum (Baltimore Kinetic Sculpture Race), among other organizations. He was also a dedicated and enthusiastic cook. Finally, he was an avid tennis player. This reporter played with him and against him frequently and he often referred to us as the "slice and dice" twins, with reference to our style in hitting tennis balls from the baseline. He played with a joie de vivre that was infectious and he had a self-deprecating sense of humor. Many of us knew that Andy faced certain challenges, both financial and social, but he never let on (at least not to this reporter) the extent to which it interfered with his happiness. What we do know is that wherever he went and whatever he did Andy left a lasting impression. His premature death was a tragedy.

ing criminal justice work, he returned to school at George Mason University and received an M.A. in criminology in 2014. He searched extensively for his ideal job in law enforcement, but unfortunately was unsuccessful in achieving that goal. Andrew was active in many volunteer organizations including the Mid-Atlantic Off Road Enthusiasts and the Greenbelt Museum. He was a frequent contributor to the Greenbelt News Review and was founder and moderator of the Greenbelt listserv. He will be remembered as a writer with a sharp wit as well as a very good friend to many.

Police Blotter

Based on information released by the Greenbelt Police Department, www.greenbeltmd.gov/police Dates and times are those when police were first contacted about incidents.

Robbery

A second man punched him in the face and a third threatened him with a knife and demanded his cell phone. They fled on foot after obtaining his phone. The injured man was treated on the scene for minor injuries.

Assault

Unattended Child

March 3, 4:28 p.m., 100 block Westway. A 28-year-old resident was arrested and charged with leaving a child unattended after a seven-year-old walked into the leasing center. She was released on citation pending trial.

Burglary

March 3, 8 a.m., 9100 block Edmonston Terrace. A cell phone and a debit card were taken from a residence, possibly by way of an unsecured living room window.

March 4, 10:05 a.m., 6100 block Breezewood Court. A man in his bedroom heard what sounded like someone using a key to open the front door to his apartment. He then heard the door open, but entry was not made due to the chain lock on the door.

March 7, 1:18 p.m., 9100 block Edmonston Terrace. A 22-year-old nonresident was arrested and charged with burglary after he entered the home of a person he knows without permission. He was transported to the Department of Corrections for a hearing before a district court commissioner.

Vandalism

March 4, 1:45 p.m., 7500 block Greenbelt Road. A man inside For Eyes eyeglass shop became angry over an issue with his glasses. He threw them and as he left, slammed the front door, damaging it. The man is known to store staff and an investigation is ongoing.

A 2014 Toyota Camry reported stolen to Montgomery County police was recovered in the 6400 block Capitol Drive.

general election, and if they have registered to vote as members of the Democratic or Republican Party by the April 5 registration deadline.

But why must those 17-year-olds register as Democrats or Republicans if they want to vote in a primary? By law, the two major parties are required to hold primaries to select their candidates, and the parties generally choose to let only their members vote to make those choices. Voters registered as independents or with other political parties can cast votes only in non-partisan races, typically for the county school board, that may appear on the primary ballot. Since Greenbelt's school board representative is now mid-term, there are no non-partisan issues for voters on the ballot this year.

Nonetheless, until the April 5 deadline, voters may choose to change their party affiliation if they are not registered as Democrats or Republicans or if they would prefer to vote in the primary of the opposite party. If they wish to return to their original party prior to the November 8 election, they must do so from the time registration resumes after the primary until the October 18 registration deadline for the General Election.

How to Register

The options for registering or changing registration information have remained the same for several years. The voter registration form can be used either for a new registration or for changing an address, a name or a political party affiliation on an existing registration. The process can be completed entirely online by using Maryland's Online Registration System on the State Board of Elections website at elections.state.md.us. One can also print a registration form from the same website and mail or take it to the Prince George's County Board of Elections, 1100 Mercantile Lane, Suite 115A, Largo, MD 20774.

A registration form may be requested by phone from the county by calling 301-341-7300 and asking to have one mailed. Forms can also be picked up at the city clerk's office in the Greenbelt Municipal Building and mailed to the county board office. In addition, one can register or change information in person at the board office in Largo or the Motor Vehicle Administration offices in Largo or Beltsville.

Registration forms being returned by mail to the county board office must be postmarked no later than April 5. Forms returned in person to the county board office must arrive by 4:30 p.m. on April 5. Registration online must be completed no later than 9 p.m. on April 5.

To be eligible to register to vote in Prince George's County, a person must be a U.S. citizen; at least 16 years of age; a resident of the county; either not have been convicted of a felony or have completed serving a court-ordered term of imprisonment, including any required parole or probation; and not be under guardianship for mental disability.

Options for voting will be covered in a future article, but dates to be aware of include the following. Early voting will be conducted from Thursday, April 14 through Thursday, April 21. Voting absentee requires requesting an absentee ballot no later than April 19. The form for requesting the ballot can be printed from the state website or provided by mail from the county board by calling 301-341-7300.

Explorations Unlimited Healthy Hearts

Explorations Unlimited welcomes Kenneth Pasquale on Friday, March 18 at the Community Center. Pasquale is a 2011 graduate from the University at Buffalo with a bachelor's degree in pharmaceutical science. He worked for the West Virginia University stroke and traumatic brain injury (TBI) lab. After marriage, his family moved to the D.C. area and he has been working with Maryland Cardiology for almost a year. Explorations Unlimited is held every Friday beginning at 1 p.m. This presentation will be held in Room 114. Everyone is welcome to attend and questions are always encouraged. New Deal Café Celebrates Poetry

Poetry will be celebrated Sunday, April 3 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Poetry Moment Reception at the New Deal Café in Roosevelt Center. This annual event during National Poetry Month offers local poets, especially those poets whose poems have been displayed in the Poetry Moment Box outside the New Deal Café, the opportunity to share their poetry with other poetry lovers. Attendees may also read poems by other poets. Music and refreshments will be offered.

This year the Poetry Moment Reception is being held as well to honor Juan Felipe Herrera, the 2015 U.S. poet laureate. Herrera is the first Hispanic-American to be named poet laureate. A reading of his poems will be included in the program. Music will be provided by Mayor Emmett Jordan with Brazilian-influenced guitar styling and Jan Knutson, who will perform Latin and jazz solo guitar.

The Poetry Moment Reception is sponsored by the Friends of New Deal Café Arts with support from the City of Greenbelt. This year the event is also co-sponsored by El Arte y Culturas Latino en Greenbelt, a new group whose mission is to produce events featuring Latino arts and artists in the community.

For more information, see newdealcafe.com/events/poetryMoment.php.

Module 1 of the draft document reduces the number of county zones from 73 to 42. It groups the proposed zones into three types: base zones, planned development zones and overlay zones. According to Hruby, base zones are those within which a single set of uses and criteria apply. Here acceptable uses can be allowed by right with little or no review. Planned development zones allow for greater flexibility and leeway in anticipation of more innovative, high quality development and community benefits. Overlay zones are mapped over base zones and apply standards in addition to or in lieu of those required by the base or planned development zones. Although M-NCPPC provided a detailed, multicolored chart designed to illustrate the relationship of the current zones to the proposed ones, it is difficult to grasp the on-the-ground application of the changes to the actual property of the city in this form.

Based on the city staff's own detailed review of Module 1, Hruby presented a list of seven significant concerns, with the entire list of comments and queries to be sent to M-NCPPC being considerably longer. The following are several of the significant concerns.

1) The deletion of the RPC Zone does not provide any replacement to protect Historic Greenbelt, including GHI, and its original plan.

2) Replacing comprehensive design zones and mixed-use zones with base zones that allow by-right development is a major departure from past practice; it will not afford municipalities or the public the opportunity to review and comment on major development projects.

3) It is not obvious which new zones would apply to major areas of Greenbelt, including Beltway Plaza, GHI, Franklin Park and the South Core of Greenbelt Station.

4) The mapping of new zones after, rather than prior to, the adoption of the new ordinance will make it impossible for the public to fully understand the effect of the new ordinance on specific properties.

Considerable discussion by councilmembers bumped up against the difficulties of comprehensively understanding the information being provided by M-NCPPC. Councilmember Edward Putens said he would reiterate the comment that he had made at the 2015 meeting that it is impossible to comment on the plan without knowing specifically what uses will be permitted where.

Mayor Emmett Jordan said, "We have the overall concept but as soon as we try to get specific, we start to see the exceptions." He added that the information given was "overwhelming" and that the devil was still in the details.

Craze agreed that the information was hard to evaluate in a vacuum and that the city needed to be able to see the implications of the proposed changes for the community. She and Hruby both thought that the county likely still has some steps to go through in determining the process of rolling out the information but did not speculate on where that might lead.

Marc "Kap" Kapastin, general counsel for Beltway Plaza, spoke to say he thought it was "crazy" that Beltway Plaza and the South Core were not part of the new category of transit-oriented center, given their proximity to the Greenbelt Metro Station. Commenting that the new ordinance might reopen planning issues for Beltway Plaza, he said they welcomed the idea of flexibility and a streamlined review since Beltway Plaza "needs flexibility for a wide swath of uses."

The draft letter from Jordan to the M-NCPPC project director, which was a product of the February worksession, was approved by council at its March 14 meeting. In it, the process being pursued is questioned, in that it may result in the city's being asked to accept a new zoning ordinance without being given enough information about how the newly defined zones would actually be applied to property in Greenbelt. The letter stresses the need for mapping the zones, with opportunity for municipal and other public input, prior to adoption of the new ordinance.

Regarding the possible reduction or loss of municipal rights to review and comment on development plans, the letter focuses on the "by-right" process defined in Module 1 of the draft document. In by-right zones, conforming uses could be developed on the basis of acquiring building permits without intermediate review by the city. In addition, the letter states that municipalities should have an appropriate role in the review process for projects within what are being defined as Transit/Oriented/Activity Center base zones.

As this effort continues, the mayor said he hopes the city will be able to coordinate with the other members of the Four Cities Coalition – Berwyn Heights, College Park and New Carrollton – and possibly the Prince George's County Municipal Association as well.

HURRY!! AVOID IDENTITY THEFT

The bad guys may have your personal information from hacked retail store accounts, colleges and the government entities. File your tax return before the bad guys file a bogus return and get away with stealing your identity. Let the bad guys have their bogus return bounce because you got your legitimate return to IRS before they did. If you are a procrastinator or slow to get around to it, get help from someone who prepares tax returns full time and works long hours as needed to get the job done.

2015 AFFORDABLE CARE ACT (ACA) CHALLENGE FOR SELF-FILERS

Even if you are a capable self-filer, you may want to consider seeking our help this year. IRS has Staff Action responsibility for the entire U.S. GOVERNMENT collection portion of fees relative to the ACA implementation, including taxpayer reporting, tax assessment, and tax collection procedures. In order to fulfill their responsibility, IRS depends on information made available to them from three sources.

1. The market place, i.e. individual insurance companies provide information to IRS in a regimented format about your health care insurance.
2. The insurance exchanges.
3. Completed forms coming to IRS from individual taxpayers such as yourself as part of the annual tax season reporting activities.

If the information going to the IRS on your health care from the three sources does not reconcile, you and as many as half the tax return filers, even those assisted by paid preparers, may get correspondence from the IRS. This is partially because of errors in reporting by the market place or insurance exchanges and the trial-run basis of the IRS forms that taxpayers are completing. In addition, your tax information may bounce back and forth between IRS and the state to get further exchange information or other clarification. Consequently, in a large majority of tax filings, it may be mission impossible to get all the information to reconcile due to the fickle finger of fate. Please consider, though, that someone who prepares tax returns full-time may be slightly better able to avoid correspondence-causing presentations to the IRS. Never the less, responding to correspondence can be time consuming and it could be handled for you by your paid tax preparer.
