Opponents of Highrise Hold Information Session

by Amy Hansen

The proposed 25-story apartment building that landowner David Hillman wants to put up next to the existing Lakeside North Apartments is "inappropriate for here," said Brian Almquist.

Almquist and his wife Donna organized an information session on the proposed building at the Greenbelt Fire Station hall on June 4. Over 100 people came during the four-hour session, Almquist said, using the signed petition to estimate.

He had pictures of the proposed land use and facilitated discussions of what it meant to have a green belt and the value of woods. In their flyer, distributed ahead of the meeting, the Almquists state that current zoning regulations require the forested land to remain undeveloped.

Most of the attendees were worried about the proposed project's size, its effect on the city and its cost to the woodlands.

However, Almquist noted that not everyone who came was against the development.

As noted in the News Review article on April 14, the plans for the 400-unit luxury apartments were presented to the council for consideration. While the council can voice support or dissent, the zoning issue is not the council's to decide. Hillman, who is the owner of the Lakeside North Apartments, proposes to use underdeveloped land next to those apartments. When the apartments were built in 1963, they were zoned R-30, a zoning category that the county is now phasing out.

The Planning Board of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission will hold a public information session to discuss the zoning issues, set for June 20, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Greenbelt Library.

Muhammed Ali Quietly Visited Greenbelt in 1976

by James Giese

Muhammed Ali came to Greenbelt in April 1976 without fanfare and without most city residents knowing about it. But Greenbelt police officers did. They helped serve as bodyguards.

On April 30, Ali fought Jimmy Young at the Capital Centre. He was approaching the end of his career but was still world champion. He defeated Young in 15 rounds.

Before that fight, he trained in this area and part of that training was road work at Greenbelt Park. It was then as now a quiet out-of-the-way place, a spot that would not result in over attention to the famous fighter.

I did not know about it until Chief William Lane told me. Lane was one of a number of See ALI, page 6 city officers who got to meet Ali and he proudly showed me a photo of himself with Ali in the park.

Current Chief James Craze, then private first class in the police department, was another of the officers to meet Ali. Craze has a copy of an April 28, 1976, issue of the Washington Post showing Ali jogging in the park with three squad cars trailing him. Craze says that he was driving the first vehicle. The next day, Ali autographed a copy of the newspaper for him.

Craze has also provided me with his recollection of the event: 'Yes, I had the good fortune of spending some time with Ali in

They are Greenbelt, Springhill Lake and Magnolia Elementary Schools, Turning Point Academy, Dora Kennedy French Immersion School, Greenbelt Middle School and Eleanor Roosevelt High School. (Turning Point Academy is a charter school that draws students from around the county. This year, the school did not have any students eligible for the ACE Student Award.)

In addition to the city council, a number of local dignitaries were present and congratulated the awardees: State Senator Paul Pinsky; Delegates Tawanna Gaines, Anne Healey and Alonzo Washington; and Ingrid Harrison, representing County Councilmember Todd Turner. A number of the school principals were also present.

The purpose of ACE is to serve as a link between the community and the city council, addressing education issues and promoting high quality schools for the people of Greenbelt.

The purpose of the awards is to recognize Greenbelt students who honor the city's traditions of citizenship, leadership and academic achievement. While many

Letters to the Editor

No to Proposed Highrise

The proposed 400-unit highrise apartment building on the Lakeside North property is unlikely to bring great benefits to the city. It is not close enough to the Metro for most people to walk, and it requires crossing a wide and busy street. As such, it will bring in mostly residents with cars and make traffic along Kenilworth Avenue worse, not better. If reduced traffic is the goal, it should be built much closer to the Metro.

Another concern is that the area it is proposed to be built on is currently zoned for protecting our green area and so should not be built on. In order to rezone it for construction, expensive Environmental Impact Studies should be done to make sure there are no threatened or endangered plants or animals that might be adversely impacted. Even if that is determined to not be a major problem, it will be removing part of the green belt our city is named for.

It is said that the apartments will bring in increased revenue, but the owner of the land has openly said he wants it in part as a tax shelter – a way for him to reduce the taxes he is paying. This will not help the city. And while more residents will mean more tax money, it also means more costs. There would be more students in alreadycrowded schools, more people using city facilities, probably upgrades to water and sewer systems that weren't designed to handle such a load, increased emergency services such as police and fire, probably upgrades to streets, and so on.

Whether or not there would be a net benefit to the city is a complicated and difficult question that cannot simply be waved away with the reassurance of "considerable added taxes" or a claim that "few tenants would have school age children." Yes, any growth will cause some problems, and that shouldn't be used as an excuse to not grow at all, but the problems must be considered in advance and openly discussed with the current residents, all of whom will be affected.

And on a more personal note,

I love Greenbelt because it is not a city. It is a town with low density and a lot of beautiful green areas and wildlife. I don't want to see my home turned into a dense concrete jungle, and this high-rise will go a long way toward that. Please, keep our city center the lovely place it is now, and put the dense growth where it belongs; near the Metro and where it won't require chopping down our woodlands.

Lisa Billingsley

Thank You

I wish to send my most sincere thank you to the members of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department for coming to my rescue as I suffered a stroke. Ironically I was having dinner with them at our banquet. They showed not only their expertise and professionalism, but also their dedication, compassion and caring. We are a fortunate community to have such a dedicated department available to us. I also wish to thank the Ladies Auxiliary for your visits, cards and calls. Again, I thank you all. God bless.

Inadequate

This is just to put on record what everybody in Greenbelt knows by now, but the developers probably hope they don't know, starting with the inadequacies of the April 4 drawing of the proposed tower in the trees.

It shows nothing but apartments. What the developers will have to charge for the apartments guarantees that there will be more than one person in every apartment to carry the expenses. Every person will have a car. You will not fit that many parking spaces into only five acres. Public transportation? Don't make me laugh.

Whatever access road is built, it will have to be widened every five years or so. Each time another acre or two of trees will have to die. It's creeping deforestation.

Greenbelters know that more than five acres of trees will die so that the developers can put in utilities – water, power, Internet. We won't get those trees back, or any others. For the sake of future

Star Party Saturday

The Astronomical Society of Greenbelt will host a star party, open to the public, on Saturday evening, June 11 at the observatory at Northway Fields. The moon, Jupiter, Mars and Saturn will be observed first. After that a quasar (3C 273) and some galaxies (NGC 5742, M102 and M82) will be observed and perhaps more, with an astronomical camera. Visitors are welcome to set up their own telescopes on the hill.

Observing will begin at around 9:30 p.m. and continue for about two hours. There is no fee for the event. Attendees are asked to park in the ballfield lot, not up on the hill, unless bringing a telescope. The star party will be canceled without notice if it is hopelessly cloudy.

John W. Churchill

On March 1, 2016, John Churchill died at the Cortland (N.Y.) Regional Medical Center surrounded by loving family. After a stroke in December, his long-term heart issues worsened leading to hospitalization with congestive heart failure at the end of February. He was 85.

Mr. Churchill was the son of the late Neil S. Churchill and Sarah Cottrell. He was preceded in death by his wife Jule Beaudry Churchill, his sister Elizabeth Churchill Modery, brother Archibald Chauncey Churchill, a niece and a nephew. He is survived by his son John Beaudry, daughter-in-law Donna, son Seth Cottrell, daughter-in-law Charlotte, granddaughters Sarah Grace and Emma Kathryn and a multitude of nieces and nephews.

Mr. Churchill was born in a farm house on Cold Brook Road in Homer, N.Y., on February 12, 1931. After graduating from Cortland High School in 1949 and working for the local electric utility for a year, he entered the U.S. Navy and served until 1954. He was stationed in Africa during the Korean War and in several locations in the U.S. including Jacksonville, Fla. After leaving the Navy he matriculated to SUNY Cortland where he had to decide between education and recreation, opting for the latter. He continued his studies at the University of Illinois (master's) and the University of Wisconsin (PhD), where he outgrew his reluctance for teaching, ending up at the University of Maryland where he was an associate professor for over 30 years.

For nearly all of his years in Maryland, Mr. Churchill lived in Greenbelt. From the first Greenbelt family home in the Lakeside North Apartments the Churchills moved to 5 Court Ridge Road, 65 Court Ridge, Lynbrook Court in Boxwood Village and finally, after the children had moved on, to the Charlestowne North Apartments After Mr. Churchill retired in 1994, his wife, Jule, took a job with the University of Maryland University College in Schwabisch Gmund, Germany near Stuttgart, where he enjoyed telling the locals he was the "house husband." He also loved sitting in the beer garden at the school where the students could stop by for his advice and company. Students from all over the world were able to enjoy his company and many used him as a substitute father while they were so far from home.

Perhaps Mr. Churchill's greatest attribute was his love for people. He was always ready to be in fellowship with others and willing to help in any way he could. He was an active member of the Unitarian Universalist Church (UUC) in Cortland, having first attended while in college. Upon returning to New York in 2000, Mr. Churchill returned to the UUC where his interest in the spiritual continued to grow until the end of his life. Another of his interests was the theater, and he acted in many plays during college. After developing a passionate interest in Winston Churchill, he wrote and appeared in a one-man play entitled Churchill on Churchill, which he loved to perform for local community organizations. He also enjoyed the game of golf.

Mr. Churchill's family is grateful for all the care he received at his Walden Place Home, the Groton Community Care Center and the Cortland Regional Medical Center, and from his niece Pat.

A memorial service was held in March at the Wright-Beard Funeral Home in Cortland, N.Y., which has a website where an on-line memorial page can be found.

In Memoriam Tim Moore: A Fellow Piano Player

by Rick Ransom

Tim Moore, who grew up in Greenbelt, died on April 10 at age 70 in Palmdale, Calif. Among other talents, Tim was a musician who started taking piano lessons in elementary school from Ms. Mirabella, according to his brother Fred. He did well and matriculated into the local band ing up and later as an adult. I was playing in a band with the late Charlie Bruce and others in our twenties when the band was invited to go on the road, starting in amusement parks and resorts. I could not go as I was married with children so I called Tim and he went instead. Upon their return, Tim continued locally for a time with Charlie in the band Blue Mist that played the university scene.

Tim graduated from DuVal High School. He had a brief stint in the Army but could not adjust to military life as he "hated authority," as Fred related. He worked as a service writer for a Ford dealership for a few years and got married to his first wife Jeanette. They had a daughter named Deidre. He was later married to Greenbelt girl Pam Archambeau with whom he had two sons, Andy and Sam. Tim started his own coffee service business and grew it to a point where he was able to sell it for a tidy sum.

Tim's son Andy was killed in repairs, there can't be any replanting of trees near utility lines.

Go over to the library. Picture a high-rise where the parking lot is now. Picture all the residents trying to leave there for work every day. That was proposed once. Wiser heads prevailed. This 2016 proposal is that on steroids.

Just say no. This is not an intelligent proposal for the good of Greenbelt or whoever might have lived in the tower. It deserves no further consideration.

Greenbelt Day Correction

Greenbelt Day does not celebrate the signing of the city charter 79 years ago as was stated in a front page article in last week's issue. No such event ever occurred.

June 1, 1937 was the day when Greenbelt's City Charter became legally effective. The charter was enacted into law by the Maryland General Assembly and signed by the governor much earlier that spring. But the charter was not implemented then because Greenbelt had no residents.

It was not until that fall that the first residents of the model planned community moved in, a town election was held, a newly elected town council took office and the charter was actually implemented.

Greenbelt's charter, like most other aspects of the community, was planned by the town planners. It was a model charter for a model community, following closely the model charter advocated by the National Municipal League for council-manager government. Founded in 1894 as a part of the reform movement advocated by Theodore Roosevelt and many prominent people of the day, the National Municipal League sought to bring good, uncorrupted government to the country's local communities. After Staunton, Virginia adopted a council-manager form of government in 1914 and a number of other cities followed suit, including Cincinnati, Ohio, the league chose to promulgate that form of government and adopted a model charter for it. The Greenbelt charter written by its planners closely follows that model charter. Now councilmanager government is the most common form of government among cities in this country, except for the very smallest and the

Stop the Litter

When a student, I studied social work, and learned what makes communities work. Then, afforded an opportunity to find out why so many urban planners from all over the world visit Greenbelt to learn from its history firsthand, I, too, leaped at the chance. While one can get inspired from the many books and documentary films that preserve its history, a trip can make all the difference. Better yet, when I had the chance to become more than a visitor, I moved right in. It has been nearly 30 years, so let me explain why I still call it home.

It's the fabric - homes, schools, businesses and parks - intricately woven together through birdsong, meandering paths, forests, streams and lakes. This casual patchwork was planned to integrate our common lives into vibrant patterns of the wild. The ability to lose yourself in discovery, chance encounters with wild populations must be kept alive, and they must remain protected, not covered over in steel and concrete, crisscrossing the land like cluttered piles of spreadsheets tossed randomly across a desk.

Please don't destroy Greenbelt's very nature by turning it into yet another Tysons Corner: ugly, congested and "up-scale." I left that monument to wealth long ago without regret.

Prince George's can be so much more – not a model of decadent wealth – rushed into reality. A bad idea, at its best, is not needed here. Stop the rezoning and you just might find quality of life doesn't reside in spreadsheets alone, nor in the monuments to them. Litter on a grand scale is still litter.

Less Confusing Acrobatics

I was so pleased that the Chinese acrobatics program at the Community Center Sunday saw no need to dress the females scantily, as is so often inappropriately done with youthful American acrobats. How sensible.

Even persons who would never dream of abusing the young will have inappropriate bodily reactions to scantily clad, inverted, spread-legged children and youth, and that has been learned from a related experiment where sensors were connected to various areas of the observer's body. carefully with a hand-held mirror to make sure I didn't have any more.

I don't want to discourage anyone from hiking or picnicking in beautiful Greenbelt Park. However, if you do so, please examine yourself for ticks afterward. Using insect repellent provides some protection, but there is no substitute for examining yourself.

These are serious diseases. I have read that you are not at risk if you remove the tick immediately, before the microbes can get into your system.

If you or your children hike in Greenbelt Park or other wooded areas, check yourself for ticks.

Peace Month Events

Three Peace Month events are scheduled for the coming week. All are free and open to the whole community. The local sponsors offer activities to educate, inspire and serve, according to their visions of a community or a world more just and peaceable.

Peace Month is proclaimed by the City Council and coordinated by the Prince George's County Peace & Justice Coalition in cooperation with the City of Greenbelt.

Sunday, June 12, 10 a.m. to noon. Reflections on peace principles of native peoples, the ancient symbolism of the white pine on the Greenbelt flag and fun ways to connect with nature, led by Joe Murray. Across the street from 103 Ridge Road, Greenbelt. Contact JoeMurray1@yahoo.com.

Friday, June 17, 7:30 to 9 p.m. Open readings of poems, songs and other writings on peace, hosted by Greenbelt Writers' Group Community Center, 15 Crescent Road. Contact Barbara Ford, barb.ford@comcast.net.

Saturday June 18, 4:30 to 8:30 p.m. Summer Solstice earth garden celebration, including reflections on peacemaking with the natural world. April of 1976. He was training for one of his two fights at the Capital Centre. He would do his road work, running in Greenbelt Park, at daybreak.

"This was toward the end of his fighting career. He was very gracious, even playful with us. Spending time with him is one of the highlights of my career. To me, he seemed to be the type of person who would make a great friend.

"Being a veteran, I didn't know what to think of him in his younger years due to the controversy surrounding his conscientious objector status. After spending a little time with him I came away thinking that much of what the public saw was for show. He was perhaps the most famous person in the world at the moment, yet he took the time to talk to the little people such as Greenbelt police officers on his security detail.

"We volunteered for that, didn't get paid. We were much richer for the experience."

very largest.

When Greenbelt's 50th Anniversary was approaching, the city council decided that there should be an annual celebration of the city's birthday. But when? With residents still recovering from the many activities of Labor Day weekend, numerous church fall bazaars, Halloween and Thanksgiving, it was decided that a fall celebration was not a good time. Late spring was better. So the city council designated the first weekend in June to be Greenbelt Day weekend in recognition of the enactment of the city charter.

Since then the Greenbelt Recreation Department has organized numerous activities and events to commemorate the city's birthday, almost always anchored by a performance of the Greenbelt Concert Band and traditional welcoming remarks by the city's mayor. I believe that the absence of such distraction enables more competent perception and appreciation of the acrobatics, on both the parts of the audience and the acrobats themselves.

Beware of Ticks

I went for a walk today in Greenbelt Park. I parked by the Ranger Station and walked most of the Perimeter Trail, leaving out the south loop of the trail.

When I came home and showered, I noticed a black tick attaching itself to my leg. This was the big kind of tick that carries Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. I also noticed a small, brownish tan colored tick on my foot. This may have been a deer tick, the kind that carries Lyme Disease. I removed both ticks, and examined my whole body students achieve academically, the recipients have uniquely impressed their principals, teachers and the wider community and personified the values that make Greenbelt a great community.

The Student Awards complement the ACE Educator Awards, which ACE presented to teachers and staff members from Greenbelt's schools at the city council session in March.

Each student received a number of gifts and certificates to commemorate his or her success. From ACE, each of the elementary and middle school students will receive a $25 gift certificate to Books-A-Million in Beltway Plaza.

The graduating ACE student award winners from Eleanor Roosevelt High School will each receive a $2,000 scholarship to help them with some of the expenses associated with the next part of their education.

The following is a summary of the presentation for each student:

Greenbelt Elementary

Fifth grader Kevin Mayo was recognized as a positive role model. He is willing to stand up for what is right, even when his peers are making the wrong decisions.

Samantha Stewart maintains above average grades in all subject areas, is a prolific reader and a member of the Four Star Math General Team.

Springhill Lake Elementary

Mohammed Arik Chowduhry is a fifth grade student. Known to his friends as Arik, he is a hardworking scholar who exhibits persistence and caring.

Najaah Miles is a fifth grader and a member of the Helping Hands Club. She is an active member of the robotics club. Najaah has learned a graphic programming language, and uses problem solving and critical thinking to help her master assigned tasks.

Magnolia Elementary

Christopher Fernandez is one giant of a young man with a heart as big as he is tall. He is often seen on the school's news show, MES News, as the "Good Speech Corner" anchor, giving information on what words to use.

Emely Contreras has been a Talented and Gifted (TAG) student since first grade. She spent a year as a peer coach to a new student who didn't speak English, and serves on the MES news show each Wednesday interviewing students, faculty and staff on school to read to first and second grade students in extended learning sessions. He has been nominated by the NJHS students as one of the most involved male students.

Audrey Versteegen has participated and advocated since first grade for students to explore and develop their thinking skills in Destination Imagination. She and her family raise service puppies for an organization in Laurel called Fidos for Freedom.

Greenbelt Middle School

Maximiliano Gonzalez-Cruz is diligent in his studies but what stands out most is his eagerness to assist others in time of need. Max voluntarily participates in reading books to elementary school students. He currently plays the flute but wants to try more musical instruments.

Elizabeth Adejumo promotes science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) education through the Patriots Technology Training Center, an outreach group for the promotion of STEM education, where she currently acts as the treasurer. She is also a chairperson for the annual Solar System Competition.

Eleanor Roosevelt

Scott Candey's academic career includes many Honors and AP courses. He has worked as a freelance videographer for various school and community functions, at Creative Kids Camp (a local theater summer camp for elementary-aged children) and as an audio-visual technician for the Greenbelt Recreation Department. He is currently a production manager for a local public access television station and orchestrates lighting design for Goddard's Music and Drama Club.

Zuha Sadeed is a member of the AP Cambridge Capstone (Pilot) Program, for which she completed two years of the AP Cambridge Seminar, completed a 20-page research paper and earned a minimum score of 3 on at least three Advanced Placement examinations. She is a member of the National Honor Society, currently serving on the membership committee and also as a tutor for other students.

Maryland State Delegate Award

Delegate Anne Healey awarded one of the Maryland State Delegate Awards (with a $500 scholarship) to Sophie Bernheisel. Sophie is taking her seventh advanced placement course this year. Her determination allowed her to be accepted into the Science and Technology program at the end of middle school. After completing two years in the S/T program she transferred into the AP Capstone Quest program where there is more emphasis placed on writing and the humanities.

She is a member of the Symphonic Orchestra where she plays the bass. Sophie is the vice chairperson of the Greenbelt Youth Advisory Committee and has drafted legislation to change the city voting age to 16. She is trilingual, speaking English, Russian and French.

New Deal Cafe Events

Sunday, June 12, Deaf Brunch from 10:30 a.m. until 12 noon. The Not2Cool Jazz Trio perform from 11:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. In the evening, Bayside Big Band bring their 17-piece orchestra to perform the music of the famous Big Bands. Covering the 1930's sound of Count Basie and Glen Miller to the modern Neo-Swing sound of the Brian Setzer Orchestra.

Shredding Day Sees Impressive Results

Greenbelt Shredding Day took place on April 29, sponsored by the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union and organized by its general manager, Cynthia Comproni.

Safeguard Shredding collected 13,560 pounds of material at the event. They report that, according to EPA calculations and current prices, this translates into savings of 115 trees, 47,460 gallons of water, 27,798 kW of energy, 407 pounds of air pollutants and 34 yards of landfill.

Greenbelters are encouraged to participate with full confidence in the security of their information. "All material is 100 percent destroyed before it is recycled," Safeguard assures. The next shredding day is set for October.

Greenbelt Lions Club Installs New Slate of Officers for 2017

by Lion Tim Edwards

On Tuesday, May 24 the Greenbelt Lions Club installed its Lions Year 2017 slate of officers. The installation was officiated by Past District Governor, Rich Barb, at their May dinner meeting at Sir Walter Raleigh Inn in Greenbelt.

Installed as President was Harvey Hauptman; First Vice President, Tim Edwards; Second Vice President, Dorothy Boddie; Secretary, Lynda Varda and Treasurer, Richard Jones. Additionally, Dennis Boles was installed as the organization's First Year Director and Rowland Hoke was installed as Second Year Director.

Many Greenbelters have learned about the Greenbelt Lions during White Cane campaigns at local shopping centers. Such funds go in part to the club's efforts regarding the treatment and prevention of blindness. The organization's efforts have broad-

Greenbelt Advocates for Environmental and Social Justice have invited representatives from the Prince George's County Planning Department (PGCPD) of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) to provide an update on the status of the comprehensive re-write of the Prince George's County Zoning and Subdivision Regulations. The rewrite will impact Greenbelt. This is an opportunity to ask questions.

The PGCPD is comprehensively rewriting the county's Zoning Ordinance and Subdivision Regulations. The Zoning Ordinance and Subdivision Regulations are the laws that determine how land or property in Prince George's County can be developed. The intended impact of this multi-year project is to modernize the county's zoning code into a document that is aligned with the county's vision for smart growth, economic development, and improved quality of life for Prince George's County Residents.

Many Cats and their Kittens Left at Animal Shelter Steps

by Amy Hansen

Twenty-eight abandoned cats and kittens appeared on the steps of the Greenbelt Animal Shelter on June 3 and 4, almost overwhelming the shelter. The first batch of 19 were left in boxes and carriers outside the shelter on Friday afternoon. Shelter employees discovered the second batch of boxes filled with nine animals on Saturday morning.

The shelter is set up to only accept animals from Greenbelt residents, and not set up to receive so many cats at once. Since these cats were dropped off anonymously, the employees do not know where the animals were from.

Greenbelt is the only no kill shelter in Prince George's County. That is the likely reason that so many animals were abandoned here, Shelter employee Howard Stanbeck told several news organizations. "The person who dropped these cats off should have notified us," said Stanback, "The Greenbelt Animal Shelter only accepts animals from Greenbelt, but we could have directed them as to where they could have taken the animals."

The animals were in fair condition, Stanbeck reported, though all of them have fleas. Greenbelt has procured the assistance of other shelters including Alley Cat Rescue to move the cats and kittens toward adoption.

Both the Greenbelt Animal Shelter and the Greenbelt police are investigating to find out where the kittens came from. People with information should contact Animal Control at 301-474-6124 or the Greenbelt police at 301-474-7200.

Art Exhibit Reception June 19 For Ingrid Cowan Hass

by Jeri Holloway

Paint Branch Unitarian Universalist Church will hold a reception for their current art exhibit, Songs of Discovery by artist Ingrid Cowan Hass, on Sunday, June 19 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Hass has lived in Greenbelt since 1998. Originally from North Carolina, she studied studio art and music at Smith College and in Hamburg, Germany, where she lived for three years. She holds a master's degree in opera from the North Carolina School of the Arts. Music, theater and visual arts have been an integral part of her life from a young age.

These interests merged a few years ago when she and her husband, Olé Hass, started a puppet company. Their shows feature original scripts, beautifully handcrafted puppets and sets, and many songs, creating unique artistic performances for children and adults alike. Beech Tree Puppets serves the greater Washington-Baltimore area, performing in public and private schools as well as libraries, small theaters and public meeting spaces.

"As a professional musician and puppeteer, I am busy with rehearsals, practice, or teaching, but I always have pictures and colors brewing in my head. I believe that color speaks directly to the heart, mind and spirit of a person, in a similar way that music does. Color is very often the vehicle I am drawn towards to express my relationship to the subject. I like to find the song the subject is singing," said Hass. The show features watercolors, colored pencil drawings and block prints.

Paint Branch Unitarian Universalist Church is located at 3215 Powder Mill Road, Adelphi. Call 301-937-3666 or visit pbuuc.org for more information.

"Explore Your Greenbelt" is Half Done, More to Come

by Carol Shaw

Residents celebrate Greenbelt every day, but the Explore Your Greenbelt campaign celebrating the 10th anniversary of the Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) reaches its halfway point at the end of June. This campaign highlights the GCF supported organizations that bring practical and creative approaches to enhance the Greenbelt community.

"Our goal is to broaden the visibility of the Greenbelt Community Foundation and our past grantees to help people recognize the deep, tangible impacts of giving locally," says Melissa Ehrenreich, Foundation president. "We've been thrilled to meet so many residents and potential grantees through this campaign who didn't even know we were here. What a wonderful opportunity to see the power of our community through fresh new eyes."

The campaign, which runs through October, promotes the public events of the participating organizations, providing residents with opportunities to learn about and experience the community groups that make living in Greenbelt unique. An April open house at the Greenbelt Arts Center opened the campaign and since then five more organizations have been spotlighted, including The Lady Angels, CHEARS, Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative and the Greenbelt Museum. The Greenbelt Girl Scouts wetlands restoration project at the pond on Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen Drive will complete the June schedule. The schedule of coming events is available on GCF's web site greenbeltfoundation.net.

Just as Greenbelt is a community because of its residents, the Explore Your Greenbelt campaign is made possible because of the generosity of individual volunteers and supporting organizations.

The Greenbelt News Review is one of the principal supporters of the campaign. It provides space for articles and ads to promote events at participating organizations. Cathie Meetre, News Review board president; Mary Lou Williamson, editor; and Diane Oberg mentored volunteers on newspaper writing and helped develop promotional strategy.

Foundation volunteers are conducting interviews, writing articles and taking photographs. Writers includes Caroline H. Fuchs, Carol Griffith, Nicole Moore and Anna Socrates. Volunteers taking photos at events are Eric Zhang, Julie Magness and Suzette Agans.

Paradigm Management, anothcampaign materials.

Barbara Havekost chaired a committee with two members, Dorrie Bates and Sylvia Lewis. This group of volunteers secured more than 50 prizes from 25 local businesses for three prize drawings at each event. Prizes vary in value from $10 for a Farmer's Market tee shirt to $110 for a special facial from Pleasant Touch. The Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket office is where notified winners can obtain their prizes.

Overseeing this campaign is a Steering Committee, chaired by this reporter, with representatives from all areas of Greenbelt. These volunteers include Carolyn Lambright Davis, Eulalie Lucas, Jim Fischer, Dawn Goodman Washington and Foundation board members Eric O'Rear and Heather Scotten. Other GCF board members, Lois Rosado, Joanie Cohen-Mitchell, Melissa Ehrenreich, and Suzette Agans are helping with organizing and hosting the Foundation information table at events.

It takes a village to implement a campaign of this breadth. The campaign runs until the end of October. For more information visit greenbeltfoundation.net.

GES First Graders at Multicultural Dinner

OTO BY CHRISTINE DORAN

First graders from Greenbelt Elementary School spell out the Russian word for hello.

First-graders from Greenbelt Elementary School spelled out the Russian word for hello under the guidance of their teacher Ms. Dani Sanders, as part of the entertainment at the school's annual Multicultural Dinner, Thursday June 2.

The PTA-run pot-luck event is enormously popular with members of the school and the community, giving all a chance to admire the students' geographyrelated projects in the classrooms and then enjoy authentic ethnic dishes contributed by members of the school's wonderfully diverse population. This year a musical and dance performance element was added to the celebration, as well as this demonstration from some of the Russian-language students. GES students have the opportunity to learn Russian as part of the Prince George's County Public Schools World Languages Program, which has been running at the school for the past two years.

CELEBRATE PRIDE MONTH
