Greenbelt Joins National Night Out On August 2

On Tuesday August 2, the Greenbelt Police Department will spend at least some of the evening at play. They'll be meeting with neighbors in Beltway Plaza and Franklin Park. They'll have some food with neighbors in Greenbriar. They'll laugh with the neighbors at Windsor Green. And they'll enjoy a cold lemonade with neighbors at Huntington Ridge as well as many other neighborhoods in Greenbelt.

National Night Out (NNO), which started 33 years ago, is an annual community-building campaign. It promotes police-community partnerships and neighborhood camaraderie. The goal, according to the NNO website (natw.org), is to make neighborhoods safer and better places to live.

This year the following groups and neighborhoods have registered to participate in Greenbelt:

Roosevelt Center (Crescent Road and Southway), 6 to 9 p.m. Participants include the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union and Greenbelt Coop Pharmacy and Supermarket, Old Greenbelt Theatre, Greenbelt MakerSpace, Greenbelt CERT (Community Emergency Response Team).

Greenbriar (7716-7718 Hanoover Parkway), 6 to 8 p.m. Their events will be in the parking lots between the buildings.

Beltway Plaza (6000 block Greenbelt Road), 5 to 9 p.m. in partnership with Franklin Park Apartments. The events will be held in the rear parking lot area.

Windsor Green (7474 Frankfort Drive), 6 to 8 p.m. Their events are scheduled for the Community Center.

Lincoln Place Survives Proposed Demolition

by James Giese

In February, 2005 I wrote a story about an apartment project in Los Angeles called Lincoln Place that had a double interest to Greenbelters. Lincoln Place was a somewhat more modern version of original Greenbelt. Both projects followed garden city concepts, were nearly the same size and had some similarities in architecture and communal outdoor amenities. Both were originally rental units. Greenbelt was originally built for low income residents. Lincoln Place had become a boon to some because Los Angeles had frozen rent increases for tenants who remained in place.

While Greenbelt had more community amenities like a school-community center, city government, parks, etc., Lincoln Place, built a decade-and-a-half later, had more modern interiors that included hardwood floors, tile kitchen counters and dishwashers. Both have convenient small commercial districts. Both have achieved historic designation.

The second reason for interest was that Lincoln Place and Greenbelt's Springhill Lake Apartments had the same landlord, Apartment Investment and Management, Inc. (AIMCO). At both locations AIMCO was proposing to tear down and rebuild; at Lincoln Place with condos and in Greenbelt with new, high rise apartments. While the city and county were in negotiations with AIMCO and reconstruction of Springhill Lake appeared to be a possibility (although opposition was developing), at Lincoln Place tenants were in battle with the landlord.

My story recounted details of some of the Lincoln Place buildings being torn down, illegally some claimed, tenants being evicted by the sheriff and others refusing to budge. There were lawsuits and numerous hearings before city legislative and administrative bodies.

Later in Greenbelt, in the midst of the recession, AIMCO sold Springhill Lake and the new owners chose to retain it as a garden apartment complex but to upgrade the units and increase rents, renaming it Franklin Park.

And what happened in Lincoln Place since the article? A happy ending for all is reported in a non-bylined story in the 2015 winter issue of Preservation Magazine published by the National Trust for Historic Preservation. Lincoln Place remains as a rental apartment project, AIMCO remains its owner, new apartment units compatible to the original razed units have been built, the tenants who refused to budge now have life tenancy rights and the original buildings have been spruced up with modern wiring and plumbing added but with many of the original features retained to become "retro-chic."

Greenbelt Hosts National League of Small Cities Council

by Michael McLaughlin

Greenbelt City Councilmember Silke Pope and the City of Greenbelt recently hosted the Small Cities Council of the National League of Cities (NLC). The Small Cities Council is comprised of elected officials from communities across the country with a population of less than 50,000. Pope is the 2016 Chair of the Small Cities Council and as such hosted the annual summer meeting of the group. The meeting was held at the Greenbelt Hilton Garden Inn from July 13 through 16.

The group enjoyed a viewing of the movie The City, along with a description of Greenbelt's history and tour of the Museum led by Museum Curator Megan Searing-Young. Caitlin McGrath, executive director of the Friends of the Greenbelt Theatre, was also present and explained the Friends role in operating the theater.

On Thursday, the group was greeted by Mayor Emmett Jordan and Prince George's County Executive Rushern L. Baker, III. This was followed by presentations on Police Department accreditation led by Greenbelt's Accreditation Manager Jim Parker and former Greenbelt Captain

Police Department Proactive, Partners with Autism FYI

by Sue Krofchik

The Greenbelt Police Department has formed a partnership with Autism FYI (AFYI) Organization and will have access to information in their National Registry to use when interacting with persons with autism. Chief of Police James Craze and command staff met with representatives of the organization on July 11 after learning about it from Prince George's County Police, already a partner.

The goal of the AFYI National Registry is to increase the safety of persons with autism and first responders who encounter them, often under stressful circumstances. Autism is a biological and neurological condition that lasts a lifetime and can cause any combination of social, emotional and cognitive disabilities, each of which can range from mild to severe. Each person's symptoms are unique; some are so mild that autism is not apparent, while in others they present major problems when interacting with others. Some persons with autism are unable to communicate verbally.

"It is important to recognize how autism presents itself," said Greenbelt Police Department Public Information Liaison George Mathews. Some autistic persons do not recognize personal space and like to touch things. "They might [try to] go up to touch the face of an officer who [not knowing the person is autistic] may be taken by surprise and perceive Show Hometown Girl's Films?

Rosa Bianca Salazar is an American actress. She was raised in Greenbelt, and began performing in New York City, moving to Los Angeles in 2009 to pursue her acting career. She appeared in several College Humor sketches. She is best known for her roles as Zoe DeHaven on the NBC series Parenthood and Nurse Maria in the FX anthology series American Horror Story: Murder House. She appeared in the 2015 films The Divergent Series: Insurgent, as Lynn, and Maze Runner: The Scorch Trials, as Brenda.

For the longest while I've awaited the appearance of what I call (and many agree) her best work as yet, the film Night Owls at the Old Greenbelt Theatre. Being unschooled in the ways of film distribution contracts and red tape, I don't know why this magnificent funny film has not yet been shown in our home town – Rosa's home town – but that's why I am writing this little article. Years back when Rosa was on the TV show Parenthood for a whole season I wrote an article about my pride and joy, and the GNR published it. So let's inform all film buff Greenbelters that there's a real indie to be selected and enjoyed. The film has two main characters that carry the film, with one cameo by Peter Krause, whom you may remember from Six Feet Under and of course from his role in Parenthood.

We would be pleased as punch to have this wonderful film starring our hometown girl shown at our hometown theater. Might even get Rosa to guest speak at one showing.

While we're at it, why not give the Baltimore themed and filmed picture Jamesy Boy a Greenbelt showing? After seeing this one, Dr. Phil invited Rosa who played bad-girl Crystal to his mansion to interview her and just get to know her, and then later had the real Jamesy Boy on one of his shows.

Seems to me our community would show great pride in Rosa's accomplishments, as she is a product of our local schools (Greenbelt Middle French Immersion and Eleanor Roosevelt HS, where she studied drama, improv and acting with staff).

Thanks for considering that at least one of Rosa's several films be brought to the Old Greenbelt Theatre to be enjoyed by those who are familiar with her and new fans of her limitless talent!

Put Pageant Back On Stage

In their September 3, 2015 letter to the editor, David and Sandra Lange asked the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee and the Miss Greenbelt Pageant Committee to get back together and schedule the pageant on the festival stage. We stand with them on this issue, as we have heard that again in 2016 the pageant will not be on the festival stage.

We have heard various explanations about how this separation occurred. We know how difficult it is to resolve issues as more time passes and more things are said. We have heard there is a lawsuit concerning pageant funds. We do not know what is true.

We do know that this issue has been discussed at length by city council members. We know they have individually attempted to bring the parties together. Very recently Councilmember Ed Putens urged his fellow councilmembers to bring the involved committee leaders together to discuss their issues and get the pageant back on the festival stage. Such a get-together under council auspices is not in the offing at this time.

We appeal to festival chair Linda Ivy and pageant chair Devin Fendley to contact one another. We urge other readers to appeal to the festival committee and the pageant committee to come together with a sense of resolution and a goal of moving beyond this.

Please schedule the Miss Greenbelt Pageant on the festival stage this year.

Thank you,

Marsha Voigt and Gwen Vaccaro

Aging Like a Fine Wine?

Eighty-year-old Woody Allen's 50th film (approximately), Café Society, comes to the Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, July 29. It is a nostalgic paean to the vanished golden era of Hollywood 1930's pop culture featuring Jesse Eisenberg, Steve Carrell and Kristen Stewart.

Bobby (Eisenberg) is a transplanted New Yorker seeking his way rather cluelessly in Hollywood, hoping to be boosted by his powerful Hollywood agent, Uncle Phil (Carrell). Phil foists Bobby onto his secretary Veronica (the luminous Kristen Stewart). Romantic triangles, glib one-liners, lush photography, metaphysical angst and echoes of past Allen movies ensue.

Don't miss the beautiful opening and closing scenes of a Hollywood pool party and a New Year's Eve celebration.

"I've never mixed champagne and bagels and lox," says Bobby.

"Welcome to Hollywood," says somebody.

Written, directed, produced by Woody Allen, Café Society runs 1 hour, 36 minutes and is rated PG13.

Fireworks

While our July 4th/5th fireworks display was impressive, we need to recognize it as passé 20th century behavior which harms our environment.

As for doing what we have always done, many of us have fond memories of events in smoke-filled hospitals, pool halls, bars, etc. Some of us loved the dog fights and rooster fights; and we have loved our huge, polluting motor vehicles. But now we know better, and these things are in decline.

In some countries they are starting to use relatively quiet/silent fireworks, and I recommend investing at least an hour in reading the articles which come up in Internet searches. Unfortunately, even with the quieter displays there is still chemical and particulate pollution – surely not good for our lake.

A few revel in the loud booms, crackles and pops and may even allow this to represent for them the memorable strife and heroism of war. I believe that these persons should add authenticity to their experience by joining our military or helping organizations who position themselves in war-torn countries.

Some of our young veterans have returned suffering PTSD, and sometimes permanent, partial hearing loss. They would like to be able to bring their young families to a Fourth of July display without risking further damage to their own more-vulnerable hearing, or to their children's hearing.

Admirably Greenbelt has its own animal shelter, which unfortunately is less than 1/4 mile from the fireworks displays. It is most upsetting to some of these animals, already stressed from homelessness, illness and disability, to be hearing these extremely loud fireworks displays.

As Greenbelters, defined by our environmentalism, we have no business allowing these flagrant harms to each other, the animals and our environment.

Barbara Remembered

In the month since Barbara's death, the people of Greenbelt, neighbors near and distant have come together to express their sympathy and give support to her family, and make donations to the organizations, GAVA and FONDCA, to name only two of many which Barbara founded.

I want everyone to know that we are truly appreciative of this support in her name. Barbara worked hard to build a sense of community and mutual support here in Greenbelt, the town she grew up in and returned to after a few years in New York City.

So I guess it wasn't surprising that everyone came together, sending cards, bringing food to Julia and me (we will learn to cook), and checking up to make sure we were OK and shared their memories of Barbara that brought us comfort. The generosity and friendship of the Greenbelt community will be remembered. Barbara's legacy lives on. Thanks.

Museum Anarchist Lectures, Then Sleeps in Greenbelt

by Megan Searing-Young

On July 19, the Greenbelt Museum hosted Franklin Vagnone not just for a lecture, but also for an unprecedented overnight stay in the Museum's historic house at 10B Crescent. A self-described "domestic-archeo-anthropologist," Vagnone has been traveling the country staying the night in historic homes as part of a series that he calls One Night Stands. As the former executive director of the Historic House Trust of New York City, and through years of work in the preservation field, Vagnone is uniquely qualified to experience, and then thoughtfully write about, the historic homes in which he stays. He recently co-authored a book with Deborah Ryan entitled, The Anarchist's Guide to Historic House Museums, in which he makes the case that house museums and historic sites have largely become stale, restrictive spaces, far from the active centers of life and habitation that they once were. Though not without critics, which he is the first to admit, his ideas have galvanized many in the field to rethink how museums can evolve to be more welcoming, lively spaces.

The Museum invited Vagnone to Greenbelt to participate in their quarterly lecture series, sponsored by the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum (FOGM). He gave his presentation, Sleeping Around, to nearly 60 attendees in the Multipurpose Room of the Community Center. In the talk, which was lavishly illustrated with photos and short videos from the sites he has visited, he explained how each home had a unique story, one that he could best access and come to know by spending time in it, listening, looking, absorbing and living in the space. Other sites he has visited include the Glessner House in Chicago; the Hull Family House and Farmstead in Lancaster, N.Y.; Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria, Va.; and Historic Richmond Town, Staten Island, N.Y. Just prior to the talk Vagnone, his partner John Yeagley, FOGM Board President Jennifer Ruffner, Museum Director Megan Searing-Young and Education and Volunteer Coordinator Sheila Maffay-Tuthill gathered at the museum house for a dinner. Each person made a recipe from the Greenbelt Woman's Club Cookbook. Vagnone and Yeagley brought two Jell-O salads (see photo). Dining, working, bathing and sleeping in the house are all part of Vagnone's process.

Following the lecture, Vagnone and Yeagley stayed the night at the Greenbelt Museum's historic house. The Museum is the only site so far to host both men. Vagnone wanted to explore ideas about family units and to compare and contrast the average early Greenbelt family with his own, more modern hybrid version, so everyone at the Museum was happy to welcome them both. The write up of his "One Night Stand" in Greenbelt, Traveling with Tomatoes, covers a great deal of intellectual ground. Through careful research and thoughtful observations, it raises many important questions and issues about Greenbelt's history. It is now on his website, twistedpreservation.com/one-night-stand-series/. In a follow up conversation, Vagnone said, "I am always looking for how these fragile historic sites can inform my life today – and with Greenbelt, that wasn't very hard to do because it is an active and alive community. This place has so much to share to the world around you. Keep doing a great job!"

Old Greenbelt Theatre, Library Show Free Movies

by Li'l Dan Celdran

Families enjoyed Old Greenbelt Theatre's free summer series movie "Madagascar 3: Europe's Most Wanted" in which Alex, Marty, Gloria and Melman are still trying to get back to the Big Apple and their beloved Central Park Zoo. First, however, they need to find the penguins. When they travel to Monte Carlo, they attract the attention of Animal Control after gate crashing a party and are joined by the penguins, King Julian and Co., and the monkeys. How do a lion, zebra, hippo, giraffe, four penguins, two monkeys and three lemurs travel through Europe without attracting attention and get back to New York? They join a traveling circus. Their attempts to get back to New York are consistently hampered by the captain of Animal Control who wants to make Alex part of her collection. Once they make it back to New York, Marty, Alex, Gloria and Melman realize that they want to be part of the traveling circus.

"Circus Today" chalk art welcomed viewers into the Theatre and moviegoers walked through "green vines" to their seats. After the movie, children made animal-themed paper bag puppets and a movie-themed craft is planned each week in Roosevelt included a presentation by Dr. Ellen Harris, director of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. Many of the communities in the Small Cities Council are rural communities that work regularly with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This was followed by a tour of the Goddard Space Flight Center where they learned about Goddard's mission and saw preparations underway on the James Webb Space Telescope to be launched in October 2018.

America to find success in Hollywood, but a frog-legs merchant is after Kermit. This original Muppet flick was full of cameos and humor. The program runs on Wednesdays at 4 p.m. through August 17. See each week's At the Library column for more information.

Friday's sessions included a presentation on the value and uses of municipal bonds followed by a briefing from Garth Beall of Renard Development on the efforts to bring the proposed new headquarters of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to Greenbelt. Later Friday morning, presentations were made on four of the city's award-winning programs: Greenbelt Assistance in Living, Artful Afternoon, Pet Expo and the Four Cities Street Sweeper.

The meeting concluded Saturday with the group's business meeting. Two of the topics raised at the business meeting were suggestions for education sessions at the annual NLC meeting in November and discussion on how to maximize the role of the Small Cities Council within NLC.

According to the article, the turnaround by AIMCO came in 2010 when it decided to preserve the project as rental apartments. No doubt changing economic conditions played into the decision, as the market for condos had tanked while the market for apartments began to boom.

The article further notes that the Venice section of Los Angeles has become the location for high-tech startups such as Google and SnapChat, and the neighborhood has experienced growth and renewal with Venice Beach now being called "Silicon Beach."

On Wednesday morning, July 20, signs were posted along the Greenbelt segments of the ADT.

Greenbelt Lake, on the back of an In Case of Emergency sign at the gravel road entrance to Buddy Attick Park, on the back of one of the signs in Buddy Attick parking lot facing the pedestrian trails to Crescent Road and on the back of the crosswalk signs on Crescent Road located near Ridge Road.

is triangular, with a puzzle piece in the center of a yellow background. It is yellow to grab a person's attention, has a yield sign shape to remind the observer to hesitate and proceed slowly (as one would do when driving) and the puzzle piece to show that many aspects of autism remain a puzzle.

The package includes a bracelet that allows USB access to medical, demographic and behavioral information, a decal for use on a home window or car windshield, a membership card and other items with the autism logo. The AFYI Registry logo on these items alerts public safety responders and persons in the community that the person is autistic and may have special needs.

After registration is completed, the Registry sends a letter to the person's local police and fire departments, notifying them of the person's membership and their ID number. The home address of the registrant is entered into the police department's computer-aided dispatch system so that when officers are sent to a location where a registrant lives, responding officers are provided identifying information and notice in advance of arrival that a person with autism lives at that location. The records management system will issue an autism alert if the registrant's name is entered into the system for other reasons.

Information

The USB bracelet provides a registrant's medical history and medicines, emergency contacts, behavioral triggers, calming strategies, names of physicians and demographic data. The registry's 24-hour hotline (1-855-487-0777) can provide a registrant's information when USB access is not available. Information about Autism FYI Organization is available at 301-367-1042 and admin@autismfyi.org.

Bowie residents Joyce and James Benjamin, parents of two adult autistic sons, founded Autism FYI Organization about five years ago. They felt the need to do something when interactions between persons with autism and police in other states made national news because of poor outcomes. They devised the registry and its logo and began introducing first responders and the public to autism. People from other parts of the country and police have found out about the registry and the work of the Benjamins. There are now chapters in Michigan, Hawaii, Wisconsin, Minnesota and New Orleans. "We are very excited that the word is getting out," said Joyce Benjamin.

Registration Open For Citizens Academy

After a successful spring session of the Greenbelt Citizen's Police Academy, registration for the fall session of the academy is now open.

Class 16-02 will begin on Thursday, September 8 and continue through October 27. This is a free eight-week program designed to increase communication and understanding between members of the Greenbelt community and the Greenbelt Police Department. It is an excellent opportunity for individuals living, working or attending school in Greenbelt to gain a better understanding of how a law enforcement agency works. The GCPA combines classroom and hands-on instruction on a wide variety of police functions.

Anyone interested in attending the academy can check out the website at www.gpdcitizensacademy.com for more information, or contact George Mathews at 240-542-2116.

Jazz Under the Stars Returns August 6

After many years, Jazz Under the Stars, Greenbelt's midsummer jazz festival, returns to Roosevelt Center on Saturday, August 6. Sponsored by Friends of the New Deal Café Arts (FONDCA) and the City of Greenbelt, the festival will be dedicated to Barbara Simon, who championed this festival and was helping to organize it right up to her unexpected death a few weeks ago.

Kicking off the festival at 6:30 p.m. with a much-anticipated return appearance to Greenbelt is vocalist Sharon Raquel, whose styling of standards is inspired by greats like Ella Fitzgerald. The seven-piece Night Sky Ensemble follows at 7:30 p.m. with an engaging set of straight-ahead and jazz fusion from the likes of Sun Ra, Freddie Hubbard and Chick Corea. This group was assembled just for Jazz Under the Stars by festival organizer Pete Reppert, keyboard player for the band. The festival moves to the New Deal Café stage starting at 8:30 p.m. with 4 Tha Gruv, a smooth jazz quartet featuring Greenbelter Greg Meyer on sax. Greg has hosted the monthly jam session at the New Deal for many years and also performs with his own quartet and the Capital Blues Ensemble.

In case of rain, the festival will move indoors to the café. The official web site for links to bands and festival updates is preppert.wix.com/jazzunderthestars.

Deep Colors & Aromas Lure Shoppers to Farmers Market

by Calvin Chao

Deep red tomatoes, purple-black eggplant and the surprising yellow and creamy browns of several types of mushrooms – that's how the Greenbelt Farmers Market lures shoppers on lazy summer Sundays. Since 2008, the market has grown from 12 vendors to almost 30 vendors of incredible variety. There are ingredients for a salad or soup at King Mushroom Farm or Pleitez Produce, a main dish at Ferguson Family Farm or Tiffany's Oven, flowers for the table and berries for dessert at Glade Link Farms and a spicy side dish of kimchi at Number One Sons. Dinner's ready.

In 2008, the market received start-up funding from the Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) and later received a grant to develop educational events for children. The market is participating in the celebration of GCF's 10th Anniversary with Explore Your Greenbelt – a series of 14 monthly events featuring organizations that have received GCF funding. Shop at the farmer's market on Sunday, August 7, and stop by the GCF booth to pick up information about how GCF lives out its mission of "nourishing all of Greenbelt's neighborhoods" and to enter a free drawing for prizes.

Mark December 4 on the calendar. That's the date for the special Holiday Market featuring vendors selling holiday decorations, special gifts and seasonal foods. Share some cheer with the community this December at the Greenbelt Farmers Market.

Farmers' markets are part of a movement to provide local fruits, vegetables, cheeses, meats and prepared foods to the community and to support the farmers who supply the fresh bounty. Wondering about the difference in cheeses? Looking for a novel way to serve summer squash? Since the farmers, bakers and other vendors staff their displays, they are able to answer questions, suggest recipes and, yes, sneak a sample to shoppers.

Market-goers can also discuss volunteer opportunities with local community groups or thank the market sponsors – both are provided booths at the market. Take advantage of an inviting seating area to get together with friends to discuss common interests, or taste a croissant from Stone Hearth Bakery or a cold sweet from Simple Pleasures Ice Café. The market is the place to meet neighbors, both old and new.

Read All About It; CKC News Returns

by Amy S. Hansen

During the first two weeks of July, Creative Kids Camp (CKC) campers reported, wrote, edited and drew a lot of pictures for the CKC News. The newspaper made its debut last year and returned to camp this year during the second session.

The newspaper covered the upcoming production of The Summer Circus, as well as other aspects of camp life. Because the show is about a circus, campers also used email to interview resident circus camp instructor and former professional clown, Greg May. The pictures and short stories of his work appeared throughout the paper.

The camp, run by Chris Cherry, has the motto Unlimited Positive Energy and encourages campers to try everything. With jokes, drawings, serious articles, as well as tongue-in-cheek tales campers tried their hands at creating an irreverent newspaper.

Greg May: Life of a Clown Questions and Answers

by Amy S. Hansen

As the camp's writing teacher and editor of CKC News, I asked Greg May, the instructor of Greenbelt's Circus Camp, about his life. I emailed questions. He emailed answers. The campers then listened to the answers as if they were at a press conference. The campers, or cub reporters, wrote stories and drew pictures, but here is the original interview.

Q: What were your living arrangements when you were with the circus?

A: All of the clowns lived in the same train car, each in his/her own 3-foot by 6-foot roomette. At one end of the car, we had a community kitchen with two hot plates, a microwave, and eight small college dorm style refrigerators. We each shared a small fridge with one other person. The hallway down the middle car was so skinny, you had to turn sideways to pass someone.

For the most part we bought and cooked our own food, but if we were really, really hungry, we could purchase food on the circus' kitchen train car. We called that place the roach-coach and basically stayed away from it as much as possible.

Though my room was small, I had a giant window, so I could watch the world go by on our train runs. That, along with the gentle rocking of the train while I slept made for some of my happiest memories on the road. I still have dreams that I am back on the clown train car today.

Good dreams!

Q: What was your favorite part?

A: As we walked out to our opening positions right before each show, I'd stand in the dark on the arena floor and look up at constellations of flashy lights in the hands of thousands of kids high up in the seats. You could feel the excitement in the arena like an electrical charge. I'll never forget it.

Q: What was the hardest part?

A: Being away from and totally out of touch with family was critically difficult. I was there in the time before cell phones, Internet and Skype, so my family could never, ever contact me, and when I wanted to reach them, I'd have to try to find a pay phone somewhere.

Q: How long did it take you to learn how to be a clown?

A: I learned to juggle when I was 10. By 16, I had taught myself to unicycle and built my own stilts. There was no Internet or YouTube, so I just tried to figure it all out. At 22, I left for the Clown College training program, and at 23, I joined the circus itself – so basically, it took 13 years. But I'm still learning each day.

This article features the few campers that have been participating in Creative Kids Camp since the Myrmidon years.

"It is my last year doing CKC and I've been here since I was a Myrmidon," says Olympian Olivia Needleman.

It is something to celebrate that these people have contributed to CKC for so long.

I want to give a shout-out to Olivia and Madeleine, two of my Olympian friends. They have been a part of our camp for so long and contributed so much.

When I was a Lion, Campers Try Out Roles in Writing

Iris of the Centaurs

When I was a lion I had to roam the free prairie. I had to capture my prey. But when I was a lion at the zoo, they gave me treats and let me play with toys. Also in the circus I was not treated nicely and I never fit in. All the other animals were different. The other animals were birds and sea animals. None of the animals were a tiger, lion or another big cat.

Brendan of the Centaurs

When I was a lion I was fierce and I liked to pounce and roar. My favorite meal was deer.

Ella of the Centaurs

When I was a lion I was king of the jungle. I told everyone what to do. I was the master and I had my own throne. Everyone in the jungle was my servant and I was the king of them all. Even though

Camp Play Intrigues Viewers

by Linda of the Olympians

Creative Kids Camp, often called CKC by campers and staff, has recently put on its play Summer Circus. Every camp session, lasting two weeks each, the camp at the Greenbelt Community Center puts on a play. The camp has groups according to age and the campers (and sometimes the staff) all participate.

The Olympian group, (11-12 years-old), are the oldest group and play the main characters. In this case it is several cousins who go on vacation to their aunt's old run-down farm and discover that she has a circus in her barn.

Summer Circus, written by Christopher Cherry, is a show audiences of every age can enjoy.

Campers Visit News Review Prepare to Make Their Own Paper

The CKC newspaper should include news, but also comics, jokes, and fictional stories. This was what the campers decided after visiting the News Review office.

Some of the Myrmidon's comments:

Daisy: I saw chairs in the office. I saw candy. I saw chips. I saw a trash can. I saw an envelope. I saw tables. I saw a desk.

Venice: I saw computers in the office. I saw a heron in the newspaper. The heron was near my house.

Scott: The newspaper room had computers, Coke, Sprite, Cherry Coke, and newspapers. See pictures on page 5.

A Clown's Life: Greg May Talks with CKC

With the focus of the camp a show called Summer Circus, CKC News! decided to seek out people who have studied the skills that the campers sing about. First and foremost, we heard from Greg May, director of Greenbelt's Circus Camp and a former member of Ringling Brother's Circus.

CKC News! sent Mr. May a list of questions. We read his answers in class as if it were a press conference. The campers wrote up stories and drew pictures, reporting on what they heard.

In addition to the clown work, we heard about training dogs. There are many local dog owners who train their dogs to dance. While the work is not identical to that of the circus world, it was similar.

These stories appear on pages 3 and 4.
