

“Open Space” Funds Playground; Dam and Police Move Forward

by Kathleen Gallagher

The Greenbelt City Council had a very full agenda at its meeting on August 14. The decision not to introduce a charter amendment to lower the voting age in city elections but rather to introduce for first reading a resolution to place the matter on the ballot of the November 7 election as an advisory question for the voters, was reported in last week’s paper. That left almost a dozen other items for consideration, in addition to several that were approved on the consent agenda.

Playground Renovation

Whether to use Program Open Space (POS) funds for purposes other than purchase of open space is a perennial discussion for council, with Councilmember Rodney Roberts objecting to using POS funds for recreational and other facility purposes. The city’s Fiscal Year 2018 budget included $169,300 to renovate the playground at the Community Center, which in part serves young children at the Greenbelt Nursery School and is seriously in need of work.

The city applied for a grant from the state Community Parks and Playgrounds (CPP) program to cover 75 percent of the costs, but the application was turned down, with an indication that there had been an “overwhelming response” this year, which “far exceeded available funds.” Grant funding had been cut by 50 percent this year. City staff recommended using POS money for this playground this year.

Council voted 6 to 1 to use POS funds, with Roberts voting against. Councilmember Edward Putens commented that he would like to see council place a limit on how much POS funding can be spent on facilities rather than purchase of open space.

Getting right back on the horse, staff recommended that an application be submitted for CPP funding to renovate the playground at 8 Court Southway, which would serve children ages 2 to 5. An engineered wood fiber surface was recommended since this playground has a high level of sun exposure. Council approved submitting the proposal. If funded, the playground would likely be renovated in fall 2018 or spring 2019.

Dam

The status of the work on the dam at Buddy Attick Park and the availability of a low-interest loan from the Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE), which could facilitate the city’s work on this project, were discussed in some detail at an August 7 worksession on capital projects. The city is now under a consent decree to accomplish the repairs. Initially the project was divided into four phases. Phase 1, repairs to the lake drain, is nearly

City Budget Projects Include Dam, Dog Parks, Bus Shelter

by Diane Oberg

The Greenbelt City Councilmembers got some good news and bad news about the repairs needed to the dam at Buddy Attick Park at the August 7 worksession on capital projects. Other projects discussed included a second, and possibly third, dog park; bus shelters and benches; and signs at the various entrances to Greenbelt. Council adopted the Capital Projects funding as part of the budget approved in June but reviews the projects and priorities within the capital funds afterwards.

Assistant City Manager David Moran said that city staff recommends keeping a higher fund balance than usual, given the anticipated costs of the dam repair project and other expenses expected to occur after the current fiscal year.

Dam

The bad news on the dam is that the Phase I work revealed more significant problems than anticipated, along with increasing costs of materials and that the Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE) had turned down the city’s request for an extension of the deadline for completing all necessary repairs.

The good news is that the MDE had informed the city of the availability of a low interest loan through the Water Quality State Revolving Loan Fund. Moran reported that the interest rate is expected to be about half of what the city would likely need to pay to finance the project through a bond sale. In addition, the state loan is more flexible than bond financing would be. He likened the loan to a line of credit, where once the borrowers are approved for a certain amount, they can draw the funds as needed and will only pay interest on the money actually used.

If the city is approved for the loan, as anticipated, there is one other benefit. The existing plan for dam repairs divided the project into various phases largely based upon keeping each segment affordable. Now, Community Planner Jessica Bellah said, the city can plan the work based on what is most cost-effective. Any changes to the plan must be approved by MDE per the consent agreement.

Council will need to approve entering into this loan at a regular council meeting. If they approve it, the borrowing will then be placed as a referendum question on the November 7 ballot.

The Phase I work also settled one question – was work done by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) the cause of damage to a collapsed pipe? Bellah said that the damage resulted from changes introduced when the Capital Beltway was constructed. The WSSC pipe is in good condition, she said.

In a second project for Buddy Attick Park, $300,000 is allocated to rebuild the parking lot. The cost will be partially offset by a $187,000 grant from the Chesapeake Bay Trust. The renovated lot will have a pervious surface and more spaces and will improve access to the park. Bellah said the work would not interfere with the dam repairs.

Three Dog Parks?

Council had previously identified a possible location for a second dog park, this one in the city’s core. However, residents near that site petitioned council to reject it and questioned the city’s selection criteria. Bellah said that the city likely needs to look at those criteria anew. In addition, she said, Greenbelt Station has requested a dog park

Greenbelters Venture Out With Creative Contraptions

by Janice Wolf

A forecast of cloudy skies and the threat of copious amounts of rain between 2 and 3 p.m. did not deter people from seeking out a place to watch Monday’s partial solar eclipse in and around Greenbelt. Despite that forecast seemingly getting worse all morning, they ventured out anyway – to Goddard Space Flight Center, to Roosevelt Center, to Greenbelt Lake, to ballfields and even just outside to parking lots, front lawns and sidewalks – to watch a spectacle of nature not seen to this extent across the country since 1918.

While many brought and shared the requisite ISO 12312-2 viewing glasses, others used all manner of homemade and scientist-sanctioned eclipse-watching contraptions. Still others grabbed colanders or other bits and bobs likely found in kitchen junk drawers – called found-object projectors. And many just let nature provide the image makers. The clouds built up and moved by, providing artistic appeal but no rain, and by most accounts folks who watched the eclipse at the moment of maximum obscuration in our area, which fell between 80.5 and 80.64 percent, were not disappointed.

Many from Greenbelt and the surrounding communities sought the space angle – literally and figuratively – on the grounds of Goddard Space Flight Center, where they encamped behind the Visitor Center with kids, friends, relatives, chairs, blankets and umbrellas (just in case). A few of the more serious sky observers and photographers set up more elaborate equipment as well.

The Visitor Center provided, and then ran out of, and then found more of, the eclipse glasses as well, so just about everyone was covered.

Letters to the Editor

Add Signs, Too

Regarding the article on the new trail in the August 10 paper, and the letter from Dos Reis about the need for benches along the trail in the August 17 issue, I'd like to add a thought. Being an avid user of trails, I was curious about the new one. So I started on foot at the Cherrywood Lane entrance to the trail and, almost immediately, was lost! A fork in the trail: which way to go? I went to the right, and soon came to another fork. I found my way eventually, enjoying watching egrets in the wetlands, but I sure would have appreciated signs, or simply bike trail pavement markings (as well as benches).

Jack Wittmann

Only Fair

As you may have read in last week's Greenbelt News Review, I will not be seeking re-election to the council in November. I know that friends have asked why the need to let folks know now, but I felt it was only fair to those who have been considering running for office.

As many of you know I began my pursuit to secure a master's degree in urban planning at the University of Maryland earlier this year. After securing a master's degree, I plan on designing, creating and building new Greenbelts. It may be a "pie in the sky" dream, but I intend to give it my best shot.

To do this requires more time dedicated towards these studies. Believe me, balancing just one class, along with council and community offerings, is a challenge. While I will take one class this fall, next year I will be able to provide more time to school so I can graduate before I'm 70.

The loss of my sister Erica last November made more clear to me that I had to develop a different set of priorities. Rather than having 20 priorities, I have reduced them to four. First, my health. Pursuant to that I've been working out on a regular basis at our Fitness Center. Second, my graduate program. There are two other priorities regarding our community.

The first is a community outreach idea that I've had for over 30 years whose objective is to connect with the residents throughout town, particularly folks in apartments. The second is to put together an effective approach to revitalize our Roosevelt Center.

I want everyone to know that it's been an honor to serve the folks I love, Greenbelters, as it's allowed me to be an advocate of connecting our community, through the arts, improved intracity transportation which would include securing funding for underpasses and overpasses, affordable housing and intelligent economic development and marketing, essential to our community's future.

Briefly, I wish to pay tribute to my council colleagues, each of whom is a caring individual who has worked hard to preserve and enhance our sense of community. While all achievements and challenges ultimately are the result of teamwork, I thank Ed Putens' advocacy to bring the city, its offerings and meetings to all sections of town. I give thanks to Leta Mach for her strong advocacy for our kids, insisting that our school system keep its promise that Greenbelt students attend Eleanor Roosevelt High School. I thank Silke Pope for her sustained effort to secure a second dog park and Rodney Roberts for his steadfast perseverance to preserve our woods and provide services less expensively when possible. I thank Judith Davis for introducing our city to what a sustainable community is and her sustained work to enhance our environment. I thank Emmett Jordan for providing a thoughtful vision of what Greenbelt's future can be through his efforts to seriously consider improved marketing and smart economic development.

I conclude by saying that I love every one of my colleagues and staff, current and past, for their support over my time as a councilmember, and in the other roles I have played with our community.

One final thing: While I will not be endorsing any candidate for council, I will be endorsing ideas that connect our residents, organizations, schools, businesses, a future council and those that labor to enhance our quality of life. This is a community built on collaboration, and on connection. We live in a time, more than ever, when our city and all cities - heck the country - need to connect and come together. Greenbelt, at its best, is that wonderful example for the entire country.

Corrections

The headline and caption of the August 17, 2017 issue misidentified the location of construction at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. The field adjacent to the track is under construction.

A photo caption for the feature, Area Rainy Conditions Yield Bumper Crop of Mushrooms, in the August 17, 2017, issue should have identified the large orangish mushrooms in the top row as Chicken of the Woods, not Hen of the Woods. Hen of the Woods will appear in the Fall. The News Review regrets the error and reminds readers to join a mycological society to learn about mushroom identification and safety. The nearest to Greenbelt is the D.C. Mycological Society.

Menashe, C'est Moi?

Coming to Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, August 25 is Menashe, a tender, unusual, melancholy comedy that explores a few secrets of Brooklyn's Jewish Orthodox Hasidic community.

Newcomer and unprofessional actor Menashe Lustig plays Menashe, a maladroit grocery store clerk and recent widower who cannot claim custody of his son Reuben unless he remarries. "A man should not be alone," his rabbi declares.

The good-hearted Menashe is part schlemiel (inept) and part schlemazel (unlucky), but somehow is a deeply kindred spirit to all of us.

Filmed in Yiddish, Menashe is 1 hour, 21 minutes long, is rated PG and is directed by co-writer Joshua Z. Weinstein.

Greenbelters Unite in Peace At Church Candlelight Vigil

by Cameron Weekes

In a show of solidarity against the violence at the Charlottesville protest, members of the Greenbelt Community Church held a candlelight vigil on Wednesday, August 16 from 7 to 9 p.m. The vigil was organized by Rev. Glennyce Grindstaff after numerous citizens in the community requested that one be held.

The vigil served as a time for prayer, peace and to unite against hate within the country. The evening of prayer, which lasted two hours, had a peak attendance of more than 110 people. In addition to lighting candles, attendees placed flowers in the memorial garden for those who died in the protest.

Many attendees were members of the church. One such member, Earl Taylor, gave his opinion on the violence observed at the protest. "It's clear that there are people who are hurting in ways that they can only express through hate and violence," he said. "And the reasons for their pain are varied, but they aren't clear about it. So they have to find somebody to take it out on because they can't hold it all inside. They need prayers as much as anybody else." In addition to prayer, Taylor believes that those who are hurting need courage to face their pain through nonviolent means.

When asked for her opinion on the violence in Charlottesville, Grindstaff said she believes it is a tipping point, due to the massive outcry that has followed. In her eyes, the outcry following Charlottesville is greater than that which followed incidents of hatred, violence and protest in Baltimore, Ferguson and other cities. Liking Charlottesville to Vietnam, she feels that the live broadcast of the violence is what has pushed people to the edge. If Grindstaff is right about Charlottesville being the tipping point, she hopes that people will unite behind peace to combat the rampant hatred in the country.

Labor Day Festival Show Seeks Photos

Have you taken any awesome photos that you would like to share with your neighbors? The Labor Day Festival Photo Show is coming soon. Both adults and children (12 and under) are invited to enter up to two photographs each.

Frame dimensions greater than 16 inches by 20 inches will not be accepted and smaller frames are preferred, as space is limited.

Bring ready-to-hang photos and completed registration forms to the Community Center, Room 114 between 5 and 7 p.m. on Thursday, August 31 or Friday, September 1. Judging is done on Friday night and winning ribbons will be on display starting Saturday at 1 p.m.

There is no charge to enter. For more information, contact Keith Zevallos at 240-355-2908, email laborday_photoshow@yahoo.com, or go online to greenbeltlaborday.com.

Help Green the 2017 Labor Day Festival

Volunteers are needed to encourage recycling and composting during the Labor Day Festival.

GreenACES and the Green Team are seeking volunteers to stand near sets of recycling, compost and trash bins to cheerfully encourage and help people recycle the recyclables, compost the compostables and trash the trash. Volunteers can choose which days and times they will assist. All are welcome.

Training will be provided at the Public Works building on Wednesday, August 30 at 7:30 p.m. Service hour forms will be signed and recommendations provided for students as appropriate. Adults are also needed to help or provide light supervision.

To sign up to volunteer at the festival or to see the hours available, visit signupgenius.com/go/10c0d4caba929a2fd0-greening1

For more information, contact Luisa Robles, Greenbelt sustainability coordinator: lrobles@greenbeltmd.gov, 240-542-2153; or Tom Taylor, Green Team volunteer: tomtaylor0401@gmail.com, 301-513-9524.

Condolences to Richard Szczepanowski of Ridge Road, whose mother Rita Szczepanowski died on August 14 at the age of 81. She lived in Newark, Del.

We were saddened to hear of the death of Phyllis Budin, a long-time member of the Golden Age Club.

Welcome to Daria Valentine in her new role as the acting principal for the Greenbelt Middle School.

63rd Annual Greenbelt Labor Day Festival

Friday, Sept. 1 through Monday, Sept. 4, 2017

"Unity through community involvement"

Dear Festival Visitor:

Welcome to the 63rd Annual Greenbelt Labor Day Festival! The City of Greenbelt is honored to host this unique community celebration, which is the largest event of its kind in the State of Maryland and provides so much enjoyment to all its citizens. Many family and friend reunions occur during this special weekend. The Festival also provides a great opportunity for many of our City's nonprofit, service and religious organizations to participate and make themselves known to our residents and visitors.

This Festival is organized and conducted by an independent volunteer group, the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee. These generous and dedicated citizens have worked long hours over the past year to ensure that we all have a wonderful time. We are grateful for their efforts and those of all the other community volunteers and City employees who make this event possible.

We hope you enjoy this weekend's festivities. Plan to come all four days and take full advantage of the wide range of activities being offered, from the Opening Ceremony and Concert on Friday evening to the Labor Day Parade on Monday. If you have any questions about the City of Greenbelt, please call us at 301-474-8000.

Best wishes for a great weekend!

Reduce, Reuse, Recycle at the Labor Day Festival

Please help green the Labor Day Festival!

The Public Works/Green Team booth and volunteers will have information about recycling, composting and filling up your reusable water bottles. We'll also have some fun informational games and green prizes at the Public Works booth.

There are water fountains at the Municipal Building, Aquatic Center, and the Co-Op grocery store. Some businesses and restaurants will also let you fill your water bottle. Look for the TapIt decal or water bottle flyer in store windows.

Trash, recycling and composting bins with instructional decals will be grouped together throughout the festival grounds.

The Greenbelt Labor Day Festival offers a unique opportunity for local residents to display their talents and creativity.

ERHS SADD Members Work To Encourage Good Decisions

by Ekaete Ekpo

Students in Eleanor Roosevelt High School's Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) chapter worked to encourage and inform their peers during the 2016-2017 school year. SADD students kicked off the year by representing their organization in the homecoming parade on October 22. Throughout the remainder of October and November, they continued to promote SADD and its causes to fellow students for Teen Driver Safety Week, Breast Cancer Awareness Month and the Great American Smokeout Day – an occasion on which cigarette smoking was discouraged.

On April 5, SADD held two special events to help raise awareness about the dangers of driving under the influence. The first was the annual Mock Car Crash, in which a totaled car was put on display for students as an example of the risk drunk driving poses to this generation. The second was the Pre-Prom MADD (Mothers Against Destructive Decisions) Assembly, an event where special speakers warned students about potential post-prom dangers.

The following day – April 6 – served as Grim Ghost Day. On this day, various SADD members volunteered to read stories of victims of drunk driving crashes to their classmates.

For the Prom Promise affair, all of Roosevelt's seniors gathered in the gymnasium to sign pledges to be safe on prom night. Victoria Brown, a passionate MADD activist, also delivered a moving speech about her family's tragic experience with drunk driving on this day.

SADD closed off the year with a celebration for National Mental Health Awareness Month on May 18. Brochures, books and handwritten, uplifting messages were displayed for students to learn about mental health. Several students painted their pinkies with green nail polish to signify their solidarity with people with mental illnesses.

Overall, this past school year was a definite success for SADD and for our community. Through its emphasis on outreach and understanding, SADD has made progress toward safety and security for young people and beyond. This coming school year, ERHS's SADD chapter will continue to inform and guide local youth. Keep eyes and ears peeled for more of SADD activism in the near future.

My Point of View

Some Thoughts on Labor Day

by Jill Connor

The signs are up, the flyers are out, the bracelets are for sale and the orange barrels are starting to gather around Roosevelt Center. As someone who moved to Greenbelt a little over a year ago the Labor Day Festival was the first sense of what Greenbelt was all about to me. The Festival website says the Festival "celebrates the strength of America's workforce and families." The Festival, in my opinion, is about this community coming together to celebrate its past, present and future.

I am proud that I belong to a unique community that celebrates what labor has done for our country. I also am proud that we have made Labor Day the "the largest all-volunteer organization in the state of Maryland," according to the Festival website. Not only do we celebrate labor, we try to make people not actually work for the Festival.

Before I moved here I thought of the holiday as ignored and poorly celebrated. If anything, it was the start of the school year. One of my former educator colleagues described it as a "speed bump" to her curriculum.

I was surprised when I moved here that Labor Day was the biggest holiday and parade for the city. Now I am proud of it. We should celebrate how hard we work. I work three jobs to help my family. I often go from one to the other in the same day.

I am grateful that I am not working outside in bad weather, nor doing tiring physical labor or working far from my family, but it still takes up at least a third of my week. I am lucky enough to enjoy my work and have worked hard to have a career I enjoy because of those time commitments in my life. Not everyone is as lucky. But, whatever work one does, it should be celebrated because it adds value to our community. Every job adds some value or people would not be paid for what they do.

Labor Day is also about celebrating the people that worked hard before we were here to make our country what it is. It isn't about the soldiers or the presidents or the leaders. It is about everyone else. I love that we have a holiday like that in our country and celebrate it so emphatically in our community.

In respect to the celebration of the present I love that every piece of this city comes together and contributes or at least that is what it looks like from my perspective. I love walking around the Festival, seeing all the booths, looking through the donated books, watching people play Bingo, seeing people's art and photography. I also love watching everyone talking with neighbors and friends. It seems like that is how Greenbelt starts the school year, with a catch-up at the Festival and lots of "What did you do this summer?"

Greenbelt has a very small town feel to me. It is amazing how interconnected everyone is. Quickly I was pulled into the group and belonged. It helped that I was volunteering and contributing to my community right away and that I had children who made friends quickly. Those opportunities to volunteer were easily available to me and the people who asked for my help were convincing.

I also see how this Festival speaks to the future of Greenbelt. My children are already connected to the Festival through their school and simply attending and loving the Festival. I know it will be a part of their childhood and a fond memory. The Festival also supports children with programs like the Rising Stars and gives a venue for the schools and non-profit organizations to interface with the public.

I am moved by how important this holiday has become to me, perhaps because I have moved to a town that celebrates it. If so, thank you Greenbelt. Thank you for allowing me the opportunity to celebrate the workers in my life.

Volunteer to Work At Firebird Farm

The University of the District of Columbia's Firebird Farm in Beltsville is now accepting applications from those wishing to volunteer to work on the farm. Council Authorizes City Sites For Election Campaign Signs

by Kathleen Gallagher

The city council voted to authorize the establishment of sites on city property for campaign signs to be installed by Public Works staff prior to the 2017 election. Since 1991, candidates have entered into a voluntary agreement to place signs in these locations rather than seeking placement in residential yards. Participating candidates pay a fee of $75 to offset the cost to the city.

Since 2005, 15 sites have been used, five in each of the three parts of town. This year, the number of signs in Greenbelt West will be increased as Woodlawn Development has agreed to place signs in the median on Greenbelt Station Parkway, about 100 feet in from the bridge.

Petitions & Requests

Greenbelt East resident Colin Byrd made a request under the Petitions and Requests section of the meeting to greatly expand opportunities for early voting located in Greenbelt East and Greenbelt West. He objected to there being substantially more voting times available in the Municipal Building since that is less convenient for residents not in center city.

It should be noted that any Greenbelt voter wishing to vote early can go to any of the three early voting locations or can choose to vote by mail by requesting an absentee ballot. A polling place is located at Schrom Hills for early voting over seven hours on one weekend in October and at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center over another weekend. Early voting is allowed during business hours at the city clerk's office in the Municipal Building, where no extra staffing is required, during the two weeks before the election. Eight additional hours are provided in the evenings at the Municipal Center.

Council Bolsters the Theater, Supports Museum Funding

by Kathleen Gallagher

Sprinkled among a potpourri of council agenda items, history and arts in Greenbelt reaped a significant amount of attention. Setting an optimistic tone, the meeting opened with a presentation from Camp Pine Tree campers of a check for $732 for the Camps-to-Kids Fund, which will provide scholarships for future campers. The money for the donation was raised through a bake sale.

Museum Tax Credits

Council voted unanimously to send a letter of support for an application from the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum (FOGM) for State of Maryland Community Investment Tax Credits through the Department of Housing and Community Development. FOGM applied unsuccessfully to the program last year. Non-profit organizations can use the tax credits as incentives for raising funds for a specific project since individuals or organizations contributing money, goods or real property worth $500 or more will be eligible to receive a state income tax credit. FOGM is applying to put the funding toward renovations at 10-A Crescent Road to create a visitor and education center.

Theater Funding

Council also voted unanimously to continue a subsidy for the Old Greenbelt Theatre for Fiscal Year 2018, with $40,000 to be provided. Executive Director Caitlin McGrath explained that although the theater is making progress toward its goal of being self-sustaining, several unanticipated challenges have resulted in a slower pace toward this goal than originally expected.

Mayor Emmett Jordan asked McGrath if the theater would now be capable of carrying the Pepco bill, which the city had to pick up at one point last year, when the bill exceeded both the theater's and the city's expectations. McGrath said they believe that to be the case.

Following discussion by council of funding provided for the current theater operation versus the former operator, the chair of the FOGT board commented that one of the main reasons for requesting the subsidy was to enable McGrath to have more time to engage in fundraising. Most of the councilmembers then expressed strong approval of the concept and programs being offered by the current operators and the benefits they were bringing to the city. The mayor added that he did, however, have some concern about the theater's sustainability.

they get the customer service number from your Pepco bill, they've got you, and it's a lot of trouble to switch back.

Just hang up.

Sustainable Greenbelt

I am writing to thank city employees – Jim Sterling, Brian Townsend, Erin Josephitis and possibly others – involved in crafting the current draft of the Sustainable Land Care Policy that was discussed at the August 2 city council worksession. The current draft reflects many cumulative years of real world experience shared by these professional land managers. At least two of the city advisory boards present (Advisory Committee on Trees and Park and Recreation Advisory Board) and a number of audience members spoke in favor of the draft policy as it realistically balances environmental and logistical challenges inherent in managing a large area with limited resources.

Unfortunately, the News Review article (August 10) that reported on the worksession focused largely on the concerns of members of one advisory board, GreenACES, who are not happy with the current draft because it is not based strictly on organic management principles, which, among other things, do not allow the use of synthetic fertilizers and many types of pesticides including herbicides.

Many who spoke in favor of the policy draft are experienced and professional natural resource managers who are very familiar with organic management principles and practices, support their use in many cases and use them in their professional and personal lives.

So, why are these people not joining GreenACES in condemning the Land Care Policy draft that does not require organic management practices be used on all city lands at all times? There are at least two reasons: 1) sometimes, there are no effective organic management options available to address a specific issue and 2) organic methods can be very labor intensive and the city does not have the budget to manage all lands organically. In addition, some non-organic practices are considered more sustainable than some organic practices. Disallowing those practices makes no sense in a Sustainable Land Care Policy.

I have learned these lessons the hard way – by growing vegetables organically for more than 30 years and by managing organic research plots for more than 20 years. In using and studying organic methods I have sometimes wished the methods were more efficacious than they sometimes are. These experiences have also given me a very deep understanding of the challenges of using organic methods on a large scale.

There are many other Greenbelt citizens who have dedicated a substantial portion of their personal and professional lives to defining sustainable land care and many have been involved in Greenbelt Sustainable Land Care Policy discussions. It is ironic that those who insist that the Greenbelt Sustainable Land Care Policy rely solely on organic practices discount the considerable experience of those of us who have dedicated our lives to these challenging questions.

If those who support applying organic management principles to all Greenbelt public lands better appreciated the real world challenges of organic management, and valued the input of those of us who have dedicated our professional lives to sustainable land management, we wouldn't still be debating the Sustainable Land Care Policy after 10 years. I applaud the city staff in being realistic while listening to all concerned voices. Contrary to the comments made by GreenACES members, cited in the News Review article, that this policy is "a step backwards," and that their suggestions have been ignored, I believe that city employees have bent over backwards to try to accommodate the concerns of all citizens. As part of their response, the city has reduced their pesticide use substantially – citizens who helped this happen should be proud of this accomplishment. But, after 10 years of the city listening to citizen input, it is time to adopt and implement the current draft Sustainable Land Care Policy and for well-meaning citizens to stop promoting organic management as some kind of magical panacea without backing up those claims with evidence and a practical understanding of what it is they are asking for.

FDR Grandson Given DVD of Cookie Caper

The Greenbelt Recreation Department's Creative Kids Camp presented the play The Cookie Caper this summer. The plot features young detectives on the trail of a cookie thief who make an unexpected discovery. They find a diary hidden by a schoolgirl in 1937 on the day that Eleanor Roosevelt visited their school, now the Greenbelt Community Center.

The Cookie Caper celebrates Greenbelt past and present, especially its link with First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt. New Greenbelt residents Charles Hoffacker and Helena Mirtova were delighted by the production. On Friday, August 18 they presented The Cookie Caper DVD and program to James Roosevelt Jr., grandson of Eleanor and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who spoke fondly of Greenbelt, a community in which his Roosevelt grandparents took a special interest.

and Franklin Park management has proposed a public-private partnership to establish a dog park in that community. The adopted budget includes $15,000 for installing a second dog park, if approved.

Based upon council's comments, it appeared likely that a worksession on the topic will be scheduled.

Getting Around

The budget allocates $20,000 each for further work on implementing the pedestrian/bicycle master plan and to begin implementing the bus stop accessibility study. It also funds three bus shelters.

Councilmember Konrad Herling asked whether the city could do four shelters per year instead of the current plan for three per year. Councilmember Judith Davis, supported by Mayor Emmett Jordan, urged staff to consider whether they could serve more people by installing benches on concrete pads in place of shelters at some bus stops. While not offering protection from the weather, at least bus riders could take the load off their feet while waiting for the next bus.

Grants

Grants the city had sought to improve the playground at the Community Center and to repair the Mother and Child statue in Roosevelt Center were not approved. Staff suggested that Program Open Space funds be used for the playground and is looking for alternate funding sources for the statue repairs.

Greenbrook Trails

Funding is not the issue for this project, lost paperwork is. The city and Greenbrook started work years ago to improve trails and pathways under an easement agreement. Davis said that although the work has been "on the list" for 10 years, no one can find the easement agreement. She urged staff to track down the most recent draft and restart the review. Councilmember Edward Putens agreed, saying that the city needs to live up to its commitments.

Other Items

Moran noted that the overrun of the 2001 Bond Fund remains on the books with a balance of just over $1 million. This overage reflects higher than anticipated costs for the Public Works facility and renovations to the Old Greenbelt Theatre.

The budget allocates $67,000 for the first phase of new "Welcome to Greenbelt" type signs at each entrance to the city. Of this, $50,000 will be funded by a Heritage Areas grant and $17,500 by the city.

While the budget sets aside $230,000 for land acquisition, Bellah said that none of the land council wishes to acquire is currently on the market.

completed. It took much longer than expected, but according to City Planner Jessica Bellah the city also now has a much better handle on the status of the work.

Bellah also noted that residents should be aware that the lake path area around the dam will be closed for significant time periods over the last phases of the project, although the rest of the park and the path will remain open.

MDE has encouraged the city to apply for a low-interest (about 2.1 percent) loan through its revolving loan program. The remaining three phases of the project (blanket filter system, raising of embankment and spillway repair) are estimated to cost at least $1.4 million. In comparison, the original 2010 estimate had been $510,000.

Given the attractive terms of this loan, council is in agreement that it should be pursued, but doing so requires voter approval in the form of a bond referendum question on the ballot of the November 7 election. A resolution for this ballot question must be adopted no later than the September 25 meeting, and it will likely be introduced for first reading at the September 11 meeting.

Police Bargaining

Since early this year, the city has been negotiating with representatives of Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) Lodge #32 on a new, three-year collective bargaining agreement (CBA) to take effect on July 1. It had been ratified by the FOP and was approved on a unanimous vote by council at the meeting.

Resident Colin Byrd objected strongly to what he considered to be a lack of transparency in the development of the CBA, indicating that the city should proceed as he believed some jurisdictions do, by making the document available to the public prior to any vote being taken.

GAFC Boilers

A resolution for the purchase and installation of replacement boilers at the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center by Densel Company of Gaithersburg, at a cost of $217,420 was introduced and adopted. The boilers, which are at the end of their useful life, are essential to the operation of the indoor pool. Because the new boilers are energy efficient, the city anticipates receiving a $7,000 rebate from Washington Gas.

The rule requiring readings at two different meetings was suspended because the ideal time for installation of new boilers is during the annual closing of the indoor pool. The vendor was chosen from two proposals submitted following a request for proposals.

Several of the items approved on the consent agenda, by which the staff recommendation is approved by council without discussion, include the following:

- Renewal of MOU at a cost of $4,452 with the University of Maryland for shuttle passes at an annual fee of $10 for city residents and employees;
- Contracting with NZI Construction Corporation of Beltsville for $115,450 in Community Development Block Grant funds to reconstruct a portion of Breezewood Drive;
- Authorization of a letter to be sent to the owners of the Adult Care Center causing them to vacate the premises by September 30 due to delinquency in paying rent;
- Receipt of the Public Safety Advisory Committee's report on placement of security cameras throughout the city, for which a worksession will be scheduled.

10,000 Backpacks For Students

The 7th Annual PGCPs Back-to-School Fair will take place on Saturday, August 26 at Prince George's Stadium, 4101 Crain Highway in Bowie.

Families must register in advance to receive a backpack at the Fair. Representatives from several PGCPs offices will be there to share information about registration, student services and programs. Families may also purchase school uniforms at the event.

In addition, free immunizations will be offered on site.

Sponsors for the Back-to-School Fair include Comcast Beltway Region, Excellence in Education Foundation, Educational Systems Federal Credit Union, the Negro Legends Hall of Fame and Bowie Baysox.

ABC News Schedules Second Clinic on Employment Law

by Stan Zirkin

ABC News has scheduled a second employment law call-in clinic for Wednesday, September 13. The switchboard at ABC News will be open between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. for volunteer attorneys from the Washington Lawyers Committee for Civil Right and Urban Affairs (WLC) to assist callers. The news team will announce the number to call during the 4 p.m. show and intermittently during the 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. broadcasts.

The volunteer attorneys will be available to answer questions from viewers from the District, Maryland and Virginia on a wide variety of employment issues, including wage theft (failure to pay minimum wage or overtime); unemployment compensation; Family and Medical Leave Act; sick leave; discrimination laws, including sexual harassment; workers' compensation; OSHA; terminations; and employee benefits.

The first WLC clinic occurred on July 6 (See June 29 News Review, page 9). That program attracted more than 100 callers to seven attorneys. Based on the volume of callers and positive feedback received after the broadcasts, ABC invited WLC to reappear on the program. It has also opened discussions with the goal of having WLC volunteers appear on the news shows on a quarterly basis.

Among the issues raised to this reporter during the first WLC Clinic included an employer that refused to allow bathroom breaks; an employer that refused to supply safety masks during construction; an employer that kept changing employee working hours arbitrarily and without notice, preventing the employee from arranging reasonable day care; and a blatant case of sexual harassment.

Price Hike Imminent On NPS Senior Pass

The National Park Service (NPS) lifetime Senior Pass is increasing from $10 to $80, their first price increase since 1994. Seniors have until Monday, August 28 to buy a pass at the lower rate. Passes can be bought at the Ranger Station at Greenbelt Park, ordered by mail or online (with an additional $10 processing fee). Information about ordering online or by mail is at store.usgs.gov/senior.

Annual and Senior Passes provide access to more than 2,000 recreation sites managed by six federal agencies: the NPS, U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Reclamation, U.S. Forest Service and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The passes cover entrance and standard amenity (day-use) recreation fees and provide discounts on some expanded amenity recreation fees.

Traveling companions can also enter for free. The Senior Passes admit pass owners and passengers in a noncommercial vehicle at per-vehicle fee (pass owner plus three adults, not to exceed four adults, where per-person fees are charged). Children under 16 are always admitted free. At many sites, the Senior Passes provide the pass owner (only) a discount on expanded amenity fees such as camping, swimming, boat launching and guided tours.

Greenbelt MakerSpace in Roosevelt Center was another natural draw and opened for the occasion, serving homemade refreshments and offering refuge from the heat. The 40 or so people who gathered appreciated that and the camaraderie, but reportedly were pleasantly surprised by the variety of eclipse viewing contraptions. “There were so many ways to view it,” said Jennifer Page, board president of the non-profit activity center. Others agreed. Most distinctive were the Safe Solar Viewers built in the weeks prior to the event at the MakerSpace. These three-foot-long contraptions were fashioned from cardboard boxes, binder clips and two lenses, one of which magnified the image of the sun, Page explained.

Judging from the many pictures and comments shared on social media, most found the moments after 2:42 p.m., when the moon blocked over 80 percent of the sun, a magical one. “We were all discovering it together,” said Beth LeaMond. “When we all saw that the tree leaf pinhole images were in the shape of crescents, everyone oohed and ahhed.” Like some of those who had gathered, she and a friend came equipped with their own large-box pinhole viewer. “There was a fascinating assortment of homemade eclipse imaging gadgets,” added Robin Buck. “I loved that the event was so neighborly, with cookies and lemonade and viewing glasses generously provided.”

The creativity wasn’t limited to cardboard and cereal boxes. Page described someone’s use of a dollar-store reading glass lens which projected a nice sharp image on the pavement. And for the minimalists, using one’s hands curled as if around a broom handle or fingers crisscrossed to form a grid created a handy mini-viewer that cast an image of the crescent-shaped sun on the sidewalk.

Perhaps the most artistic image seen Monday, particularly by those who just stepped out of their homes and offices for a few minutes at peak, was the crescent image of the sun projected a thousand times through the tree leaves.

Going for the totality experience, many in the community, including a few of the staff from the News Review, traveled to opposite ends of the 70-mile wide swath. Elaine Nakash ventured west to Wyoming, and Helen Sydavar headed the farthest east, to down near Charleston, S.C. Wanting to maximize exposure, Amy Hansen and her family headed to Shawnee National Forest in southern Illinois where the moon blocked the sun for two minutes and 41.6 seconds – the longest duration of totality in the country.

“As the total eclipse approached, clouds started to cover the sun and you could feel the angst of everyone around us,” she reported. “But the clouds blew over just as the corona appeared. And indeed, it was truly awesome.”

Jeffrey Jones reported that “the viewing was spectacular” in Hopkinsville, Ky. Reports of beautiful clear blue skies in Franklin, N.C., came from Anne Gardner. Mary Lou Williamson gathered with her family at Lake Hartwell on the Georgia-South Carolina line. Her wow moments were finally taking off her glasses to see the totality, Bailey’s Beads and the diamond ring, and the screams of joy from the crowd on the beach.

The News Review staff who stayed in town also offered reflections from other points in the area. Lola Skolnik had plans to go to Goddard with family, but ended up at Northway Fields with other Greenbelters. “Lots of families – kids playing and adults visiting,” she said. “Low-key and perfect.” And Deanna Dawson just took a break from work and brought along a found-object viewer. “It was interesting, but not very satisfying, to see lots of crescents projected through tree leaves and through the colander I’d brought for indirect viewing,” she remarked. “Luckily, a co-worker had the special glasses – it was nifty to look directly at the crescent sun!”
