Playgrounds' First Week Is Successful, Report Instructors

With attendance varying from 16 ot 60 children, the supervised playground program is off to a successful start. ,The project has already proved a godsend to busy mothers, as it gets the older children "out from underfoot" for the hours when household duties are heaviest, and best of all, the children are happily occupied. Old Greenbelters who were used to the spectacle of deserted playgrounds broken-down equipment are delighted to see them again filled with children happily sliding, see-sawing and playing in the sand far away from the streets, as was

The high school girls who supervise the playgrounds meet every Friday with Recreation Director Ben Goldfaden to compare notes and receive suggestions. They are required to had in wealth with required to hand in weekly written reports, which make amusing and instructive reading. One young lady reported, "I spent the first day getting acquainted with the day getting acquainted with the children and stopping fights. Now I have time, in between fights, to teach them games, to color, and make scrap books, and read to them." Another notes that the Saturday afernoon movies make a close competitor for the children's interest. The favorite spect of interest. The favorite sport at another playground, among both boys and girls, is the manufacture of paper doll clothes.

One of the problems the girls run up against, they say, is that children under four and over seven wander into join the fun and often succeed in getting in the way. Ben Goldfaden points out that older children are expected to patronize the large playground at the center, to attend the arts and crafts classes at the element-ary school or to participate in baseball or softball on the athletic field. Registration for the second swimming class will be held July Those who are over 10 years may take tennis instruction.

The girls report that the mothers have been "swell" about cooperating with the program, on the whole, and say they enjoy their work. Joan Dietzel, at the Platent Please allowered the state of the same platent plates. Plateau Place playground, has the largest group of children attending, varying from 50 to 60. Doro-Fitzpatrick, at the 73 Ridge Road playground, has the most heterogenous group of kids to deal with. As this area is so far from the center, an exception in favor of admitting eight, nine and ten year olds is in effect.

3rdYoungPeople's Dance July 10th

A special floor show will be fea-tured at the third Young People's Dance which will be held Saturday, July 10 in the auditorium of the Elementary School from 8 to 10 p. m. Music for dancing will be furnished by the 'Serenaders' who have purchased new orchestrations for the event.

Tickets for the dance have been issued to junior and senior hosts and hostesses and may be obtained from them by persons wishing to

Senior Hostesses are Mrs. Mahlon Eshbaugh, Mrs. Joseph Long and Mrs. Rolfe Sauls. Junior Hosts are Howdy Fitzhugh, Paul Runnyon and Billy Baxter. Junior Hostesses are Barbara Runnyon, Nancy Nagle, Dale Downs, Joan Schoeb, Kathleen Scoll and Doris Lehman.

Young people who attend the dances obey restrictions set up by the hostesses in that they leave the school building only to go home, and they behave like ladies and gentlemen while at the dance.

School Girls Attention

All girls having locks on baskets or lockers in the girls dress-ing room of the Elementary School are requested to remove the locks before July 24th. The locks will be sawed off after that

Coast Guard Hero Is Cousin of Greenbelter

Back from action in the south-west Pacific is 26 year-old Coast Guardsman Daniel J. Tarr of Chincoteague Island, Va., cousin of Coast Guard warrant officer Harold Tarr of 34-A Ridge road. Tarr—a good name for a sailor— was covswain of a landing bayers was coxswain of a landing barge which put the Marines ashore on the isle of Tulagi during the invasion of the Solomons.

Although under withering en-emy fire, Coast Guardsman Tarr was able to land his boatload of Marines without the loss of a man. He then made several more trips to the shell-raked beach, carrying ammunition and supplies. For his "conspicuous gallantry in thi invasion of the Solomons", Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, USN, has decorated Coast Guardsman Tarr with the Silver Star medal; thus he has become one of the first four Coast Guardsman very to receive Coast Guardsmen ever to receive that award in the present war. Also in recognition for his service in the Solomons, Tarr recently was elevated to the rating of chief boatswain's mate in the United States Coast Guard.

Tarr was in the Solomon Isles aboard one of the old fourstack destroyers, built during World War I and converted to an auxiliary transport at the bgeinning of the present war. The vessel had been assigned to the task of transporting the First Raider bat-talion of the Marine Corps.

It was 4 a. m., August 7th, 1942, that the vessel reached Tulagi and the skipper received word that the Marines were to be taken ashore to wipe out Japanese positions. The landing boats were lowered and a coxswain was assigned to each of the craft. Coast Guardsman Tarr coxswain of the number one boat in that first assault wave. For three hours before he put his Marines ashore our cruisers had been bombarding the Jap positions on Tulagi with shot and shell; our planes had been lambasting the enemy positions from the air; our bombers had destroyed the 18 Jap seaplanes based at Tulagi before they could get off the water. Shells and bullets were still whining overhead as Coast Guardsman Tarr led the invasion boats toward a coral reef which was the first landing point.

The Marines were landed—without the loss of a single man. Tarr took his boats back to the transport ship and then made two more trips to the island, despite the heavy shell fire which was bursting from enemy guns on all sides of Tulagi. This time he brought the Marines their sup-plies and more ammunition.

The second morning of the invasion word came that the Marines were still encountering stiff and stubborn resistance and must immediately have additional supplies. Twice more, Coast Guards-man Tarr took his landing barge back to Tulagi with the badly needed ammunition.

At 11 o'clock that morning his work was interrupted by an air raid of forty Japanese planes. They were intercepted by American fighters and only twenty of the enemy aircraft managed to get as far as the American transport ships. All but one of these Jap planes were knocked down. Tarr's vessel was credited with bringing down two out of the nineteen.

Tarr says his closest escape in the Solomons came about a month after the invasion of Tulagi. At the time, he was landing the Marines on Guadalcanal for a commando raid at dawn. Tarr disembarked the first load of Marines and took his boat back to the transport for another load. When returned to the Guadalcanal beachhead with these, he found that the first load of Marines had that the first load of Marines had captured a big Japanese gun only 15 yards from the spot where he had landed them. Tarr says that why the gun never opened fire upon them is still a mystery.

Chief Tarr enlisted in the Coast Chard air years at Pone's

Guard six years ago at Pope's Island, Va. Part of his citation by Admiral Nimitz read as follows: "For distinguishing himself conspicously by gallantry in action. His conduct was in keeping with the finest traditions of the Coast Guard."

Symphony Musician Is John E. Waldo Named Named As New Director As New Scoutmaster Of Local Concert Group

Henri Sokolov, a member of the Washington Symphony orchestra, was appointed director of the Greenbelt Concert orchestra at the weekly rehearsal held Tues-day evening in the Elementary school social room.

The new director succeeds Borah Deutschman who has directed the orchtstra since its formation Deutschman tenlast winter. Deutschman ten-dered his resignation because he has recently become associated with the Maryland Minute men and his new duties prevent his continuing the orchestra work.

62 Register for Canning Classes

Canny Greenbelt housewives are not going to heat their happy homes with preserving operations this summer; they're hiking down to the Elementary School Home Economics room to take advantage of the pressure godyna and train of the pressure cookers and trained instructors furnished by the county. It is hoped that registra-tion will be extended beyond the Wednesday deadline as only 62 persons signed up.

Mrs. Edith Snapp, one of the instructors, stressed the fact that the prospective canners are not ex pected to show up daily, but only as they have the vegetables and fruits to can. She suggested that as far as possible housewives should sign up for the day ses-sions so as to leave the night classes open for those who work during the day.

Mrs. Raebelle Roberts, the other instructor, hopes that those who don't have gardens, or those whose victory gardens don't come up to expectations, can form a cooperative buying association and get garden-fresh produce from local farmers.

To avoid crowding, and so that the instructors can plan a set-up in advance, those who plan to can should call Mrs. Roberts the previous evening.

A Beneficiary of United China Relief

If expressions popular with present United States soldiers become permanent additions to the English language afer this war, as after World War I, the "Gung Ho!" motto of Chinese Industrial Cooperatives is likely to achieve immortality.

Lt. Col. Evans F. Carlson, leader of the famed Carlson's Raiders and honorary vice-chairman of the American Committee in Aid of Chinese Industrial Co-operatives, made this forecast. He is now in this country on furlough.

On a visit to the Indusco offices in New York, Col. Carlson related that the "Gung Ho!" (Work Together!) slogan of his marine corps raiding battalion in the South Pacific became so popular with the Marines, that it now not only is the synonym for "pep" and "elbow grease", but is the name of a song, a cheer, an army knapsack and a jungle knife. The knapsack was designed by Col. Carlson especially for raiders, and distributes the weight of the contents so evenly upon the soldier's back and shoulders that he is able to make long marches with less fatigue than before.

Col. Carlson, member of the Board of Directors of Indusco for several years, became interested in industrial cooperatives during the

John E. Waldo, scoutmaster of the former Boy Scout troop sponsored by the American Legion Post of Greenbelt, was selected to be scoutmaster of the new scout troop now being organized here at the organization meeting held recently in the American Legion

Various discussions were held and ideas were exchanged among the 20 men present. It was suggested that one troop be formed and it was decided to hold a school for patrol leaders in scouting first, before inviting any boys to join the troop.
Several of the men present have had some experience in scouting and all offered their services for the new venture. Their names the new venture. Their names will be given to Mr. Waldo who will contact them when he is ready to proceed with the organization.

The legion hall was suggested as a meeting place for the scout.

Legion owns a number of small tents and various other equipment which will be made available for the scouts.

China War Relief Drive Nets $343

The recent China War Relief campaign, which was run by the local United War Relief committee, netted a profit of $343.40, the committee reported this week. The sum has already moved on its way to aid the war stricken Chinese.

Through the cooperation of the Greenbelt Consumer Services the display of Chinese articles took place in the local stores and announcements were made in the local theatre.

7 Greenbelters Are Red Cross Grads

Seven Greenbelt women have completed their 20 hours of training for canteen work under the su-pervision of Mrs. Josephine Mc-Guire, and will receive Red Cross certificates entitling them to serve as volunteer Red Cross Canteen Workers.

The graduates are Marian Deitzel, Grace Mohl, Anna Schwan, Winfield Lade, Iris Fleharty, Jesse Fair and Joy Peeler. This is the second canteen unit formed in Greenbelt.

The group has 24 hours of instruction in nutrition before taking the canteen work. They will now be required to put in 80 hours of canteen work per year to retain their status.

Council Loan Plan Is Ruled Illegal

The Greenbelt Town Council will be unable to carry out its proposed plan to lend or give $500 proposed plan to lend or give $500 to the local rent protest committee, it was indicated this week when Atty. John S. White, Colmar Manor lawyer, ruled that such an ordinance will be illegal.

The ruling will not cause the protest committee to decrease its efforts to institute court action against the rent boosts that be-came effective last month. The campaign to raise the remaining $600 of the necessary $1500 to pay legal fees will be speeded.

The Baltimore legal firm, which was retained by the committee last month, has filed a petition with the OPA rental office at Silver Spring, Md., committee spokesmen said.

Mayor Allan D. Morrison has turned over to the Cooperator a copy of a letter received from the law firm of John S. White in Hyattsville wherein White states that the proposed ordinance prepared by Town Council to lend or donate the sum of $500 to the Citizens. Association Rent Protest zens Association Rent Protest Committee would be an illegal and invalid use of funds by a municipal corporation.

Mr. White listed the limitations imposed upon the power of municipal corporations and he point-ed out that the Town Council would be in a vulnerable position were it to grant funds to the Committee. Under the terms of the Greenbelt charter establishing a municipal form of governmen for the Town, the Town Council may make only such expenditures as will insure the "welfare, health, safety and improvement of the town" but it cannot lend or donate any sum of money for a private purpose to a private group in town even though the benefits received from this contribution may, event-ually, serve some public or muni-cipal purpose.

At its last meeting the Town Council passed an ordinance to lend the Protest Committee the sum of $500 to aid it in the legal fight against the F.P.H.A. in regard to the rental increases effective or complete starting last gard to the rental increases effective in Greenbelt starting last month, Arthur L. Rysticken, at this meeting, suggested that the Council seek the advice of any lawyer familiar with municipal law to determine the legality of such an expenditure. In his letter to Mayor Morrison, Mr. White agreed with Rysticken's oninion ter to Mayor Morrison, Mr. White agreed with Rysticken's opinion that such an expenditure would be illegal. It seems certain, at this time, that the Town Council will be forced to withdraw its ordinance granting the needed funds to the Protest Committee. Mr. Miller chairman of the Committee. Miller, chairman of the Committee, said, "We are indeed grateful for the Town Council's support in this rental disagreement even though the interpretation of municipal law will prevent the Council from aiding us financially. On behalf of the Committee, I would like to thank the members of Council for attempting to help us in our fight,"

To date, the Rent Protest Committee has collected $800.00 in cash and has $100.00 forthcoming in pledges. The dance two weeks ago brought in the additional sum of $100.00 bringing the total up to $900.00 collected thus far for the legal fund.

Additional Security For That V-Letter

Mr. Harry Walls of the Greenbelt maintenance department an-nounced this week that mail box keys which have been on order for six months have been received in the maintenance office. Persons who have reported loss of keys or who were not issued keys are asked to call at the office for them at their earliest convenience.

Leadership

A group of men in Nashua, N. H. decided that they should become closer to their sons so they planned to take their sons on a hike during which time they would point out the lessons of nature insofar as their own knowledge permitted. The boys and their fathers went on the hike which did not turn out to be the success they planned. What was missing? They decided that the personality with that hypnotic spark which commands respect and interest was not among them. That spark is called leadership. Leadership of youth is an in born spark—a talent and very fortunate is he who pos-

Recently a group of men came together in Greenbelt with the idea of forming a Boy Scout troop. The idea of having the troop, crowded out all ideas of the purposes of the troop, namely to aid the less fortunate youth of the town and to show them the right way to live in organized society and also to teach something they didn't know before, of scout craft. The movement seems to have been still born for no one with the necessary spark of leadership has come forward to date. Several men have voluntered to help in an intangible sort of way but no one in Greenbelt with the driving force necessary to create and breathe life into a new scout troop seems to exist.

The Fighting Coast Guard

Many newspaper throughout the nation have recently commented editorially on the fine job being done by the men of Uncle Sam's Fighting Coast Guard. The part that the Coast Guard is playing in this all-out global war has been recently emphasized by the reports of the victories scored against the enemy by the Coast Guard combat cutters, Spencer, Campbell and Icarus and the recent tragic loss of the cutter Escanba.

The recent posthumous award of the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Roosevelt to Coast Guardsman Doug Munro and the award this week of the Navy Cross to Coast Guard Comdr. James Hirshfield, skipper of the Campbell, also testify to the part being played by the heroic men of the Coast Guard. Several other Coast Guardsmen, winners of Silver Star medals and Purple Heart awards, are listed among the outstanding heroes of the

The following editorial, from the Montgomery, Alabama Advertiser, is representative of the comments made recently by the nation's press.

U. S. COAST GUARD IN THE WAR

"U. S. Coast Guard cutter sinks sub and captures crew in sea attack," said a three-column head-line in Wednesday afternoon's Alabama Journal. The story, bearing a Washington dateline, told in dramatic fashion of the spectacular manner in which men normally associated by the reading public with rescuing gers and crewmen from foundering ships battled it out, shot for shot, with desperate crew mem-bers of a damaged German sub-marine and then captured the whole shebang.

Thus was brought into the limelight one of the least known—insofar as combat operations are concerned—arms of Uncle Sam's fighting forces. In peacetimes, a unit of the Treasury department charged with saving the lives of our seafaring men and guarding our shores from racketeers of the our shores from racketeers of the smuggling fraternity, the United States Coast Guard is doing yeo-man service as a branch of the Navy. In time of war the "shal-low water sailors" automatically become a part of the Navy and perform valiant deeds with little or no fanfare. There aren't many public relations officers on their crew rosters or war correspon-dents on their passenger lists.

It is a far cry from the ice patrol of the North Atlantic to sinking a submarine in mid-Atlan-tic. Yet that latter feat merely emphasizes their versatility. They can truly lay claim to being potent factors on land, on sea and in the air, for they utilize all three means air, they utilize all three means of carrying out their objectives.

The Coast Guard was there at Guadalcanal guiding the landing boats that put those other fighting men of the sea, the Marines, ashore. Their cutters and other ships skelter in, out and around the slower merchant ships as they methodically carry out convoy assignments. Their planes soar overhead along our coastlines on the lookout for victims of U-boat prowess and the U-boats themselves. Ashore their men patrol beaches afoot, on horseback and in the mighty little jeeps; it was a Coast Guardsman, if you will remember, who first discovered the German espionage agents who landed on a New England shore some months back and turned in the alarm. All the while these doughty lads with the shield on the control of their right sleeve to denote their branch of service are still on the lookout for smugglers and such other folks as have no business coming into Uncle Sam's realm without credentials or honest pur-

No longer can Coast Guardsmen be dubbed "shallow water sailors." They're on the job whether the water is shallow or deep, the task easy or tough. They're just fighting sons of guns.

Coast Guard Bows To Reps As 2nd Half Begins

Curt Barker got the Reps off to a successful start in the second half of the Prince Georges County Softball League after a shaky beginning caused by fielding lapses behind him. Barker shaded Telloni in what turned out to be a home run duel, finally ending in a 5-2 score.

McMahon, right-fielder of neighbor Jack Allen's Captain of the Port Coast Guard ten, began the four base parade in the third in-Barker's tosses squarely between George Bauer and Bob Marack to score with ease.

Retaliation

The Rep flinger broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning when he led off with a smash directly over Mc-Mahon's head, scoring on a good sprint.

Then, just to take the strain off Barker, Ben Goldfaden and Ray Taylor smote homers in succession. Manager Goldfaden's blow traveled to deep leftfield and Taylor's went directly between center and right fields.

Schedule

Tomorrow night at 7:30 Jack Allen's Guardsmen will tackle the first-half champion Mt. Rainier ten and a game young bunch of

Shamrocks Trounce Gunners 9-1 Behind Breed; Drop Nightcap 3-5

Tom Pluto's 89th Coast Artillery nine filled in for a delinquent Premier Cab team at Braden Field on July 4 and gained an even break with Ernie Boggs' Shamrocks, dropping the first by 1-9 but edgng out a 5 to 3 toughie in the ping the first by 1-9 but edgen night-cap.

Gunner Tritt, who had previously downed the Big Green by 6 to 3, held a 1-0 lead for exactly 3 innings in the opener. The Irish made 4 hits count for as many runs in the fourth frame and then added pairs in the next couple cantos and a singleton in the seventh session. Geyer, Andrus, Breed and Moore got two hits apiece to lead the batting.

Tom Pluto cleared Bill Zerwick's head with a wicked drive in last inning but was nailed at the plate on a three man relay, Zerwick to Andrus to Geyer to Todd.

The double play in the 4th was

Todd.

The double play in the 4th was a hummer. Jim Breed fanned Tritt on a hit-and-run play and Joe Todd whipped the ball to Jack Machowsky, base high, to kill off catcher Wadsworth.

Jim Breed did a nifty hurling job of holding off the hard hitting Gunners after a shaky start to Gunners after a shaky start to remain undefeated this season.

Ernie Boggs was not so fortunate in the second game, errors hurting him in the Gunners half of the 2nd inning when they scored 4 runs. The little Skipper held the Artillery men to but 6 hits and fanned as many while giving up not a walk.

A breaking out of extra base hits, 2 doubles, a triple and a home run, was not enough to bring home the bacon for the Boggsmen.

Mt. Rainier Cops First Half Title

The Reps' time honored rival in softball circles, Mt. Rainier put an end to all speculation on a threeway tie for the first half county crown when they trimmed Lieut. Jack Allen's Coast Guardsmen last Friday evening by a 3-0 count.

Had Allen's team won, a first place deadlock between Mt. Rain-ier, Coast Guard and the Reps would have resulted.

The Mounts rode the breaks they created in the very first in-ning as they fashioned two runs on a couple bunts, hard running and slip-shod fielding.

The second-half race started the very next night with a 5-2 Greenbelt victory over Coast Guard and a 7-4 Mt. Rainier triumph over the Erco Flyers, in spite of the best offerings of Andy Farkas' new flinger, a youngster named

POPULAR COOPERATORS

George Bradley

Thomas Ricker

BY ANNE HULL

Tom Ricker, general manager of Greenbelt Consumers' Services, is the 'Atlas' who carries upon his shoulders the responsibility for all the commercial establishments in the Center: the service station, barber shop, beauty parlor, valet shop, beer store, tobacco shop, foodstore, drugstore, variety store and the theater. Moreover, he's been with G.C.S. since its cradle

Tom cannot complain that his job is monotonous. In fact, the pace is so varied it's killing. After interviewing some applicant in his office, he may have a telephone call to make to OPA, then he listens to a customer complaining about the style of haircut her son received on his last trip to the barber shop. Next in line is a call to New York about an order that hasn't come in. Then off he goes to investigate some angle of service in one of the stores, getting a flying lunch in the drugstore on his way. Finally he may clap on his hat and board a train for a cooperative conferinterviewing some applicant in a train for a cooperative conference in Cleveland. As is the case with Town Manager Braden, Tom's 'phone may ring any hour of the day or night. For example, he was once reuted out of hed he was once routed out of bed close to midnight by a Green-belter requesting that Tom open belter requesting that Tom open the service station so that said customer might change a flat.

Tom claims he's a nervous wreck, but he always has a smile for you and time to discuss any angle of the coperatives you may choose. When he first arrived, in the fall of '37, only the foodstore and service station were operating, and the population was 235 souls. The following Spring the drugstore and barber shop opened. The first full year's gross was $231,000. Now Tom has ten business establishments under his wing, and serves a population of 7,000. Last year's gross was $700,000, and it is anticipated that we'll top a million this year.

Tom's introduction to Greenbelt and the cooperative movement belt and the cooperative movement was purely fortuitous. It happen-ed five years ago when Herbert Evans, then vice president of Consumers Distribution Corporation, was in Washington and in the process of setting up Greenbelt's commercial enterprises. He stopped at one of Tom's three service stations in town to get a tire fixed, and fell into conversation with Tom as he waited. Mr. Evans was so impressed with Tom's business views and good judgment that he invited him out to Greenbelt to make a survey of the service station set-up. A week later Tom was offered the job of later Tom was offered the job of service station manager. The cooperative idea was entirely a new one to Tom, and he was fascinated by its posibilities.

"The field of consumer cooperatives is unlimited", he says today, and looks forward to great expansion of the movement in the fusion of the movement in the fu-ture. The farmers are the largest single group today who have taken advantage of cooperative principles, he says. Like foodstore managers Jeffries and Bradley, Tom Ricker is Washington born and bred. He attended Business High School and Poteet's Business College, and worked for the Gulf Oil Company six years before coming to Green-
