

Voorhis Speaks At GCS Meeting

Establishment of a co-op institute in Greenbelt to train employees and students through practical experience and study, was urged by Jerry Voorhis, who addressed a group of GCS employees and board members at a dinner meeting last Tuesday. Mr. Voorhis recently accepted appointment as Executive Secretary of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A. He was defeated for re-election to Congress last fall after serving ten years as representative from California.

Mr. Voorhis stressed the importance of local cooperative societies in his discussion of the role he expects of the Cooperative League, and stimulated a lively cross-fire of questions and answers regarding the fields in which cooperatives could operate best.

After the meeting, Mr. Voorhis and his wife stopped in at the Co-operator office to inspect another of Greenbelt's cooperative activities.

Mr. Voorhis was introduced by Dayton W. Hull, president of GCS. Present at the meeting and introduced also were Jack Coleman, the new manager of the fountain lunch in the drugstore and Bassett Ferguson, the new assistant General Manager of GCS.

GCS Meeting Mon., Henderson Speaker

Leon Henderson, Chief Economist of the Research Institute of America, will speak at the GCS quarterly membership meeting next Monday, June 9. His topic will be "The Peoples' Stake in Radio."

A special demonstration of FM radio reception will be held at 8 p. m. before the meeting starts. Registration for voting will take place at 8:15. Following this a movie will be shown: "The Story of FM Broadcasting."

The business meeting will include election of an auditing committee, and discussion of bids received for building the new store.

FPHA Starts Evictions Of High Income People

Greenbelt residents will not receive eviction notices under the present FPHA policy of evicting families with high incomes in certain government low cost housing projects.

According to an FPHA official neither old Greenbelt nor the Lanham Act housing projects are considered in this category of low cost housing.

Senator Ellender sponsored an amendment to the Senate rent control bill passed last week which will continue FPHA authority to evict these families.

Because of the desperate housing shortage throughout the country the FPHA has attempted to adopt as lenient a policy as possible under the law. 5% of the highest income group are given notices every month with six months advance notice. During recent hearings before the House Banking and Currency Committee on the disposition of war housing projects, one of the chief criticisms leveled against FPHA was that over-income families were not being evicted from housing projects designed to accommodate low income groups.

AVC Pre-Convention Meeting June 11

The Greenbelt Chapter, American Veterans' Committee, will hold its next meeting on June 11, at 8:30 p. m. in the Home Economics Room of the Center School.

At this pre-convention meeting, the principal business will be the discussion of the agenda of the national convention.

Reports will be given on proposed changes in the national constitution of the AVC, and also on national and international policy sponsored by AVC.

Gobbel Asks FPHA Who Owns Roads

Mr. Gobbel was authorized at last Monday's Council meeting to apply for a portion of state taxes collected on autos, gas, and automotive accessories. These are normally pro-rated to towns within the state on a road-mileage basis. Greenbelt, however, does not own its roads, thus raising a question as to whether the town is entitled to a tax share. In connection with this action, Mr. Gobbel was requested to prepare a resolution asking for a dedication of Greenbelt roads by FPHA to either the town, the county, or the state, so that steps might be taken to repair damaged sections of the roads.

Another action taken at this Council meeting authorized Town Manager James T. Gobbel to confer with Health Association representatives in an effort to reach a fair sales price for town equipment rented over a period of six years by the association, or to reach an agreement on a lower rental than the present rate of $15 a month.

Opening Day Breeze Cools Water Fans

Despite a chilling breeze and cold water, 196 water fans inaugurated the 1947 swimming season last Friday, Memorial Day, in the local pool.

Freshly painted and put in shape for the opening, the pool remained closed during the morning because of the unfavorable weather, but opened for the afternoon shift to accommodate the two hundred brave souls who were determined to take a dip on the opening day.

The sun shone a little brighter the remainder of the weekend, with a consequent rise in attendance to almost 500.

Methodist Church Has New Pastor

The Reverend Milton Ray, newly appointed pastor of the Mowatt Memorial Methodist Church, will preach at both morning and evening services this Sunday. Reverend Chester Craig, who has been pastor of the congregation since the church was erected has been transferred by the Baltimore Council to the Bowie-Perkins Chapel, where he will be supply pastor.

A former Navy Chaplain, Reverend Ray has been serving the church at Washington Grove, Md. He is ordained as a minister in the Methodist Church and is completing medical studies at George Washington University in Washington, D. C. which will make it possible for him to serve as a medical missionary.

Reverend Ray and his mother will move to Greenbelt as soon as a house is available.

Zoning Committee To Hold Meeting

A meeting of the zoning advisory committee will be held this Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the council room, town manager James T. Gobbel announced this week.

This will be the third meeting of the committee following an introductory session and a meeting with town planner Hale Walker.

On Wednesday, Mr. Gobbel expects to have material ready so that the committee can learn more of the subject and prepare to make specific recommendations to the council. As provided by ordinance, the committee will meet with the council, the mayor serving as chairman.

58 Registrants

Town Clerk Winfield McCamy announces a total of 58 new registrants who want to vote in the town elections this fall, when the council of 5 to serve for the next two years will be chosen.

The town office around the corner of the postoffice is open daily from 9 to 4:30 p. m.

Goldfaden Leaving

Recreation Department Director Ben Goldfaden has signified his intention of leaving the town's employ to take a position with the Prince Georges County school system. Mr. Goldfaden told the Co-operator this week that his resignation would probably be effective sometime in August.

Police Apprehend Young Car Thieves

Chief of Police George L. Panagoulis reports that the thieves who stole the wheel and tire from the 1946 Oldsmobile belonging to Irving L. Band of 12-B Parkway on May 27, were apprehended last Tuesday.

A description of a strange car seen in the vicinity of the 12 court on Parkway last Wednesday week by Officer Alvin E. Allen, was sent to the police of adjoining towns. Receiving a tallying description from Cheverly police, Sergeant At-tick and Officer Dodge investigated, and after questioning arrested two youths one 17 and the other 18 years old, from Rogers Heights and Cheverly, who were charged with the theft.

Defense Sections Will Get Hedges, Field Office Director Winston Says

Mrs. Beverly Fonda, 9 Research Road, was informed last Wednesday by FPHA Field Office Director Winston that funds had been appropriated for hedges for the Lanham Act homes here.

Raleigh Hires Roy S. Braden

Former Community and Town Manager Roy S. Braden was recently appointed City Manager of Raleigh, North Carolina, at a salary of $13,500. Mr. Braden will inaugurate the city manager form of government in Raleigh.

Braden's first city managership was in Hopewell, Va. In 1922 he became county manager of Arlington County, Va. He was Community and Town Manager here from 1936 to 1943, when he resigned to take the job of city manager for High Point, N. C.

Mrs. Fonda presented a petition signed by over 900 residents of Greenbelt to Director Winston. It asked for hedges and shrubs to mark off lawns in new Greenbelt.

Copies of the covering letter were also sent to Dillon Meyer, FPHA Administrator, and to the Senators and Congressmen from this district.

New Greenbelt, one of the first projects built with funds under the Lanham Act, was started in 1941 and completed in 1943. No planting has been done by the federal government in the defense areas, and it was only after much pressure from local citizens that a drainage system was instituted which took new Greenbelters out of the mud.

Mrs. Fonda organized the drive to obtain signatures and was assisted by volunteers in each court.

Lack of manpower, and at the present, the high cost of materials, are the two factors holding up the project, Mr. Winston said. "Hedges may be planted within a year," he stated.

Until hedges can be planted, defense residents will be permitted to erect fencing. It is understood, however, that this provision is so hedged about with restrictions that very few residents will care to avail themselves of the privilege. Full details will be printed in next week's Co-operator.

Drop-Inn Meeting

Jimmy Williams, Drop-Inn president, is calling a meeting at the youth canteen for Friday, June 13, at 8 p. m. All teen-agers are invited to come and see some movie shorts and participate in a discussion of Drop-Inn rules and regulations.

Planning Still Essential

(Third and last installment of article by Frederick Gutheim reprinted from National Magazine of Art).

For all its 1,885 houses, Greenbelt is not through growing. For all its fine community plan, it is not through planning. In the future, government planning officials consider it may be practicable to add another thousand or two houses, most of them by a carefully controlled private building program. The original ceiling of 3,000 families can be exceeded. Between the present system of graded rents and the flat subsidy there is still wide latitude for experiment and progress in developing new means of administering the housing subsidy. It is even possible that some part of the existing project may be turned over by the government to private or cooperative management and ownership.

The question of local industry has never been satisfactorily settled; and it is not too much to hope that something can still be done to cut down those long hours commuting and return to Howard's original ideal of the garden city. Greenbelt already needs an inn or hotel, and a good restaurant. It needs better facilities for medical care. Finally there remains the question of the relation of Greenbelt to the rapidly growing airport on its southern boundary, and the projected Washington-Baltimore superhighway that may actually invade the protecting green belt. While the new road

To The Editor

Jewish Appeal

To the Editor:
The campaign of the United Jewish Appeal to raise 170 million dollars will be over in a few weeks. While the greater amount of the funds raised have usually been contributed by members of the Jewish faith, members of all faiths have each year given generously toward the aid of their fellow human beings in deep distress.

Last year 100 million dollars were used to keep alive more than 85,000 Jewish survivors in the Displaced Persons camps in Europe and for the rehabilitation of those fortunate ones who managed to make their way to Palestine and other havens of refuge. It was hoped last year that 1946-47 would see the end of DP camps, and that DP camp inhabitants would have had their social, civil, and property rights restored. Instead we find the camps sheltering 250,000 people,—people who must be fed, clothed, given succor,—people who must be kept alive. Our responsibility to suffering fellow human beings is so much greater, in view of the departure of UNRRA from the overseas relief picture.

We are appealing to all residents of Greenbelt to give as generously as their hearts dictate for the relief of human beings whose sufferings and tribulations are fortunately beyond our comprehension. We are our brothers' keepers. Their needless death diminishes us all, for we are all members of the human race.

In Darkest G'belt

For three years now I have walked home at night from the movies, etc., blindfolded, i. e., with the sidewalk lamps from Eastway up to my home on Northway, not light but dark. I understand one of the reasons for this is that children seem to delight in breaking the bulbs. However, how about something in a sidewalk light that can't be reached by young fry—something like what is used in most cities and towns? For now, I depend on eating carrots to make navigating in the dark possible.

—NORTHWAY RESIDENT

Editor's Note: Community Manager Cormack has told the Cooperator that parts cannot be obtained to repair the sidewalk lights. There is a possibility that regulation street lights may be installed in their stead.

Donut Machine Is Big Hit On First Day

People stood in line to watch last Monday afternoon as the new doughnut machine got under way in the drug store. Before the machine became adjusted, doughnuts of all shapes and sizes were coming through. The hot doughnuts appeared to be an instantaneous success, as 160 dozen were sold in the first four hours. The last group of purchasers in the evening had to be turned away with only 3 doughnuts apiece, as the supply ran out.

OUR NEIGHBORS

By DOROTHY MCGEE

Eleven tired but happy fishermen drove back home last Friday evening from a successful day of fishing at Bowers, Delaware. They were Harvey Wharton, "Doc" Pearson and his two brothers, Albert and West Pearson, Waldo Mott, Bill Casteel, Tom Okazaki, Ralph Miller, the Co-op bus driver, Henry Myers, Co-op display man, Allan Lawrence and Fred Ackerman. They left Greenbelt the night before at 11 and arrived in Bowers at 3:30 a. m. A bit of poker helped while away the hours of waiting for the weather to clear. Tom Okazaki had some difficulty in remaining asleep on deck, being dashed awake several times by waves, each time, certain that one of the party was throwing cold water on him. Finally he took refuge under a bench. Some mighty fine trout were caught but we don't know who pulled in the biggest.

Government Employees

Few government employees realize the precarious position they are in (in the event of death) with respect to the support of their widows and children under age 18, as compared to the position of the father in private employment.

Most fathers in private employment are protected by the Social Security Act—which provides for a regular monthly government payment for the support of the widow and children until the youngest child reaches 18.

The widow and children of the Government employee, on the other hand, are excluded from the Social Security Act and receive no benefits.

This is a compelling reason for the Government employee to take, out of his own funds, a family income life insurance policy, and thereby provide for his own widow and children, the same benefits which the private employee provides for his, through payroll deductions under the Social Security Act.

Shamrocks Take Two Over Holiday Weekend

The Shamrocks stepped out of their losing streak to take a twin victory over the holiday weekend. Our local nine showed much better form and hustle as they shut out the Marines of Henderson Hall 6-0 on Saturday and conquered Bethesda 7-5 in a regular Sunday league game.

In the Saturday tilt, Diz Dodson gave up three hits and as many walks, as he turned in his first win. All three bingles came in the first three innings after which Diz tightened up and chucked 7 innings of hitless ball. Lou Tierney and Ernie LaValley aided the Shamrock cause with 4 and 3 hits respectively with a total of 14 blows for Greenbelt. Stevens who went all the way for the Marines was charged with the loss.

Sunday found the Shamrocks still in the win column as they turned back a stubborn Bethesda nine. Bill Alexander started for the home team but was relieved by Crouthamel shortly thereafter as the Bethesda boys rocked him for a triple and two singles before the inning had hardly started.

The Shamrocks started their hitting early in the game with LaValley and Eckhardt getting singles in the first inning followed by a two-bagger for Lou Tierney bringing Eckhardt home for the first Greenbelt run. Crouthamel held the visitors down in their half retiring the side in a 1, 2, 3 order. Greenbelt scored again in the second inning when Norman Enzor, on second from a walk and steal, was brought in by Donnie Wolfe's single to left. Timely hitting by Andrews, Tierney and Cleveland in the third drove Myers of Bethesda from the mound and gave Greenbelt the lead 4-3. Cunningham relieved Myers for the remainder of the game.

The Bethesda tied it up in the fifth but Greenbelt rallied in the same inning to gain a 3 run lead, only to have it reduced one notch in the seventh for a final 7-5 score.

Much credit is due coach and pitcher, Harry Crouthamel, who despite the damage he was doing to a badly sprained ankle received in the Saturday game, pitched his heart out for the Shamrocks and put the opponents out in rapid succession.

Tomorrow the Shamrocks engage the Government Employer Insurance Team of Washington and then travel on Sunday to Silver Spring to play Morningside Laundry, a league game. Both games start at 3 p. m.

Legion Jr. Nine Hits Colmar Manor

The American Legion Junior Championship playoffs started with a bang on Decoration Day, with the local team trouncing the Colmar Manor lads nine to one. The game was played on the Greenbelt diamond, drawing the largest baseball crowd this season.

The Greenbelt band gave a half hour concert before the game to get the boys in the proper spirit. Mayor Bauer pitched the first ball to Commander Lloyd McEwen of the Greenbelt Legion Post.

Special laurels went to Scott, the home town pitcher, who struck out 15 of the opposing players, and H. Randolph, who hit a long triple with the bases loaded, bringing in three runs in the third inning.

Contest Defeat

On Sunday, June 1, the local lads traveled to Maryland Park to play the "My Maryland" boys. The Greenbelt team was defeated 2 to 0 but Manager Art Foster finished the game under protest. During the second inning one of the Greenbelt boys was called out on first base by the umpire and it was this decision that is being contested. The protest has been filed with the District Athletic Officer of the American Legion, Hugh McClay at Hyattsville. Mr. Benefiel, a spectator at the game, took moving pictures of the play, and the Greenbelt case will be based on these pictures.

The Junior Baseball league is comprised of 8 teams from the surrounding communities. The American Legion Posts in these communities either donate or raise the money from local merchants to pay for the boys' uniforms, equipment and transportation.

Planning Is Essential

will put Greenbelt—for those who own cars and can find a place to park them downtown—within fifteen minutes of downtown Washington and 30 minutes of Baltimore, it may provide a mixed blessing.

On the broader planning issues, not only must Greenbelt's future growth be carefully considered by the experts, but now that a community exists (as it did not in the beginning) the community itself must become an active participant in the planning process that never ends. These issues point to a continuing interest in the way Greenbelt handles its problems—for they are the problems of all American families, and all our cities. Greenbelt's stake in good planning is greater than most cities for it has to protect and conserve the old as well as make wise provision for the new.

Perhaps it is a wearisome thought that planning vigilance should never cease. Certainly it is fair to raise a question of the ultimate desirable size of the community. But a decision here does not solve the problem, for even after Greenbelt stops growing it is unreasonable to expect that it will stop changing.

The reason why Greenbelt continues to attract such enormous attention is the increasing dissatisfaction of so many people with the way they have to live, and their hope that some solution can be found in their time. It is not enough to consider the nation's housing problem as the problem of a few million veterans. Nor can we consider it merely as the problem of those millions of families who lack decent housing. We must consider, too, the many millions more who are forced to live under frustrating circumstances and who long for a chance to live better. Under the rapidly worsening housing conditions which we face today, these anxieties are reaching psychotic proportions in the minds of many families and many communities.

Nationally we are a long way from an acceptable solution to the problems of housing and community building. Our central cities are rotting at the core. The noise, smoke, dirt and hazards of city living are becoming worse. Even our silk stocking suburbs are discovering that they cannot achieve an adequate tax structure without commercial and industrial property. Everywhere a slummy development is taking place just over the city line, by-passing millions of vacant lots in deteriorated neighborhoods where millions of dollars have been invested in schools, streets, sewers and other municipal improvements. The machinery to control urban growth is still largely non-existent, and before it can be created there must be a vision in the minds of men of the kind of city they want to build. Before the urban masses will endow public authority with the powers and funds necessary for community building, a clear understanding of these goals must prevail. Greenbelt helps mightily to make these goals clear and precise.

Greenbelt, originally built wholly by the Federal government, now shows us what essential parts of the structure of a new community can best be created by public action—the streets, recreation facilities, sewer and water systems, park areas, schools and other public services (including as well, the overall plan for the community); what parts can be constructed by private business and builders—most of the houses themselves, commercial establishments, and business and professional services; and what parts can be provided by a close partnership of public and private agencies—the public transportation system, the marginal community facilities, and future industrial development. Within this framework can be found the guiding principles for future free-standing satellite towns that can be built virtually independent of action by the Federal government.

There is no doubt that people are still attracted, in the classic words of Ebenezer Howard, by the great magnet of economic opportunity in our cities. The urbanward migration of industry and population continues. But there is equally little doubt that they seldom like living in them, and get out as soon as possible—when they become rich enough, when they retire or when sufficiently good commuting facilities exist. As an alternative to our bleak suburbs, and our unplanted and deteriorating urban chaos—la ville tentaculaire, la campagne hallucine, to use a phrase I am ashamed to say is as true today as when it was first coined fifty years ago—Greenbelt seems unique as a possible alternative to the awful choice we must make. That is why it stirs the imagination of visitors from all parts of the United States and from all over the world, perhaps even more today than when it was created. So, when I revisited Greenbelt I saw not one Greenbelt, but the many that live in the hearts of men of hope and vision. I saw the Greenbelt of the present, but also the future Greenbelts. We must find ways to create them if we are to realize the promise of modern life.

Local Co-ops Need Strong Wholesale

By ELISE EAST

Fourteen Greenbelters attended the first annual meeting of Eastern Cooperatives Incorporated in New York last weekend.

Under the new organization, which combines Eastern Cooperative Wholesale and the Eastern Cooperative League, Greenbelt Consumer Services was entitled to 4 delegates. David Granahan, Walter Volkhausen, Elise East and Sam Ashelman were the GCS representatives, while Walter Volkhausen served on the resolutions committee.

Concern over ECI's position in the coming year, in view of possible price decreases, dominated the attention of the delegates.

Bad Wholesale Year

Although total sales of member societies hit 32 million in 1946, only 6 million dollars' worth of commodities were bought from ECI. The Wholesale suffered a slight loss for the year. While it was agreed that this was typical of the year, especially in the grocery field, several resolutions were passed to strengthen the position of the Wholesale and its member societies during the coming year. One provided for an analysis of ECI's operations and its relationship to its member societies by outside consultants in the grocery field. Another instructed the ECI Directors to restore and strengthen field service at the earliest practical moment. A third provided for the promotion and encouragement of new and existing stores with the object of building up of a volume of at least $5,000 a week in each foodstore.

The capacity of the wholesale's coffee roaster prompted a resolution urging the doubling of Co-op coffee sale in the coming year. It was pointed out that the ECI roasting plant operates at only 19% of capacity and averages only 2 1/2 pounds of Co-op coffee per year per member as compared to a national average of 19 pounds per person per year. A display of the new Co-op vacuum pack coffee attracted considerable attention and was sold to those present at the end of the session.

A resolution recommending to both the Wholesale and local societies several protective measures to guard against inflation was adopted.

Planning Conferences

A resolution by Merton Trast calling for planning conferences to study problems facing Co-ops in the coming year was passed.

Visitors from Sweden, Norway, Palestine, Austria and Germany attended the Saturday night session and extended greetings from Co-ops in their country to American Co-ops. They heard Jerry Voorhis, new secretary of the U. S. A. Cooperative League, address the Assembly. Mr. Voorhis expressed the view that European Co-ops have advanced beyond the stage in which American Co-ops now find themselves. Co-ops in America are in the second stage of development, that stage at which they have become large enough to be considered a competition by many businessmen, he said. A reception for Mr. Voorhis and the visitors from other countries was held Saturday night.

William Blaisdell from the Potomac area was re-elected to the ECI Board of Directors. Besides the appointed delegates, the following Greenbelters attended the sessions: Mike and Ruth Watson, Merton Trast, Richmond Robertson, Robert Dove, David Granahan, Cyrilla O'Connor, Bassett Ferguson, Tom and Eleanor Ritchie and Bruce Bowman.

Do You Know What Is What In This Town?

In view of the recent interest shown in the type of government we have here in Greenbelt, the Cooperator is running a series of articles discussing the Council-Manager Plan. These questions and answers were taken from the pamphlet published by the National Municipal League.

What is the council-manager plan?

It is the most efficient and at the same time most democratic form of local government. It resembles closely the organization of modern school systems and modern corporations, public and private. The voters (stockholders) choose a city council (board of directors) to determine policy and to hire a trained man as chief administrator.

How many cities have the council-manager plan?

More than 700. About 200 others have some variation of it. Nearly 14,000,000 American live in communities which have the manager plan.

What size are manager plan communities?

They range from towns with populations of a few hundred to Cincinnati with a population of a half a million. One out of every five cities (over 10,000) has this form of government.

What officials are elected under the manager plan?

The best policy is to elect only the members of the city council, ideally by proportional representation form of voting. The council appoints the manager who in turn appoints all department heads and other administrative employees.

Why are better councilmen usually chosen under the manager plan?

When the job of councilman does not take so much time as to interfere with their private business, representative citizens can be induced to run for office. Furthermore, the manager plan works best with a nonpartisan system of electing the council, thus divorcing national party issues from local elections and giving the non-machine candidate a chance to be elected. The fact that a business-like administration is possible also makes it appeal to men of high calibre. The position of councilman becomes one of dignity, responsibility and honor.

Suppose the members of the council are spoils politicians; can they not appoint a manager who will do their bidding?

Certainly. It is up to the voters to see that representative citizens are elected to the council. If the voters do not like the way the city is run, they can remove the council at the next election, since the council is directly responsible to the voters for the government of the city. However, the experience of most manager cities is that high grade councilmen are usually chosen.

What does the mayor do in a manager city?

The mayor is the presiding officer of the council chosen by the council from among its own membership. He is titular head of the city and usually has ample emergency powers. He interprets the government's work to the people through platform and press and assumes leadership of policy.

THE STORY OF DONUTS

Most great discoveries in food are pure accident. A house had to burn to the ground to produce the first roast pig, and a housewife was scared almost senseless to produce the grand-daddy of the modern donut.

Good housewives used to render fat from the meat they cooked and kept it in a pot on the back of the stove. Naturally the fat was hot and liquid, the perfect state for deep frying. On day while a Dutch housewife was baking raised bread called little "ollie bollen" or oil balls, she accidentally dropped an ollie bollen into the simmering fat where it promptly sizzled into a delectable, plump, golden brown cake. Thus was born the first fried cake.
