A Variety of Issues Confront Council as FY2001 Concludes

by Sandy Smith

Beginning September 3, both residents and non-residents will pay three percent more for annual or season passes to the Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center, according to legislation approved by the Greenbelt City Council at its regular meeting on June 11. For the last two years pass rates have remained the same.

Playground

Council approved a bid of $122,000 from the Custom Park Service for playground upgrades. Improvements include playground resurfacing, with either wood carpet or a poured-in-place substance which gives on impact. New equipment will also be purchased and installed in eight Greenbelt playgrounds.

Counting expenditures already made, the current budget shows a shortfall of about $14,000 for the playground work. Council directed staff to try to obtain Community Development Block Grant unused funds to make up the difference or to have city crews rather than a contractor perform the upgrade work at the museum Red Light Camera

In keeping with earlier promises to allow a 30-day grace period after red light cameras were installed on May 23, council agreed to void or revoke citations already issued during the past few weeks and turn off cameras so that no new tickets could be issued until June 22. Police Chief James Craze said he was incorrectly informed that warning tickets were being issued and that the best solution now to guarantee that citizens will have a full grace period was to turn off the

Unfortunately this solution is not without cost (about $2,000 per camera), said City Manager McLaughlin, but this alternative is cheaper than instituting a program to issue warning tickets for the next few weeks.

Objecting primarily to the extra cost to turn off the cameras and because the majority of those receiving citations were not Greenbelters and thus unlikely to have been informed of a grace period, Mayor pro tem Alan Turnbull, who was acting mayor in the absence of Mayor Judith Davis, voted against the decision to turn off the cameras. Councilmember Edward Putens said he thought that the integrity of the council was at stake and that the city should do what it had promised.

Visual Arts Program

What was listed on the agenda as a presentation of a staff transition plan turned into another full-blown discussion of the visual arts education program in Greenbelt. At its last meeting, council had approved a plan for arts education which divided responsibilities among Greenbelt Pottery, the Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts (GAVA), and new Recreation Department staff. This decision was made despite GAVA's declared intention at that time - and since - not to take part in a divided program (GAVA had previously been responsible for the overall program). This action ultimately resulted in the City's Recreation Department moving to hire two new part-time staff members, a ceramics specialist to run the ceramics program and a visual arts specialist to oversee the whole Councilmember White continued to classify this approach as a "radical departure" from the past. Also at this point Councilmember Roberts indicated that he was surprised at this outcome; he said that "something was seriously wrong," since council had voted for a program which included GAVA and now principal responsibility seemed to be with the Recreation Department.

White replied that this was the logical outcome - virtually by default - of council's action. He then directed a series of hard-hitting questions at Arts Coordinator Nicole DeWald to clarify how the program would now be adminis-

In particular, he wanted to know of the relationship between Greenbelt Pottery and the Recreation Department. He wanted to know who would interview and hire the new arts specialists and class instructors and he inquired about insurance coverage and liability. Staff was directed by council to provide this informa-

DeWald answered that plans were moving smoothly and that Greenbelt Pottery had been participating and that a number of GAVA instructors had indicated an interest in teaching. Summer courses have been advertised. White wanted to know why the summer pottery courses were more expensive than those offered by GAVA and was informed by Jessica Gitlis of Geenbelt Pottery that it was because these courses included a month of open studio time.

A request by White that the process for next year's program be developed in advance and that a well-thought out Request for Proposals be distributed in a timely manner was approved unanimously. Roberts asked "that hard feelings be put behind and that the focus be placed on having a good program."

Create Fantastic Lanterns To Display on the Fourth

Plans are underway by the Greenbelt Recreation Department to have community members contribute to a fantastic display on the ground during Fourth of July fireworks. Installation of illuminated sculptures at Buddy Attick Park will be coordinated with Baltimore artist Molly Ross, whose 18-foot tall lantern towers will be presented. The public is being invited to create their own sculptural lanterns for the display.

In conjunction with the Recreation Department's Artful Afternoon series, Ross will lead a free

Ross, who identifies herself as a "celebration artist," has successfully launched several community-based projects of this kind throughout the country. Most reat "Lakefest 2001," in connection with the Columbia Festival of the Arts. The display included a giant lantern boat and luminous candle towers on shore and a night procession with paper and bamboo lanterns.

Ross comments that in working with American communities, it is her intention to create "a ka-

Greenbelt Furniture's History Examined by Student Intern

by Sandra Lange

Recently Greenbelt Museum intern Ann Peel conducted a research project on the origins of the furniture designed in the 1930s for the original Greenbelt homes. Peel is a student at the Parsons School of Design. Her research paper, "Greenbelt Furni-Made for the Town," earned her an A+ from her instructor. Some of her findings shed new light on who designed the furniture, and how, where and why it was created. The following is based on her research:

The Special Skills Division of the Resettlement Administration employed artists to design the furniture for the tenants who were moving into the first group of 885 homes in 1937. Some of the first residents brought furniture with them, but many had none or furniture that was too big for the small-scale homes. Hofflin Designs

The furniture designed for Greenbelt not only fit the Greenbelt homes but was also intended to be attractive, inexpensive and durable. One of the designers, Elizabeth Hofflin, "designed pieces that could serve more than a single function. For example, a square living room table doubled as a card table. Sofas changed into beds, bureaus were also desks or occasional tables and all the chairs in the house matched so they could be used together for a large dinner party. End tables had drawers with shelf space."

A simple streamlined design with no carving made the furniture easier to produce in a factory and therefore more affordable. Inexpensive woods, maple, oak and gum, were chosen. federal government bid out the contracts for production. No one firm offered the lowest bid for all the furniture, so several companies were selected.

Other Companies

The James L. Angle Company, Ludington, Michigan, produced much of the amber maple furniture. Angle had previously worked for the Stickley Brothers, known for their mission-style furniture, before forming his own company in the mid-1930s. In addition to the Greenbelt furniture, Angle's produced furniture for hospitals and schools.

Other furniture companies included J. M. Young's Sons, Cumden, New Jersey, the first Camden company to have fully electric-powered machinery, and Gustav Stickley of the famous

Our New Look

Readers will notice a new look beginning with this issue of the Greenbelt News Review. Some other new changes are not so noticeable. For the past five years the preprint and printing of this newspaper has been done by Chesapeake Publishing's preprint shop in Beltsville and its printing presses in Waldorf. The Gazette papers bought the Waldorf plant and some of the Southern Maryland newspapers, and the Beltsville shop closed this week. Waldorf will continue to print the News Review.

A committee of News Review staffers has found a new shop - Lynn Eppard and Associates — to do the work that was done in Beltsville, but the change requires technology that most of the newspaper staff is not familiar with. At some point in the near future all transmission of information will be electronic. Ouite a leap for the present staff. We have been putting all the stories and classified ads on a computer disk and then sending the disk to Beltsville by courier. Now, we are sending the disk via e-mail. (And if you read Marti Scheel's letter last week concerning our competence with e-mail...well, we need help.) We are learning how to post FTPs on our web site and downloading PDFs to see the results as Eppard is now doing the first cut on make-up. Wednesday evenings we will still be looking at how the pages are laid out and doing some proofreading, but we won't be cutting out galleys and pasting up pages as we have done for 60 plus years. We will be able to make some changes to reflect our concerns but not a lot. When these changes have been made, Thursday morning, the entire newspaper, photos and all, will travel to Waldorf over the Internet. Wow.

In addition to desktop publishing skills, Lynn Eppard has graphic design skills and has already done a few things to dress up the appearance of the News Review. We are encouraging her to experiment with ideas she has and you, our readers, may want to comment on what you like and think we should make permanent. The Co-op ad is a good place to look first. In transferring the template from Chesapeake to Eppard, and in concert with Co-op manager Bob Davis, the ad has gotten a facelift. There will be more to come.

We thought you'd like to know what's going on behind the scenes. What we hope for is that a few computer-savvy readers may be interested in helping us modernize our process and learn new stuff like how to do ads on PageMaker and how to scan and manipulate photos or other graphics. We hardly begin to even know the language. And, who knows, you may get the journalism bug and want to stay.

Now's the Time

reason that Greenbelt is a special 'sion' is August 6. place is its pool of citizen volunteers. Outstanding citizens are coaching our youngsters. Others are quietly working to meet the needs of Greenbelt's growing senior population. Still others are addressing myriad issues including crime and safety, hunger and homelessness, the arts, etc. All of us have had the opportunity to be associated with individuals from Greenbelt who have distinguished themselves for their outstanding volunteer service to our community. Rarely do they receive the recognition they deserve.

Every year, Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen Selection Committee chooses a volunteer to receive this honor. That selection is made from nominations submitted from the community. History indicates that many of Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizens have been nominated several times before their selection. The Committee encourages nominators to be persistent! Besides the recognition and congratulatory proclamations, the honoree serves as the Grand Marshal for the Labor Day Parade.

The Committee needs your input to ensure that the award is made to the most deserving person. Please take the time to write us about the volunteer you believe should be honored as Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen for the year 2001. Describe, in your own words, your nominee's contributions or acts of kindness. Letters to the Editor

Have I Got It Wrong?

County Councilman Thomas Hendershot is sponsoring an amendment to the still-to-beadopted Greenbelt Metro Area Sector Plan and Sectional Map Amendment that will guide development on and around the Greenbelt Metro Station. The Hendershot amendment reads, "Regardless of its date, a Conceptual Site Plan (CSP), Detailed Site Plan (DSP), or preliminary plan of subdivision filed with the Planning Board for Metro Planned Community uses pursuant to CB-47-2000 is not subject to the Development District Standards in the Section Plan and Sectional Map Amendment."

I had some trouble understanding the dry legalese of Mr. Hendershot's amendment and its seemingly innocuous wording. Perhaps others are having the same trouble. After some effort I think I have succeeded in translating it into simple language that all can understand.

My interpretation - "The purpose of this amendment is to inform the many citizens of College Park, Berwyn Heights and Greenbelt who participated in the several-years-long process of developing the Greenbelt Metro Area Sector Plan and Sectional Map Amendment, that your efforts are, sadly, for naught. In plain words, get lost - we neither want your plan nor your continuing involvement in any way in guiding this mega-development. We realize that it will profoundly affect, in a negative way, the quality of life you've worked so hard over the years to achteve and maintain. But, we're saying to you, 'get back, lie down and let Metrolands LLC roll over you with their development plans that they, and we, deem good for you."

Now, you citizens may have examined the Conceptual Site Plan and Preliminary Plan of Subdivision that Metrolands filed with the Planning Board and have come to the conclusion that the developer has demonstrated:

1. a huge disregard for preserving the environmental envelope of wetlands and floodplain forest;

Phone

an ineptness in properly analyzing the traffic mess that will be created in your neighborhoods by this development, and;

3. a surprising incompetence in their economic analysis of the project.

Not to worry. Trust us. The developer needs no guidance or Development District Standards that you might think are good for your communities. They know what they're doing, and yours is not to reason why

End of interpretation. My questions to Mr. Hendershot have I got it wrong? And, why is it in your constituents' best interest to pass this amendment?

Airplane Spotting

It was so much fun to meet with other offspring of the Greenbelt "pioneers" at the Chautauqua on May 19. Several of the participants mentioned the airplane-spotting we and/or our parents did during the War. My sister Joanne even wrote a poem about it which was recently published in an anthology of the Williamsburg Poetry Guild.

Kathleen (Scott) McFarland

Editor's Note: Many residents of Greenbelt during World War II helped look for enemy aircraft from the top of the movie theater building in the Center. They learned to recognize planes from silhouettes. Joanne Scott was 13 years old when she began spotting.

Pottery's Plans

Greenbelt Pottery is a group of individuals who support the presence of a community ceramic arts studio in Greenbelt, owned and operated by the city and open to the entire community.

Greenbelt Pottery's goal is to promote and support a comprehensive educational program in the ceramic arts, including open studio access, work exchange opportunities, and visiting artist workshops in a studio that is professionally equipped and maintained by a skilled ceramic studio manager at the Greenbelt Community Center.

Greenbelt Pottery believes that a community ceramic art studio owned and operated by the city, and supported with input and fundraising by an independent ceramic art organization, will provide a high quality, educational. creative, and stable environment for participants and instructors.

Greenbelt Pottery serves as a source of volunteers in support of studio activities and programs, helping to keep fees and costs low. As part of their volunteer effort, members of Greenbelt Pottery will be building and installing shelves, building worktables, and organizing the studio for the summer session, which will begin July 8.

Greenbelt Pottery is planning several fundraising activities in the coming months. The money raised will be used to purchase equipment, furnishings and additional materials for the studio. It will also help to provide workshops and internships for program participants.

Greenbelt Pottery welcomes anyone interested in supporting the ceramic arts in Greenbelt to attend its July meeting. Further details will be posted on the bulletin board outside the ceramic studio on the 2nd floor of the Community Center.

Group Performs Improv Comedy

There's a new improv comedy group based in Greenbelt, called the GAC Reflex. Affiliated with the Greenbelt Arts Center, the GAC Reflex is a group of young improv artists who performed in May with GAC's Acme Clown Month, and this past weekend at the New Deal Café's Music Festival Weekend.

In improvisational comedy, the actors create hilarious scenes by inserting audience suggestions into different sketches, which set the rules for each scene. The fun of improv comedy comes from watching the actors take the ideas of the audience and work them into the game. Improv combines the best of stage talents with physical comedy and quick wit. Improv games include such favorites as Three-Way Dubbing, Freeze, Party Quirks, Magic Word and Genre Scenes, all as seen in comedy clubs around the nation, and on the hit television program, "Who's Line Is It, Anyway?"

Most of the Reflex members are Greenbelt residents, including Jim Adams, Cate Krage, Jeff Landau, Ian Blackwell Rogers and Vern Roseman, all of whom have been seen frequently on stage or helping behind the scenes at the Greenbelt Arts Center, along with several other area

Upcoming GAC Reflex shows at the New Deal Café in Roosevelt Center include Wednesday, June 27; Thursday, July 5; and Wednesday, July 11. All shows are from 7 to 9 p.m. Stop on by, and participate in a night of fun, laughs, and original, seat-of-your-pants comedy.

Impact, a black-and-white film by 13-year-old Greenbelter Ryan McMullin, was named Best Documentary. Both script and well-edited filming highlight with grace and affection Ryan's view of his younger sister, Katelin, balancing a busy life while living Best Animation prize went to When Guinea Pigs Go Bad by 12-year-old Jack Zakowitz and 14-year-old Zack Yokel of Greenbelt. The tongue-in-cheek humor is refreshing.

A special prize for Most Creative Use of Materials went to Kleena Areena by Christopher Wolf-Pitts of Greenbelt. These and other animation shorts showed a rich variety of art and story; they were done in GATE/ GAVA classes taught by instructor, George Kochell.

Kochell is readying the film collection for broadcast on Greenbelt's TV Channel B-10 within the next two weeks. The GAVA/GATE broadcast will be announced in this paper.

Arts and Crafts furniture family.

The furniture became so popular with Greenbelters that production could not keep up with demand. In addition to the furniture store in the space now occupied by the corner mini mart in the Roosevelt Center Mall, some furniture was stored in a metal warehouse that had been used during construction of Greenbelt. Peel states that "Residents could try out the furniture in their homes..." and if they didn't like it could exchange it

First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt expressed interest in the furniture and praised the designs. A number of magazines also praised the furniture. A 1937 issue of House Beautiful wrote: "The beauty of the Resettlement furniture is not the self conscious 'arty' type, but functional and therefore living and real. Its freshness and simplicity have grown out of the very limitations imposed upon the designers. Thus even the pinch of the penny was turned into a virtue."

for others.

The Greenbelt Museum, at 10-B Crescent Road, contains original furniture that exhibits each of the types of wood used as well as many of the styles. Peel concludes her research paper by noting that people who still own Greenbelt furniture treasure it and pass it on to their children and grandchildren. Others covet it and desire to purchase some pieces for their pleasure.

Peel concludes with an enthusiastic endorsement: "This well-designed, classically durable furniture has already lasted more than 60 years and is being used by the fourth generation of original Greenbelters."

Greenbelt CARES

The week of June 11 Wendy Wexler reported that the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) hosted its second ACE Reading Club Reception. Three "readers" shared personal thoughts on the value of reading and then read one of their personal favorites. These included Frances Glendening (First Lady of the State of Maryland), Alan Turnbull (Greenbelt Mayor Pro-Tem) and John Henry Jones (a Greenbelt senior citizen). Videotaped book reviews of the children played in two corners of the room, while written reviews and book-related artwork were posted throughout. It was an impressive presentation of the efforts put into the program by the students, teachers, parents and ACE coordinator, Carol Mealey.

Red Light Cameras: Questions & Answers

Red light cameras have been installed and are now operating in Greenbelt.

The Greenbelt Police Department has provided answers to the following questions on red light enforcement.

Q: I wasn't driving the vehicle, do I still have to pay?

A: The civil citation is assessed against the registered owner of the vehicle, not the driver.

Q: What happens if I don't pay the fine?

A: The vehicle registration will be flagged or suspended.

Q: Can I make payments?

A: You have 45 days from I

A: You have 45 days from the date of the incident to make a payment on the original notice. If full payment is not made, a second notice will be issued, which allows an additional 30 days. If again you do not make full payment, a final notice will be issued, allowing an additional 30 days. Therefore there is a total of 105 days to make complete payment. There are no late fees assessed at this time.

Q: Can I make a payment by credit card?

A: No, payment must be made in the form of cash, checks or money orders.

Q: The light was yellow when I entered the intersection; your camera must be wrong.

A: The camera does not take a picture if the light is yellow. The light must be red for 1/10 of a second before it is activated.

Q: Are any points assessed on my driver's license?

A: No, this is a civil citation. No points are assessed and the incident may not be considered in insurance coverage.

Q: Can I go to court for this citation?

A: Yes, you may request a court date. There are limited reasons in the law which make a vehicle exempt; for instance: being part of a funeral procession, or being waved through an intersection by a police officer.
