Agency Reps Walk Metroland To Assess Project Impacts

by Virginia Beauchamp

There are many entities with an interest in the effect of development on the environmentally sensitive land that comprises part of the tract on which the proposed Greenbelt Station will be built. On Wednesday, August 15, a walk-through of the site of the proposed development was done by their representatives.

Citizens to Conserve and Restore Indian Creek (CCRIC) was formed specifically to advocate for preservation of the wetlands, flood plain, and braided streams that form the environment of Indian Creek which flows through the tract. The City of Greenbelt, from its founding, has been an advocate for environmental preservation.

On the state level, the Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE) and the Maryland Department of Natural Resources have responsibility in these matters; on the federal level, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (Corps) and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service also have authority to issue or deny permits for development impacting wetlands.

Other agencies also have an interest in possible development of the Metro and A. H. Smith tracts on which Greenbelt Station will be built. The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission oversees and makes recommendations on all development proposals in the region. The Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) is primarily concerned as overseer of the Metro station, and the State Highway Administration, which will be involved in any road building generated by the development must both scrutinize and conform to environmental guidelines.

Representatives of all these agencies, plus McCarthy & Associates, Inc., environmental consultants for Metroland; other members of the development team; and Greenbelt's consultant on environmental matters, Kevin Kelly of ESA, Inc., did the joint walk-through to assess the issues raised if the Greenbelt Station proposal goes ahead. The information that follows was taken from Kelly's report to the city on this walk-through.

Failed Mitigation Site

When the Greenbelt Metro station was built, wetlands were disturbed, which, according to federal regulations, must be replaced with a new, and larger, area of artificially created wetlands. Both off-site and on-site areas were set aside for this purpose. The walk-through participants noted that the state has apparently never monitored the 14acre off-site mitigation area which Bob Cooper of MDE declared must be shown to be functioning properly. An early September meeting was proposed for this determination.

On the other hand, the on-site mitigation area has never worked and must be moved to a new location. The developers would like to move it to the adjacent property in the eastern section that now belongs to the state. MDE and the Corps representatives appeared to be satisfied with the suggested site, according to Kelly's report, although both were concerned that the developers had not yet received state permission to use the property in this way.

Forest Flood Plain

According to the plans drawn up for the mixed-use development, a section of forest floodplain would be used for building construction. Not so, said Cooper. The site in question contained "mature forest," whose use the MDE, would never approve for building construction. They might, however, approve road crossings if the impact were minimal, he said.

This newspaper is being prepared on a day of infamy, September 11, the day of terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon in Washington. Our staff is numbed, shocked and saddened by the day's events and concerned for the safety and welfare of all those placed in the way of harm. Our hearts go out to all the victims and their loved ones. We pray that our leaders will have the wisdom and the strength to lead us in this time of turmoil and disaster into a safer and more secure world and that all those in the world who believe in peace and the fellowship of man and their leaders will support us in this effort.

Despite our anger and turmoil, we must not let the terrorists take control of us. It is important that we fight to preserve all that is near and dear to our hearts and to maintain and nourish all the institutions of our democracy that we cherish. Small as it is in the scheme of things, the weekly publication of our newspaper represents one of the expressions of our freedom that must be preserved.

Police Extend Shifts To Beef Up Patrols

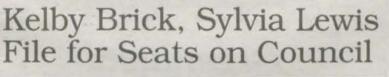

by Mary Moien

In light of Tuesday's attacks on the Pentagon and the World Trade Center in New York City, the Greenbelt Police Department has stepped up patrols and visibility within the city as a precautionary measure. MPO George Matthews, Press Information Officer, Greenbelt Police, indicated that they are currently working a "modified shift" that will allow more officers to be on patrol. All officers are being called in to work. Police Chief James Craze advised that the department was not aware of any threats or special problems in Greenbelt.

The U.S. Park Police requested and the department made available the city's armored rescue vehicle and crew. Craze reported that the vehicle had been stationed at the perimeter of the Pentagon. Matthews noted that the department was cooperating with other law enforcement organizations in the area.

Craze was in Ocean City attending an annual meeting of the Maryland Chiefs of Police when the attack occurred. The speaker at the time was an expert on terrorist bombings, according to Craze. Following the incidents, the remainder of the meeting was cancelled early Tuesday and all chiefs returned to their respective jurisdictions.

Due to the emergency, schools closed early and the fed-

The fourth person to file as a candidate this year for the Greenbelt City Council is Kelby Brick, a resident of Mandan Terrace. Brick, like Sylvia Lewis, who filed last week, is challenging the five incumbents.

Among these are Mayor Judith Davis, Thomas White, and Edward Putens. Rodney Roberts was in the process of filing on Tuesday, when the city offices closed because of the national emergency. Alan Turnbull, the fifth incumbent, has still to file. (Biographies of certified candidates will be published when received by the News Review.)

When Kelby and his wife were looking for a place to live, they were impressed with the way Greenbelt had not forgotten its past, as demonstrated in the strong sense of community.

He is the chairperson of the Greenbelt Public Safety Advisory Committee (found at www.ci.greenbelt.md.us) and a former board member of the Maryland Association of the Deaf (www.mdad.org) Kelby Brick

Before going into private practice, Brick worked as legal counsel for Government Affairs to the National Association of the Deaf, the oldest and largest organization representing people with disabilities in the United States. He has co-authored the book, "Legal Rights: the Guide for Deaf and Hard of Hearing People," and has also authored numerous articles in various publications.

GREENBELT NEWS REVIEW

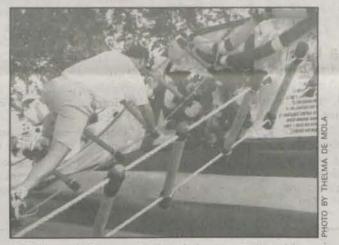

Editorial It Was a Great Festival But Funds Still Needed

In past years this newspaper commended all the volunteers who worked so hard under adverse weather conditions to make the Greenbelt Labor Day Festivals a great community event even if they failed to succeed financially. We would be remiss if we didn't also commend Festival Chair Patti Brothers and all those involved for a great Labor Day weekend this year when it was enhanced by almost perfect weather. While final figures are not in, the indications are that this year's event will be financially successful. That will be good news for all the organizations that rely on this annual event for fund raising.

That does not mean the festival itself will be out of the woods financially, however. It must make up for losses in two bad years. It also needs to build a better reserve for future multiple bad weather weekends. We understand that fund-raising efforts will continue. We encourage Greenbelters to be generous in their purchase of raffle tickets, souvenirs, sweets and gifts for the benefit of this great community get-together.

Springhill Lake Owners Describe Improvements

by Barbara Bonham Young

At a work session with Springhill Lake management officials on September 5, Greenbelt City Council members expressed pleasure with the large investment and many positive steps for improving Springhill Lake that were cited by David Zweig, senior vicepresident of AIMCO, which owns 70% of the complex. He said AIMCO invested $8 million in the complex last year, and that average occupancy has increased from 83% to 98%.

Zweig said $5.8 million has been invested in the complex this year through August, including $765,000 for structural upgrades, such as shoring foundations. Retrofitting the 7,600 windows in Springhill Lake is expected to start within eight months. Zweig also said the on-site shopping center and on-site day care center have both been renovated and revitalized, as has the long-vacant Fountain Lodge.

In addition, an empty lot has been renovated to be used for parking recreational vehicles, and Springhill Lake has entered into a towing contract with a local vendor who has removed all abandoned and illegally parked cars. In partnership with the Greenbelt police, the complex has realized a "significant" reduction in illegal activity, the managers said.

A 10-year lease has been signed with the county for a Head Start program in the Springhill Lake Day Care Center, Zweig added, and about $5,800 has been spent on what are called "signature" apartments - upgraded, more expensive units with new plumbing and electrical systems, upgraded appliances, cabinets, moldings, carpeting, and paint. Currently 63 "signature" units are rented. AIMCO receives a 15% return on this investment, Zweig said. Tenants pay from $100 to $300 per month in additional rent.

Mayor Judith Davis asked whether management continues to see the same amount of vandalism in Springhill Lake and whether it sees the complex as "a viable neighborhood." Resident Manager Michael Glass responded, "We still have vandalism, but we're getting a better quality of tenants, because of interactions with the police and because of efforts we've made to ensure better-quality tenants." He and Zweig characterized police as "very responsive." Just under 900 apartments are rented to students, Glass said, noting that he has met with University of Maryland campus life representatives to determine student needs.

Glass said the complex averages about 20 evictions per month and that there were over 700 evictions last year. He described the company's use of remediation wherever possible in order to avoid eviction, saying people who have paid their rent on time for the preceding six months may benefit from this "last chance" program. He also said he would see that Greenbelt police receive a list of vacant apartments.

Zweig expressed concern about the impact of the proposed Metroland development, particularly with respect to extra traffic and impact on wetlands. He expressed an interest in becoming a party of record in the matter and conferring with Beltway Plaza owners. City Manager Michael McLaughlin said he would provide information needed for an appeal.

Greenbelt Station property would have impacted some 3.5 acres, an area far too large for approval by MDE. As a result of this negative finding, the designers have reconfigured the roadway design, reducing the impact to less than half an acre. "Essentially, this road was moved away from the railroad tracks and now crosses the wetland and flood plain at their narrowest point," the report says.

New Interchange

For several years the planners and developers have believed that a new interchange from the Beltway would be necessary as Greenbelt Station is constructed. Such an interchange would have its own impact on the immediate environment. Currently, according to the representative from the Baltimore District of the Corps, the interchange is being treated as a separate application from that for the development itself. However, it plans "to review both projects together in order to conduct a cumulative evaluation," Kelly's report says. He quotes them as adding that this may not be their "final position."

At the present time, no permit applications have been filed for either project.

Safety Belt Poster Contest Announced

GEICO announces its 15th annual Safety Belt poster contest for public and private school students ages 6 to 15. Student participants will be judged in two age groups: 6 to 11 and 12 to 15.

The poster must convey the importance of using safety belts, and entries must be postmarked by January 11, 2002. Entries must not contain the Gecko television character so as not to distract from the seriousness of the safety message.

For each age group, entries within each of six geographical regions are judged against other posters from the same region. First-, second- and third-place prizes of $125, $75 and $50 are awarded in each region for each age group. From the regional first-place winners, one grandprize winner is chosen for each age group. Those artists each receive an additional $375, and their schools receive $500 worth of art supplies. The grand-prize winning posters will be reproduced and mailed to all schools of participating students and will be displayed in GEICO offices nationwide. Submitted posters will not be returned.

Child OK after Fall At Football Game

On Saturday, September 8, a one-year-old Capitol Heights girl fell from the bleachers during a football game at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. The infant, who fell approximately 10 feet to the ground, was unconscious but breathing. A Prince George's County Fire Department Emergency Medical Technician and a doctor, both on hand for the football game, cared for the child until ambulance personnel arrived on the scene. It was then determined that the child should be flown to Children's Hospital in Washington, D.C., for treatment. The football game, between Eleanor Roosevelt and Suitland, was delayed as a Maryland State Police helicopter landed on the field to transport the child. The child's injuries were minor, and the child was discharged later that day.

Festival Photos Show Fun Was Had by Young and Old

Those who attended Greenbelt's 47th Annual Labor Day Festival still have fond memories of good food, good fun and a strong sense of community. Photographs that document the event continue to be received. The following collage was taken by Sharon Natoli.

Tony Iacone and Norma Van Allen (foreground) keep busy posting their Bingo cards in hopes they might have a winner.

These two tykes patiently wait with the crowd at Crescent and Southway for the parade to begin.

By most counts, this year's festival appears to have been a great success. But financial losses in previous years, mean that there is still more fundraising to be done. Readers are asked to be generous in their continued support in order that Greenbelt can host the same kinds of events in the future.

A Traveler's Impression of Greenbelt and GHI

by Ciccie Jisborg

In July, two people from a Swedish housing co-op, HSB National Federation, Sweden, came to visit Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI). This is a short report of their visit to Greenbelt.

from the subway that takes us from Washington to Greenbelt is all the greenery. When we exit the subway station, we are surprised to see how clean and nice the surroundings are. We sit down and wait for Altoria Bell Ross to come and meet us. The visit in Greenbelt was set up by her and the co-workers at the main office of National Cooperative Business Association and the National Association of Housing Cooperatives yesterday. We are both excited to see this housing coop, although we don't really know what to expect. Ross arrives at the station with her son and she drives us to the GHI office. At the office, we are welcomed by General Manager Gretchen Overdurff and some of the co-workers. We say goodbye to Ross and her son and after showing us the office, Overdurff sits down with us to tell us about Greenbelt and GHI. We also get to see the history of GHI from a slideshow. The history of GHI is remarkable and really something to be proud of. Also, it's

The first thing we notice an obligation to tend for the future generations.

> Sylvia Lewis then arrives at the office to pick us up and take us for a drive through the area. The parts we see are all very nice. Greenery is surrounding us everywhere. I think about how beautiful surroundings affect your whole life. At the museum, we get to see what an original home from the '30s looked like. We step into this world of the '30s and I feel a bit like a time-traveler. We cast an admiring look at the view from the little porch and garden in the back of the house, which shows us a common relaxing view.

> We finish our too-short visit at Greenbelt with a lunch at the coop café in the town center. The atmosphere is relaxed. A lot of people seem to know each other, and we hear from the staff at the café about all the activities they set up together with the residents.

> The strongest impression from GHI is that it is really amazing to see what a difference people can make when they work together to reach a goal. The people here in Greenbelt seem to have the overall goal to provide fulfilling liv ing conditions for everybody that lives here. Efforts have been put down to make the area safe and nice for everybody. It's not only about the housing - it's about all the parts of living! The walk to and from school for children that is separated from the traffic, the possibilities of recreation among the green areas. the fitness center, the pools, the café, the supermarket ... everything is a testimony that people here in Greenbelt are truly cooperative in the best sense of the word; getting together to fulfill the dreams of a "good living." When Sylvia drops us at the subway station, I am one experience richer. After living in the States a short while some years ago, I saw a lot of different parts of the USA (I think I counted the states I visited to 12 or 13). Some really good places, some bad. But the visit at GHI was in its own league. And leaving Greenbelt. I feel like if I were going to live in the States, I definitely could picture myself living in GHI.

Hooked Wool Wall Hangings on Exhibit

Montpelier Resident Artist Roslyn Logsdon will be exhibiting her latest wool, hooked wall hangings in the Montpelier Cultural Art Center's Resident Artist Gallery. The exhibit will run through September 28. The galleries are free and are open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week.

Rug hooking, a craft indigenous to America, is made by pulling woolen strips through a burlap or linen backing creating dense spaces of loops.

To The One I Love We're lying in bed. A million thoughts in my head. When you ask me what's on my mind. As I look of into space. With a silly smile on my face, this is all I can reply. I'm thinking of The first time I looked into your eyes, how I was paralyzed The first time I kissed your lips or placed my hands on your hips and we danced our first slow dance together. I'm thinking of The first time I saw you how I thought love at first sight had come true The first time you held my hand the first time I heard you say I was your man. I was so proud that we had come together. I'm thinking of The first time I woke up in your arms. Now I thought there couldn't be another love as strong as ours is together.

I wrote this poem about a month ago To's furny how quickly things can change I haven't held you in my arms or talked to you In the past five days. Every relationship has its problems. Everybody makes mistakes It takes time for me to change. I'm not asking your forgiveness. I'm asking you not to forget what we've had together And to tell you one more time. FOGM Sets Annual Meeting, Book Signing, Chautauqua

by Sandra A. Lange

The annual meeting of the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum will be Thursday, September 20, 7:30 p.m., at the Greenbelt Municipal Building. Members and friends are invited to share their ideas on current and future museum activities. The highlight of the evening will be the presentation of a donation to the FOGM Founder's Club by Greenbelt High School alumni classes. The public is invited.

Founders' Club

The FOGM board recently established a new category of donations - The Founders' Club - for individuals or organizations that want to make a one time tax deductible gift of $1,000 or more. The Founders' Club honors Greenbelt pioneers who came to the model town in the late 1930s; "first families" of Defense (frame) homes who came to Greenbelt in the early 1940s; cooperatives and other business firms; and who made citizens Greenbelt a profound success over six decades.

Founders' Club donations go into the Endowment Fund which is used primarily for paid internships, and matching grant funds for new exhibitions and programs. Founders' Club donors will have their names permanently displayed in the Community Center. For more information on the Founders' Club, contact Barbara Havekost, 301-474-6369.

Book Signing

FOGM and the Greenbelt branch of the Prince George's County Library are co-sponsoring a book signing on Saturday, October 6, 1 p.m., at the Greenbelt Library, for Dr. Cathy Knepper's new book, Greenbelt Maryland: A Living Legacy of the New Deal. The book combines historical materials with new interpretations of life in Greenbelt from its pioneer days to the present. Also, librarian Elizabeth Wilkins will make a PowerPoint presentation on the Tugwell Room, the library's special collection of resources dedicated to Greenbelt's history. The Greenbelt Museum, 10-B Crescent Road, will be open for special Saturday hours, 1 to 4 p.m.

Chautauqua

In cooperation with the City of Greenbelt's Millennium Task Force, the Greenbelt Museum will sponsor a Chautauqua on the history of Greenbelt East on Saturday, October 13, at the SchromFest, Schrom Hills Park. This program is part of the neighborhood theme suggested by the White House Millennium Council. It is the last in the series of Chautauquas held in various parts of Greenbelt that illustrate how neighborhoods have developed over the years. Previous Chautauquas focused on the development of Springhill Lake and Historic Greenbelt.

Washington Post Article

The August 26 issue of The Washington Post Magazine featured an article on three planned communities, Greenbelt, Reston, Virginia and Kentlands in Montgomery County. Entitled The Utopia Next Door, the article discusses the desire of people to live in cohesive neighborhoods within suburban communities. The author notes that today's "smart growth" and "New Urbanism" principles are ideas originally conceived in the 1930s by Greenbelt's town planners and in the 1960s by Robert E. Simon, Jr., the developer of Reston. Today, planners are touting ideal communities which include open green spaces, clustered housing, community centers, a blend of residential and commercial buildings where people can walk to activities and get to know their neighbors. Greenbelt has epitomized the "smart growth" community since 1937. Also in The Washington Post, sometime in the fall, the Sunday comic strip Flashbacks by cartoonist Patrick Reynolds will feature Greenbelt's history.
