THE WEEK THAT CHANGED THE WORLD

by Marat Moore

On Sunday evening, September 16, as darkness fell, the people of Greenbelt and nearby communities gathered at Buddy Attick Park. As parking spaces filled, people parked on side streets and walked slowly to the lake. Most were in family groups, and many carried flags, large and small, and made their way with flashlights. At the park, they received candles, and gradually the sloping bank was transformed into a glowing quilt of light. With prayer, song, and brief statements, an interfaith service reflected on the September 11 terrorist assault, which brought fear and death to Americans. Many faiths were represented, and the speakers addressed our common pain, and the need to unite and give solace to those in need.

Barely a week earlier, also during a spell of bright September weather, Greenbelt held its annual Labor Day celebration. On the day of the parade, families parked on the same side streets and walked from their cars or from their homes to Crescent Road, carrying lawn chairs, cameras, and drinks. The mood was light-hearted, and children scampered after candy tossed from the parade floats.

Two gatherings, very different in nature, only days apart. But as the candles illuminated the faces of children, I felt a seed of hope for the future, despite the uncertainty of what is to come.

"I'm very proud of Greenbelt and how our residents responded to the tragedy. I'm also very proud of how our police, fire, and public works departments rose to the occasion as well. The vigils and memorial services were heart-warming and comforting and were opportunities for all parts of our community to have solace and share their feelings with others.

Prayer began in Greenbelt as soon as the news of terrorist attacks came in. The first organized service was announced Tuesday afternoon on a sandwich board posted at the corner of Crescent and Hillside outside the Greenbelt Community Church. That evening, the day of the attack, the church bells rang as Greenbelters gathered inside for silent prayer.

The following evening, Wednesday, the largest individual service took place at Mishkan Torah Synagogue. As many as 200 people filled the sanctuary to pray. They chose Wednesday night for their service feeling that Tuesday night people would want to be in their own homes. This service, then, was "an opportunity for people to grieve with the expanded community," according to a synagogue member. Prayers of mourning and prayers for martyrs were intoned by the cantors. Residents Cite Roosevelt Center As Haven for Destructive Groups

The entire Greenbelt City Council was present to hear an end-of-year report from school resource police officers at the regular council meeting on September 10. But at the conclusion of the officers' presentation, residents and business people raised serious concerns about safety in Roosevelt Center. Police remained to hear the discussion which followed their presentation.

Lieutenant Michael Craddock told council that the FBI is investigating the recent Credit Union robbery and that he will inform the city manager of any developments in the case. He noted that in the past, Officer George Mathews had tried to hold a meeting with business people in the Center, but they couldn't afford to leave their businesses. "We will try to schedule a meeting that is convenient for them," Craddock said, adding, "I think we need to jump on this right away.

Sylvia Lewis was born in England. She was a young child in East London during World War II and survived the Blitz and the later V-1 and V-2 rocket attacks. After graduating from the London School of Economics she decided to see the world. She got a job as a "mother's helper" and arrived in New York City with $10 and a one way ticket to Indianapolis. After deciding to make her permanent home in the U.S., she received a scholarship for graduate studies at Indiana University School of Social Work.

For several years after her marriage to the Reverend Robert J. Lewis and the birth of their two children, Sylvia concentrated on being a mother and minister's wife. In 1968 the family moved from Bethesda to Greenbelt, so Sylvia Lewis Lewis took a position as director of Youth Services with the Prince George's County Chapter, American Red Cross and nine years later was named executive director of the chapter. Through these positions she gained extensive experience in supervising staff, training and working with youth and adult volunteers, developing and managing a $1 million plus budget, assessing community needs, overseeing health and safety. programs and emergency and disaster services.

Letters to the Editor

Greenbelters Come Forward

I would like to thank all of the individuals who contributed to the Labor Day Festival's fundraising for the American Red Cross this past weekend at the Co-op. All proceeds from the patriotic T-shirt sales will be donated to the American Red Cross as well as all monetary donations that were received. The total raised over the weekend was a very generous $1,535.75. This is an indication of the very compassionate individuals that we call our neighbors. This tragedy has affected each and every one of us and this weekend was evidence of this community's willingness to help. As a thank you, I would like to share the following poem.

September 11th We won't forget that day When you all lost your lives For you now we pray

Tears in our eyes For loved ones we lost And pain in the hearts Of the people who watched

So please take some time To think of those who died And pray for those who suffer And for those who have cried.

Advertising Fees To Be Increased

The costs of producing this newspaper have increased substantially. The Board of Directors of the Greenbelt News Review reluctantly is increasing our advertising rates. effective November 2. There will also be some charges imposed for artwork, for the set up of new ads and for making changes on ads over three column inches.

The basic charge for display ads will be increased to $8.10 per column inch with a minimum charge of $12.15 for the smallest size ad. Discounts are offered for volume advertising.

Classified ads will now cost $3 for the first 10 words, and the charge per word of 15 cents will remain the same.

It is the policy of the Greenbelt News Review to keep our advertising rates low, but sufficient to cover the costs of producing the newspaper. Although we are legally a profit making cooperative, we do not seek to make a profit, but, instead, just meet our expenses.

Golden Age Club by Ruth Huggins

President Bill Souser presided over the September 12 meeting. Shep Odom led members in prayer for the victims and rescuers at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. Souser also led members in a salute to the flag.

In the absence of Sunshine Chair, Betty Down, her report was read by Ruth Huggins. Down sent notes of cheer to Al Geiger, recovering from heart surgery, and Lenny Holohan, recovering from a virus. A letter from Teresa Scullen was read thanking Golden Agers for their thoughtfulness.

Souser announced events for the following dates: September 21, Music and Moments with Chris Cherry 1 to 3 p.m.; and September 28, senior picnic, Watkins Park. Register with Iris, cafeteria manager at the Community Center.

Travel Chair John Taylor urged those interested to see the Travel committee and sign up for the following trips: one seat is left for the October 9 to 11 trip to Parkersburg, W. Va.; November 13 - Frederick, Md., a trip to see Mt. Olivet Cemetery, the National Museum of Civil War Medicine, the historic district and the Frederick brewery. Lunch is on one's own; November 20, Syria and Maritime exhibits at the Delaware waterfront; December 6 to 7, trip to New York City.

The 50/50 raffle winners were Pauline Bordas and Arlene Harbaugh. The speaker on September 12 was Susan King, R.N., of Morningside House, Laurel. Her topic was "Colds and Flu." She handed out literature and urged Golden Agers to get flu shots. Julie Boone, marketing director, handed out door prizes to Ima Davis and John Henry Jones.

The third Wednesday of each month there's a birthday party. The speaker at the September 26 meeting will be County Councilwoman Audrey Scott.

Changes to Come At Recycling Center

In keeping with the city's commitment to recycling, the City of Greenbelt recently contracted with SP Recycling Corporation for collection of newspapers, mixed paper, magazines and cardboard from the Recycling Drop Off Center at Buddy Attick Park. SP Recycling will provide new collection bins and weekly service at no cost to the city. The new collection bins will be accessible by ground level, making it easier and safer for residents to use them. Additionally, SP Recycling will pay current market value on the recyclables collected - currently $25 per ton for newspapers, $5 per ton for magazines, but nothing for mixed paper and cardboard.

The cost savings to the city will be approximately $2,000 annually.

The old collection bins will be removed Tuesday, September 25 and the new bins delivered on Thursday, September 27. Temporary collection containers will be located at the Recycling Center during the transition.

Residents can also recycle aluminum cans, glass bottles, plastics, car batteries, antifreeze, used motor oil and filters at the Recycling Drop Off Center.

A day that will be remembered forever

On September 11, our nation suffered a terrible tragedy which has touched all of us. We mourn for the innocent victims whose lives have been cruelly and needlessly lost. This tragedy has created hundreds of fallen heroes, thousands of victims and grieving families, and a nation united in determination and righteous anger.

Our family, like many others, has been directly affected by this horrific incident. Many families in and around Greenbelt have lost relatives, friends, or co-workers who served at the Pentagon or worked at the World Trade Center. To all those families, we extend our sincerest sympathy, our thoughts, and our prayers.

In these troubled days, police and firefighters in New York and at the Pentagon have reminded us that public service is not just a job but a commitment to people and to higher principles. This reminds us also to acknowledge and appreciate the men and women in our own police and fire departments whose public service means being first to respond in time of crisis, often at the risk of their own lives.

We also offer encouragement to those volunteers who have donated their

We thank the Greenbelt Clergy Association for bringing hundreds of us together for the candlelight vigil last Sunday. In this hour of remembrance we were reminded not to confuse our many Muslim neighbors, or the vast majority of Muslims around the world, with murderers corrupting Islam for their evil schemes.

Church also had a large congregation for their prayer service that evening.

Friday was designated as a national day of mourning and noon was set as a time for places of worship to participate. People came to all Greenbelt's places of worship around midday. At the Greenbelt Baptist Church, members held hands in the center aisle, offering spontaneous prayers and petitions to God, one after the other. At St. Hugh's Catholic Church several dozen parishioners knelt in the darkness praying silently. The daily morning Mass at St. Hugh's on Friday had been more heavily attended than usual, with Fr. Crowley offering special prayers for the victims, leaders, and the military.

Reverend Daehwa Park led a small service at the Mowatt Memorial Methodist Church. This was the only service with singing, including "Amazing Grace". Rev. Park stressed that "scripture empowered us," as he read from the Old and New testaments. Again at the Community Church as on Tuesday evening, people joined in silent and individual prayer and devotion.

Mishkan Torah was open for individual prayer on Friday, but Karen Dusold, the synagogue secretary, indicated that the Wednesday service was their main special service, and that prayers would also be said at the Sabbath (Friday evening) service.

Mayor Judith Davis visited many of the locations on Friday. "It was so heartwarming to see" all the services. She commended Reverend Dan Hamlin, pastor of the Greenbelt Community Church, for stepping forward to organize the Sunday evening candlelight vigil at Greenbelt Lake.

community that is "involved and safe." He is a resident of Lanham. However, he said, "I have noticed a change. . . something is happening. . . I have noticed within the last month or so, someone threw soda to the point where I had to wash the walls. I notice a strong urine and alcohol smell outside my store, and the profanity has increased. I have even told the kids that if they didn't use profanity, I would give them a free dessert. We have a responsibility to contribute, to help combat this issue. The kids need to see that we do care. . .

Daniel Kim, owner of the Mini-Mart, told the council, "I have children, and we have a beautiful garden [shrubbery in Roosevelt center]. One little kid who stays out there until midnight told me 'my father isn't home yet.' No one controls the young kids, and I hope for a good solution."

City Responds

"The good news," City Manager Michael McLaughlin told the council, "is that there is a group of merchants willing to work with us. We will get on it; we have got to find a way to engage those young people.'

Councilmember Alan Turnbull spoke forcefully, saying, "This is something I have been hearing about from various merchants. They want a preventive approach, and I want folks down there [at the Center] to know that various behaviors are not acceptable. We have heard this appeal more than a few times in the past four years, and I don't think we should try to fix this problem tonight, but we should come forward with some proposals."

Mayor Judith Davis said the council would have a work session on problems brought up by the residents and business people. Councilmem-ber Thomas White said he wants an assessment of the extent of vandalism.

"We need more police, not any more video monitors," said Councilmember Rodney Roberts, who claimed, "The view from the monitors is worthless right now, and we are giving people a false sense of security. The problem is, the Center is a public park, and there has always been a young generation down there, but now a different type of young people is out there. This is a problem for people, not cameras."

Responding to the mayor's hypothetical question as to whether someone could be told he or she couldn't come back to the Center, City Attorney John Shay reponded that "It would be very difficult." Shay noted that even using police as agents is coming under attack.

Center. Schools Report

School Resource officers Corporal David Buerger and Master Patrol Officer Marty Parker made a joint presentation. Buerger said he spends most of his time at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, while Parker works mostly at Greenbelt Middle School. Problems at ERHS have declined, Buerger said, ascribing most trouble to newer students and "outsiders" who come to the area to attend ERHS events.

Buerger said a lot of their efforts are paying off. "Last year, we had a one-day assembly for kids to come watch our entry team. We did a presentation of a student rescue, and there may be a new police academy at one of the high schools in the county," he said. On bike patrol, he said, "We ride around Springhill Lake and in the woods around the schools, and we talk to a lot of citizens. I even made a drunkdriving arrest while I was on my bicycle, and we thank you for funding the bike patrol."

Parker does a lot of teaching, and said he spends a lot of time in the Middle School lunchroom, which has five or six lunch sessions every day, because "If there's a problem, the kids will come and tell me about it." Parker teaches the DARE program and such topics as pedestrian safety and gun safety. He said that after school, "There are quite a few fights-one almost every day." He described a tour of the jail facility taken by six students from Springhill Lake Elementary who he feels "are going down the wrong path" and a picnic held in the police station for safety patrol students. The students were given a tour of the station and a K-9 demonstration. Gardenway Overpass

Davis and Turnbull told officers the council needs to know where the problems are, especially walking places. Buerger responded that police are doing 'a lot" of patrols at the Gardenway overpass. White suggested the "passive presence of an adult" would help. Roberts asked if the patrol at the overpass is permanent, and Buerger replied, "It is on a permanent basis at this time-someone is there every day, but we sometimes allocate our resources at other places, and calls for service have gone up. It's a very safe area, especially if we keep the shrubbery trimmed, and I think it's counterproductive to stay there all the time."

Edward Councilmember Putens complimented the officers on their positive impact, and suggested there may be need for another school resource officer in the future.

Obituaries

William S. Shields, Sr.

Greenbelt Pioneer William Stapler Shields, Sr., 85, died on Friday, September 14, 2001 at his home in College Park. Many early Greenbelters will remember him as "Bill, the friendly mailman." Back in the 1940's, in the days when families were at home more often, he knew most people on his route by name. Plates of fresh baked cookies or cool drinks often awaited him on his rounds. Children followed him like he was the Pied Piper, hoping for that occasional ride in his empty carrier bag at the end of his route.

Back in 1937, Bill and his wife "Nona" and two sons, Lee and Stape were one of the first families of President Roosevelt's federal planned community, Greenbelt. First residing at 43-C Ridge and then at 6-E Hillside, he left Greenbelt for College Park when the federal government sold the Greenbelt homes in 1952. He continued as a Greenbelt mailman until his retirement in 1968.

He also served as assistant scoutmaster in Greenbelt's Troop 229. Both Bill and Nona are members of the "Roosevelt Club" of Friends of the Greenbelt Museum.

Mr. Shields was a veteran, having served in the Panama Canal Zone during the latter stages of World War II. He also had been a member of the National Guard.

Born in Atlanta, Ga. on September 9, 1916, he was the son of the late Albert Lewis Shields and Katie Mae Barron Shields. He graduated from Central High School in Washington, D.C.

Preceded in death by his beloved wife, Winona, in August 1988 following 54 years of marriage, he is survived by his sister, Gretno Butler of Springfield, Va; daughters Faith Rodell, of College Park, and Penny Rothrock, of Jonesboro, Ga.; sons William S. Shields, Jr. formerly of Greenbelt and Dickerson, Md. and Lee Shields of Greenbelt; their spouses, Dorine Shields, Bonnie Shields and William Rothrock; 11 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at Holy Cross Lutheran Church, on Greenbelt Road, at 1 p.m. on Saturday, September 22. In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations to either the American Diabetes Association, 1701 North Beauregard Street, Alexandria, VA 22311 or the

by Rosie Rhubarb

The last, golden days of summer have gone, and autumn has begun. Over the next couple of weeks, the garden will suddenly change as the cooler nights and shorter days bring the growing season to an end. Right now the summer flower and vegetable garden look much as they have. Though there is some hard to define difference in the annual flower and vegetable plants, somehow they just don't look quite as lustrous as they had.

Several nice early autumn perennial flowers are blooming: sedum, asters, obedient plant, and bidens. Sedum is a very hardy plant with flower clusters that consist of many tiny flowers. A good display of them is at the entrance to and the side of the Community Center.

Asters look like little daisies about an inch wide. Yellow-centered with thin petals that almost look like string, they usually come in bright, cheery colors. These are a personal favorite, and I wish they were more widely planted. Many varieties bloom in late September and are a welcome addition to the garden when other flowers are blooming less abundantly. There are some cherry red ones near the post office, and a nice stand of pink ones at the entrance of 46 court Ridge Road.

Obedient plant is a hardy, native plant too seldom used in gardens. Each small flower looks like an open mouth and they line a 3-4 foot stalk. The effect is a tall stalk with a light purple section of flowers near the top. They bloom for weeks. Some can be seen in the yard at the corner of Hillside Road and Northway, which contains many perennial flowers which gives the effect of the English cottage garden.

Wildflowers

The last of the wildflowers that bloom in the open areas and parks are now blooming. Everybody knows goldenrod, but few bring its bright yellow beauty into the garden. One large plant proudly stands at the edge of a yard at 47 court of Ridge Road. The whitish flowers often seen blooming besides goldenrod are boneset.

My favorite is the daisyshaped bidens. It is that intense and brilliant shade of yellow seen in daffodils. They are in bloom in Schrom Hills Park along Hanover Parkway.

A huge mass of them is blooming between the federal courthouse and the beltway. They are hard to see from Cherrywood Lane (my best view was from a metro bus) but what a sight. There must be thousands of those bright yellow flowers.

I let them seed and grow where they like in my yard. They are tall and weedy, but there is a hybridized variety available.

ERHS Students Hold Vigil

by Mary Moien

"Still We Rise" shouted the banner behind the podium at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) at a vigil held on September 14. The ERHS Student Government Association (SGA) planned the service. Several hundred students, parents and community members were present. Principal Sylvester Convers told the News Review that he was very proud of the students who had initiated the idea and put the program together themselves. Big water bottles were passed around collecting money for the American Red Cross.

Taqwa Mahdi, SGA president, presided over the ceremony. Melissa Ryan led those gathered in singing the national anthem. Conyers spoke very briefly. He said that it should not take adversity to unite us but all should remain united and focused on the future and the good to be done.

the school and its students. He asked how many of those present felt like "the world will never be the same again." Many hands were raised. Emphasizing that it is true the world may never be the same, he said that does not have to be negative. There is a chance to make the world a better place.

Imam Dawud Mahdi of the Masjid Taqwa-An-Nur in Glenarden also spoke. He stressed the need to come together and commented on the many races present at the service. He also tried to ease the tension a little, making the students laugh a bit.

Posters on the wall announced a penny drive for the American Red Cross. Fourth graders prepared acrostic poems to describe how they feel about the United States of America. Counselors and crisis team members were made available to talk to students as a couple hundred parents lined up to take their children home. These are some of the activities that occurred last week at Greenbelt Elementary School in the aftermath of the attacks on the Pentagon and the World Trade Center. Tuesday, the school staff was monitoring events on television but there were no televisions on in the classrooms. The students were informed of the emergency; children were upset but calm. The school staff was prepared for a possible evacuation that mercifully did not occur. The school was inundated with calls from concerned parents, according to Melissa Rucker, secretary to school

In Shelly Lappi's 4th grade class, students employed poetry to express their feelings about their country. Their poems, which use the letters in "United States of America" as the first letters of each line, are now displayed on a hall bulletin board. A new Greenbelter, Shally Margolis, who recently moved here from Wyoming, wrote what was considered one of the best poems. The school system distributed information from the National Association of School Psychologists on helping children cope with terrorism. The handouts were sent home with each child. Among many recommendations, the two-page list encouraged parents and other adults to establish a sense of safety and security, to remain calm themselves, and to let children know that it is okay to feel upset. Parents were encouraged to limit the amount of television coverage that their children watched.

ERHS Crisis Center Responds

by Judi Moien

As a guidance counselor at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS), I started September 11 as a normal day – students to see, schedules to alter. That all changed just prior to 10 a.m. when the department chair called all counselors in to inform us about the devastating events occurring in New York, Pennsylvania and at the Pentagon. Shortly thereafter, our principal, Sylvester Conyers, addressed the faculty and student body with the devastating news.

Immediately, the Guidance Department became the crisis center. Many of our students' parents work in the nation's capital, for either the government or a private company. Many students came to Guidance to share their concerns about the parents' safety and to try to make contact. Needless to say, those that were able to locate their parents via telephone were immediately relieved. Others remained under stress when they were unable to make contact.

Throughout the shortened day, many parents chose to pick their students up at school. Fortunately, to the best of my knowledge, there were no victims in the Roosevelt family. Upon returning to school on Thursday, all counselors maintained their availability to students who were concerned about the national situation.

On Thursday, a reporter from The Washington Post interviewed students about their feelings and experiences. Friday brought television crews from "America's Most Wanted" and several students were interviewed regarding the incident. (The show aired on Saturday night, September 15. and included a brief segment with ERHS students. However, the school was not identified by name, only as a school in suburban Washington.) At noon on Friday, a minute of silence was observed by the entire staff and student body.

Friday evening a candlelight vigil was held, as suggested and planned by the Student Government Association. In addition to the 250 to 300 parents and students in attendance, Dr. Iris Metts and school board member James Henderson provided words of support.

Although this was a difficult experience for everyone, administrators, faculty, counselors and students showed what a caring community we truly have at Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Waiting by the Phone . . .

Army Staff Sgt. Nathan P. Jones, born and raised in Greenbelt, enlisted during his senior year at Roosevelt High School. This June, he left Fort Bragg, N. C. (where he served as a legal N. C. O., paratrooper and jumpmaster) for his new post, the Pentagon.

On Tuesday, my husband John Henry, as usual, switched on the kitchen radio while he made the coffee. I woke when he yelled up the stairs, "Elaine, turn on the TV!" I saw New York and then heard "Pentagon." We called Nate's office, then his cell phone. There was no answer. I sat on the edge of the bed, fielding a flood of incoming calls with "We haven't heard from him yet," not taking my eyes off the screen, listening to "breaking news" with my other ear. John stayed downstairs, pacing around, in and out of the house, carrying the cordless phone.

principal Katherine Curl. Curl indicated that rolling lunches were served and that PTA president Becky Roper and others helped with a smooth departure. Parents were required to bring positive identification with them if they wanted to pick their children up early.

The school was closed on Wednesday. When students came on Thursday, Principal Curl talked to them about "empathy, respect, and problem solving." The crisis team was still available but it appeared that no students required its assistance. In Thomas Lenhart's class, a student suggested a penny drive and the whole school adopted the idea. Our daughter, Corita, called from her National Park Service office: "We're evacuating and I'm heading for the Metro."

Our other son, Nicholas, called from the Census Bureau: "We've evacuated but the parking lot's gridlock." Finally, around 1 p.m., Nathan called: "I'm okay. It was like an earthquake, before the smoke...we evacuated. I walked my staff (all women civilian employees) over here to Rosslyn and sent everybody home." He sounded numb, tense, drained.

September 14 was Nathan's 26th birthday and we longed to see him, either here or at his Fort Myer apartment. He said, "No, I'm too tired to do anything but sit here and take care of [his son] Dre. We'll do the birthday later." That evening, Corita, John and I sang Happy Birthday over the phone and told him we loved him. "Love you, too," he said. "T'm going to bed now."

GREENBELT NEWS REVIEW

CITIZENS UNITE IN A WIDE VARIETY OF EFFORTS Greenbelt's Firefighters Battle City Police Officers Assist The Flames at the Pentagon On the Scene At Pentagon by Mary Moien

Attack on the Pentagon

by Deputy Sheriff II James P. McMichael, Arlington Sheriff's Department

Tuesday, September 11, 2001 started out as a normal day for this Greenbelt resident who works in Arlington. It was a beautiful day; my co-workers and I had made many comments about wishing we could be outside to enjoy it. In the Arlington County Courthouse that day we were awaiting the beginning of the morning court docket. Deputy R.C. Daley and I were assigned to the Circuit Court of Arlington County.

At approximately 0930 hours a gentleman in the gallery told me that an airplane had flown into the World Trade Center. At first I thought it was an accident, but within a few minutes my worst fears were verified. A second plane, I was advised, had just crashed into the other World Trade Center building. I turned to my partner and said, "We are next, we are going to be hit." Suddenly a loud and insistent tone came across the radio: "All units be advised we have reports the Pentagon is on fire," and seconds later "Dispatch, be advised a plane has hit the Pentagon."

I cannot begin to describe the combination of fear, adrenalin, and shock that ran through my body. I ran to the back area of the courtroom and looked out the window. The Pentagon was nothing more than a large cloud of smoke. We immediately evacuated the courthouse. In the confusion I ran into a sergeant who threw me a set of keys and said, "Get out there, I don't know where you need to go, just go."

I left the building and was immediately running code (driving with lights and sirens on) to the Pentagon. It was mass confusion - ambulances, fire trucks, police cruisers everywhere. As civilians were fleeing the Pentagon area, a soldier ran up to me frantically saying he was part of the bomb squad at Fort Myer and needed a ride to the base. After transporting him to his post, I stationed myself on 1-395 North directly across from the Pentagon. People were running everywhere and we were trying to get them to safety while watching in horror and disbelief as the Pentagon burned and filled the air with a smell I cannot describe and will never forget.

James P. McMichael

Pentagon," were the next words I heard. "I'm going to die here" was all that ran through my head. I turned to my partner and uttered, "We are going to die here," and he just nodded. Suddenly something 1 never thought about before as an officer was now a reality, my life flashed before my eyes and I thought of my wife and my family.

That plane never came, nor did they come the several other times I heard those same words over my radio. I spent the remainder of the day at the Pentagon, watching the destruction and carnage

What I saw that day and the days following was the worst tragedy the country has ever seen; yet I saw people come together in a way that could never have been imagined. Not only law enforcement, fire fighters, military personnel, and EMS, but regular citizens willing to give their blood, sweat, tears, and possibly their lives to help people they may or may not have known. I saw judges run food and water to triage areas, restaurants and stores supplying food and drinks, and news helicopters flying in police and rescue workers. It was something amazing to be a part of and to watch.

September 11, 2001 will be remembered as a day of great tragedy, but also a day the country came together as one. As we watched rescue workers unroll our flag from the top of the Pentagon, I remember shedding my ing temporary No Parking signs first tears since the beginning of in their parking lot. Following the horrific tragedy at the Pentagon on Tuesday, September 11, off-duty officers from various divisions of the Greenbelt Police Department have had a presence at the 16-acre site. The department's press officer, George Mathews, explained on Monday that officers were on the scene from last Friday to Monday and were expected to remain at their posts the remainder of this week.

"Our officers were climbing over each other to volunteer for this," Mathews exclaimed. Those who volunteered worked 12-hour shifts directing traffic entering and exiting the Pentagon grounds, checking credentials, and directing military, medical, Red Cross, and Salvation Army personnel and the media to specific staging areas. Mathews was touched by the outpouring of support from citizens who brought clothing, food, beverages and other necessities "to make sure that those working throughout the days and nights were taken care of."

Members of the department's emergency response unit and the armored personnel carrier also provided perimeter security for the Pentagon. On the scene also for a twelve-hour shift last Friday night was Greenbelt Police Chief James Craze, who was at the site's command post with Arlington County officials and their chief of police. Craze said, "It was an honor to be there to serve our country and help people."

Public Works On High Alert

by Judy Bell

According to Kenny Hall, Greenbelt's director of the Department of Public Works, staff has been on "high alert" duty since September 11. "Everyone was kind of uneasy as to the possibilities of any more attacks," stated Hall. Hall's definition of high alert was to "look for anything out of the ordinary, any unusual packages or suspiciouslooking people."

Public Works crews also assisted Armory personnel in plac-

September 11 began as a regular workday for Randy Krob, chief, Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department. Like most of the volunteers, Krob also has a paying job. He was working there in Chevy Chase when his boss called him telling him that all firefighters were to report to their stations immediately due to the emergency.

When Krob reached Greenbelt, he discovered that the DC Fire Department had asked for Greenbelt's assistance because most of the DC equipment was being sent to the Pentagon. Part of the Greenbelt volunteer staff, along with engine 352 and the chief's vehicle, transferred to DC Fire Station 8 to assist there. Krob and eight additional members of the Greenbelt volunteers went to DC, although many more wanted to go.

Krob did not want to single them out by name as all of the volunteers were involved, either by staying and staffing the Greenbelt station or by going to He felt that both were DC. equally important. He empha-sized that Greenbelt was always fully covered.

Five Prince George's volunteer fire departments were assisting the District in the South East area. They included Greenbelt, Branchville, Morningside, Kentland and Cottage City, as well as one company from Montgomery County. Greenbelt ran several calls in the District while they were assigned there in mid-morning

Suddenly, about noon, a third alarm was sounded in DC, and the Greenbelt contingent, with one DC fireman assigned to them, and all of the other county volunteers, found themselves heading to the Pentagon.

Krob emphasized that they were one of the first companies to actually attack the fire in the Pentagon. They were at the building from about 12:15 to 8 p.m. His volunteers were the first to try to secure one segment of the second floor of the Pentagon, actually driving some of their equipment into the central courtyard and laying lines (hoses) and heading into the building from the courtyard. They made four forays into the Pentagon and spent about three full hours in fire fighting. After each foray, they regrouped outside for water and to replenish air. Krob was in charge of interior operations in this section of the building, reporting to a safety liaison outside all that they encountered on the inside.

The Greenbelters were relieved about 8 p.m. However, their hoses were connected to a Branchville pumper truck that remained on duty until early the next morning. The Greenbelt hose equipment is still in the Pentagon.

Krob commented that the heat was unbearable and the death and destruction that they saw when first entering the building was horrible. The building was much bigger than imagined and of a construction much more complex than the Greenbelters. who are used to fighting house fires, were used to. Krob stated that "the devastation was unbelievable from the inside.'

Luckily, there were no serious injuries to the crews. One Cottage City firefighter was treated for minor injuries. One Greenbelt volunteer had a face cut that required three stitches, but he did not leave his post and the injury was treated only after they stopped fighting the fire.

Green Ridge House Holds Vigil

by Mary Moien

More than 50 residents gathered in the garden at Green Ridge House on Friday, September 14 for a candlelight vigil and moment of silence. The timing of the vigil was set to coincide with an "around the world candle lighting" at 7 in the evening. The program was put together by Hazel Parent, vice president of country in many ways and will continue to do so." Mayor Judith Davis, who had just come from the Eleanor Roosevelt High School vigil service, briefly addressed the group. She reported that both the Greenbelt Fire Department and Police Department had been involved in rescue work at the Pentagon. "It warms my heart," she said, "to see all the flags and people dressed in red, white, and blue."

The group ended the vigil by singing "God Bless America." It sounded so good, they repeated it twice.

Blood Drive Attracts Many Donors

by Janet Goldberg

The American Red Cross and the Greenbelt Recreation Department are grateful for the overwhelming turnout of blood donors at the blood drive on Friday, September 14. Eighty-two people were processed and more than 50 people without appointments were turned away because there was not enough equipment available to handle them. University of Maryland and Eleanor Roosevelt High School students, volunteers and Red Cross personnel also made outstanding contributions to the drive: the Giant Food store at Beltway Plaza donated orange juice and cookies.

Drive Continues The next blood drive in Greenbelt will take place on Friday, November 9, at the Greenbelt Community Center gym from 1 to 6 p.m. Blood is expected to be in short supply again and evervone is encouraged to participate.

Call Janet Goldberg of the Recreation Department at 301-397-2212 for an appointment.

Based on information released by the Greenbelt Police Department. Dates and times are those when police were first contacted about incidents.

Armed Robbery

No. Contractor

6600 block Lake Park Drive in Greenbelt East, September 12, 11:51 p.m., a woman was walking from her vehicle to her home when another vehicle pulled alongside her. A man left that vehicle, displaying a handgun and demanding the woman's purse. After he obtained it, he got back into the vehicle, which was being driven by another man, and they fled the scene. Suspects are a black male, thin, medium complexion, wearing a black "hoodie" and black sweat pants, and a black male wearing a white shirt. The vehicle is described as a green and black two-door hatchback.

Assaults

Mobil gas station, Centerway, September 12, 6:33 a.m., a man entered the station, poured a cup of coffee, and ignored several requests by the cashier to pay. He then threw the coffee in the cashier's face and fled in a vehicle described as a black Ford Mustang with an unknown Maryland tag ending in the numbers 439. The suspect is described as a white male in his thirties, 5'10", wearing a white tee shirt with the words "Pit Bull" on it.

Area of Lakeside Drive and Lakecrest Drive in central Greenbelt, September 7, 7:53 p.m., the victim advised that a man assaulted him during an altercation between the victim and the man's child. An arrest warrant was obtained by the victim's parents. A resident of Westway was arrested and transported to the Department of Corrections for an open warrant.

6400 block Ivy Lane, September 11, 2:59 p.m., a Washington, D.C. resident was arrested and charged with assault, two counts of resisting arrest and possession of marijuana. Officers were trying to serve an arrest warrant onthe man when he tried to flee and assaulted an officer while being placed into custody. He was found to be in possession of a quantity of suspected marijuana and was released to the Department of Corrections for a hearing before a District Court Commissioner

An Unforgettable Trip . .

About an hour out of St. Louis on our way to BWI after a week-long family remnion in Iowa, we heard the pilot announce that we were landing in Louisville, Kentucky because two planes had been hijacked and the Pentagon had been bombed. We couldn't imagine what he was talking about and decided that probably it was a rumor or threat and we were landing as a precaution. Soon we learned the horror of the attack and found ourselves spening three days in Louisville watching TV and talking with strangers about what had happened.

Louisville wasn't a had place to be stranded. Everyone was helping one another. When Ray ran out of medicine, the local pharmacist gave us an emergency supply. Everyone at the airport was looking after one another. We learned other passengers' stories while waiting together. from the couple on their way to celebrate a 25th anniversary with an Alaskan eruise to the two young men on their way to the Coast Guard boot camp.

The TWA flight crew out of St Louis was stranded just as we were and we booked up again in Louisville. They promised to help us get on the plane. After several false starts and cancellations, we all got back to St. Louis and hours later headed again for BWI. In the process my nail file was confiscated in a search of my purse - I gladly surrendered it - and several times airport guards swarmed out to check a stray piece of luggage or set of golf clubs.

The security gates slammed shut a couple of times and security forces over walkie-talkies asked each other what was happening. It was confusing and unsettling, but people cooperated and nothing seemed too great an effort to make things safer. Most everyone felt that we were lucky and we were grateful to be safe and headed home. Finally, at 4 a.m. Friday, we arrived home in Greenbelt.

Stresses Nutrients

The speaker for the Beltsville Garden Club meeting on Wednesday, September 26 will be Dr. John Lee-Cox, University of Maryland. His topic will be Chesapeake Bay Preservation: Nutrient Management in the Nursery, Greenhouse and Home Garden.

This presentation will show how the professional grower and the home gardener can better manage the application of nutrients to achieve strong plant growth, while minimizing the escape of nutrients to the local environment and ultimately the Chesapeake Bay.

The Beltsville Garden Club meets at 7:30 p.m. at the Duckworth School at 11201 Evans Trail in Beltsville. (Evans Trail is the first street to the left, at the blinking yellow light, west of Interstate 95, off Powder Mill Road.) Refreshments and door prizes will follow the meeting. Admission is free and the public is invited. For more information, call 301-384-2415.

Foundation Seeks Puppy Walkers

The Guide Dog Foundation for the Blind (GDFB) is looking for dog lovers in Maryland who are willing to help a Labrador or Golden Retriever puppy pursue a most important career. When these dogs, bred and born at the Foundation, are about 14 months old, they begin training as guide dogs for a person who is blind or visually impaired. Their services are in demand - there are many blind people across the country who need a guide dog to increase their independence and mobility. But until the dogs are old enough to begin train- I'm a future guide dog. ing, they need a loving home, with kind Do you have a temporary people who will teach them good man- home for me? ners and show them how to act around other people. Those who help care for guide dog puppies are called puppy walkers and they are located all across the country. There is a puppy walker group established in Maryland.

Help the Guide Dog Foundation for the Blind provide guiding eyes for a blind individual. Call Erin Cleary, Puppy Program Coordinator at 800-548-4337, ext. 260, to learn more about becoming a member of the Maryland Puppy Walker family, so these pups can get to the next step of their career.

Five Hijackers Worked Out Here

According to radio and television reports on September 18, the five terrorists on the plane that hit the Pentagon worked out during the first week of September, registering under their own names, in the Gold's Gym at Beltway Plaza Mall.

Reportedly one of the terrorists took flying lessons at the Freeway Airport in Bowie.

It was also reported that at least some of the men lived in Laurel.

Reduce Risk of West Nile Virus Exposure

Crows infected with West Nile virus (WNV) are still being found in Maryland. In humans, WNV infection may cause no symptoms; mild symptoms; or serious, potentially fatal, inflammation of the brain (encephalitis) or tissues surrounding the brain (meningitis).

The Maryland Department of Agriculture advises that risk of WNV infection can be reduced by avoiding outdoor activities from dusk to dawn when mosquitoes are most active. When outdoors at anytime, wear light-colored, long-sleeved shirts and long pants and use insect repellents, (follow product instructions.) Avoid areas where mosquitoes are numerous, such as marshes and wetlands. Remove or monitor containers that hold water where mosquito larvae can thrive. Flush birdbaths and containers under potted plants twice weekly. Properly dispose of used tires; clean roof gutters and downspouts. Turn over unused containers, including those stored under a roof. Repair dripping outdoor water faucets. Drain water from tarps and grill covers.

For more information about the issue or Maryland's mosquito control program, contact the Maryland Department of Agriculture, Mosquito Control Section at 301-927-8357 or visit the web at http://www.mda.state.md.us.

One Greenbelter's Day . . .

John Beauchamp works from an office at the Arlington National Cemetery so close to the Pentagon that he often walks over to join a friend there for lunch. On Tuesday, September 11, Beauchamp was attending a conference in his building when a great crash and explosion suddenly shook their building. Rushing outside, his group found two other men, absolutely stunned, who had seen the plane hit the Pentagon. All of them, aghast, were frozen with hor-FOL

Later he learned that his friend, an Army major, had been watching the TV news from his Pentagon office, mesmerized by scenes of the attacks on the World Trade Center when his own world turned to chaos. One corridor away from the catastrophe, he called out to evacuate the building and fled the scene. When he found his car intact in the parking lot, he was able to reach his Arlington home, where he used his home phone for the rest of the day as an emergency command center.

Meanwhile, Beauchamp had several out-of-town contractors to deal with. Housed near Dupont Circle, they, like thousands of others in the D.C. area, were blocked during the day from entering the city. Nor did they know the route to Dupont Circle when only Key Bridge could be used to cross the river. Not till late evening, after leading the contractors back to their hotel, could Beauchamp get home to Greenbelt.

By a six to two vote, the Prince George's County Council approved the conceptual site plan for Greenbelt Station on September 10 in spite of appeals from the City of Greenbelt and others. Located adjacent to the Greenbelt Metro station along the east side of the tracks from the Capital Beltway to Greenbelt Road, the 243-acre project proposed by Metroland Developers LLC is to be a mixed use of upscale main street retail and entertainment establishments, offices, apartments and townhomes. County Councilmembers Audrey Scott, who represents the Greenbelt area, and Walter Maloney opposed the action. Council Chair Ronald Russell was absent at the time of the vote.

Five parties had appealed the Prince George's County Planning Board's approval of the concept plan—the cities of Greenbelt and College Park, Marriott Hotels, Quantum Realty (Beltway Plaza) and Citizens for the Conservation and Restoration of Indian Creek (CCRIC). The appeals required the county council, sitting as the district council, to render its approval of the concept plan as well as the planning board.

The Greenbelt Station plan calls for the replacement of the Metro parking lots with parking garages and construction of a large complex of retail establishments along with offices and high rise apartments on the station Westfield America, property. which operates Annapolis and Montgomery malls is to develop the upscale main street style shopping and entertainment complex. The station property is referred to as the north core of the development. In the south core, which is separated by a wetland area to be conserved, more commercial, office and residential facilities are planned.

Objections

All appellants stated that they did not oppose development of the property causing Norman Rivera, the attorney representing Metroland to comment, "Everybody seems OK with this as long as we don't go forward." However, they all felt that the concept plan had not met the detailed requirements of CB-47, county legislation that had set standards for this development. City Solicitor Robert Manzi represented the City of Greenbelt, Nancy Slepicka represented the Greenbelt Marriott, L.L.C., Elissa now lower than they had been. Taub, too, said the study did not result in providing necessary findings of need. He also contended that the commercial area in the south core nearest to Beltway Plaza was not transit oriented. There was not a finding that the commercial area would be compatible with adjacent commercial areas on Greenbelt Road.

County Councilmember Thomas Hendershot pointed out that many of the findings were required only if there was not an approved preliminary plan, and that the preliminary plan for this development had now been approved. Planning staff noted that many of the concerns were addressed by conditions required for filing of any detailed site plans for the project. Manzi stated that those could be filed for smaller sections of the large tract and would not provide a comprehensive picture.

Environment

The two cities and CCRIC were also concerned that environmental impacts caused by the development were not being properly addressed. Manzi said that plans were required for restoring and retreeing disturbed environmentally sensitive areas. Only a tree plan was provided, he claimed. College Park was concerned that a failed mitigation area would be developed and that not enough information was known as to how that development might affect the potential of flooding in the Hollywood area of the city. CCRIC, too, opposed development in the failed mitigation area and contended that a plan prepared by an environmental planner, Vern Kelly, for CCRIC showed that the developers could provide even greater density upon the land without impacting on sensitive areas. Upon questioning by Hendershot, Kelly noted that he had been invited to participate in a design charrette at a later date for the site. Rivera countered by saying that the developers had sold or were to transfer over to the state for preservation 111 acres of land, 46% of the total site, that they would be required to remove a pile of concrete in the state area left over from when the site held a concrete mixing plant, plant trees and remove undesireable vegetation. He argued that the failed mitigation area was not a wetland because it was not properly built by contractors for Metro, and that it would be replaced with another mitiga-He said the tion area. unmanaged storm water runoff into Indian Creek from Springhill Lake would improve with water quality control measures.

admit that vacancy rates were a 2,000 square foot police facility now lower than they had been. for use by the Greenbelt Depart-Taub, too, said the study did not ment.

> Another objection raised by Manzi was that there was not a finding that in a reasonable period of time roads would be adequate to serve the development. He noted that the plan was dependent on constructing a full interchange with the Capital Beltway and that there was no official designation of such an improvement on any approved plan. "How can you approve a development that at its very basis requires a Beltway interchange?" he asked. Rivera said that the developers would pursue getting a full interchange and that the state had indicated such an interchange was feasible. While Metroland hoped the state and federal governments would pay the cost of building the interchange, the developers were prepared to do so if necessary. "If we can't build it, we can't get permits," he said.

Manzi also contended that the site plan was not properly signed by the owners of the land, Metroland, WMATA and the State. Rivera said that the plan could be signed by the owner or owner's representative and that the engineer who signed it represented all the owners.

Building Heights

College Park also was concerned with the height of buildings (up to 20 stories) and their impact on city residents. Rivera showed submitted photo representations of what the view of the proposed buildings might look like from nearby residences and claimed that evening shadows would not shade nearby homes because the shadows would be cast in the opposite direction.

Greenbelters Rally 'round Flag

Levan of Colaresi, Ferguson and Levan represented the City of College Park, Larry Taub represented Quantum Companies, owner, manager and leasing agent of the Beltway Plaza and Jeffrey Nelson of Hogan and Harston represented CCRIC.

Manzi, Slepicka and Taub all challenged the economic analysis submitted by Metroland consultants. They contended the analysis was not accurate and/or appropriate for the type of development proposed. Manzi claimed that it was to justify a shopping mall and not a regional main street shopping and entertainment complex. Slepicka claimed that it failed to satisfy the requirement for a hotel market study and did not justify a finding of public need. She contended that current usage did not justify building additional hotels, although she did

Human Scale

Manzi also contended that the concept plan failed to meet the requirement that it demonstrate that adequate attention has been paid to human scale urban design and other site plan amenities. Rivera noted that a strip of land would be dedicated between a proposed north-south road through the property and the Metro tracks for a hiker-biker trail, that in addition to private amenities for private facilities there would be $1.1 million of private recreational facilities for public use and another $300,000 of public recreational amenities provided. There will also be a civic plaza in the north core and
