City Council Opposes P3 State Highway Widening Proposition

by Matthew Arbach

In order to address the area's impending traffic build-up, a proposition, dubbed the P3 Program, is under consideration by the State of Maryland that could result in the widening of sections of I-270, I-495 and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway (see map on page 13). This could have negative effects on daily life in Greenbelt and on nearby National Park Service properties. Both the Greenbelt City Council and the Four Cities Coalition, which includes Greenbelt, College Park, Berwyn Heights and New Carrollton, have issued statements to the Office of the Governor stating their opposition to the proposal. In the letter from council, Mayor Emmett Jordan stated the wish to "allow an opportunity for the state transportation agencies to pursue other congestion relief approaches. We can collectively work towards developing a plan that will relieve traffic congestion on our highways while minimizing impacts to the natural and built environment."

Jordan cited studies that indicated that highway expansion projects ultimately do not relieve congestion. Such projects encourage more driving, longer trips and increase suburban sprawl leading to environmental damage, stressed highway management and a general drain on taxpayer money and time.

According to their website (<http://495-270-p3.com>), the State of Maryland has initiated a Managed Lanes Study to examine

Luncheon Launches Editor's New Role, Initiates Archive

by Cathie Meetre

It was the best of times. No caveats, Mr. Dickens.

On Sunday, May 6, the Greenbelt Marriott echoed to the sound of celebration as about 100 guests gathered to applaud Mary Lou Williamson's transition to emerita status and the launching of the Greenbelt Archive Project.

Since Williamson is merely swapping hats and remains a significant factor in the paper, there was no downside – no parting of the ways to regret. Just a joyful view of an unparalleled contribution to this community. As Jim Giese, also a long-time News Review staffer and city manager, put it in his welcoming speech, "Mary Lou has served as editor longer than all 39 prior editors combined."

A key element of the program was a delightful set of musical vignettes, produced for the occasion by Chris Cherry and Stefan Brodd, ably supported by Aidan Larkin and Amanda Ferguson. All revolved around newspapers and included one song written by Cherry for an earlier Creative Kids Camp production. The audience hung on every note of the performance, cheering and clapping each song and laughing merrily at the pointed jokes and allusions.

After lunch and entertainment, friend and long-time colleague Sandy Lange introduced Williamson, describing how Williamson was initially cool to the idea of such an event but was easily reeled in by the inducement of making it about the Greenbelt Archive Project. Williamson was greeted as she took the podium by a standing ovation.

She told some tales of her time as editor. There was, for example, the time that the copy, on its way to the printer in Hyattsville, fell off the back of the motorcycle (long before the internet) and was lost. The paper had to be rapidly recreated in time for the issue to hit the streets.

She also described how she got roped into the paper in the first place. From such small acorns do great oak trees grow. Virginia Beauchamp (who, unfortunately too frail to attend, was represented at the celebration by daughter Edith) saw while passing by her new neighbor's window that she had lots of books. Seeking the text of a poem, she

by Amy Hansen

Old Greenbelt Theatre celebrated its third birthday on Sunday, May 6 by looking to the past and then to the future.

The first performance of the evening was the play Danger, a drama set in a Welsh coalmine after a cave-in. The play, originally commissioned by the British Broadcasting Corporation, had been performed in Greenbelt on May 6, 1938, according to Chris Cherry, coordinator of the city's 80th anniversary celebration.

The show was designed as a radio play. Since the actors would have been in the darkness of a mine, the cast stayed behind the screen and the audience stared at a large 80-year-old radio for the 20-minute production. Only when the cast came out for a curtain call was the danger, and the suspenseful drama, truly over.

With much applause, the audience shifted to a more light-hearted mode: The premiere of an experimental movie made by 17 children who attended a workshop called Let's Make a Movie! The workshop was funded with a grant from the Greenbelt Community Foundation.

Thank You All

Sunday's Retirement Luncheon at the Marriott was marvelous. With the items for the silent auction decorating the walls, the fun time-line and old pictures with the program at each place at the 10 tables (not to mention the festivity of the table settings) and the wonderful smiling friends greeting each other, the room was one big happy family ready for a grand party. And grand it was.

The entertainment was delightful and in tune with the event, the speeches weren't too long (except maybe mine) and the cost was almost reasonable, so thankfully the food was good.

Hearts and flowers for everyone who planned the affair, those who donated and/or bought items in the auction and everyone who came.

Thank you.

Best Value for Solar

The Greenbelt Homes Inc. (GHI) co-op is considering installation of photovoltaic (PV) panels on the administration building. As a former solar advisor (salesperson) for a major company, I'd like to share information that I learned affecting anyone considering a PV system. The option for a power purchasing agreement (PPA) prohibits the option for battery storage. What this means is this popular low/no cost way to begin using solar energy has a hidden cost – you are robbed of the opportunity to be energy self-sufficient. While your panels and system generate energy right on your property, unless you have batteries to save some, you are without power if electricity from the grid goes out. With increasingly severe weather from our current stage of climate change, it seems to me that having back-up power (or at least the option to install this in the future) is a significant benefit of investing in a solar system. Once committed to a long-term PPA, you forfeit this option. If all you want is to reduce power costs and greenhouse emissions, and you have a lack of cash, then PPA is much better than nothing. However, for the best value, I would get both – say the whole coin, not just heads or tails.

Furthermore, since I will be unable to attend the GHI annual meeting, I am grateful for this paper to share the above information, as well as my opinion. My first impression of the petition to postpone consideration, due primarily to staff time, is that a major portion of the time has already been spent – to research and analyze the work on which we are ready to vote! What a waste to let this opportunity go past us. This is one train that I would not stop – the wheels are in motion from quite a long journey. While the Solar Renewable Energy Credits (SRECs) mentioned in the Meeting Notice are currently at a low value, when research for this project started they were high. We lost that opportunity; let's not lose the whole kit and caboodle. I respect the amount of experience and wisdom that our current board members offer us. I trust they are aware of the big picture and believe if they felt the co-op could not handle this project in addition to the other critical projects of concern, then it would not have gotten this far. The earth is in a state of emergency. Let us do whatever we can as soon as we can to help create a New Deal for survival, and save money to boot. I've heard decisions are made based on love or fear – let us choose love.

Defending Maglev In Japan and China

SCMaglev naysayers denounce both the Shanghai, China, maglev and the Japanese maglev; our B-W corridor maglev will be modeled after the latter. Some state the Japanese maglev is flawed, behind schedule, over budget and under-utilized; therefore, development and construction of the maglev here could parallel the same logistical and timetable challenges Japan has incurred in developing theirs. This is unfair and uninformed criticism.

Japan began development of maglev technology in the 1970s, as reporter James Giese pointed out in a previous News Review article (Science and History Behind Proposed Maglev Rail Line) from the Dec. 14, 2017 issue). Their latest maglev test track (26 miles) was completed in 2014 and is operational on a lottery and complimentary basis. Over 70 percent of this 290-mile project (Tokyo to Osaka to be completed by 2044) will be tunneled underground through mountainous terrain, much different than the flat terrain along the east coast of the U.S. Japan also has to contend with earthquake-prone regions along their alignment.

Dancing, Tennis: Love Match?

Two new movies come to Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, May 11: Finding Your Feet and Borg vs. McEnroe.

Finding Your Feet boasts a brilliant English ensemble cast featuring 60-somethings who seize the day and find romance after marital disappointment. Lady Sandra (Imelda Staunton) catches her hubby of 35 years (John Sessions) in mid clinch with his mistress (Josie Lawrence) on the eve of their anniversary party. Sandra high-tails it out to her estranged sister Bif (Celia Imre), smokes her weed, joins her dance class where she meets and entices the reluctant Charlie (Timothy Spall). Joanna Lumley of Absolutely Fabulous fame adds considerable zest. Growing old isn't for sissies, so try a little tenderness.

Running Time: 107 minutes

Borg vs. McEnroe dramatizes the epic 1980 Wimbledon Championship between the 24-year-old taciturn Swede and the 21-year-old volatile American. As in Battle of the Sexes (Billie Jean King vs. Bobby Riggs) back stories give flesh and motivation to the drama. Borg (Sverrir Gudnason) was a working-class kid who was kicked out of a tennis club for, ironically, McEnroe-like tantrums, after which, under his coach's tutelage, he willed his legendary calm and metronomically steady style into being. McEnroe (Shia La Boeuf) was a rich kid from Long Island who sensed the volcano under Borg's icy exterior. Kindred spirits, apparently – who knew?

2018 Tennis Season Kicks Off With Summer Social, May 19

by Stan Zirkin

The Greenbelt Tennis Association (GTA) has announced its summer schedule of socials and tournaments. The season will kick off with a Membership Doubles Social on Saturday, May 19 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Braden Field. The social is free for GTA members; a nominal fee will be charged for non-members. Membership forms can be downloaded from GTA's website (greenbelt.com/tennis) and will also be available at the May 19 social. Officers of GTA for the upcoming year will be elected before the social begins. Light refreshments will be served.

Every Friday night, from 7 to 10 p.m., beginning on May 25 and continuing through August 31, there will be drop-in social tennis at Braden Field. There will also be drop-in social tennis for women only at Braden Field on Tuesday nights from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning on May 22 and continuing through August 28. GTA will supply the tokens for the lights; cans of balls (and possibly other tennis equipment) will be available for sale. The drop-in tennis will be free for GTA members with non-GTA members paying a nominal fee.

The scheduled socials, part of the GTA season, will culminate with a Labor Day Doubles Social at the Greenbriar tennis courts on Saturday, September 1 between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. A barbeque will be active, as usual, along with other refreshments. Once again this event is free for GTA members with non-GTA members paying a nominal fee. Mayor Emmett Jordan will host this annual culinary extravaganza.

There will also be four Braden Field tournaments this summer: the Summer Singles Tournament on June 23 and 24; the Post-Firecracker Doubles Tournament on July 14 and 15; the David Craig Memorial Singles Tournament on September 29 and 30 and the Craig Doubles Tournament on October 6 and 7. There is an entry fee for each of the tournaments, with a reduced fee for GTA members.

As many will recall, GTA's efforts to hold tennis clinics last summer with a professional training service had mixed results. This year there's an effort to recruit local talent to conduct clinics, possibly in connection with another social. Stay tuned!

Farmers Market Opens May 13 With Fresh Produce and Music

by Cathie Meetre

The 2018 market starts Sunday, May 13 on Mothers Day. It takes place in the parking lot between Roosevelt Center and the Community Center and is open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. every Sunday through summer and fall, except Labor Day. The market closes on the Sunday before Thanksgiving. There is an early December Holiday market when the market briefly reappears for one day to coincide with the city's Festival of Lights and Annual Craft Show.

The Romans were keen on bread and circuses (as the satirist, Juvenal, wrote almost 2,000 years ago). Perhaps as a result, every European town has its market and every major city, like Paris, a round of local neighborhood street markets much prized by inhabitants and often on the scale of a hundred or more stalls.

A Great Tradition

In comparison, the Greenbelt Farmers Market (GFM) is both recent and pint-sized, entering what is only its 11th season and fielding about 25 vendors. It stands proudly, however, in the long tradition of the use of an accessible public space to market local produce to local people. And to market it with some flair.

Admittedly, though the market has wonderful freshly baked bread, it has not yet actually had a circus. But it has had stilt walkers and juggling and that's a start. This year already has Transatlantic Crossing, Red River Ramblers and others lined up to perform.

Most vendors from last year are returning and some new ones will be bringing their wares to the market. Full details of vendors and their schedules are available at GreenbeltFarmersMarket.org.

Shoppers browse on a sunny summer day at the Farmers Market.

Market Takes SNAP

Toward the end of last year, GFM began taking SNAP – the Department of Agriculture program that helps subsidize food purchases for those in need. The market this year will match the first $10 of SNAP purchases out of a grant provided by Prince George's County, doubling last year's match. SNAP purchasers should go to the information booth to obtain tokens for purchases. Many thanks to the Greenbelt Community Church for the volunteers who help run this program.

Pop-Up Food Court

A visit to the market and lunch on the grassy slope in front of the entrance to the Community Center has become a family tradition for some market-goers. With freshly made food items available from vendors, each family member can choose its own – it's a pop-up food court. The kids frolic on the hill – there are obligingly-branched trees to climb and who can resist doing barrel rolls down the hill when the slope is so perfect? Parents keep a watchful eye on the kids and chat with neighbors. The market, seen from the slope's vantage point slightly above, provides an ever-changing canvas that beguiles the eye with color and movement. And to reduce plastic waste, remember to bring a reusable bag to the market. In fact, bring two – they'll get full fast.

Weird Romance at Goddard Challenges, Moves Audience

by Kyla Hanington

NASA Goddard's MAD Theater's production of Weird Romance demands suspension of disbelief. Featuring two one-act musicals that examine romantic love, the weird twist comes from the science fiction elements of each story. But the audience must also suspend its disbelief that, in the first act, The Girl Who Was Plugged In, the evil mastermind would want to use a different external package (a different body) to house the personality of bag-lady P. Burke, played by the stunning Mary Estacion, rather than just give her a bath and fashionable clothes.

Estacion's performance is so strong she very nearly steals the show, but happily her silicon counterpart, Sara Collins, is her singing and acting match. These captivating two light up the stage as they each are used by the dastardly Isham (Don Mitchell) in his money-making scheme. Money-making for him provides the story's tension.

By the mid-point of the first act I was writing notes to my date. "I find this so sad," I wrote, and then later, "I thought this was supposed to be a comedy!" He read the notes and nodded, stricken. At intermission we asked ourselves just why it was I was certain it was a comedy, which is how I had sold him on attending the show with me. I laid blame on the composer, Alan Menken, who did the music for the brilliant Little Shop of Horrors. "Little Shop of Horrors isn't a comedy," Dan said, looking at me perplexed. The lights dimmed, saving me from manufacturing a response. And while, on balance, Little Shop of Horrors probably cannot be classified as a comedy, it does contain many elements of musical genius, and it was to our delight that both acts of Weird Romance do as well. Homeless P. Burke breaks hearts as she sings, silly me, but I wish as folks walk by, they'd stop and see me, say hi. And the second act's wonderful ode to curiosity, Need to Know, sung by the charming Sean Morton, is the perfect song to be performed at a NASA-affiliated theater.

The second act, Her Pilgrim Soul, was a gentler take on romantic love and a much-needed antidote to the darkness of The Girl Who Was Plugged In. Showcasing Cathy Barth's exceptional acting talents in the role of Nola, a character who ages "ten years for every day," Her Pilgrim Soul is a study on loving after loss. Shawn Perry, who played the gentle caregiver to P. Burke in the first act, shines as Kevin Drayton, a married man who can't fully give himself over to his wife (the marvelous Collins) and her dreams of a growing family.

Collins is as much of a stand-out in the second act as she was in the first. Her beautiful singing voice and fantastic acting are a joy to experience and her character in Her Pilgrim Soul brings us some of the show's most entertaining moments. Meanwhile, Barth's exceptional acting abilities are on full display in her devastating re-creation of a woman from childhood to death, exploring a range of human emotion, from joy to love to loss. Perry's sensitive acting makes him a highlight in both acts; his friendship, concern and love are each in turn convincing.

One of the gifts of community theater is sitting enraptured in the audience reaping the benefits of other people's hobbies, from singing to dancing to acting to playing in the pit band. Weird Romance, Goddard's Music and Drama Club's Spring Show, continues through May 19 with performances at the Barney & Bea Recreation Center at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. on Sundays. More information and tickets can be found at madtheater.org.

knocked on the door and introduced herself. Williamson had the poem on her shelves, and the ensuing conversation persuaded her to help out with the 25th anniversary booklet the paper was undertaking at the time. This meeting put the seal on what was to become a lifetime of service and friendship.

The event was also the culmination of a week-long silent auction for the Greenbelt Archive Project, conducted initially online. On Sunday, the items were displayed in the room and participants had the opportunity to place more bids during the first part of the program. They responded enthusiastically and by the end of the event all but a handful of items were sold. There was also the opportunity to donate directly to the archive. Some generous donors did both.

Two Birds, One Stone.

The event had two successful outcomes. One was to cheer Williamson as she moved from one role to the next and the second to raise funds for the archive. Between the two forms of donation, a total of about $9,000 will have been raised altogether. This is more than sufficient to acquire a scanner and get work started, but further fundraising will be needed to support the eventual estimated $50K cost of scanning and curation of the material.

Grateful thanks from the Event Coordinating Committee who, perhaps to their surprise, became transmuted into the board of the Greenbelt Archive Project: President Sandy Lange, Secretary Mary Lou Williamson, Treasurer JoEllen Sarff and board members Peggy Higgins and Deanna Dawson. Thanks to Jim Giese and Sandy Lange for their joint services as masters of ceremonies. Hats off to entertainers Cherry, Brodd, Larkin and Ferguson. Special thanks to News Review staffers who turned out to help lug donated items – Linda Lucas, Pat Scully, Sylvia Lewis and to surprise visitor Marat Moore, former staffer and board member now living in Tennessee.

Kudos to those who gave and those who bought. All will be acknowledged in a future issue. For more information on the Greenbelt Archive Project (a 501(c)(3) organization), go to GreenbeltArchive.org.

Twin Cats Reunited, After Decades and an Ocean Apart

by Cathie Meetre

The silent auction had an unexpected bonus for two cats. Reunited after decades apart, the cats now live contentedly together in the household of Jon and Anne Gardner, both News Review members.

The story begins in England when the Gardners met in Durham in northeast England some 25 years ago. They had decided to get married and a group of their college friends made haste to be at the wedding. The friends were running too late to put a lot of thought into a gift so they stopped quickly at a second-hand shop and bought a tall, thin, gray wooden cat. Time went by and the Gardners established themselves in Greenbelt, where they have raised their three children. The gray cat came too.

Enter the Greenbelt Archive Project's silent auction and Diana Weatherby, donor, with the newspaper in the role of the fickle finger of fate.

Weatherby was exploring her home for intriguing items to give to the Greenbelt Archive silent auction because she and her husband are planning a move. One of several items she donated was a tall, thin brown wooden cat. Anne Gardner, perusing the catalog, recognized it with a start and, to the amusement of her family, exercised the buy now option to immediately purchase it. It is now happily re-united with its gray twin. They stand together next to Anne's piano and present an imperturbable front to the other feline denizens of the home. A happy ending after years alone.

Japan has safety standards conducive to a different set of challenges. They have taken the time to get it right, to test and retest, to make sure their alignment is safe, reliable and well-constructed. Measuring success is subjective and one nation's infrastructure and transportation goals and standards cannot be compared with another nation's to determine or predict success.

For over 50 years Japan has made operational various generations of high speed bullet trains connecting most regions of Japan. Their society is more accepting of continuous development and improvements in rail travel technology. The U.S. has put more emphasis on individual and personal travel, thus the automobile; theirs has emphasized moving its citizens efficiently and safely by mass transit. Japan's rail systems have Positive Train Control (PTC) while many U.S. trains do not.

In a previous News Review letter (Feb. 22) Paul Downs stated that the Shanghai, China, maglev loses money each year. So what? Our nationwide Amtrak system runs a deficit each year. China states their 19-mile maglev, operational since 2004 is successful in transporting riders between Shanghai and its Pudong international airport in seven minutes. It meets their needs. China plans to construct additional maglev rail lines to better serve its citizenry. I applaud Japan and China for developing and making this proven rail transportation technology a reality.

Response to Article On Homeless Issue

The homeless lady who lives on the benches on Crescent Road is Tabatha. She was a teacher and lived previously in a home in Greenbelt. She feels safe in Greenbelt. The Greenbelt Police check on her frequently and local businesses, churches and community groups provide her with food. She is mentally ill and fears leaving Greenbelt to go to a shelter. Her young teacher friend, Talia, was able to convince Tabatha a few times during the winter days with extreme cold or snowy weather to go to the Greenbelt Holiday Inn for a few days at a time. Talia was paying for it out of her limited teacher's salary and then sought help from local churches and food pantry to assist with hotel costs and food.

This is one of the many reasons that I live in Greenbelt because we are a community that takes care of each other, no matter who needs our help.

Professional Insights Into Homelessness

As both a resident of Greenbelt and the director of the National Coalition for the Homeless, I have been concerned by the commentary that has been made on Facebook and other community forums about increases in visible homelessness in the community.

Communities large and small, across the country, are experiencing an affordable housing crisis. A recent study from the Harvard Joint Center for Housing Studies found that nearly half of American rental households pay more than 30 percent of their income on housing, as the bulk of rental development is in higher cost units. Further, the U.S. has a shortage of 7.2 million rental homes affordable and available to extremely low-income renters.

The DC Metro area has one of the higher costs of living in the country. While Prince George's County tends to be slightly more affordable than other parts of the metro area, the housing market in our community is definitely affected by DC. In fact, my family moved to Greenbelt several years ago because we were no longer able to find affordable decent housing in DC. My partner and I both work full time and make well over the federal minimum wage. However, the National Low Income Housing Coalition has calculated that to afford a modest, two-bedroom rental home on average in the U.S., renters need to earn a wage of $21.21 per hour, $13.96 higher than the federal minimum wage, and $9.71 higher than the county minimum wage.

What I am getting at is that anyone can become homeless. All it takes for some is a minor financial crisis, like a high health care bill or a few weeks out of work, to spiral a household's finances out of control, leading to the loss of a home. Not to mention the growing epidemic of no-fault evictions that can create further barriers to obtaining housing (read Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City by Matthew Desmond, or go see the exhibit at the National Building Museum).

While I do not personally know the people who are unhoused in Greenbelt who are the cause of the recent uproar, I do know that each and every person has a story and is a part of our community. I also know, through my work with the National Coalition for the Homeless, that law enforcement has never, and will never, solve homelessness. What will solve homelessness is permanently affordable housing, affordable and accessible health care and jobs that pay a living wage. Until we can guarantee equal access to all of these, I beg my neighbors to respond with compassion and humanity.

Our country is facing a crisis of poverty, racial inequity and homelessness. I would hope that in a community built on a spirit of cooperation and mutual respect, my fellow residents could see past their prejudices to find solutions that work for all of our community members. Please visit nationalhomeless.org to learn more or find out how to be more involved.

Keep Greenbelt Clean

Spring cleaning has arrived and many Greenbelt Homes, Inc. members are sprucing up yards, attics, and other locations that need attention. Most members dispose of their trash and yard waste in the appropriate way. They call Public Works at 301-474-8004 and have their items to be picked up at the service side of their home.

Sadly, there are folks who put their trash, leaf bags and other stuff at the curb and it does not get removed by Public Works. When visitors and people searching for new homes see these eyesores, it leaves a bad impression on our community. Greenbelt is great; it is beautiful during this season. Please do your part to keep our Greenbelt Cooperative Beautiful!

Roosevelt Democrats Host Maryland Legislative Update

by Konrad Herling

The place to be on Friday, May 18, 7:30 p.m. will be the Greenbriar Community Building for anyone wanting to learn more about how our state delegation made out on a wide array of issues. Among many pieces of legislation for consideration, the District 22 delegation was active in banning bump stock rifles, passing sick and safe leave legislation for employees working for Maryland employers (which Governor Hogan opposed) and providing funding to schools which yields tuition-free community colleges throughout the state.

Delegates Tawanna Gaines, Anne Healey and Alonzo Washington, in concert with State Senator Paul Pinsky, will give an in-depth report on the impact of this and other key legislation, passed and not passed. As is customary at Roosevelt Club membership meetings, the delegation will provide an opportunity for questions from those attending as well.

For more information, call 202-321-4207. More information about the club can be found at Facebook by inserting the club's title in the search field.

MilkBoy Hosts (Un)Choir

On Tuesday, May 15 from 7:30 to 9 p.m., the (Un)Choir meets at the MilkBoy ArtHouse in the upstairs gallery. Doors open at 7 p.m. This event is free – all are welcome. This program will feature Respect by Aretha Franklin.

This is a new kind of choral experience. Learn a part and sing a song in harmony, all in one fun evening. (Un)Choir turns the tables on traditional choir. No auditions, no rehearsals, no long-term commitment: just show up and sing a song everyone loves. Singers will get a lyric sheet; then Allison Hughes, music director for College Park Chorale, will teach two- or three-part harmony to a well-known song.

This event is a partnership of the College Park Arts Exchange, The Clarice and MilkBoy ArtHouse in College Park.

Bilingual Afternoon At the Pond

Friday, May 11 from 5 to 6 p.m. and Saturday, May 19 from 3 to 4 p.m. the Patuxent Research Refuge will offer a bilingual afternoon at the pond for all ages. Look for amphibians, fish and bugs while learning some Spanish words.

Public programs at the refuge are free. Advance registration is required: 301-497-5887. For more information visit fws.gov/refuge/Patuxent.

I-495 from north of the American Legion Bridge to east of the Woodrow Wilson Bridge and along I-270 from I-495 to I-370, including the east and west I-270 Spurs. A managed lane is defined as a measure to enhance traffic speed and safety, as well as quelling air pollution. This can mean a variety of options, including lane use restrictions, and toll, HOV, reversible and bus lanes. The website goes on to say that the study will “evaluate alternatives to accommodate existing and future traffic, improve trip reliability, expand travel options, accommodate homeland security, and improve the movement of goods and services.”

In regard to the Parkway, (which, according to Jordan, holds a place of great historic and cultural significance) a 2012 Baltimore-Washington Parkway Widening Feasibility Study determined that such a measure would “likely result in levels of traffic congestion similar to those experienced today” due to “anticipated regional population and employment growth” with the resultant “magnitude of increased travel demand.” The Parkway is included on the National Register of Historical Places. The proposed widening would impinge on the tract maintained by the National Park Service, this being the 19-mile area from Route 175 to the D.C. border. Said Jordan, the Parkway “deserves to be respected for its original function as a scenic byway.”

Greenbelt resident Aaron Marcavitch attended an open house at Eleanor Roosevelt High School on April 24, where the details of the issue were presented to the public. His assessment was that the plans are at the kick-off stage, with few specific details available on possible widening or the addition of tolls.

There was no deliberate addressing of the Parkway and when Marcavitch asked about the widening, the response was that it would require “an act of Congress.” The City of Greenbelt and the Four Cities Coalition have encouraged the state to advocate for the expansion in use and funding of transit and alternative transportation systems and increased hours of operation for MARC trains, in place of significant highway development. Jordan stated the effect this step “will have on the natural, socioeconomic, cultural and built environments is unacceptable. Established neighborhoods adjacent to these highway corridors will be negatively impacted by a diminished quality of life, as will users of the Parkway.”

According to the State's website, the study of the highlighted area will evaluate alternatives to accommodate existing and future traffic, improve trip reliability, expand travel options, accommodate homeland security, and improve the movement of goods and services.

Detectives from the Montgomery County Police Department Collision Reconstruction Unit found that Nguyen was driving a black 2006 Honda Pilot and had a minor collision with a silver 2014 Honda Pilot.

After the collision, the driver and a front-seat passenger of the black Honda Pilot exited their vehicle and were standing near their car, said the report. The black Honda was then struck by a third car, a silver BMW.

Greenbelt Girl Scout Troop 27 announces that this year's Junior (level two) Scouts are pursuing their Bronze Award. The Bronze Award Social Justice Drive will be held at the Green Man Festival on Saturday, May 12 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Bronze Award is the first major award in Girl Scouting and is awarded to Junior Level Girl Scouts; to achieve the award, they must organize, lead and run a special project that helps improve their community. This year's group working on the award are Sahana Chaudhuri, Beatrice Marcavitch, Olivia Nickel, Veena Raj and Aeryn Wesley-Hunt.

These Girl Scouts have chosen to run a Social Justice Drive to support those in need of food, toiletries and clothing. They are accepting new diapers, baby wipes, baby bottles and toiletries for children and adults. They are also accepting gently-used clothing for infants and young children, maternity clothing, business and business casual clothing, cookware and dinnerware. Also accepted are sealed, unopened and healthy grocery donations. Fresh fruits and vegetables are especially appreciated. Groceries should be fresh and canned goods should have not expire.

Free Yellow Magazine Box Dedication Party on May 19

by Elizabeth Barber

There is going to be a party on Saturday, May 19 at 2 p.m. Everyone is invited, rain or shine. The location is the bus stop on the corner of Southway and Crescent Road.

Here's the reason for the party. At this bus stop, there is a wooden bench where every weekday evening sit many tired folks. They are waiting for the bus to take them home. I live nearby. For 16 years, I have walked past this bus stop. There are several newspaper containers. One of these containers – a very sturdy yellow metal one – was empty for some time. It used to carry the Washington Post Express newspaper.

One day, while I walked past the bench, a young man, someone I didn't know, looked directly at me and said, "it would be nice if we had something to read." I thought about this.

I thought about the empty Washington Post Express container. Then, I put it together. I called the Washington Post office. A man by the name of Charles Love answered the phone. I asked him if he would like to donate the empty container. I told him of the idea that this container would be filled with magazines – for the folks who would enjoy something to read while they were waiting for the bus. The container would be filled with magazines for gardening, food and recipes, seniors, or art and music. The reader could even take a magazine home, something to lift their spirits at the end of the day. Love very happily agreed with my idea, and generously donated the container to our community, free of charge.

Nearly two years have gone by, and the container is now repainted with a bright design. Don Hudson put on 10 coats of a clear protective substance to shield it from the weather. Rick Ransom from the Community Relations Advisory Board helped to transport the box.

As for the party, everyone is invited: people who want to reach out to other people, people who would like to support the project, people to help supply the container with suitable magazines and people to keep an eye on the corner to be sure it remains free from any sort of issue – such as litter or anything else that would be expected in an open public space.

Will this container help to create a relaxed and warm space for the folks who wait for the buses? That is my hope. And I like to think that the young man who said, a little sadly "it would be nice to have something to read" could now have a few moments to enjoy a comic book or a poet's magazine, or an air and space magazine.

Will this be a way of saying "Greenbelt folks are compassionate and that they reach out to those folks who work in our town?" Again, this is my hope and reason for the completion of the project.

Do come to the reception for this container on May 19. And bring a magazine or two. And, if you have a group that would be interested in supporting this cause, write to me at Elizabeth.barber@mygait.com.
