Greenbelt Station High School Districting, an Uphill Battle

by Eugene "Jesse" Nash IV

At a recent four cities meeting, the Greenbelt City Council struggled to convince Prince George's County Executive Angela Alsobrooks and Board of Education District 2 Representative Joshua Thomas why Greenbelt Station youth should be in the Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) district.

The teenagers of Greenbelt Station have been directed by the county to attend Parkdale High School, a school that few of their friends from other parts of Greenbelt will attend. The city has been pushing the county for months to redistrict the youth to ERHS to resolve that divide, but the county has so far been reluctant.

Why? Because, redistricting the youth would counter another recent initiative from Prince George's County staff which is to eliminate the stigma that any one school is better or worse than another. When Councilmember Colin Byrd brought up the issue, Alsobrooks said that she is "nearly grief-stricken" about this sentiment of inequality. Citing one high school graduation she recently attended, she was saddened to find that one third of the class said they had no plans after school.

She continued in a lengthy reply, "We have to work to make sure that when you graduate from a Prince George's County public school, you don't have a sense that if only you lived in a different area you would have a different education. That's something that I am really concerned about."

Not having heard of the situation in Greenbelt Station, she then said, "We will see about getting an answer to that."

Councilmember Leta Mach offered to send more information on the situation in an email after the meeting, and Alsobrooks accepted that offer.

Thomas, who is himself an ERHS graduate, agreed with the county executive, saying that he is also trying to fight the stigma that, "Graduating from one school in the county, though that diploma might match a diploma you might receive at another school, the skills and the opportunities that that school might provide are going to vary. We think that this is not an equitable system, we know that it is not doing justice by our kids."

Although neither formally refused to redistrict Greenbelt Station youth, both implied that to go through with a redistrict would conflict with the push for a more equal school system. The best Alsobrooks and Thomas could offer was that they would

by Eugene "Jesse" Nash IV

For many high school and college-aged Greenbelters, Circus Camp is a fond memory. Between juggling, balancing and being taught how to embrace a performer-mindset, those who went to circus camp have retained, or at least remember once having, some unique skills that peers from other towns didn't necessarily have the opportunity to attain.

This is why some parents were disappointed to see the camp go away for several years. This year, however, there's a new clown in town and Circus

Camp is back with some of the old, as well as a bit of something new. On Friday, July 26, circus campers performed their third of four summer shows under the direction of Mike Funt, a career clown who moved to Greenbelt in the spring after his wife landed a job with Goddard Space Flight Center.

Highlights of the show included a human castle, circling unicycle pairs, raspberry-blowing stilt-walkers, mass juggling groups and clown acts that drew laughs from the audience. A parent later commented to Performing Arts Coordinator Chris Cherry that she was happy to see an evolution and changes in the show at the end of each session. Funt considers those tricks and talents and many others in his curriculum merely as a vessel for the real purpose of Circus Camp; to him it's a way of teaching life skills.

Funt tries to never forget the words of an old Australian mentor: "Teaching kids circus, it teaches them individuality and creativity, it teaches them to take risks healthily and safely, it

2019 Campaign for Greenbelt City Council Starts August 19

by Kathleen Gallagher

The 2019 Greenbelt City Council campaign season is about to begin. In just a little more than two weeks, both incumbent and challenger candidates will begin circulating petitions and filing papers to qualify as candidates and have their names placed on the ballot for the Tuesday, November 5, Greenbelt City Council election.

Candidate packets containing all the necessary information and forms for running for office will be available at City Clerk Bonita Anderson's office in the Municipal Building, 25 Crescent Road, beginning Monday, August 19. The filing period ends promptly at 5 p.m. on Monday, September 23.

Eligibility

Until this year, any qualified voter of the city could run for city council. A qualified voter is a resident of the city who is duly registered to vote with Prince George's County at a Greenbelt residence address.

The eligibility requirement has changed slightly this year because the city has lowered the qualified Predatory Damselfly sounds like an oxymoron, but this Familiar Bluet (Enallagma civile) is a deadly hunter with a meat-eater's appetite for small insects, worms and other invertebrates. Kin to dragonflies but more delicate, they perch with their wings folded along the abdomen as shown, rather than out to the side. They need bodies of water like ponds or woodland streams but are not picky about the water salinity or pH.

City Advisory Groups Update Council, Seek New Members

by Cameron Weekes

Greenbelt City Council met with the chairs of city advisory boards and committees during a worksession on July 17. This annual meeting provides an opportunity for councilmembers to speak with advisory groups regarding their activities, challenges, concerns, issues and accomplishments.

Vacancies

Advisory group members are appointed by the council. Vacancies on boards and committees continue to be an important issue.

The Youth Advisory Committee (YAC) has four vacancies, Green ACES has three, Ethics Commission and the Employees Relations Board each have two, and the Board of Elections and the Forest Preserve Advisory Board each have one. Those interested in joining one of the advisory groups can apply through the city website at greenbeltmd.gov. Applicants must be willing to attend at least one meeting with their desired board or committee before being accepted.

Updates

YAC will reach out to 16- and 17-year-old students to encourage them to vote in city elections this November. They will be holding youth events and visiting schools to remind students to register. YAC is also working to educate students about human trafficking and how to reduce crime in the community. The committee plans to reach out to youth in Greenbelt Station, and hopes to hold a Youth Night Out there in September or October.

The Advisory Planning Board (APB) continues to pursue plans to provide community bicycles. The council previously provided APB with a dedicated task force. Heretofore, the task force has not made significant progress.

The Ethics Commission recently requested that their membership be expanded from three to five members. The two new positions are currently vacant. The commission has been reviewing financial disclosure forms submitted by the council and advisory groups. The commission is pleased to report that only one significant issue has been encountered in the board's history.

The Advisory Committee on Trees reports that the Greenbelt Urban Forest Master Plan was accepted by the council last August. This year's Arbor Day celebration on March 30 was attended by 50 people who helped plant 20 trees near Crescent Road and Gardenway. The committee is considering Greenbelt Station as a location for the 2020 Arbor Day celebration.

The Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) recently worked with the emergency siren referral council and also submitted a report on vagrancy at Roosevelt Center. PSAC is currently working on improving cellphone reception during times of crisis to help citizens reach critical emergency services. They will consult with a retired satellite scientist in an effort to solve this issue. PSAC also wants to educate citizens on emergency situations by implementing a citywide CPR course and holding Stop the Bleed courses, and is looking into enforcing public vaping restrictions.

The Park and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB) is reviewing signs at Buddy Attick Park to determine if they can be understood by various non-English speaking groups. PRAB is planning upcoming projects, including the construction on Greenbelt Lake dam and Beltway Plaza redevelopment. The board will look into new developments in Greenbelt Station, especially facilities for children under the age of 5.

The Board of Elections will work closely with YAC to encourage voting among Greenbelt youth. The board will revise its forms and packets with clearer language to better meet voters' needs. There will be four weekends of early voting to facilitate increased voter turnout. Voting locations have not changed from the previous election.

The Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) ran three clubs this past school year: a reading club at Springhill Lake Elementary, a writing club at Greenbelt Middle School and a writing club at Turning Point Academy. The committee discussed future plans for Prince George's County Schools with the Chair of the Board of Education, Dr. Alvin Thornton, in the spring. ACE reports that Turning Point Academy is moving to Temple Hills, leaving six core schools in Greenbelt.

The Arts Advisory Board (AAB) has created an arts policy for the city which defines public art, determines where art can be placed in the city and outlines how it is to be maintained. The board has helped provide funding for local organizations. AAB also hosted a meeting in the New Deal Café to bring local artists together and promote awareness for the arts.

The Forest Preserve Advisory Board (FPAB) has finished updating Maintenance and Management Guidelines, which have been renamed the Stewardship Guidelines. FPAB has received a grant for ecological and sociological research in the preserve and it is accepting research proposals until the middle of October. The board published a letter in the News Review dissuading hunting in the preserve.

The Senior Citizens Advisory Committee (SCAC) reports that senior citizens are thankful for a new bus provided by the city. SCAC has discussed increasing visibility on street corners and pedestrian areas around the city for those with limited vision.

He Visited All U.S. National Parks, Including Greenbelt

by Eugene "Jesse" Nash IV

David Kroese sits in front of the two sets of pins he gathered from over 200 parks in his journey to see all 419 sites in the National Park System.

To a man who visited all 419 sites in the National Park System for its centennial two years ago, Greenbelt Park should have simply been another notch in his belt. But it wasn't. In fact, David Kroese has a special memory here, thanks to a kind act from Greenbelt Park Superintendent Matthew Carroll.

Toward the end of his quest to pick up a centennial pin from each of the more than 200 parks that offered them, Kroese learned that Greenbelt Park had pins ordered for the staff, but not on sale to the public. So, he took a chance and called up Carroll to see if there were any extras he could pick up. Carroll returned the message by mailing his personal copy to Kroese.

As a token of gratitude, Kroese included Greenbelt as the 10th location for the tour of his framed presentation of the complete set of pins. On Tuesday, June 25, Kroese picked up the set and stopped by the Community Center to tell the full story of his three-year-long quest with his wife, Kareem.

Kroese tapped into his knowledge of Civil War history, biology and geology to tell the stories of how he ended up at each park to an audience of a dozen Greenbelters, mostly park enthusiasts.

At the battlefield parks, he came to understand just how good, or terrible, a general's position was. At Sequoia in California, he came to see trees that can consume 500 gallons of water a day through creating their own rain out of air with special needles.

There were the geological wonders like the Grand Tetons in Wyoming, where he described the 10,000-foot-tall mountains that directly border the fault that created them, or the lighthouse at Point Reyes near San Francisco, which sits on a block of rock that was once connected to a range of mountains 350 miles to the south.

As he talked, a sun-bleached St. Louis Cardinals hat that had been to all 419 parks rested on a nearby table in the front of the room next to a thick, self-published paperback book that further detailed the excursions he took on vacation time from his full-time job.

He said that the stories behind the parks were what fascinated him the most. Further, he liked to see contrast between natural beauty and human tragedy like the remote park and town in Molokai, Hawaii, which is bordered by an impassable mountain range and was used to house lepers, becoming known as "the place people went to die," according to Kroese.

He started the journey because of a joke by his wife who said that, if he loves the parks so much, he might as well make it a mission to visit them all. So he did, taking every vacation hour he had to see new parks. Eventually, he realized he could do his work just as effectively in a hotel room as he could in the office, and found even more time to visit the parks.

The challenge did not come without the difficulty of burn-out, but he found relief in his followers on social media, the National Park Service employees who were always supportive, as well as the process of writing his book.

And he finished on a positive note. "I didn't realize 'til it was all over that what I was really looking for was myself."

Small funds available for studying the ecology, history, and use of the Greenbelt Forest Preserve

The Greenbelt Forest Preserve is a 255-acre preserve owned by the City of Greenbelt, Maryland. As established by City Code in 2003, the land is "preserved in a natural state for the use and enjoyment of present and future generations." The City Council has established a fund to encourage research about the ecosystem and history of the Preserve, and improve stewardship of the Preserve. The fund will be dispersed as reimbursable grants to researchers for certain types of expenses. Anyone can apply. Preference will be given to projects with outputs that enhance the ability of the city to manage the Preserve. Up to $2000 is available in 2019.

Projects might include:

- Studying the forest over time to document change;
- Surveying vegetation, invertebrate, or vertebrate animal populations;
- Mapping invasive species;
- Surveying stream aquatic life, water quality or pollution;
- Reviewing documents to trace the history of land use within the Preserve;
- Surveying attitudes about the Preserve from citizens/users;
- Studying the impact of adjacent land uses and land management practices on the Preserve; or
- Other ecological, social, or historical research.

MakerSpace Repair Café has Returned at a New Location

by Eugene "Jesse" Nash IV

Bringing back the popular Repair Café seemed like a daunting task without access to its former spacious location in Roosevelt Center.

But not daunting enough to stop Robert Candey or William "Brett" Fishburne, who easily moved boxes and bags of tools, glues and parts into a classroom at the Community Center on Saturday, July 13. There, they kicked off the first Repair Café to not have been hosted in the old location. The Café, which is normally run four times a year, only missed a beat in the second quarter of 2019 after moving out of the old location before it was back in (free) business again.

And business was booming. In the first 15 minutes, even before all the tools had been moved inside, the Café welcomed its first customer. A woman needed a lawn mower, power washer and alarm clock fixed, and brought in the latter two to see what the handymen could do.

Fishburne quickly got to work on the power washer while Candey examined the clock. The gas lawnmower, along with another mower later in the morning, had to be turned down because the task of breaking it down would have proved too messy for the temporary indoor space.

If they were still in the old location, Candey said, he could have easily worked on a mower on the sidewalk outside.

Candey missed the benefits of owning a space, like having boxes upon boxes of loose screws and what one volunteer called a "hoard of power tools."

Aside from these differences, the Café volunteers continued as they would have in the previous space. Dozens of jobs came in, over half of which could be fixed – normal numbers for the Café, according to Fishburne.

Jobs ranged from mechanical to electrical, from sewing to computer work. A plethora of volunteers were up for each new challenge, keeping up a constant stream of productivity throughout the day.

Along with the MakerSpace co-op's board members, two youths volunteered their time for high school service hours. A bicycle specialist and licensed electrician came in to offer their expertise too, although it ended up not being needed this time.

Most who attended said they had either been to the Café before or had seen a notice for it in the News Review. Fishburne was concerned when the News Review incorrectly published the July date for the Café. But as more people who had read the correction came out as the day went on, his concern lessened.

Resident David Shapiro brought in a broken food processor and offered his expertise in electrical work. He said that he was grateful for the volunteer who fixed his problem and that Greenbelt MakerSpace doesn't need any special space to do what they do. The volunteers are happy and helpful, and that's all Shapiro could ask for.

He would have liked more signs around and inside the Community Center for better publicity. But to Shapiro, this was a small complaint.

Fishburne and Candey, who have tinkered with and repaired things for family and friends for most of their lives, were as motivated as ever before to help out whomever did make it through their doors.

As a nonprofit, the MakerSpace didn't have to pay to use the room, according to Fishburne, who was thankful for that.

"This is Greenbelt, you know, and people look out for each other," Shapiro said.

voting age to 16- and 17-year-old residents who are duly registered. The minimum age for running for office, however, continues to be 18.

Every Vote Counts

The city council has seven members, all of whom are elected at large for two-year terms. Greenbelt has no wards or districts and each voter may vote for up to seven candidates. Elections are nonpartisan.

Greenbelt has a council-manager form of government and it does not hold a separate contest for the office of mayor. Both the mayor and mayor pro tem are elected by the city council. While the council may elect whichever of its members it chooses to fill these positions, it traditionally elects the two members who receive the highest and second-highest number of votes from residents voting in the biennial election.

Voters sometimes think it is not worthwhile to vote if it appears to be a foregone conclusion who will be elected to the city council. In this case, however, when the positions of mayor and mayor pro tem will almost surely be decided by the electorate's votes, it is no exaggeration to say that in city elections every vote counts.

In addition to the election, the city ballot sometimes includes one or more advisory referendum questions to ask the opinions of voters on various matters. No ballot questions are anticipated this year, but the city council has until September 30 to adopt a resolution to that end.

Forms, Forms, Forms

To run for office, candidates must complete the following forms, most of which must be notarized, and submit them to the city clerk for certification no later than 5 p.m. on September 23.

A nomination petition bearing the signatures of at least 50 registered city voters is required, with each page identifying the candidate's name and address of residence, as well as the signature and residence address of the person circulating that page of the petition.

An acceptance of nomination form certifies the nominee's commitment to serve if elected.

An affidavit of candidate form provides personal identifying information.

A detailed financial disclosure statement provides a declaration of business, investment and real estate interests held by the nominee and immediate family, as well as sources of specified income and debt. Although non-incumbents must file this form with their nomination materials, incumbent candidates who filed at the required time as sitting councilmembers do not have to file again to run in the election.

In addition, candidates must submit a form that designates their appointed treasurer, including the person's signature of acceptance of the appointment.

Ballot

As soon as the September 23, 5 p.m. filing deadline has passed, the ballot can be established. At 7:30 p.m. in the Municipal Building, the candidates will draw for ballot position by lottery. In a second drawing, they will choose the location of their election signs on poles to be posted in designated locations by the city. The city's Board of Elections oversees these drawings, which are open to the public.

Penalties Are No Joke

Once certified, candidates must file reports of campaign contributions and expenditures at three points in time, all Fridays. This year the two interim reports are due by noon on September 27 and October 25 and the final report due following the election by noon on November 8. With some items excepted, candidates are required to report the totals of all contributions and expenditures and to itemize items in excess of $25. These reports are kept in the city clerk's office and are open to public inspection during business hours.

The penalties are severe for not submitting these reports on time. In a change from prior elections, candidates who do not submit a report on time will be fined $50 per day to a maximum of $500. The Board of Elections is also authorized to remove from the ballot the name of a candidate judged not to have complied with financial reporting requirements. A candidate who falls out of compliance after the election will not be sworn in without complying.

Voter Registration

For anyone thinking of running for city council, signing a candidate's petition or voting in the city election, it is never too early to take care of voter registration. For anyone not already registered at a Greenbelt residence address or who needs to make corrections to registration information, the deadline is Monday, October 7.

Voters can look to see if their registration information is correct on the website of the State Board of Elections (elections.state.md.us). Ignore the polling places given there, however, since, except for the Community Center, they will not apply to city elections.

Anyone with a Maryland driver's license or Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration ID card can register to vote or make corrections to registration information online at the State Board of Elections website. For those who prefer paper, forms can be printed from the state website and returned by U.S. mail. Forms are also available at the Greenbelt branch of the public library, from the city clerk's office or from the Prince George's County Board of Elections at 301-341-7300. Paper forms must be received by the county prior to 4:30 p.m. on the October 7 deadline.

Early & Absentee Voting

Detailed information on early and absentee voting will be provided closer to the time that voting begins, but the opening dates should be kept in mind by people running for office.

Early voting is available in two forms in Greenbelt. Any registered voter who prefers not to vote at the polling place (no excuse required) may vote by absentee ballot, either by U.S. mail or in person at the Municipal Building beginning October 16, and ending at 6 p.m. on Election Day.

According to the city calendar, early voting by voting machine will be available to all voters in the Municipal Building on specified days and times beginning on Saturday, October 12, and ending on Friday, November 1. Weekend early voting will be available to all city voters in the Schrom Hills Park Community Room on Saturday and Sunday, October 19 and 20, and at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center Club House on Saturday and Sunday, October 26 and 27.

Local News Channel Films Morning Show in Greenbelt

by Eugene "Jesse" Nash IV

Chef Karim Kmaiha of Cedars of Lebanon shows the news crew samples of dishes offered at his restaurant.

Visitors to the Roosevelt Center and Co-op shoppers noticed that the parking lots were more crowded than normal on Friday, July 26. That's because local news station Fox 5 came to Greenbelt to film a Zip Trip summer morning show and plenty of residents came to watch.

Zip Trip is a five-year-old program for the Good Day DC show that sets up a mobile studio in various towns that the news channel serves. From the mobile studio, the morning program highlights the community, landmarks and businesses of the various towns that it visits from 6 to 11 a.m.

Greenbelters and residents of neighboring cities got to see a full news crew in action. There were multiple video cameras swarming around reporters, directors yelling into microphones and crew-members readying a constantly evolving set.

Non-profits and businesses set up tents and tables around the set as local performing troupes moved in and out and around the sets. Viewers of the entire five-hour program would have seen members of the Greenbelt City Council, staff from the New Deal Café, Cedars of Lebanon and Chef Lou's Desserts, and performances by planned and unplanned entertainers.

Greenbelt S.I.T.Y. Stars Coach Kim Bradshaw has directed performances at the White House and around the world. Still, she was surprised to find that Fox 5 reporter Mike Thomas could keep up for a few jumps in a double Dutch clutching his microphone while live on camera.

Thomas later tried juggling and balancing on a rolabola with Mike Funt, Greenbelt's newest clown and circus camp director. Funt rewarded Thomas's efforts with a pie to the face.

But Funt wasn't the only clown in the audience. Two others with Da Party Crasherz came for the last hour and a half of the show complete in their silly suits, oversized glasses and missing-teeth-dentures to dance and bring smiles to the audience. Da Party Crasherz garnered the attention of the news anchors multiple times on and off camera with their dancing and exuberance.

Even after the show officially ended, the duo started a dance competition against Eleanor Roosevelt High School cheerleaders in front of the DJ table. As the crew tore down the set, onlookers pulled out their cellphones to record the match.

A member of the group who did not provide his name said that Da Party Crasherz has a history with the news affiliate, and though they usually only perform for paying clients, they entertained for free that day. Other planned performances included the Dem Raider Boyz Step Squad, Moose Jaw Bluegrass and The Chromatics from Goddard Space Flight Center.

As a token of thanks for the news crew coming out, Co-op employee Felicia Snyder and friend Cynthia Quinton presented a cookie pizza to one of the anchors after the show.

Brian Butler, longtime coach and recreation coordinator at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, is recognized as a hometown hero for his work in Greenbelt. Butler is known for, among other things, his mentoring of many Greenbelt youth who pass through the Recreation Center.

Mike Thomas interviews Coach Kim Bradshaw of the Greenbelt S.I.T.Y. Stars (at right) after attempting the Double-Dutch. Bradshaw, a past Grand National Jump Rope Champion, has been coaching the team throughout its 28+ year history.

She then discovered her wallet had been removed from her purse in the office. The man is described as black with a medium build, wearing a black hooded sweatshirt, gray pants and pink shoes.

July 22, 4:48 p.m., 6000 block Greenbelt Road. A man reached over a woman who was eating inside D.C. Charbroiled Chicken and Grill, grabbed her purse and fled on foot. She chased him and he dropped the purse and continued to flee. He is described as Hispanic with a medium build, wearing a striped blue polo shirt, blue jeans and white shoes. The purse was recovered.

Public Intoxication

July 24, 4:47 p.m., 7400 block Greenway Center Drive. A 60-year-old resident was arrested and charged with public intoxication after officers responded to a report of a disorderly person. She was released on citation pending trial.

Trespass

July 18, 6:32 p.m., 7500 block Greenbelt Road. A 33-year-old nonresident was arrested and charged with trespass after he was found on the grounds of Greenway Center after having been banned from there by agents of the property. He was released on citation pending trial.

July 19, 10:30 a.m., 6000 block Greenbelt Road. A 33-year-old nonresident was arrested and charged with trespass after he was found on the grounds of Beltway Plaza after having been banned from the mall by agents of the property. He was transported to the Department of Corrections for a hearing before a district court commissioner.

Burglary

July 18, 1:30 a.m., 5500 block Cherrywood Lane. Officers responded to a report of an activated burglar alarm at Sprint Store. The glass front door had been broken out and two cell phones were taken.

Vehicle Crime

Two vehicles were stolen. A red 4-door 2018 Honda Civic with Maryland tags 7DN6510 was taken from the 200 block Lakeside Drive. A 2002 BMW 330i stolen from the 9100 block Edmonston Road was recovered the next day in the 6100 block Springhill Terrace.

An attempted theft from vehicle occurred at Buddy Attick Park, when, as a person was attempting to park in the lake lot, a man opened and closed a door to the driver's vehicle. He then began pulling on the door handles of nearby vehicles. A woman driving a dark gray Ford Taurus pulled up and told him to get inside the car. They then fled.

Four tires and rims were taken from the 6900 block Hanover Parkway and on Greenbrook Drive near Chartwell Place, one vehicle in each location. Rear Delaware tag PCO66400 was taken in the 9200 block Springhill Lane.

Attempted thefts from unlocked vehicles were reported in the 9100 block Springhill Lane and 400 block Ridge Road, where vehicles were rummaged through but nothing taken.

Thefts from unlocked vehicles included money being taken in the 6100 block Springhill Terrace, clothing and a credit card in the 5800 block Cherrywood Terrace, an iPod in the 6100 block Breezewood Drive and a handicap placard in the 6000 block Greenbelt Road.

Rude Mechanicals Present The Country Wife at GAC

by Alan Duda

The Rude Mechanicals will present the comedy The Country Wife at the Greenbelt Arts Center between August 9 and 17.

Written in 1675 by William Wycherly, this satire explores the hypocrisy of maintaining one's honor only for the sake of appearances. The characters assume much while actually knowing little in this fast-paced comedy.

Those who are familiar with other Rude Mechanicals' productions won't be surprised to hear the character Harry Horner declare, "For my part I will have only those glorious, manly pleasures of being very drunk and very slovenly." His new scheme is to spread the rumor about town that he is recently a eunuch, and so may pursue others' wives with impunity. The husbands blithely allow their jaded city wives free rein with him, but it is the innocent bride newly arrived from the country that catches Horner's eye.

Shelved for centuries as too scandalous to be performed, it was the play's mistreatment of women that caused director Alan Duda to set the production in 1955 Manhattan during the era of I Love Lucy and The Honey-mooners. The show is presented as a televised sitcom, to which attendees are invited to participate as the live studio audience.

The Country Wife will be performed at the Greenbelt Arts Center at 8 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, August 9, 10, 16 and 17, with a 2 p.m. matinee on August 11. For tickets and to learn about upcoming productions, visit greenbeltartscenter.org or see the ad on page 3.

Greenbelt Swim Team Celebrates Season Achievements at Banquet

by Johanna Moore

The Greenbelt Municipal Swim Team (GMST) summer season officially came to an end on Saturday, July 27. The day was a busy one. Nineteen swimmers participated in the All Star Meet at New Carrollton Pool. Later that day, the team got together at St. Andrews Church in College Park for their annual banquet. GMST celebrated coming in 3rd place in the C Division of the Princesmont Swim League. This placement will likely secure Greenbelt's place in the C Division for next season.

Highlights of the season included the top point earners, Mia Moore and Darius Theodore who both earned the team 79 points throughout the season and took home first-place trophies. Ava Goodman raised the most money for the Swim-a-Thon Fundraiser and Cora Jackson swam three Barracuda miles at the Swim-A-

Thon. The volunteer-of-the-year award went to Sefa Mawuli, the team's data manager. The team also hosted the divisional meet for the first time in a decade. Another accomplishment this summer was the 10 & Under swimmers earning third place in the Knights of Columbus Mini Meet. The potluck celebration was attended by Mayor Emmett Jordan as well as council members Colin Byrd, Edward Putens and Silke Pope. The team appreciated their support. After the food and award ceremonies, the team got together for the annual end of the season splash party at Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center.

To join the team, visit our website <http://www.greenbeltswimteam.com/>. Practices are year-round and open to new swimmers.

look into the situation. They did not offer much hope for resolving what Mach called a longstanding complaint.

Education Money

Councilmember Judith Davis asked whether Alsobrooks had talked to Governor Larry Hogan about education money that the Baltimore Sun reported he is withholding. Alsobrooks said she had not, but had been "continuing to talk" with his office.

Maglev

Councilmember Rodney Roberts asked Alsobrooks: "Please do not support the Maglev," to which she agreed.

Councilmember Edward Putens then invited Alsobrooks to the August 8 Greenbelt East Advisory Coalition meeting with Maglev

Representative David Henley.

FBI Headquarters

Alsobrooks said that she is not ruling out the possibility that the new FBI headquarters could still be in Greenbelt. "There is still hope for that," she said.

teaches them about teamwork, it teaches them about being aspirational, wanting to be better and do bigger things, it teaches them about hard work and perseverance and grit, and it teaches them to play and have fun.”

“I am using circus as a way of teaching them these life skills that I think make you a better person no matter what you choose to do as a career,” he said. And how could he achieve this better than through the help of his partner and longtime Greenbelt resident, skills coach Charlie Fahey, who brings the emotion to Funt’s experience.

From day one to performance day, Fahey keeps the children’s focus each session through drastic alterations in his pitch, childish interpretations of complex skills, and animated storytelling. During one so-called burn session, where campers perform the necessary muscular exercise to accompany the technique required for circus skills, Fahey distracted campers from the pain of muscle growth with a story of how his cat, Butt-snap, got its name.

Add to the talents of Funt and Fahey the help of intern Nick Taylor who specializes in unicycles, camp counselor Mira Willson who likes balance-based exercises like the tightrope, and camp counselor Breanna Taylor, and you have an hour-long showcase of performers weaving various circus skills into and around a story (think Cirque Du Soleil style) accomplished almost entirely by the campers.

Funt, who has years of teaching circus skills to children from his time as a touring clown in California, appreciated the help because it allowed more one-on-one skill-coaching time between campers and staff than he is used to. It also allows him more time to structure each session to the type of campers attending and to tweak the final performance as necessary.

At each session Funt said he has tried to make the camp “something that feels familiar but is also new” to those parents and friends of current campers who attended the camp in the past. As part of the old, he kept the degree system by which campers can work to earn a degree in different skills by performing a certain amount of reps or remaining stable for a certain period of time demonstrating that the camper has mastered the basics of the skill and can move on to more complex tasks.

One of the new elements added by Funt is the basic structure of the program that includes teaching and coaching in acrobatics, equilibristic (balancing) tasks, juggling and general clowning, as well as the burn sessions. On day one, the campers learn safety techniques needed for all the skills they will be learning, and by the final day, the campers have learned enough to demonstrate multiple skills in the final performance.

The culmination of the first week for Funt, which carries into performance day, is when he teaches the children how to make an act their own.

“Some of these skills and activities have been around for thousands of years and most of them have been around for a hundred years, and yet people still go watch them in the circus. The reason is because the performers have made those skills their own in some way,” he said.

Funt tries to help the kids understand what makes their version of doing juggling or acrobatics unique to them. His hope is that every camper will have an answer to that by the end of the camp session.

The next circus show will be Friday, August 9 at 12:30 p.m. in the Community Center gym.

Circus campers create a human castle with their acrobatic skills.

The third session of circus camp comes together to juggle as a group during the camp performance.

Creative Kids Role Out Story About Hercules and Hippolyta

by Demetrios Matsakis

Legend has it that when Hercules was born, the Earth shook under his weight. Christopher Cherry’s production of Hercules and Hippolyta skillfully ignores the scientifically incorrect, while embracing the politically correct in a manner enjoyable by even those who know what really happened.

Hercules (Aidan Larkin) is still a hero whose superhuman strength overcomes the Nemean Lion, chases the Erymanthean Boar (Cherry) to its death, frees Prometheus (Maeve Ballantine), who was chained to a mountain by Zeus for giving fire to humankind and ventures into the underworld. But equal billing comes to Princess Hippolyta of the Amazons (Eva McNabb), who we encounter pursuing her own quest, carrying a magic girdle that can double a person’s particular strengths as needed.

Equal to Hercules in beauty if not physical strength, Hippolyta’s superior cunning helps them out of many a jam. It is she who suggests that Hercules trick the Hydra’s heads into fighting each other and finds a better way to drive away the Stymphalian birds. She repeatedly points out that muscle-strength is not always the best way to solve problems. It is her purity that enables her to obtain the Apples of Hesperides so Hercules could get past the three-headed dog Cerberus (Ananth Batni, Jonah Hurtt, Kyle Thomas) on his way to Hades – where he finds his mother (Megan Winner) has learned to understand the meaning of our ephemeral existence and is unwilling to return to the land of the living.

As the plot winds to its conclusion, Hercules gains enough wisdom to figure out how to clean the Augean stables in just one day, but more importantly, he recognizes his faults and realizes that the gods themselves are imperfect. Consequently, it is up to humanity to claim its own destiny. Our two heroes do not fall in love, but their future, like that of our species, is limited only by our imagination.

While the myths are transformed to suit the audience, as has happened for millennia, their richness and beauty shine through this modern adaptation. Even the Greek chorus contributes to the buy-in by enabling dozens upon dozens of children, sorted by maturity level, to represent elegantly costumed birds, monsters, villains and even the shades of the underworld.

The play, music, and lyrics were written by Cherry and choreographed by Elta Goldstein, with musical direction by Stefan Brodd and production design by Nicole DeWald. Over 100 children from the Creative Kids Camps participated in the production. The good-natured joke made by the Cercopes, at Hercules’s expense, was recorded long ago by Apollodorus and can

This summer’s showings are sponsored in part by the Maryland State Arts Council and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The final two performances are scheduled for Friday, August 9 at 10 a.m. and 2:15 p.m.
