A Census 2020 Undercount Will Cost Greenbelt Money

by Callie Tansill-Suddath

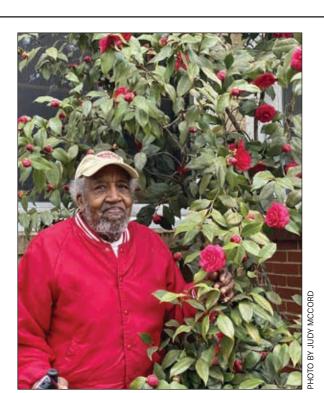

Despite widespread uncertainty resulting from COVID-19, the 2020 Census continues. Conducted once every 10 years, the U.S. Census requires households to submit counts of and data about occupants at each address throughout the country. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, Prince George's County had a 2.3 percent undercount rate when the last census was conducted in 2010; Greenbelt is considered one of the areas that is more difficult to count.

The coronavirus outbreak adds an extra layer of complexity to an already fraught ordeal. But that doesn't make the census any less of a priority.

Jordan Baucum Colbert, an organizer with the 2020 Census, wants to assure residents that they can participate in the census without jeopardizing their health. Most households received an

Community Foundation Urges Greenbelters to Offer Help

by Carol Shaw

Este artículo está disponible en español en nuestra página web www.greenbeltnewsreview. com.

The Greenbelt Community Foundation is dedicated to "Nourishing All of Greenbelt's Neighborhoods." To this end, it is working to provide information to Greenbelt residents on organizations that provide financial or other assistance directly to individuals and families in need of the basic necessities such as paying bills, getting food, housing and clothing.

The Foundation is encouraging people who can financially weather this COVID-19 crisis to donate their federal stimulus checks to an organization that provides financial assistance to individuals and families.

Needhelppayingbill.com (choose Maryland, then choose Prince George's County) is one of the best places to find information on the many charities, churches and government assistance programs that provide financial help. There are specific programs in Prince George's County for grants or loans to help pay rent or heating/utility bills. The State of Maryland provides information on many social services in a specific zip code on its website 211md.org, or people can call 211 with specific services requests.

The Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) program lists area organizations that may offer assistance for a variety of needs including rental, utility, furniture, clothing and household items. Assistance is provided based on the eligibility of applicants and organizations are limited in the amounts they may provide. Two organizations listed that specifically offer financial assistance are the Salvation Army Prince George's County and United Communities Against Poverty.

The Salvation Army provides resources to help people satisfy the basic needs of life, housing and shelter to qualified candidates. Some of what can be provided by the social services and emergency assistance programs include clothing, food and financial assistance to pay rent or utilities and other critical necessities. It also provides several shelters and short-term housing Contact

ERHS Grad Abiona on Team Seeking Vaccine for COVID-19

by Brogan Gerhart

For the last three years, Olubukola Abiona, has been working as a post-baccalaureate Intramural Research Training Award (IRTA) Fellow at the National Institutes of Health Vaccine Research Center to develop vaccines for viruses like SARS, MERS and, most recently, COVID-19.

Abiona, 24, said that she and her team, led by Dr. Barney Graham, are very fortunate that their current work with the coronavirus vaccine is not something new to the facility.

"The coronavirus research was spearheaded five or six years before the COVID-19 outbreak," Abiona said. "[During that time] we've been looking at different strains of the coronavirus: those that cause colds or even more severe strains such as those that cause SARS and MERS."

A Passion for Research

Abiona graduated from Eleanor Roosevelt High School in 2013 with an interest in research that she credited to the school's Science and Technology program. "We were learning a lot of information from a textbook," Abiona said. "But I wanted to learn more about how we got the information that was in our science textbook."

After a research internship at the University of Maryland, College Park, Abiona developed a passion for medicine as well. A degree in biochemistry and molecular biology from the Uni-

Beauchamp Match Deadline For Donations Is Extended

by Brogan Gerhart

The Greenbelt News Review has extended the time it will match all donations, up to a total of $5,000, made to the University of Maryland's Virginia W. Beauchamp Scholarship, with no deadline.

This scholarship is named in honor of University of Maryland Professor Virginia Beauchamp, who founded the university's Department of Women's Studies in 1975. She was also a leading member of the Greenbelt News Review for more than 60 years and an advocate for the Greenbelt community.

Mary Lou Williamson, a longtime staff member of the News Review and friend of Beauchamp, said that there were no objections to this extension, as the News Review's board recognized the poor timing of the donation effort during a public health crisis in which many are worried about money.

As of April 10, the donation total was $3,065, according to Norah Quinn McCormick, assistant director of development for the university's College of Arts and Humanities.

Letters to the Editor

A Welcome Refuge In a Viral Storm

Greenbelt has always been a comforting place, but rarely more so than now. For as we mourn for our countrymen and watch on television as unfathomable numbers of people sicken and die, our little town feels like a bit of heaven. There is solace everywhere you look. Take those strolling around Greenbelt Lake. What they see is more than enough to soothe the most troubled of souls. The Redbud trees with their bright purple blossoms; the fresh green leaves that grow bigger and bolder with each passing day; and the osprey circling our ever-fuller lake for its lunch - they all take our minds off the crisis and offer reassurance that all is not lost. For while we humans are beset by a plague, Spring is not holding back: Mother Nature pays that virus no heed.

And along with the natural beauty, there are the fellow walkers whose masked faces may seem anonymous, but whose eyes smile forth their confidence that triumph is not far away. Indeed, the lake is a metaphor of sorts. For as it slowly, almost imperceptibly fills with water, straining against the beavers' handiwork and those black plastic barriers, it reflects Greenbelters' growing confidence and grit that our town will emerge from this unprecedented challenge. And it's not just the lake. Walk into the Co-op Supermarket. Yes, we're increasingly masked and gloved, but we are not among strangers. For despite the inherent danger of the virus lurking everywhere, the Coop staff makes you feel like family. Their devotion demands our respect and reduces our anxiety.

No one lingers much anywhere these days – and our favorite haunts like the Library are closed – but the familiarity of Roosevelt Center somehow reassures. Maybe it's the Mother and Child statue telling us all will be just fine! We're socializing online instead of in churches or on ballfields, but the Greenbelt spirit is never that far way. When Labor Day rolls around, all Greenbelters will be hoping COVID has been beaten back, just one more craven virus exposed and disposed of, and that we'll be celebrating our signature Festival and Parade. There for all to see, as has happened for the past 66 years, will be cheerleaders, marching groups, fire trucks, even dancing dogs, indeed the very fabric of a town too good, too beautiful and too neighborly to be intimidated by the current foe – or any other.

David Zahren

Pickup and Delivery

The Co-op needs to start doing pickup and/or delivery. If one cashier or other staff gets COVID-19, the Co-op will be out of business. The aisles are too narrow and you just can't protect the staff and shoppers. Starting pickup would be hard to do there are a lot of problems to solve. But if it can be managed, it would be a lifesaver for Greenbelt. It would make the Co-op look wonderful and people would remember that for a long time. If they don't do something drastic, the Co-op may not survive.

I have already sent my suggestions to the Co-op and suggest others do the same.

Rachel Channon

Co-op Safety

I want to seriously propose that the Co-op restrict entry of people not wearing masks during the 7 to 9 a.m. period. And I mean without removing the present restriction.

It's wonderful that the Co-op has gone beyond other area groceries in providing two hours of special access every day to those of us who are in extra danger if we develop COVID-19. If someone cannot or should not wear a mask due to respiratory deficits, I hope they can do their shopping at some time in those 14 hours. There's much greater hope that if they are doing so in accordance with CDC guidelines, they also will maintain social distancing. Meanwhile, during the rest of the day, no customer can put others at risk because wearing a mask strikes them (or Srs. Trump and Bolsonaro) as silly or inconvenient

I salute the Co-op for preparing to make the aisles one-way. It remains true that, trying to fit a lot of selections in a limited space, it is not easy to maintain safe clearances when the store is crowded. The least we can do is enforce sane measures.

One thing I love about Greenbelt is that people are generally considerate and thoughtful, more widely so than in many other places I've lived. However, with the pandemic, the rare inconsiderate person can be not merely annoying but dangerous. Or rather, deadly.

David Shapiro

Thanks All Round

I just wanted to thank the staff and volunteers of the Greenbelt News Review for keeping the paper published in the midst of this horrific pandemic that has many of us on lockdown. You all are doing a wonderful job of keeping our spirits up.

I also want to remind Greenbelt residents to thank our grocery store staffs, delivery personnel, postal workers when you see them or when you enter and leave stores. They too are doing us a great service by coming to work and making sure that food and produce are available and stocked on the shelves. Let's salute them also. They are much appreciated.

Thank you all for your service and support.

I was reading one of the articles about what the City of Greenbelt is doing, how we are responding to the pandemic and what protocols are set up. It is also great to know that we have people that are helping out during this time.

David Craig Scholarship Deadline Is April 30

The David Craig Memorial Scholarship Fund application deadline is Thursday, April 30. This local scholarship is available to all Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) seniors. One recipient is selected each year.

The current scholarship, for $10,000, is paid over a four-year period. The current recipients are attending Towson University, Saint Mary's College of Maryland and the University of Maryland.

This year's recipient will be presented the first payment of $2,500 in person after the selection committee (the fund's board of directors) chooses a candidate from the pool of applicants from the class of 2020. The process is different this year because of the current health crisis situation and school closings. A award date in mid-May will be scheduled.

The Craig Scholarship began in 1986 as a tribute and memorial to David Craig, a 1979 ERHS graduate whose tragic death in 1984 sparked a desire by his family and friends for a lasting memorial and a rewarding response by helping others with education expenses.

The Scholarship Fund is totally fueled by private donations and gifts and is a nonprofit organization recognized by the State of Maryland. "Well-rounded, well rewarded" is the fund's motto.

To apply or to learn more about the fund, visit davidcraigmsf@blogspot.com. Download an application and submit it by mail to P.O. Box 761, Greenbelt, MD 20768 on or before the deadline.

The information line for the fund is telephone number 301-474-7874. Douglas Mangum, the president of the David Craig Memorial Scholarship Foundation, was a classmate of Craig, and is a Greenbelt resident and alumnus of ERHS.

official invitation in March to respond to the Census, with an ID for completing the Census online. Residents can also respond via U.S. mail or by phone (see 2020census.gov/en/ways-to-respond.html). Once the requested information is submitted, the obligation is finished and no follow-up is required.

Households that do not respond will receive a visit from a census taker sometime in June or later. These visits – and the deadline for completing the Census – have been delayed due to the coronavirus (see 2020census. gov/en/news-events/press-releases/statement-covid-19-2020.html).

Completion of the census, Colbert explains, is actually closely connected to the unfolding public health situation. Prince George's County undercount rate in 2010 translated into a loss of an "... estimated $363 million in federal funds." As a result, the county is "strengthening its message on the importance of completing the Census as it relates to the access to healthcare, vaccinations and emergency resources in the midst of the current crisis."

In an effort to boost participation, Colbert says the county has taken steps to extend its reach to the community. This, she assures the community, will not stop in light of COVID-19. She says the county is looking to local faith-based leaders, educators and non-profit groups to help facilitate outreach that complies with social distancing regulations like "food distribution efforts, social media, email distribution lists and virtual phone banking efforts."

What the next few months will look like remains unclear, but one thing remains certain: the 2020 Census is still taking place, and Prince George's County is committed to making sure every household is counted.

Speedier Impact Payments For Those Not Filing Taxes

The Social Security Administration has issued a press release that describes a new U.S. Treasury Department web tool to allow quick registration for Economic Impact Payments for those eligible individuals who do not normally file a tax return. This includes people who receive Social Security retirement, survivors or disability insurance (SSDI) benefits. Register soon through the IRS portal (irs.gov/coronavirus/non-filers-enter-

For those who have dependent children under the age of 17, registering through the above portal will also ensure they get the $500 payment per dependent. For more information see irs.gov/coronavirus/economic-impact-payments.

"When your body produces antibodies, we want to see how potent they are," Abiona explained, "So, we set up a mimic vaccine and see if the antibodies can stop a fake, or pseudo-, virus from entering cells in a dish in the lab." Because vaccine development involves working with mimic systems, Abiona said that neither live viruses, nor a virus that is harmful, are ever used in these experiments.

Abiona's second main responsibility, protein production, involves screening samples from animals. "If we are testing an animal, when we immunize them we don't know if there's going to be a response or not. That's the experiment," she explained. "By making this protein, we're able to tell whether or not they have a response."

While these are just two of Abiona's hats, she said that her day-to-day work life also means pivoting to where she is needed. Whether it's to aid in the organization or facilitation of an experiment, Abiona said, "I step in and help wherever I can."

This story is part one in a two-part series about Olubukola Abiona's work with the Vaccine Research Center to develop a coronavirus vaccine. To learn more about Abiona's research and what drives her through this public health crisis, pick up next week's paper for part two.

At the beginning of March, nearly $15,000 of the $25,000 endowment goal had been raised.

Currently, with the News Review's matched donations, a total of approximately $21,130 has been raised. That amount is approximate due to a possible lag in processing donations, according to Quinn McCormick.

"Campus mail continues to be incredibly slow," Quinn Mc-Cormick said. "So, I am hopeful there are still gifts out there that have yet to be processed."

The Beauchamp Scholarship

has provided annual need-based awards of $750 since its conception in 2016 for graduate students in the Department of Women's Studies. Once endowed, the scholarship has the potential to grow to $1,000 a year and will live in perpetuity to support generations of students, according to Quinn McCormick. The fund must reach $25,000 by June 30, 2021, in order to become an endowed scholarship.

The News Review thanks those who have donated and encourages other members of the community to honor their fellow Greenbelter with any gift they can offer. The paper will keep readers updated on the scholarship's growth.

For more information on Virginia Beauchamp's life and the impact of her scholarship for students in the Department of Women's Studies, refer to the March 2020 issues of the News Review. Robbery

April 8, 11:16 a.m., 6400 Ivy Lane. Guests in a hotel room answered a knock at the door when two men, each armed with handguns, forced their way into the room. One of them asked for money and a fight ensued, during which a single shot was fired. No one was struck. The other man then hit one of the guests with a handgun and both men fled, taking a carry bag belonging to one of the guests. It was not clear if the men had left the hotel, so it was evacuated, with some guests sheltering in place. The Prince George's County Police Department Emergency Response Team responded and searched the hotel but the men were not found.

Who Is That Masked Man? Greenbelter Stakes a Claim

by Cathie Meetre

When the call went out to produce homemade masks, GHI resident John Campanile had to admit that sewing wasn't his strong suit. But he could, by golly, ride a bike. So he volunteered to be the link between mask makers and users - completed masks are scooped up by him on his bike and readied for delivery.

Campanile is one of the key elements in Greenbelt's mask enterprise, which connects those who can sew, those who have materials and those who can pick up and drop off. A repository of fabric and sewing notions is available in the driveway of 166 Research Road for anybody wishing to make masks. We have received recent shipments of bias tape donated by Freedom Realty and others and are fully stocked with fabric and sewing notions necessary to make a variety of masks. There is also a bin there for finished masks that is emptied frequently. Many patterns are available on the internet and most end-users of the masks are happy to have any pattern though some hospitals are prescriptive. Go to facebook.com/ groups/231369768006318 for information.

Several Greenbelt-based maskmaking initiatives have been ramping up over the last several days. Having produced over 1,200 masks at the time of writing either in transit or already delivered, city residents are doing their part to provide some protection to health care workers facing COVID-19. The virus is driving the shortage of masks, but now that the number of local coronavirus patients is escalating, the scarcity of masks affects all patients – not just those with the virus.

In the absence of sufficient N-95 class masks or to complement them, the hand-sewn masks are a valuable asset to local hospitals. Though much less effective than the standard N-95 mask, according to the Centers for Disease Control, they are "better than nothing". Epidemiologists and historians point out, however, that in 1918 people also knew to cover their faces and used fabric masks to do so. Unfortunately, wearers took risks that weren't justified by the level of protection. The feeling of invulnerability conferred by the mask led to riskier behavior and possible increased overall exposure.

John Campanile and his bike are key to the mask supply chain.

A small number of masks is being made available for home use. Because the supply is very limited (20 to 25 per day), requestors must sign up to receive them to avoid disappointment. Organizers are using the ticketing site EventBrite for this process: each free ticket represents a mask. Masks should be washed before use.

Go to Eventbrite https://www.eventbrite.com/ myevent?eid=102204339932. A $5 donation per mask is requested (but not required) to defray materials costs. If you have a specific need for an especially vulnerable person, email GreenbeltMasks@ gmail.com. Masks are mostly subscribed through current availbility, though some cancellations may be received. Dates and quantities will be extended as more masks become available.

Mask use must be complemented by other precautions including frequent and thorough hand washing and social distancing.
