Scavenger Hunt Builds Community, Showcases City's Hidden Gems

by Julia Arbutus

Este artículo está disponible en español en nuestra página web www.greenbeltnewsreview.com.

Community does not always mean participating in a city council meeting. Sometimes, it means participating in a scavenger hunt to find hidden gems in your own city.

Over the weekend, a new Greenbelt organization facilitated a two-day scavenger hunt to help residents cross into parts of Greenbelt they may not have exfeel for the larger community.

"I think it's smart to join together and discover the amazing features of our community," one participant said.

City Council met with repre-

"The only way that one can bring people together in understanding ... is through conversation," Rosado said.

The idea for Connecting Across Greenbelt came from Adams, who noticed Greenbelt residents have little context for what might be happening in another section of the city. He wanted to foster neighborliness across a city that is divided by highways, age and other barriers.

After the murder of George Floyd in May, Adams got involved with the Greenbelt Racial Equity Alliance, and when he started talking about his idea for community conversations with other activists, he was referred to Rosado.

Rosado used her network to bring together a group of about

Return to Zoom by Council Includes Several Conditions

by Matthew Arbach

Optimizing transparency and public participation was the focus of the Greenbelt City Council worksession on October 14. The context of the discussion was whether council meetings should continue using Webinar or return to Zoom. Council had made the change to the webinar format after a meeting was Zoom-bombed on June 3 (Zoom bombing is a malicious attack where large numbers of spurious users join a meeting and paralyze it).

According to Director of Information Technology Dale Worley in a letter to council, Webinar "provides additional layers of security and protection for council's meetings." Meeting participation is more controlled, as opposed to Zoom, where "anyone admitted to the meeting can be disruptive if they choose." Worley's recommendation to council was to continue using Webinar, in spite of its limitations, with the main difference being that Zoom places all participants on an equal footing with unencumbered participation.

Mayor Colin Byrd and Councilmembers Judith Davis and Rodney Roberts recommended trying a return to Zoom, perhaps with restrictions like a waiting room feature that regulates all attendees and live photo verification, if necessary, of each participant. Having a staff person online handling the technical aspects of the meeting, allowing the mayor to focus on running the meeting, was the October 26.

The last weeks of the cam- riders are also required to wear question for area voters – if you don't have a car or bike, and wish to vote in person, how do you get to DuVal High School at Greenbelt Road and Good Luck Road for in-person early voting or to Eleanor Roosevelt High for in-person voting on Election Day, November 3?

A small group of Democratic Club volunteers led by Renauta and Brian York and Konrad Herling offered to provide such service on a non-partisan basis but learned that the safety standards were too demanding. When facing the ongoing concern of making sure folks without a personal vehicle can vote, the Greenbelt City Council asked the Public Works Department to provide transportation on Greenbelt Connection vans to both locations.

Staving Safe

Public Works continues to take steps to make absolutely sure that the vans are safe, including sanitizing them frequently. Van drivers wear face masks and paign season raised an important masks. City Manager Ard and Public Works Director Jim Sterling stress that the city follows CDC and county health guidance to keep riders safe. Further, to address safety concerns, each van will carry no more than four passengers

Reservations

To make a reservation, call Public Works at 301-474-4100 at least two days in advance of the desired date - but the earlier the better as demand may be high. If, rather than voting in person, the rider wishes to drop a mail-in ballot at a voting drop-box, the person requesting the ride can let the Public Works Department know so appropriate accommodations may be made.

Operating Hours

The van operates Monday to Friday, 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Sunday from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Election Day, Tuesday, November 3, hours of operation for transportation to the polls are

Happy Halloween

My apologies to those whom my Halloween decorations cause any ill will. I assure you that I do it for the kids of all ages and have been doing it for over 20 years. I can't tell you how many families delight in bringing their loved ones for a stroll but I am also aware that it's not for everybody. I only ask that you put up with it for the greater good it provides so many during the crazy times we are in.

The play also incorporates music and actor-musicians are invited to prepare a piece of music for the auditions if they wish.

Online performances will be the weekend of January 8 through 10, 2021, just after the actual 12th night of Christmas. The play is directed by Tiffany Waters, who said, "In the spirit of continuing live performance during uncertain times, this production will focus on collaborating with actors to find new ways to navigate this new medium. Twelfth Night will seek to explore themes of personal identity, relationships, isolation, love, loss and reunion.'

Those wishing to audition should request an audition slot via the website greenbeltartscenter.org or rudemechanicals.com.

Greenbelt Talks wants to know: Why did you move to Greenbelt Access Television (GATe) invites the community to participate in another installment of their new video series, Greenbelt Talks. This week they want to know why people live in Our Fair City; what convinced them to live here?

Residents of Greenbelt young, old and in-between - can voice their thoughts and opinions on issues of local and national importance. And it's easy! Using a cell phone in a horizontal position, click on video, put the face front and center, and give GATe, and the community, up to one minute's worth of words. The outdoor event will also include a socially distant trunkor-treat staffed by CCI employees and a photo booth for creating fun family memories. The popup vaccine clinic will be held at CCI-Greenbelt, located at 9220 Springhill Lane on Friday, October 30 from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m.

10 people for a virtual planning meeting to work out the details of the organization. Since then, Connecting Across Greenbelt has had several Zoom meetings to facilitate topical conversations. Next month's conversations will feature mental health awareness and resources for those feeling isolated because of the pandemic.

"Our hope is to continue to build a group of community leaders across the different neighborhoods," Adams said. "The goal would be to have a mix of events that reach a critical mass of people."

Which brings us to the scavenger hunt.

Greenbelt's Own Scavenger Hunt (GOSH) is Connecting Across Greenbelt's second activity and was co-sponsored by Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness, a kindness movement facilitated by Robert Goldberg-Strassler. Goldberg-Strassler also distributed donated children's books to participants to promote literacy.

There were 18 different locations featured on the hunt, some easier to find than others. Developed from recommendations by Greenbelt residents, some gems, like the Greenbelt Museum or the Greenbelt Station Central Park Pavilion, can be discovered simply by driving around the city. Others, like Greenbelt's cemeteries or the Toaping Castle marker, require a bit more exploring.

One participant put it best: "We thought we saw everything in Greenbelt, but there's actually still more to see!"

"I love to see this," said another resident who has lived in Greenbelt for more than 30 years. "This is a nurturing community."

The scavenger hunt is something that will endure longer than last weekend, said Goldberg-Strassler. The hidden gems of Greenbelt can be discovered at any point. The event's purpose was to bring people together from across the city to meet their neighbors and discover new features of the city they call home.

"Our purpose is ... self-healing," Rosado said. "This is for people. This is for social interactions."

Candlelight Vigil

The weekly candlelight vigil formerly held at the corner of Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen Drive has been relocated. It is now held on the second and fourth Saturday of every month from 7 to 8 p.m. at the intersection of Breezewood Drive and Cherrywood Lane, near the Shell station. The purpose of these vigils is to provide community members an opportunity to gather with candles and signs and to engage in dialogue to better understand one another and to understand issues of policing as well as sources of racism. All are welcome to join and it is not necessary for participants to bring a candle.

Only applicants who would consider moving within the next 6 months to one year should apply. Green Ridge House is a Non-Smoking Building.

Due to Covid-19 the process to fill out an application will be very different from past years. We will require everyone to follow strict protocol. Green Ridge House is considered an "at risk" apartment complex for seniors so, we are taking every precaution to keep everyone safe. The following are the steps that must be taken to fill out an application.

- 1. Have you or anyone that you live with or are in contact with been sick within the last 10 days? If yes, you will not be able to fill out an application.

TRICK-OR TREAT

Governor Hogan has renewed his declaration of the COVID-19 state of emergency and catastrophic health emergency. Additionally, the CDC had declared Trick-or-Treating as a risky activity and recommends other ways to celebrate. If you decide that you will be Trick-or-Treating, please observe these suggestions.

- Participating in one-way trick-or-treating where individually wrapped goodie bags are lined up for families to grab and go while continuing to social distance (such as at the end of a driveway or at the edge of a yard)
- If you are preparing goodie bags, wash your hands with soap and water for at least 20 second before and after preparing the bags.
- A costume mask (such as for Halloween) is not a substitute for a cloth mask. A costume mask should not be used unless it is made of two or more layers of breathable fabric that covers the mouth and nose and doesn't leave gaps around the face.
- Do not wear a costume mask over a protective cloth mask because it can be dangerous if the costume mask makes it hard to breathe. Instead, consider using a Halloween-themed cloth mask.

Election 2020

Key Dates and Sites For General Election

Eleven early voting centers are now open for voting through Monday, November 2, as well as on Election Day, Tuesday, November 3 from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Those closest to Greenbelt are DuVal High School, the Pavilion at the University of Maryland and the Wayne K. Curry Sports and Learning Center.

The Board of Elections website has a chart, updated every few hours, with the wait times for each of the early voting sites, as well as a complete list of Election Day voting centers. Visit www.princegeorgescountymd.gov/559.

On Election Day, 30 more vote centers will be open, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., in addition to the early voting centers. The only voting center in Greenbelt on Election Day will be Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

The Greenbelt Community Center is not a ballot drop-box or voting location for the 2020 General Election. Greenbelt residents cannot vote at any of the usual Greenbelt voting centers except Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

The Greenbelt Connection bus will be available to transport people to vote at Eleanor Roosevelt High School on Election Day and for early voting at DuVal High School. Residents are asked to call 301-474-2100 to make an appointment 48 hours in advance if possible. The Greenbelt Connection will also try to make accommodations for those calling less than 48 hours in advance.

Mail-in ballots can be returned to the Board of Elections office, 1100 Mercantile Lane, Suite 115A, Largo; through the U.S. Postal Service; or in ballot drop-boxes at multiple locations throughout the county. Those in or close to Greenbelt include Eleanor Roosevelt High School, DuVal High School, High Point High School, Northwestern High School, The Pavilion at the University of Maryland Xfinity Center, Wayne K. Curry Sports and Learning Center, and FedEx Field.

Drop-boxes will be available through election day. Ballots must be dropped off (or postmarked, not just placed in a mail box, if using the U.S. Postal Service) by 8 p.m. on Tuesday, November 3. The closest drop-box for most Greenbelt residents is at the front entrance to Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Registered voters can do in-person early voting or vote on election day at the voting center of their choice, anywhere in the county. Same-day registration is possible for all in-person voting, both early as well as on election day. Anyone wishing to do so must be a U.S. citizen, be a resident of Maryland, be 18 years old by November 3, 2020, and bring proof of residency, such as a Maryland driver's license or rent receipt.

Early Greenbelt Not Focused On Roosevelt's Re-election

by Deanna Dawson

Greenbelt residents had their first opportunity to vote for president in the 1940 general election. President Franklin Roosevelt was running for an unprecedented third term, against Wendell Wilkie (Republican), Norman Thomas (Socialist), Earl Browder (Communist) and Roger Babson (Prohibition).

Although the town had been created and built under Roosevelt's New Deal programs, his re-election didn't appear to be important for most Greenbelters in fall 1940. According to the Greenbelt Cooperator, 287 residents had registered to vote in the primary elections that spring and 300 more were eligible to vote locally but had not yet registered a month before the November election. Anyone who had signed a declaration of intention to vote in Maryland - one year's residence in the state was a prerequisite - could register at the Branchville firehouse, which hosted several voter registration days in October 1940. Judge Thomas Freeman, a Greenbelt resident, told the Cooperator that declarations could be given to him at any time, assuring residents that "wives of government workers can vote here without in any way influencing the status of their husbands' civil service rating." He further stated that "450 votes cast by Greenbelters would bring a polling place to our own town, and would make our voice mean something in Maryland."

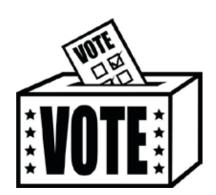

Greenbelters had other things on their minds, though. On October 16, 1940, 567 Greenbelt men registered for the Selective Service during an all-day registration event. And, the evening before the November 5 general election, the election was held for Greenbelt's 1941 Citizens Association officers. With 18 candidates on the ballot for five offices, that meeting drew a crowd. The Cooperator did not tell residents where they could vote in the general election nor did it even mention the election on the weekly calendar of events printed in the October 31, 1940, issue, which listed meetings of the Camera Club, Book Club, Radio Club and L.D.S. scheduled for November 5.

More effort was made to get Greenbelt out to vote in the next presidential election in November 1944, when President Roosevelt was running for a fourth term. The Citizens Association now had a Voters Information Committee with more than 50 members who aimed to contact all residents, either through an information table at the grocery store or house calls. By Election Day, 537 citizens had registered to vote, including servicemen to whom absentee ballots were sent. A total of 417 Greenbelters cast their votes on November 7, 1944, at the American Legion House on Branchville (now Greenbelt) Road, giving "substantial local majorities to all Democratic candidates."

Information for this article was extracted from issues of the Greenbelt Cooperator published in October to November 1940 and September to November 1944. Digital versions of these papers and the Greenbelt News Review (the paper's name changed in 1954) can be found on the Internet Archive (archive. org/details/greenbelt-news-review) and on the News Review's website (greenbeltnewsreview.com/archives).

Women Challenge Tradition In Scaled-down Utopia Festival

by Sandra A. Lange

The pandemic heavily impacted Greenbelt's annual Utopia Film Festival's original planned fall weekend of films which are usually shown at various locations throughout Greenbelt. Five documentary films, however, were showcased virtually on Zoom. Like a Woman, the film shown Saturday, October 24, highlights the stories of a dozen bright, articulate women ranging in age from mid 20s to early 80s, all working in non-traditional jobs. They include a helicopter pilot who fights fires and can't imagine doing anything else, and a woman who flies airships (the Good Year blimp). The blimp pilot noted that while there are approximately 4,000 women pilots, there are at least 135,000 male pilots.

High-Heeled Repairs

One spunky looking young woman was attired in a T-shirt emblazoned with the words "Shecanic." Clad in bright red stiletto shoes (there is a statement being made here), she casually bends her head under the hood of a car, explaining the workings of the engine to a bevy of hovering girls. Likewise, a female plumber enjoys being the only woman on a jobsite surrounded by a slew of tradesmen. She too revels in teaching young girls the fun aspects of plumbing. The film introduces women photographers, an architect, a motorcycle driver and a farmer who all have productive careers. A white-haired lady rides a horse as she photographs the landscape surrounding her Santa Fe ranch. She basks in the glow of her life as a rancher.

Job Satisfaction

All those interviewed are happily pursuing their chosen careers. They do not delve into the problems or challenges they encountered along the way. The film is an inspiring example of what is possible if girls have the passion to pursue their dreams.

Unfortunately, the remaining documentary films originally scheduled for the Utopia Film Festival of 2020 had to be cancelled. Organizers and film buffs alike are optimistic that 2021 will see the return of the usual array of interesting and entertaining productions that come to Greenbelt as a result of the hard work of the Utopia's volunteer activists.

Bizarre Revenger's Tragedy Goes Online for Halloween

by Jon Gardner

The Rude Mechanicals, in residence at Greenbelt Arts Center, will present The Revenger's Tragedy online Friday, October 30, and Saturday, October 31 at 8 p.m. each night.

The Revenger's Tragedy is a darkly comic Jacobean revenge tragedy written circa 1605. The author is unknown, although it has been attributed to either Cyril Tourneur or Thomas Middleton.

Just in time for Halloween, The Revenger's Tragedy exhibits vivid and muscular prose, like Hamlet, but without the indecision. It has intrigue, murder, mayhem, infidelity, a poisoned skull, a mistaken execution, an unlikely battle and a twist ending that manages to subvert all the tropes and expectations.

Director Jaki Demarest said, "Zoom is an entirely new artistic medium that we're all just beginning to explore, and I wanted to find a show that would push the boundaries of what this medium could do. The darkly comic Revenger's Tragedy is perfect, with scenes (like a battle royale with a severed head) that translate to Zoom in a way they wouldn't for either stage or film. Rather than doing a Zoom show as straight readings, with people in boxes, this is live theater in a way that has never been seen before."

Demarest continues, "Our production is manic, with a phenom-and DC Weird. It goes over the top, and keeps going. And going. It blends the conventions of stage and film in an entirely new way. Scene by scene, frame by frame, a movie is unfolding in front of us, live and in person. And just like live theater, anything can happen. Check it out, this Halloween weekend!"

Viewing is free, but donations enal cast. It's Keeping Greenbelt are welcome. During COVID-19,

Greenbelt Arts Center is bringing Zoom productions of important works to the residents of Greenbelt. Visit greenbeltartscenter.org to get more information about this play and other upcoming performances from Greenbelt Arts consensus of council. Byrd and Roberts were keen to note that a public meeting, where freedom of expression is key, was distinct from a webinar.

Councilmembers Emmett Jordan, Silke Pope, Edward Putens and Leta Mach were largely satisfied with Webinar, finding it a more manageable format. Yet, they all agreed that finding a way to increase public participation was paramount, regardless of the technology being used by those calling in, like access to a touch phone or not.

A discussion topic at the meeting was the possibility for a council, staff and communitywide training in the procedures and operations of the virtual meeting approach. The call-in protocol was especially noted as complicated. At present, no plans have been made for training.

Worley pointed out that most of the neighboring jurisdictions are implementing the virtual approach. Yet, the distinction is that Greenbelt stands alone in allowing public comment throughout the meeting, a freedom that Greenbelt residents have enjoyed for some time. Many jurisdictions require pre-registration to participate and prior emailing of comments and concerns, often restricting public response to specific times in meetings. Council was committed to retaining open public access.

Resident Molly Lester felt that disruption is a possibility in any meeting, even public in-person gatherings, and was appreciative of the debate.

Putens said that council should be starting to focus on a way to return to in-person meetings in council chambers and to not get too used to the virtual format.

Jordan agreed and suggested looking at ways to create a safe environment for attendees.

Ryd stressed that Greenbelt

Byrd stressed that Greenbelt should strive to be the best in its public transparency and not just better than neighboring cities, saying that "Greenbelt is Great."

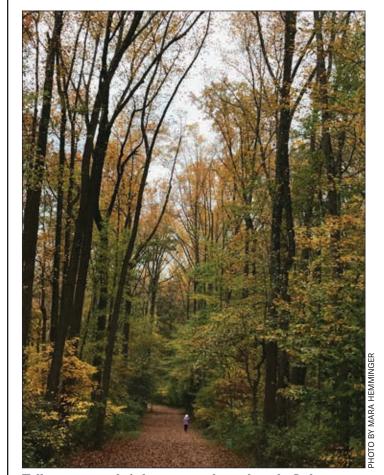

After a discussion at the October 26 meeting, council voted to return to the Zoom meeting format, with conditions, in a 5 to 2 vote with Jordan and Putens voting against. The conditions, developed by Davis, include: a host (the mayor or presiding officer) and co-host (staff member) who will admit people to the meeting and help the host know who has raised a hand; a waiting room, with attendees providing their full name, or organization if applicable, with no ability to rename themselves; everyone admitted into the meeting will be automatically muted; in order to speak, an attendee must raise a hand and be recognized by the mayor or presiding officer who will unmute the person wishing to speak; once admitted, attendees are not allowed to change their profile photos; prevent anyone from screen sharing, unless permitted by the host; disable the entry/exit chime; the host and cohost must know how to instantly dismiss a disruptive attendee, if needed; and basic Zoom etiquette should be promoted and stressed among all attendees.

is an artery that connects all three cities, and even if all "may not agree on everything," the cities must work together in order to create a framework to work from.

For several years, the improvement project has remained number two on a list of county transportation improvement priority projects. Greenbelt's Director of Planning and Community Development Terri Hruby stressed that it must make its way to be part of the Maryland Consolidated Transportation Program for it to be viable, along with SHA involvement. Recently, the Greenbelt Road project was missing from a list of county projects, with Hruby urging all three councils to quickly advocate with their county representatives to put it back on, as the list would soon be before the county council for consideration.

While all agreed on the need for a clear plan, College Park Mayor Patrick Wojahn suggested engaging SHA as soon as possible and putting initial efforts into acquiring funding, largely through grants, that would enable design work to begin. He cited the recently begun construction improvements along Route 1, a process that lasted more than 10 years and only reached its fruition through state involvement.

"Kap" Kapastin, general counsel for Quantum Companies, and engineer Nat Ballard, from Rodgers Consulting, laid out details from their recently submitted Detailed Site Plan (DSP) for the redevelopment of Beltway Plaza, in regard to its connection with Greenbelt Road. While the DSP calls for improvements to the safety of the sidewalks and exits and entrances to the Beltway Plaza property, it would not contribute significantly to the Greenbelt Road project's goals or to the road as a whole. Councilmember Judith Davis asked Kapastin to consider making similar alterations to the Quantum properties on Greenbelt Road's opposite side, with Kapastin agreeing to consider it, but noting the significant expense.

There was discussion on the creation of a task force to collect all pertinent data and develop a comprehensive plan. Davis suggested using members from existing groups like Greenbelt's Advisory Planning Board, and parallel groups in Berwyn Heights and College Park. Resident Bill Orleans suggested making it open to the cities' residents.

Hruby pointed out that at present only the ULI report has upto-date data and recommendations and that experts will need to be brought in to make useful decisions on things like road changes and traffic studies.

In the end, all present were keen on making this long-standing project happen, with Mayor

Colin Byrd saying, "let's get it done." There was an agreement for further meetings in the near future. Jordan suggested an ongoing quarterly schedule. Berwyn Heights Councilmember Ethan Sweep suggested setting deadlines, determining shortand long-term goals, with funding acquired as things progress. Berwyn Heights Mayor Amanda Dewey said "we need a way forward" and "to be better prepared next time." Hruby said that this would be a joint effort of the iurisdictions.

Jordan laid out a vision of an attractive and unified corridor, fruitful for businesses, which would draw people in to all three

The Quadroon and the Dove: A Zoom Production by Greenbelt Arts Center

by Melissa Sites

Over the weekend, an all-BIPOC (Black, Indigenous and People of Color) cast presented a Zoom production of The Quadroon and the Dove, directed by Rikki Howie Lacewell for Greenbelt Arts Center. The play is situated historically in 1841 New Orleans. The characters are embroiled in the "plaçage" system, by which rich Creole plantation owners took "left-hand" wives (or "placées") from amongst the free People of Color of New Orleans.

Playwright Charlene Donaghy talked about her inspiration for writing the story. "If you take a New Orleans haunted history tour, they will tell you about a quadroon mistress who wanted her protector to leave his wife ... He found her on the roof where she froze to death waiting for him to show up ... [Placées] have privilege, money, protection, a big house, but if [the protector] leaves, their lives completely implode. That really got to me." Writing the play required "a lot of research and a lot of conversations with People of Color, while being respectful and really telling the story.'

Local actor Cheramie Jackson did a fantastic job with the lead, Clarice, a free woman of color who is the placée of Lucien, a prominent white Creole who also has a wife at home on his plantation. Problems arise between Clarice and Lucien when teenager Juliette (energetically portrayed by Angeleaza Anderson) chafes at Clarice's plan for her to become an independent shop owner instead of a placée, with dreams of going to Paris and getting an education - dreams which will require her to trade her independence for the benefits of being a placée with a wealthy protector.

Tensions escalate as the situation between Clarice and Juliette devolves. Clarice continues to try to manage Lucien, but it seems her charms are losing their hold on him. Other characters are dragged along into the looming tragedy. Anya Nebel sings, drums and smokes her cigar with verve as the bayou-dwelling free woman, Sage-Femme. MarQuis

Fair smolders with discontent in his role as Clarice's house servant, blacksmith and old flame Charlie-Smith. The play wrestles with the difficulties and impossibilities faced by the free People of Color, and the frustration and anger of those who remain enslaved in the system.

Producing the play on Zoom was a challenge managed with seeming ease. Beautiful background shots of Lucien's Creole townhouse, Sage-Femme's bayou shack and Congo Square, along with detailed interiors, set the tone for scenes throughout the play. Most of the actors acted against a plain background, which worked better for some than oth-

Director Lacewell talked about the challenges and the unexpected benefits of putting up a show on Zoom. "By doing it on Zoom, you are forced to tell the story. For me it made it easier to focus on telling that story directly through the lens. I approached this through a radio classics perspective. There were parts about the show that I didn't get until hearing it. The connections came across even more clearly than I normally see." Keith Alexander, who played Lucien, recalled a phrase that suddenly stuck out to him: "I'm tired of this old gun, I want something new.' Every time you read it, every time you hear it, something else unfolds." Cheramie Jackson reiterated the benefits: "It forced me as an actor to truly listen. You have to be a good listener. Every single person in the cast had a good command of their vocals and their emotions, and you feel that as though the person is right in front of you."

At a Q&A after the play, audience members lauded the production. "You can feel the intensity of what was going on in their lives," said Marci Shegogue. Allan Clyde agreed, saying, "This is honestly the most seamless thing I've experienced on Zoom." Through the magic of Zoom, actor Jenifer Lewis, called by the director "the godmother of Black Hollywood," was in the audience and commented, "I listened, I watched and I got totally caught up in it. I enjoyed and I wanted to congratulate you. You captured me, you stole my heart. You made us feel and think and cry and remember."

Want to Get Scared? Check Out These Halloween Displays

by Julia Arbutus

Though Halloween activities like trick-or-treating, visiting haunted houses or participating in Greenbelt's Pumpkin Festival have to be postponed, modified, or cancelled this year due to COVID-19, there is one holiday tradition that residents can enjoy without restriction: decorating.

Marc Siegel has been decorating for Halloween for 30 years, 20 of which have been in his childhood home on Maplewood Court by Greenbelt Lake, where he sets up an extensive array of inflatable figures and skeletal creatures.

One of those creatures, a motion-activated dog head that "jumps" out of a doghouse when people walk by, has faced some backlash on Facebook for scaring passersby and even generated a letter to the News Review editor two weeks ago.

"It's not surprising people hate the dog," Siegel said. "But, please, for the 99.9 percent who like it, please tolerate me for 30 days."

Halloween is Siegel's favorite holiday, which is part of the reason he puts so much effort into decorating for it. It is also his daughter Sydney's birthday, and the decorations are a part of the celebration.

Siegel said his display always gets a lot of attention, but he has seen an uptick this year, since parents do not have anywhere to take their children to celebrate Halloween safely. He still believes he will get a good number of trick-or-treaters on the night of Halloween and is planning how to distribute candy safely, possibly with a plumbing tube that will allow the candy to travel at least six feet without any contact.

"I do it for the kids," he said.
"I'll do it 'til I can't do it anymore."

Another Greenbelt resident with a dedication to decoration is Amethyst Dwyer, who has been putting together the "Haunted Hollow" at her GHI townhouse for 24 years.

The Hollow started small. Her husband Dorian would open the door to trick-or-treaters and she would jump out to scare the children. Over the years, though, it has grown into a 20-person costumed operation that scares children as they make their way to Dwyer's front door. If they make it, the kids are rewarded with a full-size candy bar.

"We get a lot of screamers," Dwyer said. "Sometimes it takes a few years to get to the front door."

Dwyer always dresses as a Dogmonster and her husband dresses as Dracula to answer

> KEEP CALM AND WEAR A MASK

the door. They also always have a friend dress as the Goatman, a half-goat, half-man creature that urban legend says was once a scientist who worked at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center

This year, Dwyer is going to be presenting a smaller, modified version of the Haunted Hollow out of an abundance of caution. She has set her sights on next year, when, hopefully, the Hollow will return to its full glory.

"What's been so wonderful over the years is seeing adults who used to come to our house as kids bring their children," Dwyer said. "Gotta keep the tradition alive in Greenbelt."
