Webb Space Telescope Has Greenbelt Dreams Built In

by Alise Fisher and Jonathan Gardner

The James Webb Space Telescope, much of which was designed and built in Goddard Space Flight Center, will be the world's premier space science observatory. Right now, the telescope is moving into position for launch in French Guiana, and the NASA team, including Greenbelter Jonathan Gardner, is reflecting on the journey of getting it there. This is an excerpt, used with permission, from the Webb Blog. blogs.nasa.gov/webb/.

October 28, 2022 Journey to Kourou (blog author Alise Fisher writes the introduction)

Congratulations to Arianespace on last weekend's launch of two communications satellites into geostationary transfer orbit aboard an Ariane 5.

The launch pad is now cleared to receive Webb, which has arrived at Europe's Spaceport in Kourou and has begun preparations for its surprisingly-emotional reaction it

To Gobble Wobble around the Lake

by Kyla Hanington

I will just say that if it was called the Turkey Trot, I wouldn't have done it. But a Gobble Wobble? While I am not much for trotting, I am excellent at wobbling, so when I saw an advertisement for the city's Gobble Wobble, to be held on the morning of Thanksgiving Day, I hur-Greenbelt now for six years – this then my seventh Thanksgiving, my seventh opportunity to do the Gobble Wobble - but this year was apparently the first time I found such an event enticing.

In that, I was not alone. There were record registrations this year with 238 people pre-registering, up from the average of 200 in years past, according to Andrew Phelan, sports and recreation coordinator with the ried to sign up. I have lived in City of Greenbelt. Three of those new registrations belonged to me and my children, Anja and

Police Reform Vote Delayed: Council Seeks Unanimous Vote

by Matthew Arbach

Voting on police reform measures by the Greenbelt City Council stalled on Monday, November 22 due to issues with the resolution's wording. The wording was developed by Greenbelt Police Chief Richard Bowers and Assistant City Manager Timothy George, based on the language agreed upon at the November 15 worksession.

Bowers explained that the intent was to streamline the language to make it read more like a resolution and not to change the meaning. Yet, while most of the resolution was deemed acceptable, council felt that several clauses lacked vital information that was painstakingly conceived at the worksession. Council voted to table the vote to the next meeting and to devote time at the December 1 worksession to rework the language, as well as further discuss reforms that had remained unresolved on November 15.

Frustration was the emotional consensus among council, as much effort and time had gone into the matter, along with a desire to vote the reforms into the Greenbelt Police Department's General Orders. Yet, council preferred a unanimous vote on the measures, something that seemed unlikely with the dissatisfaction

Our History Takes Center Stage In News Review Online Archive

by Tom Jones

Remember your Greenbelt friends, family and events of the 2010s, 1980s or 1960s? Thanks to the Greenbelt Archive Project, you can now view and search our community's entire history online. The News Review office has maintained banks of metal file cabinets holding an archive of paper editions back to the founding of the newspaper, and Greenbelt itself, in 1937. But those carefully preserved copies won't last forever and are available through appointment only. It can take hours to research by reading each issue. As decades pass, old newsprint turns to dust.

The Greenbelt Archive Project was formed in 2018 to preserve the history in the News Review and Cooperator (as the paper was originally known). Volunteers carefully selected the best paper copy of each issue. Then a University of Maryland contractor and student scanned each issue, and created Portable Document Format (PDF) files from the electronic images, with Optical Character Recognition (OCR) so their contents can be easily searched using keywords. # Carriers Bear Greetings With this first December issue of the newspaper, the Greenbelt

News Review is distributing an envelope that requests tips for carriers. To reward your carrier, place a tip in the envelope, stamp it and mail it to the carrier's address. If you write a check, make it out to the carrier using the name on the envelope - not to the newspaper. All tips go directly to the carriers.

Carriers are paid a nominal sum weekly, but this extra appreciation means a lot. Pay teaches carriers about money and the work ethic, and tips show the additional rewards that come from taking pride in being prompt, organized and careful.

Greenbelt's carriers grow up to become productive adults who take what they learn in this positive first work-world experience to stoke future successes. If your carrier is especially meticulous and reliable, delivers promptly and dependably and protects the newspaper from wind and rain, let them know how much they are appreciated.

Despite Covid-19 restrictions and schedule concerns this past year, all those distributing the paper have stuck to their guns and helped us get the paper out every week. Our circulation manager, Elizabeth Gardner, keeps the process on track. Delivery contractor Alan Burt is a key player who supplies carriers and fills boxes and racks. He has had to be flexible as organizations closed and then reopened their doors.

The holiday season gives all of us a chance to show appreciation and to provide encouragement for the efforts of these young people. The News Review thanks everybody involved for doing a great job, caring about the community and braving heat, cold and wet conditions to bring residents their papers.

Thanks from Fire Department Auxiliary

On behalf of Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department Ladies Auxiliary, we would like to give a huge thank you to all sellers, vendors, friends and neighbors who helped make our indoor community yard sale a big success. We had a lot of wonderful people come through our doors with happy smiles that they were able to go to a yard sale safely

We would like to give an extra big thank you to Bob Rudd for his extremely generous donation to our ladies auxiliary. We thank Eldridge E. Brown and Carol Bellamy for their donation as well.

Also on Saturday, we had a big, fantastic bake sale table loaded with goodies on the Coop ramp where many shoppers stopped to buy homemade goodies and buy they did! We sold out thanks to our wonderful community of terrific neighbors and friends.

Presently, our ladies auxiliary is starting to plan the next fabulous indoor community yard sale in April of 2022. An announcement will be forthcoming in plenty of time to make your table reservations.

Thank you to all our friends, neighbors, and our amazing City of Greenbelt for always supporting our fire department and ladies throughout the year. You are the best of the best.

Thanks for the Tips

Thank you to Frank DeBernardo for his letter to the editor about the need for me to improve my political style. I agree that using more unifying rhetoric and being more cautious in how I respond when advocating for causes important to me and to the people of Greenbelt should be key aspects of my growth and development as a councilmember for the rest of my time in office and as a human being in general.

I look forward to continuing to serve under and learn from the leadership of Mayor Emmett Jordan. I also agree that I need to do a better job of building consensus among the diverse constituencies that make up Greenbelt. I appreciate Mr. DeBernardo's acknowledgement of my apology for my past mistakes, and I am likewise grateful for his instructions on how I might become a more effective political leader.

But, while I am definitely grateful to Mr. DeBernardo for his letter, I also know that he is not alone in his critique, so thank you also to any other Greenbelt residents who, publicly or privately, have offered critiques or will offer critiques so that I can better understand how to better serve and relate to you and our community as a whole. And, while I am fully aware that no one "owes" me any kindness, I am especially grateful for those of you who, like Mr. DeBernardo, have chosen or will choose to offer such critiques while using words that are not just wise enough to help steer me away from the wrong direction but also pleasant enough to be constructive rather than merely hurtful.

Parkway Trash Problem

I want to draw attention to the lack of property safety and care that is taking place at 8-14 Parkway. This is an ongoing issue that seems to be getting increasingly worse. It's not only an eye sore, it's a health risk and devalues property. Such waste and lack of care invites and creates an environment where people feel free to litter and not care for the property. I have watched as this problem has increased over the past six months. It is sad. It's disgusting! Today there was medical waste out there along with all the garbage, carpets, furniture and cabinets. The further you walk along the back side of the building, you will find abandoned paint cans and windows and an

GCAN Discusses Upcoming Legislation

The December meeting of the Greenbelt Climate Action Network (GCAN) will take place via Zoom on Wednesday, December 8 from 7 to 9 p.m. The Zoom link is available at chears.org/

Participants will learn about five legislative campaigns coming up in Annapolis this January. First up will be Nina Cardin, director of the Maryland Campaign for Environmental Human Rights. She is working on the Amendment for Environmental Human Rights. The goal of the bill is to place in the Declaration of Rights of the state constitution an amendment that ensures that everyone, everywhere in Maryland, has the right to a healthful environment.

The next speaker will be Hope Clark, Maryland organizer, Climate XChange. Hope will represent the Rebuild Maryland Coalition. Their proposed legislation is the Climate Crisis and Environmental Justice Act. The act will promote Maryland's greenhouse gas reduction goals, help fund actions to reduce emissions, enhance resilience to climate impacts, help protect low-andmoderate income households from financial harm and provide assistance to county and municipal governments to develop local Climate Action Plans.

Third, Jennifer Kunze, Maryland program coordinator at Food & Water Watch, will explain the Reclaim Renewable Energy Act, which will ensure that all Maryland renewable energy subsidies through the Renewable Portfolio Standard (RPS) go to energy that is actually clean and renewable, by taking trash incineration, methane production and other polluting energy sources out of the RPS.

The fourth speaker will be Laurie McGilvray, co-chair of the Climate Justice Wing of the Maryland Legislative Coalition, who will describe the 2022 Comprehensive Climate Package. The package represents bills that will be introduced in the Senate, likely as a single bill, and in the House as multiple bills. It includes climate legislation related to transportation, buildings, renewable energy, greenhouse gas reduction goals, methane accounting and environmental justice and Finally, Emily Scarr, director of Maryland PIRG, will explain the Maryland PFAS Protection Act, which strives to protect public health by stopping the use of PFAS (polyfluoroalkyls) in food packaging, rugs and carpets and fire-fighting foam, and banning the mass disposal of these chemicals by incineration and landfilling.

After the five speakers, the group will discuss ways that individuals can support these campaigns and the bills for the group to focus on.

The meeting will close with an overview of upcoming events. This calendar will be updated prior to the meeting at chears.org/gcan/ monthly-meetings/upcoming-events.

Tales and Traditions

Was there a special story your family told when you gathered together? Share it with us. Are there some well-remembered customs, rituals or recipes passed down that you continue to this day, perhaps delivering sweets such as mango kaju katli for Diwali to a neighbor or a family member? Tell us about them.

Sunday, December 19 from 2 to 3:30 p.m., Connecting Across Greenbelt and RUAK (Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness) will co-host a Zoom get-together to share unforgettable stories.

Everyone has a tale to tell. You can share it in any form you choose: ASL, dance, native language, song, spoken word. Children are encouraged to join in, either with a recollection or an expectation such as something they are particularly looking forward to. All are welcome to make new memories from those sharing precious moments as we are introduced to each other's traditions or a cherished childhood memory. Food traditions tied to this time of year are also welcome. Send recipes to connectingacrossgreenbelt.org.

All storytellers are asked to pre-register at https://bit.ly/GBTales (it is case sensitive, so use the capital letters). This will help make sure everyone will get enough time to share their tale as well as facilitate communication with participants. One need not register to attend.

Findley, who gamely agreed to come along with me. At 8:45 Thursday morning, we headed down to the Youth Center, where I quickly learned I had, just perhaps, slightly underdressed. It was about 32 degrees and most other people had on at least one extra shirt, if not a jacket, and gloves. I wore my leggings and my new long-sleeved Gobble Wobble T-shirt, once again woefully underdressed.

On the other hand, I was wearing my new toque, sent to me by my brother for my birthday two days before. This isn't just any toque. It has Bluetooth speakers in it and a bright light on the front. It was comforting to know that while I might die of exposure halfway around the Lake at least my ears would be warm. And if I didn't freeze to death doing the Gobble Wobble, later I could go spelunking, the headlamp in the toque lighting my way.

As I waited for the event to start and then ambled my way around the Lake, chatting with my friend Amy Hansen and clapping when the runners passed by, I thought about what made the Gobble Wobble special, about why we were all here, on a holiday, in the cold. About why we were all smiling. About the City of Greenbelt employees, who perhaps weren't there on their holidays, but rather there as part of their jobs. There so we could do this, could gather, could be joyful.

I have been, like so many, suffering under a blanket of depression this last year and a half, a blanket woven of many threads. The looming threat of a pandemic over which I have no control; social isolation – some of my own making, some a necessary caution for my own and other people's health; too much sugar, not enough exercise. While there are those who have used the lifechange of the pandemic to get in the best shape of their lives, I have done pretty much the opposite. Sometimes I find myself in my pajamas at three o'clock in the afternoon. Sometimes I find it hard to get out of bed. I live with this and I keep meeting other people in Greenbelt who feel exactly the same way, increasingly socially isolated and increasingly unwilling to socialize, as that weight of depression starts to feel more and more familiar and as rousing ourselves to do anything feels like greater and greater work.

And then comes the Gobble Wobble.

Perhaps, like me, you decided to do it - with a friend, with a family member, with yourself. Thursday morning was cold but you'd spent the 20 dollars on the registration fee and your buddy was meeting you there so you kind of had to go, and soon enough you were there in the parking lot of the Youth Center. And you kept seeing people you knew and people you didn't know, people who were grinning and chatty, clustered in small groups, happy. You saw city employees staffing water tables. You saw a woman dressed up like a turkey. Maybe you got your picture taken with her. And then the Gobble Wobble began and maybe you ran and maybe you walked, maybe you pushed a stroller or let a dog lead you. Maybe you talked to a friend. Maybe you gave it everything you had. And as you ran or walked or wobbled you saw a city employee with a sign directing you which way around the Lake to go - one way if you were running, or dreamed that you might run, and one way if you were walking and held no running aspirations. And later you came across another water table. with more people there, making sure you were all right, sitting in the cold ready to offer you hydration or conversation. And there were even spectators. A woman held a sign proclaiming, "You Are Awesome!" You don't always feel that awesome, but here was a whole family clapping as you went by. When was the last time a stranger clapped for you? And perhaps you were wearing a toque with speakers in it, and quietly listened to Greenbelt's own super band, Origami Angel, as you made your way around the Lake, and Ryland Heagy, who you used to babysit, sang "You are the g- d- King of the universe" and maybe you didn't feel Kingly but you also didn't feel bad. Maybe you were reminded of the power of encouragement, the power of kindness, the power of community. Maybe you had time to reflect on all the young people you have known and know now, and how insightful and generous and kind they are.

I can't tell you what I thought about the Gobble Wobble before I did it, but now I know I will do it again. I will walk it or wobble it. I will cheer when other people run by. I may walk alone; I may walk with a friend. I will smile at you. I will encourage you. I will sing Origami Angel to you, you King of the universe. And I will thank the good people from the City of Greenbelt, for being out there, being cold, bringing the rest of us the Gobble Wobble. For hosting the event, that we may find our way to it.

Survey: ERHS Students Discuss In-person Learning

by Neillani Hallanderson

This article originally appeared in the November 22, 2021 posting of the Eleanor Roosevelt High School online newspaper, the Raider Review.

On March 13 of 2020, the Covid-19 pandemic forced students all over the country into the world of Zoom classes and uncertainty. Fast forward a vear and nearly eight months and the students of Eleanor Roosevelt High School in Prince George's County have been back to school in person for over three months. The story of these past couple of months has been late buses, assignment overload, stress and social awkwardness, but also more effective learning, the rekindling of old friendships and the formation of new ones. We have all heard the news stories of bus driver shortages, Covid vaccines for children 12 to 17 and now 5 to 11, sanitation issues, etc., but what we have not heard much about are the students' thoughts on the matter.

An anonymous survey sent out to Roosevelt students ranging from grades 9 to 12 received 53 responses about how students feel about the return to in-person schooling for the 2021 to 22 school year, not just in terms of Covid, but also in terms of how it has affected their academic performance and social and mental health. Of these 53 students who responded, the majority (52.9 percent) initially felt both anxious and excited to return to school during the summer and two months after we have been back, 35.3 percent still feel a bit uneasy about being back in person, but are also happy to be enjoying some of the benefits that in-person school has to offer.

Many of the students that responded had both positive and negative things to say about how the return to in-person school has been handled by both the school and the county, as well as suggestions on how the school can improve the experience for them. Many students agreed with one Eleanor Roosevelt student who said that "Being back in person is ... much more engaging and conducive to learning." It is no secret that virtual learning was difficult on many students academically, so the return to in-person classes must be resulting in higher comprehension and grades for many students nationwide

The student also said that "It is ... a big risk to be taking in these times" due to coronavirus concerns. The student said that they "feel as though masks and other safety precautions need to be better enforced." Many students agreed with this; however there were also many students who claimed that the school has been doing an adequate job of enforcing safety protocols against Covid. The students suggested that "there should be more emphasis placed on students' and staff's mental well-being," as we are still in the middle of a pandemic and the normal that we have all come to know has been dismantled. This is still a difficult time – whether that be mentally, financially, etc. – for many people.

As a positive, the student added that they "do, however, appreciate that they've provided opportunities and resources for continuing with distance learning, as well as resources for those financially affected by the pandemic." Many students agreed that a benefit of being back to school in person is "better contact with your teacher in case you need help." One con of in-person schooling is waking up early, or, as one student put it, "not being able to wake up 2 minutes before class and just open the computer."

Other complaints about the return to in-person schooling have been the "super crowded" hallways that many ERHS students agree is a major issue. In order to solve this problem, one student suggested that the school "section classes by grades (9th, 10th, 11th, 12th) on different floors so the hallways are less packed with people coming up and down the stairs."

Many students are struggling with the jump back into a regular, more rigorous schedule and heavier workload than last year. One student said that a long day at school "drains energy so it's harder to do homework when you get back home." Another student said that they "believe that being in person and seeing friends is definitely a positive thing," but "one negative thing about in person is that some teachers might forget that we were virtual for a year and a half and assign work that we may not have retained very well."

Another student expressed a different sentiment from what was commonly said about how being back to school in person has affected them academically, saying that their overall academic performance was better online than in person. They said that their social health has improved,

Traditional Holiday Events: Some Are Out, Many Are In

by Matthew Arbach

Residents can look forward to a continuance of many of the city's traditional holiday events and services from some of the city's groups and departments. Yet, due to Covid-19, some of those had to be cancelled.

Among the events cancelled are: the community tree lighting, the tree lighting at Greenbriar Condominiums and Santa's visit, sponsored by Greenbelt Recreation.

As a consolation, Greg Varda, director of recreation, shared that "the Roosevelt Center will still be adorned with lights including a tree. The lights will shine on the evening of Friday, December 3 through February 14."

Varda said that "North Pole Calling is scheduled to happen. Santa's mailboxes will be located in the Youth Center, the Community Center and Springhill Lake Recreation Center beginning Friday, December 3."

The Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department will assist with Santa's tour in a fire truck on the evenings of December 23 and 24. The time has not been established yet. Franklin Park will have its own tour from Santa on Sunday, December 12 starting at 3 p.m. Afterward, families can have photos taken with Santa from 4 to 5 p.m. at the parking lot of the Franklin Park leasing office.

The Greenbelt Museum shop will participate in the Art and Craft Fair on December 4 and 5. The Museum shop will be located in Room 103 of the Community Center.

Museum Director Megan Young said that 100 copies of "a limited-edition holiday ornament that depicts the Community Center" have been made. Each one is "boxed with a bow," she said, and is "perfect for a gift." Typically, gift shop proceeds go to the city to support museum activities, but this ornament sale is a fundraiser for Friends of the Greenbelt Museum, the nonprofit arm of the Museum.

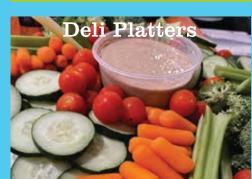

The Greenbelt Rotary Club is busy this season. On Saturday, December 11, for the 30th year, they will sponsor a Salvation Army Bell Ringing at Beltway Plaza from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. They will be having their holiday dinner for members and

Need More Detail In Police Blotter

The Police Blotter in the November 25 issue shows a distinct lack of detail in reporting the incidents of serious criminal behavior for the week compared to prior issues for many years.

The Thefts section should detail the nature and specific location for each theft. Residents would like to know if there has been an incident close to their address or if crime appears to be increasing in a particular area.

The same applies to the Vehicle-related Crime section. It is especially telling that no location is given for the November 18 armed robbery listed. The November 20 juvenile robbery does not provide information on the three arrested. Were they charged with armed robbery and remanded to a detention facility? Were they released to their parents? Who

Years of past Police Blotter reports provided this information. I find it hard to believe that the Greenbelt Police Department has reduced the level of detail they are providing. Is the News Review responding to a request from someone to deliver a more generalized report in order to gloss over these serious incidents? I would very much like to know if these troubling events are occurring near my home.

Stuart Williams Editor's Note: The News Review has not unilaterally reduced the amount of information in the Police Blotter. As we reported in the October 21 issue, the police department has changed the format of its reports, including the amount of information it provides. We receive date, time and location for a variety of infractions, but no detail. Other events, generally more serious, are described more fully. We are working with the department on this matter.

The components of Webb have traveled before; the complex 15-stage journey of the mirrors is now complete. Or, almost complete; Webb still has to make the giant leap into space atop a massive Ariane 5 rocket.

"After finishing the decadelong assembly and testing process, Webb was packed into the STTARS transport container. With Webb nestled safe in its cushioned support structure and drynitrogen climate-controlled environment, the truck driver reached a maximum speed of 7 miles per hour on the middle-of-the-night journey from a Northrop Grumman clean room to the port at Seal Beach. Leaving on September 26, with Webb loaded into its cargo hold, the MN Colibri sailed along Baja California and reached the Panama Canal.

This report contains information provided by the Greenbelt Police Department for November 22 to 29.

Significant Events

November 23, at 12:45 p.m. in the 5900 block of Cherrywood Terrace, a juvenile stated that an unknown individual knocked on her door and when she looked out the peephole, she saw the individual had a firearm. Officers responded to the area and did not locate anyone matching the description.

A fraud took place on November 26 in the 8000 block of Brett Place. The person stated that someone called from the 'Baltimore Social Security Offices' and gave a fake name, ID number and case number before stating that the person owed money and needed to provide their full name and address. The person complied, and then received a phone call from a man claiming to be Detective Jack Williams ID #763159 from the Greenbelt Police Department and again stated the person owed money and failure to pay would result in the freezing of their social security. The person recognized the signs of a scam and did not provide the individual with any financial information. The Greenbelt Police Department notes it will never ask for money from community members and there is no Detective Jack Williams employed by the city.

Shooting

On November 28, at approximately 12:20 p.m., the Greenbelt Police Department received reports of a shooting in the 6100 block of Breezewood Court. When officers arrived, they located a man suffering from what appeared to be a gunshot wound. He was transported to a local hospital where he is in critical but stable condition.

Carjackings

On November 28 at approximately 1:02 p.m., an individual reported being carjacked at gunpoint by three individuals in the 8300 block of Greenbelt Station Parkway. A white Toyota Prius (MD plate 3DX4255) was taken. At this time, the Greenbelt Police Department believes the shooting and carjacking incidents are linked and that the same individuals committed both crimes.

One of them is described as heavy set, while the other two were described as tall and skinny. The Police Department is asking people in the area to check their security camera footage for any activity capturing the three men or the white Prius between the hours of noon to 1:30 p.m.

If anyone has any information regarding this incident, contact the Greenbelt Police Department at 301-474-7200 or greenbeltpd@ greenbeltmd.gov. Investigation is ongoing and more information will be provided as it becomes available.

On November 29 at approximately 7:30 p.m., the Greenbelt Police Department responded to reports of an armed carjacking/shooting with injuries at the Greenbelt Metro Station. An adult male was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. A light green 2017 Toyota Prius (MD tag 3DT9590) was taken. Due to the location, Metro Transit Police will be handling this investigation.

Assault

City Offers Rent, Utility Assistance

Through CARES, those who live within the city limits of Greenbelt are eligible to receive up to $10,000 per household from the American Rescue Plan Act federal funds for emergency rental assistance. Applicants must show financial hardship due to Covid-19. Previous recipients of rental or utility assistance funds can apply but the previous balances count toward the total grant award allowed.

Email Cares@greenbeltmd.gov or call 301-345-6660 to receive an application.

Police Checkpoint Discovers Drivers Are Sober, Belted

The Greenbelt Police Department conducted a sobriety checkpoint at Crescent Road and Northway on Wednesday, November 24, as a part of the Checkpoint Strikeforce Campaign. Greenbelt Police Public Information Officer Hannah Glasgow reported that 257 vehicles passed through the checkpoint and there were zero DUI arrests.

The checkpoint was set up because, according to Mothers Against Drunk Driving, the night before Thanksgiving has recently become one of the deadliest nights for motorists due to drunk drivers and failure to use seatbelts. During this checkpoint, police officers looked for impaired drivers and unbuckled vehicle occupants.

Checkpoint Strikeforce is part of a research-based multi-state, zero tolerance initiative designed to get impaired drivers off the roads using sobriety checkpoints and patrols along with education about the dangers and consequences of driving while impaired.

with several items on the resolu-

A major object of discussion was no-knock warrants. Bowers stated that the department does not have the ability to execute these, lacking an Emergency Service Team. Only the county and state have the authority and can perform them in Greenbelt if legally authorized.

Most of council deemed these warrants to be used only in an extreme case, such as an instance where the saving of a life is involved. Councilmembers Colin Byrd and Rodney Roberts felt that even the county should ban their use, yet expressed that it was unlikely for that to ever happen. Roberts wanted the county to at least notify the city when this type of warrant would be performed within city limits.

Councilmember Ric Gordon introduced an amendment to the resolution that would "modify the General Orders to remove the use of no-knock warrants by Greenbelt Police" and requiring the use of a specialist from county, state or federal law enforcement. In a separate interview, he stated that his intent was "to help preserve the life of our officers and residents," as severe mistakes by the county have already occurred, and to relieve the city from any financial burden due to damages.

Mayor Emmett Jordan hoped that future worksessions would produce more meaningful results, with regular meetings devoted solely to voting and ratifying their conclusions.

but by "only 75 percent, not 100 percent." They also expressed how they felt about the change in social activities that would have otherwise been held if it were not for the pandemic saying "yes we're back to somewhat normal, but it's still not normal. Like, this is not how everything was."

When students were asked whether they would prefer to go back to virtual schooling or stay in person, the majority (56.8 percent) said that they would prefer to stay in person. Many common reasons given to support their decisions were that in-person school is better for their mental health, social health, academic performance, productivity, organization, focus and physical activity. Of the remaining students who were surveyed, 25 percent said that they would go back to virtual schooling and 18.2 percent said that they would prefer a hybrid option.

Students who would prefer to return to virtual schooling say so due to the increased flexibility, decreased pressure and safety that it offers, along with the lack of commute and later mornings. Some students who said that they would prefer to go to school virtually also said that they experienced better focus and grades while going to school online. Students who said that they would prefer to follow a more hybrid model of schooling said that they enjoy the benefits of both inperson and virtual options, such as the Wellness Wednesdays they had during virtual schooling and the social interaction they have in person.

Overall, the return to in-person schooling has not exactly been a smooth transition for the students of Eleanor Roosevelt High School; however, the majority agree that it has been beneficial and enjoyable in many ways, despite the downfalls. The faceto-face interaction with teachers and fellow classmates has been a huge help to many and it seems that most believe that the pros of in-person schooling are enough to make them want to stick it out.

In the spirit of their motto We Serve, the Greenbelt Lions Club is active at this time with many areas of community support. According to President Trenda Rusher, they "continue to support through funding and volunteer hours, individuals in need and various organizations via distribution of toys, coats, hats, gloves, books, 210 food baskets, gift cards to Greenbelt Elementary and Middle Schools and their families with community donations from individuals, and corporations such as Quantum Companies, in coordination with Beltway Plaza." In conjunction with other local Lions Club chapters, the Greenbelt Lions Club works on donations to groups like Kim's Closet, Meals on Wheels and the D.C. Diaper Bank. The club also is active in supporting Tracy's Kids, a childhood cancer awareness project that uses art therapy for pediatric cancer patients.

The hybrid show promises an impressive array of handmade wares by more than 70 local artisans, as well as merchandise from the Greenbelt Museum and Old Greenbelt Theatre. Customers will find beautiful and useful gifts for all occasions from both new and returning artists, including a wide range of functional and decorative pottery, clothing, accessories, jewelry, toys, paintings, photography, wood crafts, seasonings, soaps, books by local authors and more. New vendors at the fair this year include Liza Kirwin, with Maryland bird paintings and earrings, and Lyla Lawless, with crocheted items made from hand-dyed yarn.

December Days

A Video Holiday Sampler

by Chris Cherry

With Delta still surging and Omicron apparently on the way, Greenbelt Recreation is presenting a video series in lieu of the traditional tree lighting in Roosevelt Center. Titled December Days, the series is like a holiday sampler or smorgasbord, highlighting a delightful variety of topics and the vibrant diversity of Greenbelt.

The December Days series, which was produced in partnership with Greenbelt Access Television (GATe), can be viewed on the city website, the city Facebook page, the Greenbelt Recreation Facebook page and GATe. A new video is being posted each day from December 1 through December 15. The videos will continue to stream after their posting dates.

The series opened on Wednesday, December 1 with a video of chalk artist Vijay Parameshwaran creating a beautiful drawing for Diwali. On Thursday, December 2, Joanie Cohen and Darelynn Fung teach viewers how to make potato latkes, a traditional treat for Hanukkah.

Greenbelt Museum director Megan Searing Young teams up with Sharon Johnson of Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) on Friday, December 3. Young reads a letter sent by a child to Eleanor Roosevelt in December 1937, the year that Greenbelt was founded.

The letter contains a touching request concerning an unfulfilled Christmas wish. The need voiced in the letter is still felt by many in our community today. Johnson shares ways viewers can volunteer or contribute to help neighbors in need.

Dr. Lois Rosado, co-chair of the Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee, hosts the Saturday, December 4 video, which describes how Black people fleeing to freedom on the Underground Railroad used the Big Dipper to find the North Star to guide them on their way.

In the Sunday, December 5 video, Greenbelt Recreation instructor Laura Bonkosky shares a mindful breathing technique that helps to calm the busy mind.

Considering making an edible gift? Mother-and-son team, Ellen and Patrick Mullen, share their family recipe for banana nut bread on Monday, December 6.

Dr. Lois Rosado shares a picture book titled Follow The Drinking Gourd, which tells the story of a family escaping to freedom on the Underground Railroad.

Working on the night of the new moon in November, Vijay Parameshwaran creates his chalk design for Diwali.

- Photos by Chris Cherry

Later videos in the series include movie picks by Caitlin McGrath, executive director of the Old Greenbelt Theatre; a tour of the winter nighttime sky with Kevin Wilson of the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt; workouts on land and in the water with Greenbelt Recreation fitness and aquatics coordinators Trevin Green and Cynthia Brown; a snowy pine cone owl craft activity; Dawane Martinez and Chondria Andrews making delicious Spanish rice; and the latest offerings from the Greenbelt Library and The SPACE - Free Art For All.

The series closes with two much-watched videos from last December's pandemic-altered holidays. On Tuesday, December 14, Amanda Sorensen's and Aidan Larkin's lovely duet, Light Up the Night with Hope, which was filmed by candlelight in Roosevelt Center, will air.

Finally, for the second successive pandemic December, Greenbelt proclaims the season of hope and anticipation with a simple gesture. In December 2020, the video A Candle in the Window expressed the hope of our community. That hope still burns brightly as 2021 draws to a close.

Vijay Parameshwaran's most recent chalk drawing celebrates Hanukkah.
