Council Meeting Covers Rental Help, ARPA Funding, Taxes

by Cathie Meetre

The Greenbelt City Council meeting of May 23 had several speakers during the petitions and requests segment of the meeting. Two are discussed in a separate story that will be printed next week. Three of the other speakers were concerned with American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) spending, particularly as it related to immediately-needed rental assistance. Bill Orleans stated that he thought more of the ARPA money should be prioritized for helping people, rather than finishing projects that weren't covered due to the shortfalls in revenues. His slogan was "people not projects."

Douglas Frein (Franklin Park), accompanied by a CASA de Maryland representative, stated that many were still in need of getting back on their feet with rental assistance. He said it was "hard to get out of the hole" and

by Matthew Arbach

The city's Public Works Department has as their mission to preserve, maintain and improve the city's infrastructure, parks and green spaces. They are essential workers, to be considered one of the city's first responders. On May 16, Public Works Co-Directors Brian Kim and Brian Townsend, along with Sustainability Coordinator Luisa Robles, shared with council their budget needs for the upcoming fiscal year and capital projects that will require city funding.

The new cleaning and maintenance protocols put in place due to the pandemic have raised the department's workload by 20 to 30 percent. Townsend, in a memo to council, stated that their employees "continue to go above and beyond in order to keep staff and citizens safe." Mayor Emmett Jordan emphasized that all this was accomplished without

Greenbelt Road Plan Potential Benefits

The article "Greenbelt Road Proposal Cuts Lanes, Speed to Be Safer for All" in the May 26 issue missed the mark on describing the character of the Corridor Plan. By focusing on things taken away, the article neglected to note the potential for benefit that the Plan represents.

The features of the Greenbelt Road (MD 193) Corridor Plan which most excite me are:

Pedestrian and bicycle lanes, separated from the road, linking Greenbelt to Berwyn Heights and College Park.

Street trees that shelter pedestrians, reduce heat and improve the appearance of our community.

Upgrades to transit facilities for bus riders.

New links that connect existing pedestrian and cycling trails.

Improved light-timing to optimize traffic flow.

Simplified intersections that reduce pedestrian/vehicular conflicts.

The Corridor Plan proposes a safe and enjoyable pedestrian route that connects neighborhoods. If the plan is successful, perhaps someday we'll extend the trails all the way from Route 1 to Eleanor Roosevelt High School or even Goddard.

I encourage Greenbelters to review the plan and consider what improvements we might achieve. It may cost us an under-used lane or two, but imagine what we'll gain in exchange!

Benediction

Written and directed by acclaimed filmmaker Terence Davies, Benediction explores the turbulent life of poet Siegfried Sassoon (Jack Lowden). The writer and soldier was a complex man who was decorated for his bravery in World War I but became a vocal critic of the government's continuation of the war when he returned from service. His poetry was inspired by his experiences on the Western Front, and he became one of the leading war poets of the era. Adored by members of the aristocracy as well as stars of London's literary and stage world, he embarked on affairs with several men as he attempted to come to terms with his homosexuality. At the same time, broken by the horror of war, he made his life's journey a quest for salvation, trying to find it within the conformity of marriage and religion.

The Northman

From visionary director Robert Eggers, the film is an action-filled epic that follows a young Viking prince on his quest to avenge his father's murder. Prince Amleth (Alexander Skarsgard) is on the verge of becoming a man when his father (Ethan Hawke) is brutally murdered by his uncle (Claes Bang), who kidnaps the boy's mother (Nicole Kidman). Two decades later, Amleth is now on a mission to save his mother, kill his uncle and avenge his father.

Summer is a great time to get out of the house and go explore. One doesn't need to take an expensive trip to discover new things – there's plenty to discover in one's own community.

To help prompt people out the door, Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness (RUAK) and Connecting Across Greenbelt have put together a short photo scavenger hunt with prizes.

Participants can form teams or take the challenge individually. A list of treasures and pleasures is at ruak.org/scavengerhunt.

Upon finding a treasure, snap a photo. Upon completion of the scavenger hunt, notify Robert Goldberg-Strassler at spreadruak@gmail.com. The first four participant(s) to complete the hunt will be awarded gift cards to one of the Flavors of Greenbelt: Restaurant Week participating restaurants.

Join in, have some fun and, most importantly, discover something new in Greenbelt.

GIVES Membership Meeting June 11

Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service (GIVES) will hold its quarterly membership meeting via Zoom on Saturday, June 11 at 10 a.m. A Zoom link will be sent to all members a week prior to the meeting.

GIVES members volunteer to transport people to medical and other necessary appointments, take care of pets during hospital stays or other times when seniors cannot, stay with members who can't be left alone so that their family can run errands, and pick up groceries or other items ordered online.

Anyone who needs help now or knows someone who may need these services, call 301-507-6580 for a membership application form. Once a member, one can request a service that will be sent to the volunteer providers. Service requests must be submitted at least four business days in advance to give time to find a match.

Because GIVES is part of a federal grant program under the auspices of the Jewish Council on Aging in Montgomery County and for insurance purposes, anyone receiving or providing services must be a GIVES member.

For more information about becoming a member, either to receive assistance or volunteer to provide services, call 301-507-6580 or send an email to givesoffice@gmail.com. The office is staffed from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. every weekday.

Local Volunteers Get Ready To Assist Ukrainian Refugees

by Frank Gervasi

Refugee families, mostly women and children, will be arriving soon from Ukraine. President Biden announced a few weeks ago that the U.S. will be hosting 100,000 refugees fleeing the atrocities being committed in their homeland. No families have arrived yet under this program. Some have entered through the southern border but are not eligible for government assistance.

Currently there are over 14 million Ukrainians displaced because of the Russian military invasion.

The Lutheran Social Services National Capital Area (LSSNCA) brings refugees from worldwide conflict zones to Maryland and Virginia. They have been resettling refugees and immigrants in the U.S. since 1947. Last year they helped over 4,000 people come from primarily Afghanistan (94 percent) to the area. Immigrants they have assisted recently also came from El Salvador, Honduras, the Congo, Guatemala, Pakistan and Russia. Now they will help those from Ukraine.

LSSNCA, located at 7474 Greenway Center Drive, is one of nine national agencies contracted with the State Department to work with local communities to resettle refugees. The agency instructs volunteers on how to assist newcomers with housing and their new life in the U.S.

The Greenbelt Refugee Aid Committee is working with the agency to make resettlement a reality here for some of these new arrivals.

There are different types of federal government immigration programs. People can arrive as refugees seeking asylum or have a special immigrant visa; some have humanitarian parole; others have temporary protected status; and children may have an unaccompanied refugee minor designation.

Congress passed legislation last week determining that Ukrainians will be arriving via "refugee status." That means they will be allowed to work and apply for benefits such as medical and financial assistance. The Office of Refugee Resettlement, within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, will provide some benefits and the State Department will determine who enters the U.S.

Community support plays a vital role in the success of resettlement. Government benefits are limited – LSSNCA helps by using its resources to provide training and assistance.

The Greenbelt community can provide safe housing, childcare, English instruction, jobs (those on humanitarian parole are allowed work visas) and trauma counseling, and has many concerned volunteers to help guests adjust and enjoy the hospitality of caring neighbors.

To learn more about the refugee support effort, or to donate or participate, email Greenbeltrefugeeaid@gmail.com or visit Greenbeltrefugeeaid.org.

Lois Rosado spoke first, telling the crowd that, “Even though George Floyd’s great-great-grandfather acquired 500 acres of farmland after being freed from slavery, that land was swindled away through tax schemes, and the family ended up as sharecroppers in Texas, a story too familiar to Black families in America.” She also pointed out, in regard to the Buffalo, N.Y., supermarket shooting, “The goal of racial terror lynching is to intimidate a particular population.”

Rosado continued, “I do not advocate violence, but I do believe in the right of self-defense against racial and religious terrorists,” and she advised the crowd to boycott companies whose leadership promotes lies and discrimination.

Councilmember Ric Gordon and Bahá’í speaker Farinaz Firouzi offered opening remarks and prayer. Firouzi advocated for kindness, oneness, justice and unity to rebuild society by bringing forward the advances of the past. “From the coming together of people, the spreaders of truth will be raised up,” she said, quoting Bahá’í writings.

Mayor Emmett Jordan brought greetings and appreciation from Greenbelt City Council. Jordan asked if the last two years had resulted in any positive change, concluding that there are now three African American councilmembers, and that the city is working hard on initiatives with the Greenbelt Police Chief to codify reforms that will make a difference. He also noted that the city is moving forward with the reparations commission. Jordan stated that things have changed “a little. There’s a long, long way to go. Take personal responsibility to carry the passion and the light, and continue to work.”

Greenbelter Lucy Silver spoke, stating that she does not consider herself an activist. “But I just actively care,” she said. She advised starting small and taking steps where you can.

Shaymar Higgs, the current

Greenbelt Outstanding Citizen, is the second Black and the youngest person to receive the accolade. His non-profit initiative, based in Beltway Plaza, is called The SPACE, which stands for Sharing Positive Artistic and Creative Energies. “This community was designed for inclusion and we are now moving that needle closer,” he said. “If we can share love, we can make this a more perfect union.” Since the rally was held on the Community Center lawn, the limestone scenes from the Preamble to the Constitution provided an appropriate backdrop for the speakers.

Krystal Oriahda, founder and executive director of Prince George’s Changemakers, said, “We are a group of Black women who formed this organization to break down systems of racism and oppression while centering the experiences and the voices of Black women.” Oriahda pointed out the danger and trauma faced daily by people of color, and stated, “It’s going to take us working together. There’s a lot of hate and trauma on both sides – guilt, shame – that makes it hard for white people to work through it, too.” Her challenge is to “Go that next level. What else can you give of your time and resources? Donate, volunteer, research, mutual aid work, court watch and break down systems of oppression in budgets and policies.” She recommends groups like GREA and Showing Up for Racial Justice (surj.org) to whites who want to learn what Black activists need them to know.

Delegate Alonzo Washington was present at the rally and Donna Edwards, candidate for Congressional District 4, sent greetings via a staff person from her office. Rev. Ray Raysor presented a closing prayer.

Demonstrators walked to Spellman Overpass, where they held signs and wrote chalk messages on the bridge. Cars traveling on the Baltimore-Washington Parkway honked their horns in support of the signs.

Survey: Views on Racial Equity

A coalition of groups – including Connecting Across Greenbelt, the Greenbelt Bahá’í Community, Greenbelt Racial Equity Alliance, Greenbelt Voices Rising, Prince George’s Peace and Justice Coalition, Strib’ble District, LLC and the SPACE: Free Art For All – has developed a survey to explore Greenbelt residents’ perceptions on racial equity. The simple anonymous survey asks three questions:

1. What progress have you observed in advancing racial equity in Greenbelt?
2. What are the obstacles to advancing racial equity?
3. What actions can each of us take individually or with a group or organization to advance racial equity in Greenbelt? In Prince George’s County? In Maryland? In the United States?

All residents are encouraged to take the survey at equityweb.net/three-equity-questions. The survey is meant to offer a personal reflective exercise and to provide an opportunity for residents to share and communicate perceptions on the current state of racial equity in Greenbelt.

Responses from the survey will be posted on greenbeltraciaequity.org. Organizers plan on presenting an analysis to the Greenbelt City Council, city staff and the upcoming Reparations Commission.

The survey expands the outreach and impact of the May 25 Bridging Communities event theme to advance racial equity.

Covid-19 Case Counts Go Up, Hospitalizations Remain Low

by Cathie Meetre

It's been a couple of months since the News Review had a column on Covid. The buzz is, however, that a lot more people are catching it: people who are vaccinated and boosted to the gunwales are sick after having escaped the entire pandemic to this point. Alas, it's true. However, the vaccine continues to protect – especially with boosters – from the worst ravages.

Case counts in the 20770 ZIP code have been trending up, although the optimistically inclined suspect the current peak may be past. Case numbers recorded are the tip of the iceberg, however. Actual case number totals are masked by home tests and mild illnesses where nothing is reported but testing is significantly up – though one suspects that those testing positive at home might well go for a PCR test at a facility.

The takeaway is, case number tallies are higher than they seem.

The good news is that hospitalizations are up less than cases. In fact, on Thursday, May 26, only 35 people altogether out of over 906,000 Prince Georgians were hospitalized. In addition, hospitalization statistics count patients testing positive, not patients admitted because they have Covid. A patient may have been admitted with appendicitis, cancer, a heart attack or a gunshot wound, but if they test positive, they're counted, thus overstating the counts of serious illness due to Covid.

The takeaway is, hospitalization statistics are likely artificially high.

Case and hospitalization counts aren't the whole picture, but over time the numbers change, so they provide trends. When these numbers go up or down (absent any other factors), the trends are likely real – up is probably up, down is likely down. Currently, because the upward trend in cases is not echoed by the trend in hospitalizations – it's up but by much less – the picture is of an increase in cases but the cases are less life-threatening, though often still pretty miserable.

Interesting too is the relationship of cases to vaccination status. A recent graphic of hospitalized patients created by Luminis Health (Doctors Community and Annapolis hospitals combined) shows 29 patients hospitalized who have Covid and divides them into three groups: unvaccinated, vaccinated and boosted. In the Luminis tallies, over half (16 to 13) of those hospitalized patients are either vaccinated or boosted.

Isn't vaccination supposed to help? And indeed, yes, it does. None of the available graphics show effectively that unvaccinated people are hospitalized out of proportion to their numbers. Patient counts alone don't show this. A rough calculation for our county shows that an unvaccinated person is much more likely to be hospitalized than a vaccinated person.

Staying Safe

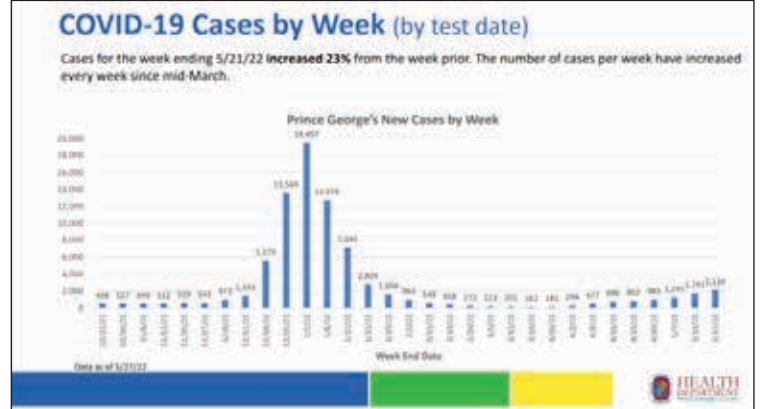

As responsibility for protection against disease reverts to the individual, trends can be used for each person to manage their own risk. Especially for the more vulnerable, following the rise and fall in cases can help individuals choose not to attend gatherings or elect to wear a mask in group situations to protect themselves when a wave is ramping up. It has for years been commonplace and socially acceptable in Japan, for example, for individuals to wear masks to protect themselves and others in public. Post-Covid, wearing a mask in Greenbelt should raise no eyebrows. But, as one of our editorial board noted during a recent local meeting, wearing masks with one's nose sticking out of the top does no good for man nor beast.

Maryland Zip code data for cases in 20770 compares the recent rise in cases with the sharp peak in early January. New cases appear to have flattened out, perhaps signaling a decline. Data is taken from coronavirus.maryland.gov/datasets/mdcovid19-master-zip-code-cases.

Hospitalized cases have increased significantly but are well below early January, which was three to four times higher. The increase seems to have leveled out, perhaps signaling the end of the current surge.

This year of case counts puts the latest surge into perspective. Although home testing means official counts are low, cases have not catapulted up as in January. Those with positive home tests may also confirm with a recorded PCR test, resulting in a larger proportion of positive official tests.

he and others felt “caught in a trap and you can’t get out.” For him, it was urgent to get help because if he doesn’t have his entire balance next month for a court date, he will be evicted. He pleaded with council to try to help families and children quickly instead of putting money toward anything else.

Gianni Smith also spoke on behalf of rental help. He noted that the need was immediate. He pointed out that there is a waitlist at homeless shelters (and no shelters nearby), so those evicted have nowhere to go. He described his research on the expense of potential long-term effects of eviction on society, including increases in crime and the disruption of children’s education. He noted that rents have gone from $1,600 to $2,300, and that by the time grants are made, three or four months will have elapsed since the application and driven the original balance up. He said council has the potential to rewrite history by allocating more money to rental help.

ARPA Funding

The oddly-named ARPA Immediate Funding agenda item, likely inspiring these several pleas, did not in fact offer funding that was either immediate or additional. It was specifically to allow those who had already received some funding to apply for a second round. It did not apportion additional funds. Council seemed committed to keeping a discussion on additional funding to an upcoming ARPA worksession.

CARES Director Liz Park described the proposal under consideration at this meeting as a revision to the way the rental assistance program was being offered. CARES has already given out $1.5 million in assistance and has about $50,000 left of $200,000 that was redirected from the homeowners’ allocation. This money was originally reserved for new applications. CARES is still receiving inquiries and has a waiting list of 15 to 20 applicants in line for a first grant. They also have 20 to 30 prior grantees who are hoping for additional funds. (NOTE: The city’s website recently has been updated to invite those needing rental assistance to call CARES.)

had elapsed since their previous grant, but link receipt to participation in other programs to help the applicant improve their financial position longer term.

The county, with whom the city cooperates, is also still working through applications received prior to closing their list in December 2021. The process includes documentation from the landlord, who also directly receives the check. Park said the applications are from a variety of locations in the city. Those applying first go on the waitlist and once they get the application, must submit documentation which includes getting information from the landlord. Assembling documentation takes the majority of the time and once that’s in hand, said Park, it is about two weeks to payment. In a related question in another agenda item, Councilmember Judith Davis asked Acting City Manager Tim George to provide information on how many evictions had taken place at Franklin Park and whether the landlord was sending copies of the notices to the city as promised.

Taxes, Admin Reports

The council meeting also included the second of two public hearings on real estate taxes. The proposal is that the tax rate will remain the same – but as Davis was at pains to point out, the impact is that residents’ tax bills will go up because, although the rate is the same, property assessments have risen. Councilmember Rodney Roberts stated that he will vote against maintaining the current tax rate and instead propose lowering it so that real estate taxes remain the same. Davis challenged the community to say which city programs should be dropped or curtailed to reduce the budget – which would be inevitable if the tax rate were to be lowered.

George reported that the hiring of a new director of Public Works is close but the economic development position surfaced few applicants and will be reposted, recasting the description and extending the advertising to new sources.

George also reported that City Treasurer Bertha Gaymon had begun implementation of the new financial management software. He reported that ongoing security issues in Franklin Park and Springhill Lake Recreation Center will result in adding or repositioning cameras and lighting. City staff are organizing material from the outreach to the community to present all the ARPA suggestions in an organized format.

Mayor Emmett Jordan moved to change the title of Acting City Manager – and this agenda item was thus brought to a close by new Interim City Manager Tim George.

Jordan and Davis both reminded attendees of the standards of behavior required of both councilmembers and other attendees when speaking. This drew an immediate riposte from Orleans who averred that council was always contravening its own rules and that it does too much talking and “blurts things out.” Orleans’ view was: “That’s not what consumes the lengthy meetings we have had in our recent past, as much as council just endlessly, endlessly, talking.”

the addition of new staff, extolling them as capable individuals who were meeting changing demands.

Compost, Recycling

Robles reported that food scraps continue to be picked up twice a week from the Buddy Attick Park recycling station. For those seeking to produce compost at home for their own use, Public Works provides bins at a greatly reduced rate. Electronic recycling remains active, with the numbers of those participating still in the 190 to 300 range. Kim stated that this is “not a cash-flow positive” effort for the city, with the vendors accruing the majority of the profits.

Proper use of the recycling stations has posed a problem, as Kim indicated that at times there was 100 percent contamination. He felt that more education is the solution, not more bins. Robles said that a more strategic approach is called for to better situate and distinguish the bins from trash receptacles.

Grants Received

Public Works received two large grants this past year. The first was a $100,000 Community Legacy Grant from the Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development toward the Four Cities Waste Reduction and Education Initiative that was used for the purchase of BigBelly kiosk stations. The other was a combined amount of $63,500 from Maryland Smart Energy Communities-Maryland Energy Administration grants that was used to install energy efficient LED lighting at the Youth Center and Public Works warehouses, as well as to add to the city’s electric vehicle charging stations; all focused on helping “to reduce the city’s carbon footprint,” according to the memo.

The city has three Level Two electric vehicle charging stations which can accommodate two vehicles each. At present, this is enough for the city’s fleet of electric vehicles, but if that number were to increase, more stations will be needed soon.

Ballfields, Dog Park

Townsend related that the city’s sports fields are “in okay shape,” with significant wear caused by unscheduled, unpermitted use by unrecognized groups. Concerning the dog park, Townsend said that efforts are moving ahead to provide water dispensers for both people and pets.

Interns

There was a discussion on the city’s use of interns, which typically are unpaid positions. Councilmember Judith Davis proposed looking into possibly providing some sort of compensation as an enticement. Kim said that Public Works normally has two interns at a time, frequently from the University of Maryland, who mainly focus on the city’s Geographic Information System data mapping.

Bus Service

The city’s Greenbelt Connection bus service ridership numbers are nearly at pre-pandemic levels for weekly usage. Weekend numbers remain lower. Council debated the idea of expanding its use by offering a fixed route throughout the city in addition to its call-in service. Jordan proposed a pilot program as a first step. Kim stated that 75 percent of its use is still medical visits to Doctor’s Hospital and that this should not be jeopardized. Public Works is in talks with Beltway Plaza about the idea of a circulator service as part of the proposed redevelopment plans.

Staff Compensation

Acting City Manager Timothy George informed council that a long-planned compensation study would begin in May and be ready for review at the Fiscal Year 2024 budget deliberations. Davis viewed its delay as a problem, stating that “we may lose people in the meantime.” Councilmember Ric Gordon asked if something could be done now to compensate staff, before the study is completed. George said that staff are looking into a premium pay plan and how it can best be disbursed.

WMATA trail

Director of Planning and Community Development Terri Hruby stated that the Greenbelt Station trail project is on hold for the moment until its full cost is estimated. At present, this is $3 million. Hruby also said that the parking lot renovation at Buddy Attick Park should be complete enough for use during the July 4 celebration.

Capital Projects

Public Works presented a list of upcoming capital projects, at the combined cost of $1,390,000. It includes: a pedestrian/bicycle master plan at $20,000; a bus stop accessibility study at $20,000; street resurfacing on Hanover Parkway, Lastner Lane, Greenhill and Ridge Road (Southway to Gardenway) at $900,000; miscellaneous concrete repairs on sidewalks and driveways at $100,000; a street lighting pilot to upgrade lighting on Crescent Road and Ora Glen Drive to energy efficient LED lights at $50,000; improvement to Greenbrook trails at $50,000; and, a Buddy Attick Park inclusive playground at $250,000.

According to the Capital Funds report to council, regarding the playground, it would “serve children ages 2 to 12” and “create play experiences that meet a variety of needs, interests and abilities” (including wheelchair accessibility) for youth who have been long overlooked and need this type of recreation the most. Kim looked for this to “make true change” and have a “generational impact.”

Staffing

Public Works is not looking to increase its staff. Kim acknowledged that while recruiting efforts are successful, the turnover rate is high. He said that it is often “a hard sell” to attract workers at $16.50/hour with the long-term goal of acquiring benefits and retirement after years of service. Kim explained that the strategy is “to help the lowest guy get better,” creating “upward motion in the department,” this being a “win/win” for all. Kim said that the Public Works Department “is a good place to work” and that it “takes a certain type of person to stick and stay. Some do and some don’t.”

Kim stressed that during the pandemic, all of the department “showed up and did their jobs, despite their fears.” May being Public Works Month, Jordan ended the meeting by saying that “this should be Public Works Year,” praising the department for doing a “fantastic job.”

Budding Golden Age Artists Make Greeting Cards & More

by Mary Moien

At the May 25 Greenbelt Golden Agers meeting, artist Mary Ann Lipovsky taught members about producing alcohol-ink abstract greeting cards. Assisted by Arts Education Specialist Amanda Larsen, the budding artists enjoyed camaraderie while creating greeting cards or other objets d'art using paints, alcohol, brushes and cans of air. Lipovsky, who participates in the annual Greenbelt Festival of Lights, indicated that this was the first time she had taught a class on painting greeting cards. A wonderful painting day was had by all.

The Golden Age Club will start weekly in-person meetings again in June. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 11 a.m. in the Community Center.

explained that the holiday was dedicated to all service people and honored those who died in combat, but also those who died of old age, of Covid, of cancer or from suicide. "We honor them all," he noted.

The sentiment was echoed by Brown who added that, "Memorial Day is for the families of those we have lost." A retired colonel in the U.S. Army Reserve, Brown's military record spanned more than a quarter century. In 2004, he was deployed to Iraq, where he earned a Bronze Star.

"When I had the opportunity to serve in Iraq, I was less concerned about my own welfare than I was for the welfare of my family. And they were well supported," he said, thanking the people who work in American Legions and elsewhere for providing a community.

Brown, who is not running for re-election, noted he was pleased to see Democrats, Independents and Republicans come together on Capitol Hill to make sure the armed forces have what they need.

Turner, who is also not running for re-election, thanked the crowd of veterans for their service, and then asked everyone to continue in their service to the country by voting in the primary election on July 19.

Historic House Reopens Doors After Prolonged Covid Hiatus

The Greenbelt Museum hopes Greenbelters will come by the Museum on Sunday, June 5, from 1 to 3 p.m. for a quick walk-through of the first floor of 10-B Crescent Road. Although the Museum's lecture series has continued since the pandemic began, as have group walking tours and other Museum activities, the Museum has been cautious about reopening in an effort to keep visitors, volunteers and staff safe in the small spaces of the house. Roughly 400 square feet per floor makes social distancing difficult. The Museum was also waiting for warm enough weather that it could keep the downstairs doors open to provide maximum air circulation.

The quick tours are free and visitors do not need to sign up in advance.

However, going forward, the museum will have a timed ticket entry system that will allow them to provide a better visitor experience overall. House tour tickets ($5 per person) must be purchased in advance at Eventbrite.com/o/greenbelt-museum-31069568151. Paid tickets for upcoming walking tours will be available on Eventbrite also, although free tours will continue on specific dates throughout the year, including over Labor Day weekend.

Those interested in scheduling an outdoor walking tour for a group (five or more people) should contact the Museum's education/volunteer coordinator at education@greenbeltmuseum.org. Students, seniors, church groups, associations and others are welcome. The Museum requests at least two weeks' notice to allow time to schedule guides.

The Museum is currently seeking volunteer guides to give house tours and walking tours. Those who have an interest in Greenbelt history, enjoy talking with people and have free time during weekdays and/or weekends should email the Museum at education@greenbeltmuseum.org for a volunteer application form. It's not necessary to be an expert - training is provided.
