Linda Ivy Chosen Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen for 2023

by Melissa Sites

Linda Ivy "has personified the [Greenbelt Labor Day] Festival as its president for the past 15 years, through the sudden loss of her beloved husband and helpmate Kelly, and then through a terrible pandemic, even while continuing to serve the Greenbelt community in many other ways," according to Bob Zugby's introduction of the Outstanding Citizen. Zugby added that Ivy had helped make possible the rides and amusements, the diversity of people and attractions and the wide variety of foods and treats.

"Greenbelt is a unique place," commented Ivy. "Everybody knows everybody, and everybody is kind. I'm humbled by this award because there are so many people who do great things. That's what we base it on: if you need help, you just call." She explained, "If someone needed a volunteer, I would raise my hand. Before I was on the Labor Day Committee, my kids went to St. Hugh's, and I organized women's league that played on Braden Field. Ivy worked alongside him, and that started her on the road to volunteering.

by Cathie Meetre

Though perhaps neither announcement at the September 11 Greenbelt City Council meeting was entirely unexpected, both were poignant. The meeting's biggest news, though nearly last on the agenda, was that its longest-serving member, Councilmember Judith Davis, would not run for re-election this November.

As the meeting drew to its close, Davis requested permission to read a statement (see box). She said she would not run for re-election this fall, ending a period of continuous service on council that spans 30 years.

With a voice very strictly under control but with a palpable undercurrent of strong feeling, she was quick to note that she would continue to be active in public life.

Everybody in the council chamber stood and applauded her - and she visibly teared up as her colleagues gathered round her. During her long and productive tenure on council (this is her 15th consecutive two-year term), she was mayor for 16 years, Greenbelt's longest continuouslyserving mayor. Her election as mayor also meant she was the highest vote-getter in eight consecutive elections.

Her decision not to run means, as she pointed out to an audience containing most, if not all, of the potential candidates for election in November, that there will now be two places on council to be contested.

Filling Vacant Seat

Earlier in the meeting, as its first action, in fact, council identified the temporary replacement for Colin Byrd who abruptly resigned in August only a few months prior to council elections. Byrd, as Davis described it, had "left us in the lurch."

Greenbelt Teen Shot and Killed Shortly After Leaving School

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On Monday, September 11, 16-year-old Jayda Medrano-Moore, of Greenbelt, was shot and killed in Lanham, a few feet from the high school she attended.

At approximately 3:45 p.m., officers responded to reports of a shooting in the 9800 block of Palamar Drive, across from DuVal High School. Jayda was found outside, suffering from a gunshot wound. She was pronounced dead a short time later at a hospital.

Police believe Jayda had left the school and was walking on Palamar Drive when a dispute occurred between two groups of young people. During that dispute, a gun was fired and Jayda was shot by a yet-unidentified person. Prince George's County Police Department say investigators continue to work to determine the circumstances of the dispute and the shooting.

In a GoFundMe for funeral expenses, Jayda's father, Glendon Reid, said his daughter was a basketball player at DuVal with aspirations of joining the WNBA. She was loved by her coaches, fellow students and friends and was looking forward to turning 17 later this month, he shared. "I am deeply saddened by my daughter's loss and wished it was just a bad dream," he wrote.

hallmark of Greenbelt. I learned to swim at the Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center, and, later, had responsibility for others as a lifeguard. Greenbelt's Little League taught me teamwork and sportsmanship as a child and I taught Matthew Inzeo those values as a coach.

I graduated from Prince George's Community College with a degree in general studies and certification in criminal justice. I joined the Prince George's County Police Department and have had multiple sessions of further training on the job. Commitment to service compelled me to become a police officer.

Throughout my career I have walked a beat, working directly with the community. I have had the honor of receiving two lifesaving awards, one for saving a toddler from drowning and a second for aiding an elderly victim of gun violence.

Participation in the city has been a part of my life since my youth. In high school, I served on the Youth Advisory Committee and helped with the planning and youth input of the thennew city skate park.

I have served on the Public Safety Advisory Committee. As a police officer, I am grateful to have helped put up the mile safety markers around Buddy Attick Park. Thanks to these

Judith Davis to Retire

After much deliberation and 30 years of service on the Greenbelt City Council, I have decided not to run for another term. I will never be able to thank enough all those who have offered their support, advice and generosity to me over all these years. Your encouragement helped me to continue working for Greenbelt and its residents for as long as I have.

This will be my second retirement. My first was after 35 years of teaching in elementary schools, and I still miss interacting with my students. With this second retirement, I will miss working as a member of council for my constituents and acting on Greenbelt's behalf throughout the county, state and beyond.

The good thing is I'm not leaving Greenbelt - it's been my home town for nearly 50 years. There will be more doors to open, more opportunities to serve. Thank you again for all your support and good wishes.

I remain Committed to Community - always!

Sylla Tragedy

I appreciate the News Review coverage of this tragedy, which I found thorough, empathetic and informative. I'm writing to object to the phrase "...she was walking at the wrong time, in the wrong place," used in the September 7 issue (page 8). It wasn't clear whether the phrase was the reporter's or a police officer's. Either way, I can't help but doubt that this same kind of phrase would have been used to describe the circumstances if I, a white male American citizen, had been murdered in Schrom Hills Park on July 31. If nearly an hour and a half before sunset on a summer Saturday in a public park is the wrong time and place then we have a serious problem. From what's been made public it doesn't seem to me that Mme. Sylla made any bad choices (other than perhaps leaving her cell phone behind, though I can picture myself doing the same thing in the name of solitude and relying on my privilege to keep me safe). This tragedy is not her fault. I understand that Landon is innocent until proven guilty, but I firmly believe that we must stop blaming victims of crimes, especially when those victims are female immigrants of color.

Andrew Durso Editor's Note: The phrase "at the wrong time, in the wrong place" implies nothing more than, for example, the presence of people in their house when a plane falls on it. It assigns neither blame nor causation. The people in the house didn't make the plane fall. And Mme. Sylla did not invite her own death.

Rev. Robert Lewis

Robert Lewis

Robert Lewis died in the early hours of Wednesday September 6, 2023, at his home. The cause was cardiac arrest. He was 92 years old.

Robert was a familiar sight in Greenbelt. Often seen on his daily walks around the lake with his wife, Sylvia, and, after Lewy body dementia took its toll, with his walker in Roosevelt Center or the Co-op. When that was no longer possible, he would take daily drives through BARC and the Patuxent Wildlife Center with Sylvia, Barbara Havekost or Dorrie Bates.

Robert was born in Heltonville, Ind., July 25, 1931, the third son of Rev. Paul S. Lewis and Lillie Lewis. His father was a Methodist pastor, and while Robert was growing up, the family moved every four years from one small southern Indiana town to another. As valedictorian of Plainville High School, Robert received a Rector Scholarship to DePauw University from which he graduated with a B.A. in philosophy in 1953. He served Methodist congregations in Indiana and the state of New York as a student minister before receiving a Master of Divinity degree from Drew University in 1955. When he returned to Indiana he decided to train as a Goodwill Industries executive. One Sunday he visited the All Souls Unitarian Church in Indianapolis where he met and later married Sylvia Kelsey. The couple moved to Hagerstown, where Robert ran the Goodwill Industries office. After being invited to be parttime minister for the Hagerstown Unitarian Fellowship, Robert received guest preaching invitations at other Unitarian congregations. This led, in 1961, to his being called as minister to a congregation in Bethesda. While he was there the building was built and named the River Road Unitarian Church. Robert left RRUC in 1968 to pursue a Ph.D. in psychology at Catholic University. He moved, with his family, to a GHI house in Greenbelt where he lived the rest of his life. He didn't complete his Ph.D., but served, for

by Jenni Pompi

Utility billing, a backlog of maintenance requests, building security and pests were chief among the concerns of more than three dozen Charlestowne North apartment tenants, who held a sometimes-heated question-andanswer session Saturday with the new property manager.

A 178-unit tower-style apartment complex built in 1965, Charlestowne North was once seen as "the place to live" in the D.C. Metro area, but the complex has gone downhill quickly since the property changed hands in February of this year, according to residents. The new owner, listed as Charlestowne North Holding Company LLC, has a New York address and no local presence other than the property management company they contracted to run the complex, Livingo Communities, which is also based out of New York.

Hannah Gould has been living in the complex for almost two years. She organized the first tenant meeting on June 17 to address growing concerns. "This place has become a slum," Gould said, citing lack of trash pickup, building vacancies, pest infestations and the general appearance of the building and facilities.

Debbie Brooks, who has lived in Charlestowne North for six years, said she noticed "right away" that things were going by the wayside under new ownership: the grass was overgrown, garbage pickup became irregular and the building door locks stopped working a few months ago and have yet to be replaced, leaving the building unsecure.

But the biggest concern of Brooks and many of her neighbors was the large utility bills she started receiving. Prior to the new ownership, gas and electricity were included as part of the rent, and water and sewage were added to the bill as an additional charge. Brooks received a utility bill in the hundreds of dollars for her one-bedroom apartment that is less than 700 square feet. Patrick Malone, who has been living in the complex since May, said the apartment utilities were higher than what his partner had been paying in his single-family home, located just a few miles away. Several other tenants have received similar bills and struggled to understand why.

Lease Terms Changed The reason for the change, according to Ginger Reid, the new property manager for Charlestowne North, is that the new owners have decided to change the terms of the lease and will be charging for utilities separately using a ratio utility billing (RUB) scale. This means that buildingwide utilities will be split by unit, with each unit paying a share of the bill depending on square footage and occupancy. Under the current billing scheme, management is paying 75 percent of the utility costs, and residents are splitting the remaining 25 percent, Reid said.

Much of the confusion was because tenants received utility bills even though they have not renewed their leases and therefore are not responsible for the new lease terms that require separate utility payments. Reid confirmed tenants who have not renewed are not responsible for paying those bills, which come from a thirdparty billing company.

Higher Costs

Reid, an employee of the management company Livingo Communities, said RUB scales are not uncommon for tower buildings that were built many years ago, without individual meters for each unit. The reason the bills are so large, she said, is because there is a high vacancy rate in the complex -48 of the 178 units are empty – which means the utility bills are split among fewer units.

Ashley Pace, the leasing agent for Charlestowne North who was hired just two weeks ago, is working on marketing efforts to fill as many units as possible to reduce the price of utilities per unit.

Vacancy Rate

However, the complex is becoming less appealing to wouldbe-tenants as well as current ones. Grace Beuchel recently toured a unit in preparing to rent it but found the air-conditioner was likely leaking, with a water stain visible beneath it, the fridge was sticky on "almost the entire outside," the toilet was missing its seat (which was lying elsewhere) and the apartment she was told was ready was then described as "almost ready" and finally, was admittedly in need of a deep clean. Beuchel opted not to move in.

Maintenance Backlog

Another big concern among residents was the maintenance backlog. Muhammad Khalid has been living in the building for six months and has had multiple outstanding maintenance requests during that time. "When we came the apartment was in terrible condition," he said. Reid responded that repairs were starting on Khalid's apartment and acknowledged that it was "ridiculous" that he had to wait six months.

Reid, who has been on the job for just one month, said that when she arrived there was a backlog of more than 90 maintenance requests. Last week, she said they had hired a temporary maintenance worker who closed 30 of the requests and would continue to close requests this week. She also said she was expecting to hire a permanent maintenance worker for the property.

Security Concerns

Residents also raised security concerns, including a dark parking lot, vehicle break-ins and front building doors that do not lock. The locks malfunctioned several months ago and are now taped open, according to several residents at the meeting. "I'm scared for my kids," said one unnamed resident. "There was a homeless person in the laundry room," she said, which was corroborated by several other residents.

"As far as the doors are concerned," Reid said, "the response I got [from management] is that the doors will be secured in the

The Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) has awarded two grants this fall and is supporting a new program.

GCF awarded $5,000 to the Relic ensemble to help fund their program this past spring of local classical music concerts, open rehearsals and a petting zoo (an opportunity for elementary school students to see and handle classical instruments).

GCF awarded $4,770 to The SPACE to create a Revolutionary Self Care program for residents of Greenbelt West. Revolutionary Self Care promotes individual self-healing through opportunities for self-expression using the modalities of art and poetry, yoga and meditation. Additionally, GCF was asked and agreed to provide $5,000 to Connecting Across Greenbelt's microgrant program, to be paid back by the City of Greenbelt from American Rescue Plan Act funds by the end of the year.

GCF seeks to support a thriving, engaged community that is socially responsible, environmentally conscious and supports education, the arts and sciences. GCF does this by helping to fund community projects that serve Greenbelt citizens while building upon the ideals of collaboration, cooperation and engagement through the generous participation of individuals and organizations. GCF grant amounts are based on the application but can range from a few hundred dollars up to a maximum of $5,000.

Input Requested

However, GCF is struggling. We have seen our ability to impact the city diminish over the past three years and are in the midst of serious conversations about the future of GCF. There is lower engagement with events, fewer applications and a decreasing number of volunteers who remain able to work.

Share your valuable insights through the Foundation's September 2023 Survey at bit. ly/GCFSurvey2023. Respond, if possible, by Sunday, September 17.

Feedback will provide GCF with a deeper understanding of community expectations and preferences, enabling us to tailor our efforts to decide the future. Take a few moments to complete this brief survey to help shape the future of our organization. This survey is not anonymous.

Thank you for taking the time to share your thoughts with us. Together, we can create a stronger, more vibrant community. For more information or to make a donation, visit greenbeltfoundation.org.

Greenbelt residents interested in applying can find details and the online application form on the website of the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket (greenbelt. coop/cms). Paper applications are also available at the Co-op service desk but online submissions are preferred. The deadline for the 2023 Jim Cassels Community Service Award is October 15. # A Diverse Multitude Gathers To Celebrate Mariame Sylla

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On the afternoon of Friday, September 8, the grounds of the Diyanet Center of America in Lanham filled with people wishing to show their respect for Mariame Touré Sylla and support for her family, much of which are in the Ivory Coast. Prayers were held inside the Center, followed by a service outside, under tents, for the funeral of the Greenbelt teacher whose remains were identified a week earlier.

The Imam said the crowds of friends from the Ivorian community, the Muslim community and the Dora Kennedy school community would give comfort to the family and help them know they are not alone in their grief.

The Ambassador of the Ivory Coast, Ibrahima Touré (no relation), spoke on behalf of the embassy and its staff, as well as the Ivorian community. He expressed condolences to those who knew her, describing her as a dedicated teacher, sister and friend.

Principal James Spence also spoke, on behalf of the Dora Kennedy French Immersion School, noting that the young children among the congregation were her students. "Madame Sylla was an educator of our community for almost 20 years," said Spence. "Her impact and her impression upon our community is evidenced by the multitude who are present here today, the many who have prayed since day one of her being missing, the many who attended vigils, supplied salutations and tokens of love. It is because of Madame Sylla that we are congregated here today, many diverse communities, multiple faiths, all in one spirit of love and support. For all of that I am thankful and I am grateful, and we are grateful, the community of Dora Kennedy French Immersion," he said. Spence described Sylla as the "model of sophistication, high standards and commitment to faith." He offered assurance that the next generation would go on to receive high quality education and care. "So we take these lessons from our dear Madame Sylla and we go on doing just what she would have done; we do what she would have wanted us to do. We continue to be encouraged and empowered to make our society a better place each and every day," said Spence.

Mariame Sylla's sister, Fati Touré, thanked the community for caring for her little sister and for helping her. Touré also made comments addressed to her nephew. "She is not any more

Robert is survived by his wife of 64 years, Sylvia, his daughter Janet Lewis (Wayne Strouse), son Drew Lewis, granddaughter Kelsey Strouse (Andrew Litwin), bonus grandchildren Lily and Lanni Solochek, great-granddaughter Samantha Joy Litwin, brother Wilford Lewis and many nephews, nieces and cousins. During his final days Robert and I received a lot of help, not only from friends and neighbors but also from the organizations we went to for assistance. In every case the help was given with caring and concern. What Robert and I were experiencing was unique for us and these responders are used to aiding people in our situation, but, without exception, these individuals treated Robert and me as if the occasion was special for them too.

So a very big thank you to the nurses and social worker from Hospice of the Chesapeake; to the gentlemen who delivered and picked up the hospital bed so Robert could stay at home; to the Greenbelt Fire Department personnel who gently, skillfully and professionally carried him from his upstairs bed to the hospital bed in the living room; to the people from Maryland's State Anatomy Board who carefully removed Robert's body with the dignity and respect one usually sees at a military or state funeral. I am always grateful and happy that I live in Greenbelt. Never more so than now.

Gatherings to remember Robert will be held later in the fall. Again, many thanks to you all for your caring and concern.

Water Fountains Remain Off At Schools, Timeline Uncertain

During the Covid pandemic all schools had water fountains shut off and Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) shipped bottled water to the buildings. Now the county is attempting to open the fountains back up. But the prospects for some are not too hopeful and specific information is hard to find.

At the September 7 PGCPS Board of Education worksession to discuss school openings, Associate Superintendent Dr. Charoscar Coleman said the Building Services Team will continue to provide bottled water to all schools and begin phasing in water fountains to normal use.

Board Member Pamela Boozer-Strother (District 3) said water access had come up among parents in recent weeks due to the high heat.

Alex Baylor, environmental program specialist for the school board, said, "We had a lot of vandalism" that led to "a lot of things that are broken that we're trying to get back fixed." "Then there were some things that from turning them off and being off so long – for the last couple of years - some vials of stuff and things like that, so there's a lot of repair work ... as well as the ones we had to turn off because of high lead levels," said Baylor. Those that tested high for lead are also getting repaired, he said. However, if they fix a fountain and it still tests high for lead, "they may not ever come back on." PGCPS will continue to provide water to those schools, said Baylor. Any lead test results that come back over 5 ppb have to be reported to the state and a state form is sent to the principal for them to send out to the community detailing which fountain or drinking source had an issue and what they're doing about it, he told Boozer-Strother, who followed up by asking about keeping parents informed.

Based on interviews and calls made by the News Review, it appears all Greenbelt schools currently have their water fountains turned off. This is not the case across the county, however. Miles is a Greenbelt resident enrolled in the international baccalaureate program at Parkdale High and reported that his school has operating water fountains and that all the fountains also have "bottling stations," where the students can fill their water bottles. Unlike the schools in Greenbelt, his school has stopped providing bottled water to teachers, with the exception of gym teachers, said the ninth grader.

Elementary Schools

At Greenbelt Elementary (GES), although the water fountains are turned off, teachers keep bottled water in the classrooms, according to students. If a student finishes the bottle they bring to school with them they're given a plastic one, says Poppy, who is in third grade, and Tom, who is in second. Springhill Lake Elementary reported the same. A representative reached by phone reported that water was available both in the classrooms and centrally. A representative from Magnolia Elementary told the News Review their fountains are off and they're still receiving shipments of bottled water from PGCPS.

"I had no idea the water fountains were turned off!" Keysha Kerdock, a GES parent, told the News Review. "I'm going to put a drink in her lunchbox now because I had no idea – and the water available in the classroom is probably room temperature."

Water at DKFI

The News Review spoke with students in five different grades at Dora Kennedy French Immersion (DKFI), a K-8 school in an old building. They reported, unlike GES and Springhill Lake, there wasn't bottled water in their classroom. One seventh grader said there was last year but this year "they're not doing that." Currently, there's one filtered water filling station at DKFI, located in the cafeteria and used to serve the school's nine grades, and there's bottled water stored centrally in the gym, said students.

"So long as you don't ask to go in the first or last five minutes of class you can go to get water," said a seventh grader. A sixth grader had a different experience, though, and said they couldn't leave in the first or last 10 minutes of class, nor when a teacher was explaining anything, "which means you can't go anytime, really, or only if you finish all your work early and you're waiting for others to finish." A third grader similarly reported that they don't have water in the classroom but "you just have to ask and then you can go to the gym [where disposable bottles are stored] or the cafeteria [where the filling station is located]." "Some teachers are very strict," said a fifth grader who found his teachers were upset if he didn't have his own water. "Sometimes they tell you, 'No. It's your responsibility to bring your own."" A second grader complained, "It's a long walk for [students] upstairs or [students who are] downstairs, but people on the middle floor only have to go a bit," referencing the fact the school is spread over different levels.

meeting, council met to adopt a methodology for making an appointment, as the process in this case was not specified in the city charter. With elections imminent, there was no time for a special election so council decided to identify candidates and vote on their appointment at the regular council meeting – allowing for public comment. One constraint included not choosing someone who would be a candidate in the upcoming election.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts objected to the process, saying there should have been public input and advertising to identify a field of contenders. The only candidate ultimately proposed (by Councilmember Ric Gordon) was Konrad Herling, former longtime councilmember and a citizen active in several local organizations.

Herling was duly elected and sworn in, though Roberts voted nay because of his objection to the method of choice, despite his approval for Herling. Herling then participated in the meeting, harking back to his long tenure on council.

Additional council actions will be dealt with in a future story.

Ivy persevered in leading the Labor Day Festival through extraordinary and difficult times. Festival committee member Jon Gardner praised her leadership, saying that she "provided continuity in the Festival committee, and without her, it's not clear that the Labor Day Festival would be continuing." She oversaw the Festival through the pandemic and moved activities online in 2020 including a "virtual parade" video. In 2021, she kept the Festival running even without carnival rides - rides returned in 2022. Similarly, in 2014, when after 50 years the Rosedale company moved to a longer event in Virginia, Ivy found a replacement and brought the company back the next year. Ivy said people call the Festival, "Greenbelt's Homecoming, because people come home for it."

Ivy has stepped up in many ways to serve the Greenbelt community. For example, she organized a collection of hats, gloves and scarves through Realty 1 called, Working Together to Keep Greenbelt Warm. Ivy explained, "A couple of winters when it was really cold, the people who needed it could go through the box and take what they needed to keep warm." Because she had three daughters, she organized a collection of prom dresses called Operation Pretty & Polished Prom Donation Drive to provide prom clothing to area high school students who couldn't afford fancy gowns. In addition to her daughters, Ivy has a son, 14 grandkids and three greatgrandkids. Ivy worked for the law office in Roosevelt Center with attorneys William Edwards

James Whipple

I am James Whipple. I am a new generation for a new deal. I am running for city council.

I was born in the Walter Reed Medical Center on March 8, 1993 to a father who devoted his life to the army and an immigrant Filipino mother who worked around the clock for her children. The household was poor; we were barely able to keep up with bills and it seemed like an emergency was just around the corner waiting to drain any savings we could scrounge up.

James Whipple

Growing up in a low-income household I had no delusions about going to college. I knew it was important, but I also knew that we could not afford it. But, with great effort, I was able to not only be accepted to University of Maryland, College Park in their engineering program; I was offered a full scholarship through the Incentive Awards Program (IAP). I graduated from UMCP in 2015 with a B.S. in mechanical engineering, and a minor in international engineering.

While I was in college, the IAP enabled their scholars to become more connected to their communities through volunteer efforts. After the first year I volunteered to be on a committee to organize, plan and track these outreach efforts, with particular interest in assisting smaller organizations.

After college I worked as an engineer for a small engineering contractor that mostly does work for the U.S. Postal Service. I gained a reputation for being an honest and earnest worker, willing to do whatever it took to get the job done right while being fully transparent. In 2021, I joined the NIST Center for Neutron Research where I work as an electronics engineer supporting the research reactor that services most of our nation's neutron research. I also volunteer some of my time with the Incentive Awards Program and the NIST mentoring program.

I purchased a house in GHI in 2022, settling down permanently here with my wife. I successfully ran for the GHI Board of Directors in the same year I moved in. I've worked to find consensus on difficult problems that face our housing cooperative, and I've championed the effort for alternative revenue streams for GHI. I am still on the board of directors for GHI, and intend to fulfill my commitment to GHI if elected to city council.

Masquer-AID the Café Ball To Raise Funds for New Deal

by Mark Cheater

The New Deal Café, Greenbelt's award-winning music and arts venue and "community living room," is facing severe financial difficulties stemming from the Covid epidemic and its aftermath. To help keep the doors open and continue serving the community, the Café is launching a fundraising campaign with a goal of $10,000.

The signature event of this campaign will be a gala at the Café on the evening of October 14: Masquer-AID the Café Ball. "We hope to capture the Halloween spirit, provide top-quality entertainment and raise money for our music program with a costume ball," says Katy Gaughan, co-chair of the event. "Get ready to don your favorite mask and dance the night away!"

The ball will be a ticketed event at $50 per person, featuring music from two of the region's most popular bands, Just Stones and The Wild Anacostias. Guests will enjoy performances from these compelling and energetic bands while dining on an array of finger foods and desserts throughout the evening, culminating in a champagne toast at the end of the night.

The Café is seeking sponsors for the gala (who will receive tickets to the ball, limited-edition art prints and recognition on commemorative plaques). All proceeds from sponsorships and ticket sales will go directly to the Café's music and arts program. The Café is a member-owned, volunteer-managed, not-for-profit cooperative.

"Your support will enable us to continue providing awardwinning musical programming that brings people together and strengthens community bonds," says Caitlin Gompf, the Café's music director and co-chair of the event. "If you love the New Deal, if you love a masquerade or if you just love rockin' tunes, this is a night you simply can't miss!" she said.

For details on the Masquer-AID the Café Ball, including sponsorship levels and benefits as well as how to buy individual tickets, visit newdealcafe. com/cafeball, For questions or more information, email Gaughan (katy@katygaughan.com) or Gompf (music@newdealcafe. com).

GreenCAPS Mosquito Tip: Dense Vegetation Bad news for those of us who like💊 to garden, and bad news for those who rather leave their gardens to look more natural. Mosquitoes love dense vegetation. Tall grass, dense overgrowth and even flowering vegetation are all attractive to them. Wind is one of the biggest enemies of mosquitoes, so even with the slightest breeze they will look for shelter like piles of branches, raked piles of leaves or grass clippings, overgrown bushes and grass that hasn't been mowed. Your compost pile looks very inviting to them, too. Even better for mosquitoes: These areas rarely dry out, and they make ideal breeding sites.

To combat mosquitoes, try to strike a balance between the natural look and mosquito prevention: Slightly thin out your most dense plants and shrubs, and clean up the piles of leaves and grass cuttings. Mow the lawn, and sprinkle some Mosquito Bits on your compost pile. Mosquito Bits won't harm your compost or your plants, but they will effectively and reliably kill mosquito larvae, even after repeat cycles of your compost going wet and dry.

Preventing mosquitoes is the safest, cheapest and most efficient way we have to mitigate mosquito populations. As a reward, you will be able to enjoy your yard again, with much less worry about mosquito bites. To learn more, to support our work, and/or to volunteer, email GreenCAPS - Greenbelt Citizens Avoiding Pesticides, at GreenbeltGreenCAPS@yahoo. com.
