Greenbelt Youth Musical: Buried Treasure this March

by Rebecca Squire

The Greenbelt Youth Musical, an annual Greenbelt tradition for 25 years, is presenting its 2024 show, Buried Treasure, at the Community Center on March 2, 3 and 9. This year's cast features 23 young actors, ranging in age from sixth grade to college.

Buried Treasure is the story of three young high school students – Josh, Harriet and Miranda – who fall down an abandoned mineshaft into a mythical underground realm, where their treasured surface notions of themselves are challenged at every turn. The three become separated underground and their ensuing solo adventures entail some valuable, albeit painful, lessons.

Josh, who longs for a heroic quest like the dashing knights of yore, learns that true heroism is often unthanked and unglamorous, and that it begins with acknowledging that he is mortally afraid of the dragons he is sent to confront.

Harriet, who desires to possess the wisdom of a wizard, is abashed to realize that the intellect on which she prides herself is not superior to that of the open-hearted Dunstan, a handsome young gnome whom she teaches to read in hopes of decoding a book of magic spells.

Miranda, who seeks the path of perfection, believes herself to be a thoroughly good person, but as a gang of underworld urchins points out, although Miranda says she's good, what she really thinks is that she's better than others – a case where being better is far worse than being good.

Alternately touching and funny, the trio's adventures all culminate in a climactic scene in the palace of the Golden Prince, who has usurped the throne of Sophia, the rightful queen of the underworld. But not everyone in See MUSICAL, page 6

City Council Moves to Track State and County Legislation

by Michael Zeliff

At its February 12 meeting, the Greenbelt City Council took up issues connected to the State Legislative Assembly. The meeting also included discussion of facilities around Greenbelt, approval of funds to plan for high-speed internet in Greenbelt, the tracking of state and county legislation, and a report on electric vehicles (EVs) and charging stations in the city. A future council story will discuss the internet, sustainable communities and EVs, among other topics.

Tracking Legislation

Council then turned to the proposal made by City Manager Josué Salmerón that Greenbelt hire the consulting firm Carington & Associates for $24,000 plus expenses per year to help keep the city informed about legislation being considered at county and state levels. Mayor Emmett Jordan explained that the purpose here is, for example, to help council identify among the 3,000 bills now up for consideration by the state legislature those important to Greenbelt. Councilmembers Jenni Pompei and Danielle McKinney expressed concern about entering this contract without first meeting with company representatives to make sure they understand Greenbelt's needs and interests. Councilmember Kristen Weaver emphasized the need for more information about proposals being considered by the Prince George's County Council. Councilmember Rodney Roberts stated his opposition, explaining that many of the 3,000 state bills do not affect Greenbelt and that council should and can obtain this information from county and state officials for itself. Resident Bill Orleans agreed with Roberts and resident Leon Schachter asked if council had ever felt this need for a consultant before. Jordan answered yes, council has been blindsided on pending legislation, and explained that while councilmembers and staff do work with other officials, they still need this outside advice. Resident Connie Jones supported the proposal as stated. In response, then, noting that the state legislature meets from January to April so that the present session is well underway in Annapolis, council added a six-month review and approved the contract, with only Roberts voting nay.

Land Use

In a related discussion, council examined three current pieces of proposed legislation, the first one being considered by Prince George's County, which would give its municipalities slightly more power to control land use within their jurisdictions. Jordan explained, for example, that council had voted to oppose Royal Farms' development of land on Greenbelt Road beside the Honda dealership into an auto service center and convenience store, so the developer turned to the county planning board and received permission that overrode council's opposition. Recognizing that the bill under consideration See COUNCIL, page 6

Re-Enactors of Distinction Tell Story of Charlotte Scott

On February 14, the room was packed and there was great excitement about the program that was about to unfold. The Golden Age Club had asked the Female Re-enactors of Distinction (FREED) to perform in an acknowledgement of Black History Month in Greenbelt. The all-women group is part of the African American Women of the Civil War Auxiliary Organization whose aim is to "educate and celebrate the accomplishments of the women and African American Civil War Soldiers who fought for freedom."

ARPA Brings Funds for Many Recreational Upgrades in City

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On February 7, the Greenbelt City Council met for a worksession focused on an American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) update. ARPA, established in March 2021, brought federal money to municipalities to help local communities like Greenbelt recover from the short- and long-term impacts of Covid. The worksession included discussion of recreation facilities and calls for equity in their provision throughout the city.

Greenbelt received almost $23 million in ARPA funding, in what Assistant City Manager Timothy George described as a once-in-a-lifetime event. A lot of the projects funded by council originated from residents, said George, who stressed the number of meetings and amount of engagement with residents during the process of allocating funds.

Among the items funded from the influx of ARPA money are recreational facilities upgrades. Completed projects include $50,000 for tennis court resurfacing, $35,000 for HVAC at the

Another DKFI Aspect

The Dora Kennedy French Immersion (DKFI) community recently learned about PGCP's plan to have the program vacate its current location in Greenbelt and move to the former Kenmoor Middle School. Others have commented on the demolition of an historic building. I support their perspective and offer comment on another aspect of this issue. Greenbelt currently enjoys two of the county's top educational institutions – DKFI for K-8, and Eleanor Roosevelt as a premier science and technology magnet high school. Those excellent schools, coupled with proximity to the Metro, Goddard, BARC, University of Maryland's flagship campus and associated burgeoning technology corridor, and the possible new opportunities with the slated FBI headquarters relocation, show great promise for the future of Greenbelt as a thriving, diverse neighborhood in which to raise a family.

When working families look to secure housing, they strike a balance across strong schools, a robust community, a vibrant restaurant and entertainment scene that draws from beyond the town's borders and generates revenue, and proximity to transportation options. Our family has lived in Greenbelt for 20 years and I have always felt that Greenbelt could achieve that and be a sought-after community for families to establish roots and grow. That, in concert with the already vibrant community vibe, is a winning combination.

As a family with a DKFI student, we are concerned about the news of a move for a number of reasons: lack of community input during planning; recently shared information that suggests that the plan to demolish the facility was known prior to DKFI moving into Greenbelt in 2014; and the vulnerabilities the move presents for Greenbelt to attract and retain professional families seeking to invest in, and grow, the community as a desirable place to live.

If the current location was never intended as a permanent

The Tower Road Bus

Against the backdrop of violent anti-busing protests across the nation in the early 1970s, Dotson Burns, Jr, a child of the Jim Crow South, lands on the frontlines of school integration, first as a teacher and then as the first Black principal of a majority-white school in Prince George's County. Mindful of the eyes of white parents and the suspicions of Black students and families, he must oversee the busing of frustrated Black students from the historically-Black community of Tower Road to the mostly white Crestview Elementary School. It was a sweeping integration experiment that created more questions than answers. While debates over racial justice and equity reach a boil in 2021, the film brings Burns, his teachers and students and the audience face to face with the ambitious yet controversial integration measures that appeared on the nation's unfinished road to racial justice.

Greenbelt Quilts Shown At Federal Courthouse

Captain's Wheel by Pat Scully

Quilts Across Maryland is currently on display at the Greenbelt Federal Courthouse until May 8.

The quilts adorn the walls on three floors of the courthouse's central atrium, allowing both up-close and distance perspectives of the various works of art. For some of the quilts, the visual impact is greatest when the quilt is viewed from across the room; for others, the artistry is most apparent from a close-up view of the stitching and fabric choices. This exhibit allows the viewer to enjoy both perspectives for most of the quilts.

Works by several Greenbelt quilters are on display: Pat Scully's Captain's Wheel and Awesome Ocean; Ann Bauman's Morning to Midnight in Bryce Canyon, and Lidia Carrera's Brilliant Diamonds, as well as an unattributed work by Berwyn Heights artist Janet Freitag, Dr. Luigi and Mrs. Bean's Psychedelic Wedding Doona, and numerous works by other members of the Greenbelters' guildmates from the Southern Comforters of Bowie.

The exhibit is available whenever the Courthouse is open to the public, in general, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, except for federal holidays. There will be a reception for the artists provided by the Courthouse on Thursday, March 7 from 5 to 6:30 p.m.

In Memoriam Lee Shields

Lee shows off his new stuffed animal, a favorite Christmas gift, when his family lived at 43-C Ridge Road.

I was both saddened and shocked about the news of the passing of Lee Shields as reported in the February 8 News Review. I had seen him recently with his wife, Bonnie, in the Greenbelt Co-op grocery store. Lee and I were of nearly the same age and both of us grew up in Greenbelt. Lee had a great sense of humor. We were both active in the Boy Scouts where his father, William, was an assistant Scout Master. I enjoyed seeing the give and take between father and son. Lee would tease his father in his efforts to maintain decorum among a group of hyperactive boy scouts. We would hike to Camp Mulligan, located somewhere in Greenbelt Park, north and east of the intersection of Good Luck Road and Kenilworth Avenue (which did not exist at that time), and stay for a night or two. Lee and I both went to Northwestern High School. We sometimes enjoyed hearing impromptu music and singing, prior to our classes.

I had little contact with him in our later years, but I do miss seeing him at the Co-op and sharing tales from our Boy Scout adventures.

Fat Tuesday Experiences Revival At St. Hugh's Catholic Church

by Christopher Irwin

Dozens of participants enjoy the revived celebration at St Hugh's.

Deputy Grand Knight David Pitts was surprised at the number of parishioners coming out last Tuesday evening to celebrate Fat (Shrove) Tuesday, which might be called the unofficial start before the official start of Lent. A parishioner since the late '90s, Pitts observed, "Covid quarantine shut it down completely and this was the first year back on the parish calendar. It is obvious that interest in this event has not waned since." According to Pitts, "The Knights cooked up the same amount of pancakes and sausage as if it were a pancake breakfast for three Sunday masses."

Like the church's Oktoberfest and Thanksgiving events in 2023, this event drew people from far and wide. Thelma Martinez and her sons were among the estimated 75 to 80 persons on hand to enjoy the food and fellowship of the evening. "We were invited by St. Hugh," Martinez says. "My sons are of the many enrolled in catechism classes at what was formerly the school of St. Hugh. The event was nice to have been part of. It allowed us to take part of a community event as we always like to support and take part of local activities."

Originally from Atlanta, Ga., Deputy Grand Knight David Pitts recalls that his first Shrove Tuesday pancake dinner was

The Greenbelt Strategic Wayfinding Plan will facilitate pedestrian, automobile, bicycle, or transit travel to key sites by providing clear directions along safe and convenient routes.

Greenbelt Committee Supports Aid for Ukrainian Refugees

by Frank Gervasi

Greenbelt Refugee Aid Committee (GRACE) was formed in response to the horrific February 24, 2022, Russian invasion of Ukraine. Their goal was to bring three Ukrainian refugee families to safety and security in Greenbelt out of the over 10 million fleeing their homes as a result of the attack on many fronts.

GRACE has rented and furnished, almost entirely with community donations, two apartments here in historic Greenbelt. They are preparing to rent and furnish a third apartment in the near future. Greenbelt's volunteers and refugees are all very grateful for the generosity and participation Greenbelt neighbors have shown to make this process succeed.

The community hosted its first refugee family: a single mother, Anna, with her two small children, beginning in May of 2023. The second family, Tetiana, a single mother of three grown children, arrived here in December. GRACE has applied to sponsor Tetiana's youngest daughter, Kateryna, who is still in the family home in Mykolayiv and is a Ukrainian journalist. The third Ukrainian family, a single mother with one young son, is also being sponsored by the committee. Currently they are back home in the northern Ukrainian city of Sumy, which is on the way to the capital Kiev, and was one of the first places attacked in February 2022.

Life is worsening for the population as more missiles land instead of being shot down. The longer some factions of Congress hold up the aid Ukraine desperately needs, the more precarious their situation becomes. A few days ago a strategic city, Avdiivka, fell to the Russian army because needed ammunition and supplies are running low. It was the first reversal since the Ukrainian army began recapturing territory lost two years ago.

This Saturday, February 24, a rally in support of Ukraine is scheduled for 2 p.m. at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. Those interested may join in this effort to help these deserving people. The future of democracy is at stake.

Shrove Tuesday is also referred to as Pancake Tuesday because Catholics sought to consume their eggs, milk and butter before Lent began and they would be fasting. The word shrove comes from the word shrive, which refers to the confession of sins as a preparation for Lent, a usual practice in Europe in the Middle Ages.

would grant the city only a small increase of authority over such proposals, council voted its support nonetheless, Roberts excepted, with other members judging that small progress is better than no progress at all.

Youth Services Bureaus

Council then voiced its support for state legislation that restores funds for the nine Youth Services Bureaus in Maryland which include Greenbelt CARES, "a community based, family-oriented counseling program dedicated to promoting responsible behavior and appropriate family management skills" that offers "counseling services for families at our Wednesday Night Family Clinic" and other times when possible, according to its website.

No Funds for Maglev

In the final Legislative topic of discussion, council supported a bill, introduced for a third time in Annapolis by District 22 State Senator Alonzo Washington and State Delegate Nicole Williams, that would prevent state funds from being used to develop maglev, the high-speed train that, if built, will travel through parts of Greenbelt.

Around Greenbelt

In addition, Salmerón and others walked through Springhill Lake Recreation Center with Kevin Lockhart, Franklin Park resident and recent applicant for the open council seat, to identify immediate needs and areas for long-term improvements, following discussion of needs in Greenbelt West, and the recreation department in particular, at the February 7 worksession (see article on p. 1). Jordan asked that volunteers be organized to remove trash from and around the pedestrian bridge that crosses over the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, and Weaver and Councilmember Silke Pope asked the city manager to act on requests by the Senior Citizens Advisory Committee that safety strips on the concrete steps outside the Youth Center gym and $12,000 for pickleball lines at the Youth Center.

Ongoing projects include $150,000 toward an outdoor pavilion; $52,000 for “outdoor recreation amenities”; $15,000 toward Greenbrook trails; $855,000 for a Community Center upgrade, including chillers and boilers; $850,000 for Youth Center HVAC and GAFC ductwork; $1 million for ballfields; $1 million for Schrom Hills Park soccer field improvements; $350,000 for baseball field maintenance equipment; and $100,000 for the dance studio floor. Staff recommendations for uncommitted funding at the meeting included $40,000 for indoor pool deck engineering analysis and $100,000 for Buddy Attick Park amenities (subject to the Master Plan).

Mayor Emmett Jordan asked if the city would have to shut down the Braden and McDonald baseball fields in order to redo them. George confirmed they would, stating there’ll be a season where they have to find somewhere else to play, “but when they come back they’ll have world-class facilities,” he said. He also noted that the need had become a safety issue, stressing the condition of Schrom Hills field in particular made it unsuitable for sports. There was also a value issue, he said, saying Greenbelt could have a “high-class world soccer facility.” The plans mean that in summer of 2025 one or both fields will not be available. The preference might be to wait for spring season to be over at Braden, said George. On the other hand, he thought the Youth Center may need to close for only a week, if at all, for its improvements.

Greenbelt West?

“I’m glad Braden Field in Old Greenbelt is going to have world-class playing fields and Schrom Hills, that’s needed to be fixed for a long time too, but the sad thing is that $21 million later the kids in Greenbelt West have nothing still. Not one field. Not even one with bumps in it. They have nothing,” said Councilmember Rodney Roberts. “I don’t look at this as a great success because we aren’t spreading the wealth around. We’re not helping the kids in Greenbelt West,” he argued.

“We are investing $500,000 to redo the Springhill Lake Rec Center playground, we’re giving them a basketball court,” responded George. “Giving them a pittance,” interrupted Roberts, who argued that a field in Greenbelt West would allow other fields to rest, too, and benefit everyone. Roberts argued the need for a park and playing field in Greenbelt West and said not doing it with ARPA money was a shame. Yet, he argued, it could still be done.

“We can cancel every project, buy a van and build a field and if it is council’s vision and dream to do that, we will follow through with it,” said City Manager Josué Salmerón.

“But we don’t own any land in Greenbelt West to improve,” said Councilmember Kristen Weaver. “We would have to buy and find something available,” she noted.

Councilmember Danielle McKinney said, “A lot of us at this table were not part of the original process I would be interested in looking at what we do have remaining We do need to look at the distribution because at first blush looking at this is very concentrated on certain areas of the city that don’t always get a lot of usage.”

Weaver noted that there are existing ballfields at Greenbelt Middle School, if the city could get the ability to use them, though they may need work.

The upgraded tennis courts at Braden Field reopened in September 2023.

“The school’s never going to let you play there and the field is horrible anyway. The people in Greenbelt West need their own park, their own playing fields, not getting shammed into a school board field they get to play once a year,” argued Roberts.

Kevin Lockhart, who was recently an applicant for a council seat, seeking to represent Greenbelt West, spoke as a resident. As someone who works with the Springhill Lake Boys and Girls Club, he noted that last year they went through a season without a field. During that time, he said he hadn’t noticed anything being done. He expressed concern about the emphasis on baseball in the ARPA and facility discussions.

He also noted that Franklin Park’s pool has not been in use for two or three years, suggesting the city and the apartment complex might partner to better use that space for recreation. “I hear the playground was coming last year, now it’s coming this year in March, and that’s fine but have y’all gone to the Rec Center and actually walked through the front doors?” Lockhart asked council. “We got a broken door that’s been broke for over a year. We got a sign on it ‘Use Other Door,’ it’s been there forever. The front desk is terrible We don’t have a buzzer, we don’t have nothing, anybody can come through that door, anybody, ’cause it doesn’t lock, ’cause it’s broke. Yes, they put in an order for it. They come, they do whatever and it breaks again. It needs to be taken down, completely redone, the whole front. The carpet on the floor? Been there since 1996. Ain’t been cleaned. Should be taken up. I mean the place is a dump. Take a tour over there! I mean it’s not right that this part gets everything, point blank. I’m speaking the truth. We get nothing I’m getting aggravated sitting there listening to all this money going here, there, everywhere and peanuts coming over [this] way. And when is it coming? Oh next year, oh in March. We still waitin’. That front entrance should be fixed immediately. Get it fixed; it’s part of Greenbelt!” Lockhart said the gym at Springhill Lake was freezing cold because heat couldn’t get regulated and warned children were going to get hurt waiting for things to be fixed there.

Salmerón said he recognized Braden Field was also used for football and that will be part of the project. He also said the city is working toward an enhanced

I encourage the city to consider factors such as these – that directly affect the desirability and marketability of our community – as they work with the county.

Reutilization Is Least Harmful

Although the current Municipal Building was designed and under contract when I first came to Greenbelt 61 years ago, I did get to do some minor interior adjustments to better accommodate employee needs. And, of course, I was very much involved with planning the subsequent addition.

So, I have been following with great interest the current articles on building a new building and its site location. I will not get involved in the issues of the need for a new building and costs, leaving those considerations to current city leaders and residents. I do agree, however, that the building construction technology that is least harmful to the environment is the reutilization of an existing structure.

Should it be decided that a new building is needed, there is one site not mentioned for consideration that I feel should be and that is between the existing city building and the Community Center. It would be a building sited to face the library, creating a three-building governmental complex facing a common green.

While not the original plan, I think it would be a planning idea original planners would approve. Like many other city public buildings, the back entrance, facing the parking lots, would be more used than the front, but that's OK.

Obviously, there would need to be some modifications to parking and pedestrian access to the new and existing buildings, but the existing parking areas are more than ample to serve the everyday needs of the new building. The old city building could be retained or removed, as best determined.

Consider Renting

I was dismayed to learn, in the February 15 edition of the News Review, of the plans to build an expensive new city government office building in central Greenbelt despite the massive amount of vacant commercial office space available for rent in the city. The plans, I believe, send the wrong message to the taxpayers, to the city's business owners, and to the many citizens who could benefit from services offered outside city center, e.g., at one of the office buildings in the vicinity of the courthouse. It may be a little late in the game, but I urge council to reconsider the current direction.

was the property of the brother of her enslaver. She was fortunate because her enslaver denounced the system of slavery, joined the Union Army and moved his family from Virginia to the free state of Ohio. Charlotte was emancipated in 1863 by the Emancipation Proclamation signed by President Abraham Lincoln at the urging of Frederick Douglass.

Charlotte remained with the family and adopted the name Scott for her own last name. She was paid as a servant and began to save her earnings. Upon hearing of Lincoln's assassination, she conceived the idea of getting a statue erected in his honor and asked her employer for assistance. Charlotte's donation was the first of her wages, $5.00. The entire process was spearheaded by freed African Americans who massively contributed to this effort. As a result, the Emancipation Statue was erected in Lincoln Park in Washington, D.C., in 1876. Charlotte Scott was present for the dedication of the statue by President Ulysses Grant and her name is prominently displayed on the dedication placard.

Unfortunately, during the Black Lives Matter demonstrations, there was a lot of controversy about the way the statue was designed. Even Frederick Douglass questioned the notion of the Black man rising, but still on one knee and not fully clothed. He wanted to see monuments that showed the improved conditions of freed people. The statue was moved in 2020 and is currently in storage in Boston.

Origins of FREED

The story was riveting and after it the chair of the group, Patricia Tyson, responded to questions. FREED, she explained, is an auxiliary to the African American Civil War Museum, located in Washington, D.C. On the occasion of the museum's minimize stories of African American women who greatly contributed during the Civil War era to the African American struggle for equality. Thus, FREED was born.

Tyson explained that FREED is a multiracial group because there were many women from various backgrounds who contributed during that era. Their members research women, including suffragettes, who were actively engaged in various movements at that time.

The audience enjoyed the educational experience and gave FREED a standing ovation. The event was part of Greenbelt's Black History Month programming and sponsored by the Golden Age Club.

Strong Girls and Boys Teams Enter Basketball Playoffs

by Patrick Gleason

The Eleanor Roosevelt Lady Raiders begin the state basketball playoffs with the second seed in the 4A South region after a 12-7 regular season campaign under Coach Delton Fuller. They ended with two exciting victories: a three-point overtime win over Wise and a 66-62 senior night win over Suitland, a team that beat them in their first encounter this year. While the Raiders will have to topple the C.H. Flowers Jaguars for the region crown, the team has improved throughout the season. Senior point guard Alicia Galban helps orchestrate the offense while the team spreads out scoring duties among a variety of players. Playoffs begin the week of February 26.

Boys Team

Likewise, as the Eleanor Roosevelt boys basketball team looks to playoffs, they are playing their best basketball of the season under first-year coach Chaun Miller. They celebrated senior night on February 13 with a 78-50 victory over the Suitland Rams, a win that shows their growth throughout a season of change. The Raiders graduated a strong 2023 senior class and longtime head coach Brendan O'Connell stepped down in the offseason after winning four state championships in a 10-year span. After dropping the first four games to start the year, Roosevelt earned its first, and more contested, win over Suitland with a 51-44 triumph on December 19 with a roster composed of mostly sophomores and juniors, including standout shooter Mason Douglas, who poured in deep threes against the Rams in their second matchup. Junior Benaiah Nwosu has also proved indispensable, offering the Raiders size in the paint and explosive leaping ability on the offensive end. The Raiders completed the regular season with a 7-11 record, but are playing their best basketball headed into playoffs; there they will look to upset either the top-seeded Wise or second-seeded Flowers for a region championship.

Senior Daevon Walker defends for a Roosevelt team that's surging toward their opening round playoff matchup next week.

Junior Cora Moore pulls another rebound during a Senior Night victory over the Suitland Rams on February 13.

partnership with Franklin Park and enhancing recreational facilities will be put on the agenda for their next worksession. Salmerón said he planned to walk through Springhill Lake Recreation Center on Friday.

"I think we need to put a plan in place to raise the capital needed to redo the Rec Center," said Salmerón. The tentative date for the new Springhill Lake playground, which is getting a half-million-dollar infusion, is March, he explained, though supply chain issues could delay it.

Councilmember Jenni Pompei said she had had many conversations with the late Councilmember Ric Gordon about the possible use of the pool space at Franklin Park and she would like to see a project to use it move forward.

Resident Farinaz Firouzi, of Charlestowne Village, joined the call for recreational facilities and programming for all residents, saying "this is a life and death issue," as she noted what such programming and spaces could mean for young people. "If cities look at people who are renting as transitional people they also miss an opportunity," she added, noting that she had previously been a renter in Greenbelt.

Jordan suggested the reallocation of remaining ARPA funds could be added to the agenda for the council meeting on February 26.

Black History Month

Review: Play Spotlights Historical Black Women and Their Importance

by Melanie Iverson

Scenes from Ms. Story's Living History, written and performed by Shemika Renée

For the next two weekends, Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC) offers the chance to meet different Black women who shaped our history and culture, rightfully shining a spotlight on those who are often missing from the history books.

Ms. Story's Living History, a play that is both ambitious and unique, was written and performed by Shemika Renée, a Maryland-born performer. Renée has been re-enacting and bringing to life historical characters for almost two decades. This performance offers a great and insightful opportunity to learn and celebrate Black History Month. Renée has chosen several Black women who have left a significant mark on our country and changed our history. "You may meet an entrepreneur or a pilot, an athlete or a soldier, an abolitionist or a seamstress, a politician or a gospel singer, an enslaved woman who tasted freedom in France or a mail carrier, an engineer of the Underground Railroad or a Union spy," GAC advertises.

Renée herself performs each segment and plays each woman in character. On the day this reporter attended, it was to enjoy a one-woman show about six extraordinary women. Renée plays each part with ease and engaging storytelling.

Simple props keep the focus on the characters with a short narration in-between to fill in details of the women's lives. Photographs of the women are displayed at the end of each segment, tethering the artful performance to history and documentation, clarifying for the audience these characters, their reality and what their impact has been. Rikki Howie Lacewell directs this impactful work and helps ensure that each performance is successful. Renée's writing has a clear vision and a passion for sharing this history. Her performance brings history alive with a shining wholeheartedness.

The production is worth seeing more than once because each weekend different women are highlighted. The play is appropriate for middle-school children and up, but may be interesting for older elementary-aged children who can sit for a couple of hours. The content warning advises: "This show is about BI-POC women in American history. The subjects of enslavement and civil rights will be addressed in a compassionate manner suitable for all ages."

This reporter recommends the show to anyone interested in learning about compelling figures in history. Every one of the characters that is brought to life on GAC's stage made a mark on our country and may inspire you to do the same.

Performances run through March 3. Visit www.greenbeltartscenter.org for tickets and more information.

ERHS Celebrates Black History Month with 'Forever Black'

by Li'l Dan Celdran

Eleanor Roosevelt High School's Black Student Union (BSU) hosted a Black History Month celebration, Forever Black: Black Excellence from Past to Present, on Friday, February 16 for students and guests from both ERHS and other area high schools.

The event began with the school's Gospel Choir rendition of Lift Every Voice and Sing followed by Hold On (Change is Coming) where the singers and audience clapped and sang along. Jacqueline Brown Woody, president of the Prince George's County Truth Branch of the Association for the Study of African American Life and History (ASALH), noted that Dr. Carter G. Woodson, educator and historian, is considered the founder of Black History Month. This year's theme, per the ASALH, is African Americans in the Arts where "the Arts connection to the Black experience ... is infused with African, Caribbean and the Black American lived experiences."

The audience was treated to various performances including the band Roman Empire and gospel singers Yoseph Vanterpool and Praise passionately singing Stand Up from the movie Harriet.

The hosts led fun, interactive games and trivia, where selected audience members answered questions about Black History, and played musical chairs. The audience participated in Finish the Song. The most fun was watching students on a scavenger hunt in which they raced to find items such as black hats, coats and Crocs from audience members. Items were flying every which way.

Student models from DuVal High School and ERHS strutted their stuff to music in their fashions. All the students appeared to have a grand time posing and throwing kisses to the audience. Seven students presented a Living Museum where they recited facts about the contributions of the person they represented. Greek Life members from the Divine 9 spoke of their organizations and encouraged students to learn more and choose the one that best fits them.

Students from Bowie State University presented slam poetry accompanied by the pianist and drummer from Roman Empire. Dynamic performances by the school's West Indian Dance Team and Dem' Raider Boyz Step Squad rounded out the evening.

Kudos and appreciation to Judith Barrera, BSU's teacher sponsor, and her students for this excellent celebration.

Li'l Dan Celdran is an Eleanor Roosevelt High School parent.

Black History Cultural Event at the Community Center

The Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee presented the Black History Month Cultural Program on February 18 in the Community Center Auditorium. It featured spoken word by Jefe and Whiskey Girl and performances by Nana Malaya, the Dancing Diplomat; Kalen Wright, hip-hop dancer; interpretive dance by De'Jah Taylor, and a jazz performance by Eleanor Roosevelt High School students.

Speakers prepare for the Black History Cultural Program at the Community Center.
