Letters to Editor

To the Editors:

I am writing you with the thought that perhaps you could help me.

Last Sunday, January 13, about 5:00 P.M., I had an automobile accident with an old car with Maryland tags on it, which was driven by a young lady. The car was totaled. I was thrown from my right side and did not object smaller amount of damage than I thought it did. The girl gave me $4.00 for the damage and I feel rather ashamed about it as it only cost me $2.00 to have it fixed. I would like to return the whole amount to the young lady whoever she is as she probably could use it. I did not get her name or number due to the use of traffic and the girl's extreme nervousness. The only thing I know about the occupant is that they said they lived in Greenbelt, Md.

If you know of a newspaper in the community or some other method I could locate the party I would appreciate your advising me.

Irwin W. Adams

Editor's Note: The interested party is asked to phone the Cooperators News Editor at 4020 for details.

MRS. GREENBELT

Good Evening, Mrs. Greenbelt.

And didn’t we have a lovely snow! At least, it was falling. And the fluffy bits it is that hung to the trees. weren’t they lovely? We have a lot of thick snow on the ground, you know. and there’s a poem in it, written by none other of Florence Scovel Shinn—

When the snow falls,
Beloved things are born.
Till then fast bound by winter,
Breeks forth into such blossoms
What will not respond to those who remain until the very last bit of light has gone.

Notice some time how much the pine trees bend to be wearing flowers in their hair. And have you ever seen the winter magnolias? Lovely, lovely things.

When you read this, I may be in the Northwest, having my first glimpse of real snow. And again, I may not—knowing the devices in which the Government world, but I expect to be gone this week for the Dakotas with my husband. So I wish, I will be making frosty footprints all over town for months to come. And if you notice a woman standing in the Center store in July, brush off he will, you?

Want to shake hands with me next summer and get cooked off frozen berries—

Her daughter, Verna, was taken ill on January 19, and was put to bed after a real birthday party. Invitations were sent, favors obtained, and there was to be a birthday cake and all the trimmings. A couple of days before the big event Verna had a very high temperature, and on January 17 her fever was the diagnosis. On January 25, Verna is as little as when she sang “The Lilac Song,” and many, many are thy trysty roofed-carrier affair with an automatic steamer, which goes this smokey footprints all over the town, and Mrs. Ernest Briggs of 32-B Crescent are

Although we have had very little snow, which is supposed to usher in King Winter, I am sure he has arrived. No one has been caught with handkerchiefs. We all know about that. If you don’t think so, just put on your fur-lined coats and ear muffs.

Ten to one you will end up at the lake as every one does, to watch the skaters in their colorful costumes. Skating is one of the sporty stimulators I know of, so how about a hearty dinner, which will not require any costumes who remain until the very last bit of light has gone.

Garnish your recipe for this week. Keep it delicious and filling.

NOTE: For a change in dipping hot banana sandwiches to which has been added a teaspoon of baking powder, then put into moderate oven until brown—or stick to your favorite crust.

Wise Enjoying Party Part

Girl Scouts of Troop 26 had an enjoyable party, opening an evening of games and fun, with a group of Greenbelt boys invited to attend. It was sponsored by Mrs. Mildred Mitchell and Mrs. Hazel Wutcher, assisted the young people in choosing from among his Mrs. Ednah Fagg Jr. and Mrs. Vera Tumer.

The entire evening was spent in dancing, interspersed with big games, like “Piggy in the Middle” with fruit punch and cookies.

Female dancing party soon was the award (from all sides as the group turned homeward).

Reduce If You Must

But Watch Your Diet

“What you eat as well as how much you eat if you are putting yourself on a reducing diet advises the monitors’ Council Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, quoting Home Economics experts in the Department.

“Before you ever begin to diet, visit your doctor and get his advice. Expert advice—one master must be sure you will be getting all the right nutrients in required amounts when you begin to cut down on your eating. Whether you are trying to lose or to add a few pounds, you shouldn’t check your body of the vitamins, minerals and protein it needs.

“Many people, grown-ups on a diet should get a pint of milk every day. This doesn’t have to be whole milk, it can be buttermilk or skim milk which contain all the calcium—but without the butterfat—of whole milk.

“Also include in your diet tomatoes or citrus fruit, like oranges, grapefruit, or lemon. Eat some kind of leafy vegetable—like lettuce. Promote good health, like carrots, maize and soy beans, vegetables like broccoli and green peas. Those are the protective foods. Foods that sound like vegetables.

“The things not to eat in excess if reducing are the heavy foods, which can’t be used by the body. In that class go cereals, bread, canned commodities of butter, corn, potatoes, green beans, soups, gravies, nuts, and dressings, and all things cooked in fats. Fruits are better than candies, cakes, pies and between-meal snacks.

“Eat as much meat, fish, and poultry as you normally would, but stick to the lean portions of meat.”
