Final Co-op Lecture Slated Wed.-Mar. 10

"Public Relations of Consumer Cooperatives" was the topic of the leadership series in the morning session, with Dr. Harry H. Hinait, professor of public relations at the School of Journalism of George Washington University, leading the lecture. Hinait stressed the importance of press releases, public relations, and advertising in the press for cooperative organizations. He discussed the training of co-op leaders and emphasized that it is necessary to maintain a high morale in cooperative organizations.

William H. Petri, general manager of Rurco Cooperative of Virginia and Rurco Cooperative Services, Inc., introduced Prof. Hinait. He described the importance of public relations and advertising in the growth and through other channels of public information. He discussed the training of co-op leaders and emphasized that it is necessary to maintain a high morale in cooperative organizations.

Final lecture in the Institute series will be given Wednesday evening, March 10, when Dr. H. L. Dobrzanski, chairman of the personal income department of George Washington University, will describe "The Economic Significance of Consumer Cooperatives".

Dr. Dobrzanski will discuss the potential influence of consumer cooperatives on prices, on distribution of income and wealth, and on combating cyclical depressions. He will describe the comparative advantages of co-ops and private businesses and outline the elements of co-op success and failure.

Samuel F. Ashelman, Jr., general manager of Greenbelt Consumer Service, will introduce Dr. Dobrzanski. The lecture is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. and will be followed by an hour of open discussion. All sessions are held at the Friends Meeting House.

Juvenile Car-Theft Gang Nabbed by Police

Greenbelt police cracked a juvenile car-theft gang this week and apprehended eight boys and three girls. All were between the ages 13-16, and came from College Park, Ellicott City, Belair, and Greenbelt.

Seven cars were stolen from Greenbelt since January 28. Police Chief George Passagnoni announced one of the stolen vehicles and others abandoned.

The case was broken when a car reported missing from a Greenbelt garage without authorization, was found at its real address in Baltimore. The check revealed that the car was stolen from its daughter in College Park. Police kept the car under surveillance, and noticed two men driving it around 10:30 this Friday afternoon. After the suspects discharged a passenger in the city, the police apprehended the passenger and driver.

After questioning, the young man confessed that he and others in the gang and they were arrested. They charged with auto theft, and their case was heard in juvenile court March 17.

NOTICE
The Cooperators cannot accept unsigned letters to the editor. We will withhold publication of any unsigned letter that in our judgment should not be signed. We feel that it is important for members to maintain integrity, which is the essence of the organization at some future date. GOS went through precari- ous times in 1943-45 and there are some members who feel that Greenbelt telephone company has in store for us. I for one, feel I shall not be able to withstand another such fit. I for one, feel I shall not be with- able to withstand another such fit.

No sectionalism. I am very sorry to learn of the "scolded" politicians are trying once again to divide the town into opposing factions based on sectionalism. A political group is circu- lated that some of our members are considering exercising the option of separating from Greenbelt telephone service. Only the mystic future can tell what additional delights of tele- phone company has in store for us. I for one, feel I shall not be able to withstand another such fit.

Northwestern Notes

By Peggy Markfield

Northwestern held an Open House on Saturday evening, March 27, in cooperation with the PTA. On the same evening the school will open in annual Science Fair to the public.

The open house is being held to give ninth grade students who will take part in the science fair an opportunity of explaining the projects. "Tough" officials hope that ninth graders will take advantage of this chance to discuss subjects being offered with the teachers and in so doing help in making their high school life more enjoyable.

The Science Fair, which is required as one of the important events of the school year, takes place March 26 and 27. The winners of the fair will enter into some with students from other schools.

Thursday and Friday the school will present a three act mystery play entitled "Nice Girls." Northwestern's wrestling team will participate in the Metros-can Tournament to be held at St. Alphonso's School for Girls on March 5 and 6. The team has been money champions for the third straight year.

Wrestling began at 7:30 p.m. on Friday. On Saturday the semifinals start at 5 p.m. and the finals begin at 7:30 in the evening.

Tyrone and Northwestern's students, Kay Johnson and Milford Elder, a former Greenbelter, won first prize in the science fair sponsored by the American Legion. The contest was held at the Chevy Leigie House March. 16. The two winners will go on to national competition.

The university department will present its annual music review entitled "Trash Liberty" on March 18 and 19.

Income Tax Returns

By E. Donahue

This article was prepared for and is presented by the Coopender to its readers. The income tax points discussed are of particular interest to residents of Greenbelt. Intricate points of income tax law have been avoided: depreciation, capital gains, carry-overs, securities and the like have been intentionally omitted. As over 90% of Greenbelt taxpayers receive Social Security each year, the highlights of the tax laws which affect them. The number of deductions that have been raised and the recent changes in the tax laws have been the basis for selection of the points discussed.

Most individuals know what form to use, but so many questions have come up recently as to what form to use and how to use it, that we feel the explanation of these points seems to be in order. There are two forms, the 1040A and 1040. If you are filing your income tax for the first time, you must file either the 1040A or 1040, whichever is most convenient.

If you net income after subtracting deductions limited (if standard) and exemptions exceeds $2,000, you should file a joint return, which must be signed by both spouses.

Make sure you claim all your dependency exemptions. A son or daughter over 21, even if married, can be claimed as a dependent, if he or she meets the requirements. A dependent is anyone who gets more than half of his support from you, has earned less than $500, is closely related to you, lives in the U.S. or Canada, or is an American citizen. Age has nothing to do with dependency. If a dependent dies or is born during the year, you can claim him as a dependent for the entire year.

The law says that anyone with an income of $500 or over must file a return, whether they are minors or adults. Minors with incomes of less than $400 should file to get a refund of their withholding taxes. Incidentally, if your child earns over $200 you cannot list him as a dependent, even if you supply more than half of his support.

If he earns $300 or less, you can, if you supply more than half of his support, take an exemption of $600.

If your gross income is $5,000 or over, you are required to file an estimated tax form. Your deductions and exemptions must be kept separate from your income tax form. This $150 added to your other deductions, if it doesn't exceed 5% of your income is deductible. If your net income or deductions are $6,000 or more, you must file an estimated tax form if your estimated tax for the year could exceed $150 as a medical deduction; otherwise $50 to 50% of your calculation. If your net income is $5,000, you should file a joint return. If the $150 added to your other deductions, if it doesn't exceed 5% of your income is deductible, then it is more advantageous to take the standard deduction. Medical expenses in some instances warrant the filing of separate returns by couples, in others they are less advantageous when a savings in taxes is effected by so doing. Outstanding your taxes both ways before filing. Consult your tax expert on the medical deduction limitation. Medical expenses include all amounts paid for doctors, dentists, hospitals, for drugs, eyeglasses, hearing aids, health association dues and charges, credit card payments and any money paid to make you better when you were sick. The law actually goes further than that, so if you have any doubts look into it.

However, a taxpayer or his housewife is 60 or over before the close of a taxable year, he may claim the entire amount of his medical expenses, subject only to a maximum limitation mentioned above.

You can file the estimated tax returns if you have income subject to withholding of more than $400. The $400 is used. In other words, a married couple, with 2 children must file an estimated tax form if his income exceeds $460. Also, if you have income over $300 subject to withholding and you expect to receive more than $300 during the year, you must file a form 1040.

General questions on income tax will be answered by calling Gibson 4-6418.
