Greenbelt Regional Park Set to Open Early In April

The Greenbelt Regional Park, a wonderland of wilderness, may be ready to welcome its first visitors within two months, an official of the National Park Service said this week.

"We are trying our hardest to get the park open by early April, particularly for campers," Con Heine, assistant regional director of the service told the News Review. "We will be starting in a small way, but we expect to have a tent camping area with 50 individual sites."

This camp area will take up only a few of the park's 1,148 acres, and will be located just off Greenbelt Road.

Heine said that the original camping area would be of the wilderness type.

"The campers will leave their automobiles in a parking area and carry their tents and equipment several hundred feet into the camping area," he said. "This will rule out trailers, and camper-trailers, at least at first."

"We will have to limit the campers to a short stay, probably not more than three days."

Heine said there is a comfort station in the park now, as well as running water. Each campsite will have a fireplace and trash receptacle, and wood will be available.

As soon as possible, Heine said, a picnic area will be opened, as well as facilities for group camping by organizations such as the Boy Scouts or church groups.

Eventually, there will be a visitor's center, nature trails, guided tours by uniformed naturalists and special instruction in woodlore for children, Heine said.

White Expresses Thanks

Francis White, former mayor, expressed his gratification and that of Jim Fritz, president, at the large turnout at the Greenbelt Civic Association's protest meeting on Monday. "We would like to thank Greenbelt citizens and members of neighboring citizen's groups who were represented at the meeting. Their combined efforts in circulating petitions produced over 2,000 signatures in a short time."

White was pleased with the action taken by the County Commissioners to aid the City of Greenbelt in intervening in the Circuit Court hearing, and hoped that further legal action will ultimately lead to the reversal of the Circuit Court's decision.

White was a participant in the original County Commissioner's hearing on the Jaeger tract and is one of the aggrieved parties of record.

CITY TO INTERVENE IN ZONING CASE

by Charles T. McDonald

In a record short meeting last Monday night, city council voted to instruct the city solicitor to file a "petition to intervene in the proceeding" in the matter of the circuit court decision to permit apartment zoning on the Jaeger tract in Greenbelt Park. It was felt that the city has the right to submit this petition as an aggrieved party on the grounds that through an error the city was not notified to be present at the court hearing.

Much of the council's regular agenda was postponed until a special meeting set for Monday, February 10, so that council members could attend the public meeting on the question sponsored by the Greenbelt Civic Association. Late in that meeting Mayor Edgar Smith informed the audience of its action.

It was Mayor Smith, working with City Manager James Giese, who discovered on Monday afternoon that the Maryland Rules of Procedures, in effect, required the county commissioners to notify the city of the court hearing since the city had been a party to the proceeding. As the result of an error, the city was not notified of the court hearing so that city officials did not have the opportunity to substantiate their previous statements and undergo interrogation by the court.

Other Business

Bids were opened for the sale of the two city buses. The sole bidder offered $132.00 for both buses. It was referred to the city manager for his study and recommendations.

The Personnel Advisory Board submitted its recommendations on the position of a full-time Administrative Aide, at a salary grade of GC-6. The recommendations were accepted and the amended Classification Plan to provide for the position was accepted and approved by the city council. Council also provided funds to pay the $5,096 annual salary for the Administrative Aide in a resolution to transfer funds within departments. Arrangements have been made to employ the present, part-time assistant, Ronald M. Dick, in the position.

Mayor Smith Tells What Happens Next

Mayor Ed Smith explained to the News Review the various courses of action that may now take place as the result of the petition to intervene in the proceeding filed by the city concerning the zoning of the Jaeger tract. If this petition is denied, (which is not anticipated since the county commissioners and county attorney have agreed to argue for the city), the city can still appeal that decision to the court of appeals.

If the petition to intervene is granted by the circuit court, the city of Greenbelt then would be allowed to present its case before the circuit court on why the high-rise apartment zoning for the Jaeger tract should be denied.

Upon hearing this evidence, the circuit court will either issue a ruling reaffirming Judge Bowie's previous decision or a new ruling which will uphold the previous action of the county commissioners denying the zoning request. Finally, if the circuit court reaffirms Judge Bowie's previous decision, the city can then take the case to the court of appeals. Since all these proceedings could require an extended period of time, it is hoped that action by the Department of Interior and Congress would by then bring the Jaeger tract into Greenbelt Park.

County Error Discovered by City May Block Jaeger Tract Zoning

by G. K. Hodenfield

A procedural error discovered by an alert mayor and city manager Monday gave a new surge of hope to the foes of the proposed high-rise apartment on the Jaeger tract which juts into the Greenbelt Regional Park.

The announcement by Mayor Edgar Smith that the city of Greenbelt was getting back into the fight lifted a county-wide protest meeting at Center School from near-despair to near-optimism. The meeting, chaired by Ex-Mayor Francis White, was sponsored by the Greenbelt Civic Association.

Smith, who joined the meeting following the city council meeting, told an estimated 300 persons that the city would file a "petition to intervene" with the Circuit Court.

This means that — eventually — the high-rise apartment zoning for the Jaeger tract may be nullified.

The petition, to be filed simultaneously with a petition for an extension of time, is based on the fact that the City of Greenbelt, as a party to the proceedings, was not notified of the appeal by the County Commissioners through an error.

County Admits Error

Tuesday morning, the day after the protest meeting, County Attorney Robert Mathias acknowledged an error had been made. Mathias told the County Commissioners that he was advised for the first time at the protest meeting that certain parties who appeared at the original hearing had not received notice of the appeal. As a result of his recommendation, the commissioner Robert F. Sutphin and was passed by a 4-0 vote with Chairman Frank Lastner abstaining.

The County Commissioners, at Smith's request, went beyond its

LATE BULLETIN

The January 7 Circuit Court decision granting high rise zoning for the Jaeger Tract was suspended Wednesday by Prince Georges Circuit Judge William B. Bowie, who made the ruling. Judge Bowie ordered a new trial be set at the request of the City of Greenbelt.

A clerical error which denied the city and others an opportunity to present testimony in opposition to the zoning to the circuit court in January was apparently the responsibility of the County Commissioners — hence their readiness to assist the city in its efforts to intervene.

The County Commissioners helped pave the way for the city of Greenbelt to "carry the ball" on the Jaeger case through a motion to grant the city of Greenbelt the right to intervene in the case.

The Commissioners, still split 2-2 with Lastner abstaining, had not changed their minds on the question of appeal Tuesday and would not unless new evidence were produced, according to Commissioner Robert F. Sutphin.

original motion to consent to the City of Greenbelt's appearance as an aggrieved party before the court.

They agreed to make available the services of the county attorney: 1) In the preparation of proper legal papers and briefs to be filed with the Court. 2) In the arguing of the motion and assisting the city in the new hearing—if it is granted. 3) In providing any further legal assistance that may be required.

The turning point in the attempt to nullify the zoning decision came when Mayor Smith and City Manager James Giese found this important paragraph in the "Maryland Rules of Procedure":

"Promptly on receipt of such copy (the notice of appeal filed by the property owner), the agency (the county commissioners) shall, unless the court shall otherwise order, give written notice by mail or otherwise of the filing of the appeal to every party of the proceeding before it . . ."

Mayor Smith's point was that the City of Greenbelt was a party to the original zoning hearing before the county commissioners, but was not notified when the owners of the Jaeger tract appealed the commissioners' decision to the circuit court.

Spellman Talks

Prior to Mayor Smith's appearance, the protest meeting at Center School had found only one ray of hope in an otherwise bleak picture.

County Commissioner Gladys Spellman, who has consistently opposed the high-rise zoning, noted that only two of the nine parties to the original proceedings were properly served with notices of the appeal. This, she said, might provide opponents of the high-rise apartments a chance to appeal the decision of Circuit Court Judge William B. Bowie.

This was only a hope, until Mayor Smith announced that that was exactly the action that the Greenbelt City Council had decided to take.

Commissioner Spellman said there were four primary reasons for appealing Judge Bowie's decisions:

(1) In her opinion, there was substantial evidence submitted to support the original decision by the County Commissioners, and therefore the Circuit Court had no basis for substituting its own opinion.

(2) The Greenbelt Regional Park "was set up for all people in the county" and therefore, in her opinion, the Circuit Court erred by holding that persons living more than three miles away from the Park have no right to be heard.

(3) She could not accept the opinion of the Circuit Court that citizens must first submit formal proof of their standing before they may be heard on a zoning plan.

(4) She did not believe that any Commissioner's hands are tied by the fact that while, sitting as a member of the District Council, he took no part in the original rezoning decision which is to be appealed. "If there is a question of whether a commissioner may vote in such a situation," she said, "let him vote so the matter will come before the court for clarification."

Commissioner Spellman's fourth point referred to the refusal of Commissioner Frank J. Lastner, chairman of the County Board, to vote on a proposal that the commissioners appeal Judge Bowie's decision to the Court of Appeals.

Lastner Replies

Lastner did not attend last night's meeting. He sent a letter to B. J. Fritz, president of the Greenbelt Civic Association saying that a long-standing appointment required his presence in Baltimore.

Lastner also sent a prepared statement, which Fritz also read, saying he "wanted the record to show clearly that I am not legally able to vote" on the proposal to appeal Judge Bowie's decision.

Lastner said he was in New York on county business when the testimony in the case was received by the board, and that "it has consistently been the ruling of County Atty. Robert B. Mathias that the law did not permit any commissioner to vote on a question upon which he had not heard the evidence."

(Mayor Smith, an attorney by profession, told the News Review that in his opinion Chairman Lastner, like any public official, had no choice but to abide by the opinion of his counsel.)

Lastner also noted that "even if I had been present on the day of the vote on this application, I would have been unable to participate. As it was, I was in Michigan at a funeral."

Mathias told the meeting, "Frank Lastner has been done an injustice. Everyone thinks Frank Lastner is the key to this case — but until the other four commissioners vote on this proposed appeal, he should not be considered the key."

At the end of the meeting, representatives of other organizations in Prince Georges County presented petitions with more than 2,000 names, all asking that the high-rise zoning decision be appealed. They were given to Commissioner Spellman.

It was agreed that in order to better coordinate the School Safety Patrol activities with other school programs, a coordinating committee should be established. The coordinating committee will consist of representatives of each of the three elementary schools and the Greenbelt Police Department. All school safety patrol general programs which involve student participation from all city schools are to be reviewed and approved by the coordinating committee.

Easter Seal Drive Needs Volunteers

The Neighbor-to-Neighbor Campaign for crippled children that met with such success last year in the Greenbelt area will be held again in March, according to F. Robert Knight, Coordinator of the Prince George's County Easter Seal Treatment Center in Lanham.

This low pressure campaign for funds depends for its success upon Greenbelt residents passing the large Neighbor-to-Neighbor envelope from house to house; reading the enclosed literature and making a contribution in one of the individual contributor envelopes.

Greenbelt volunteers are needed to start these envelopes on their way and to pick them up at the end of their appointed rounds. Mrs. Jackie Shabe and Mrs. Rita Boyd are co-chairmen of the Greenbelt Campaign. Mrs. Shabe says, "Unlike a door-to-door campaign, there is no feeling that you must make a contribution whether you want to or not. Your neighbor does not ask you for money. She just leaves an envelope; asks you to read the enclosed material; make a contribution if you wish; and pass the envelope on to your next door neighbor."

Mrs. Boyd said, "We will need quite a few friends and neighbors to help us get these envelopes started on their way and to pick them up at the end of the route. Please call be at GR. 4-5972 or Mrs. Shabe at GR. 4-6998 if you are interested in helping us with this project.

Funds raised will be used to provide direct services to crippled children and adults of your area, including physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech therapy, summer camping, loan of invalid equipment, scholarships, counseling and allied services.

"Why do you keep growing?"

Pups grow fast... and so does greater Washington's appetite for more gas. Just in the past five years we've had to construct new facilities to the tune of 80 million dollars.

To get most of the money needed for expansion we must sell stocks and bonds. And that's where our earnings are important—investors just won't buy these stocks and bonds unless they can expect a reasonable compensation for the use of their money.

New Foods Are Due In Future

The consumer is still king — or queen — in the supermarket as the growing population and research stimulates more and better foods at lower costs, imaginatively processed and packaged.

That's the word from Mrs. Judith Pheil, food and nutrition specialist, University of Maryland, who recently attended the National Agriculture Outlook Conference in Washington, D. C.

"About 55 million more Americans in 1980 will be consuming an average of 1,400 pounds of food a year," says Mrs. Pheil. "Then the U. S. population will be 245 million, compared with 190 million today."

Already people are eating more meats and poultry products, processed fruits and vegetables and some dairy products than 50 years ago. The shift is away from fresh fruits and vegetables and cereals.

"Convenience foods will continue to be popular as more women work, incomes and educational levels rise, and more nutritional knowledge evolves," notes the Co-operative Extension Service specialist.

Food studies reveal that though most convenience foods cost more than home-prepared items, the number of less-expensive convenience foods that homemakers buy in volume actually reduces the total outlay of food.

"In fact, we spend only 19 percent of our income for food now compared with 23 percent 10 years ago and 33 percent today in most European countries," she says.

Looking at new food packaging and processing development, consumers can choose between easy-to-open metal cans and improved glass, plastic and paper containers. Mrs. Pheil reports that one U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) laboratory is working with edible packaging.

New methods of dehydration and dehydro-freezing, foam-mat and vacuum puff drying are being explored. As the number of frozen and dehydrated foods grows, supermarkets must provide more freezer and shelf space to display them.

One of the products now being marketed is an aluminum squeeze food tube fitted with a hollow-handled plastic spoon that's a boon to feeding infants or bedridden patients.

Foods being developed through USDA research include jellied applesauce similar to cranberry sauce. Cold, it's good especially with pork; and warmed it turns to liquid to be poured into a food mold over fruit, berries, vegetables, nuts or raisins.

A non-setting raisin paste may soon join fig paste as a filling in newtons and other bakery products. Raisins and other fruits are undergoing new artificial drying methods known as DBD — dry-blanch-dry — to preserve flavor and color. And possibilities for preserving more bakery goods are mounting steadily.

Exotically new is a frozen avocado salad like a fresh avocado dish called "guacamole" in Mexico. In the process are foam-mat dried orange juice and grapefruit juice powders.

As dehydrated egg products are improved, plant costs and waste will be cut.

Fool-proof methods of destroying salmonella, an organism causing food poisoning, may make more packaged egg products — as omelet mixes — marketable.

Potatoes, however, are still the delight of the food innovators. Just six years ago only seven potato products — not brands — were on retailer's shelves, compared with 51 today and instant sweet potato flakes are next to appear in the shopper's basket.

Imaginary Playmates OK

"Imaginary companions are normal for preschool-age children and may serve a good purpose," says a University of Maryland specialist.

Mrs. Jeanne Moehn, Extension family life specialist, notes that the world is new and strange for a small child. He needs time to learn the difference between real and imagined things.

"When a child calls a row of blocks his train, bakes and eats mud pies, and plays with dolls as real babies," advises Mrs. Moehn, "he is gaining, through imagination, further ability to deal with reality. Sometimes his imagination helps rid himself of irritability."

A child's imaginary playmate who must have a chair at the table. Tears are shed when a parent sits in the chair where "Bobo" is sitting. And the child may account for his behavior by stating, "Bobo told me to do it."

may be included in everything he does. Mrs. Moehn cites "Bobo,"

Playmates like "Bobo" or animals and birds that talk may last a few weeks or several months. Both boys and girls, keenly intelligent children and sociable youngsters may have them.

"Parents who play up to these imaginary companions by coaxing a child to eat or by laughingly blaming the 'playmate' for a child's forgetfulness may make the companion too real," warns Mrs. Moehn. "The child may have trouble distinguishing between real and imaginary things."

However, it is unwise to treat these companions as ridiculous fancy and punish children for them. Watching a child's imaginative play often gives insight into emotional problems.

"Gradually children learn to care more for living companions because they gain greater satisfaction from them," says Mrs. Moehn. "Normally, children will throw aside their make-believe ideas by degrees."

Winter Increases Danger of Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Do you drive around in your auto on cold winter days with all windows and vents tightly closed?

Do you sometimes warm up the car engine in your garage without first opening the garage door?

Do you neglect a checkup of exhaust and manifold on your car unless something starts rattling or falls off?

If your answer to any of these questions is "Yes" — you are flirting with carbon monoxide poisoning.

Carbon monoxide is an odorless, colorless, tasteless gas that comes from your auto exhaust. In the open air it usually is dissipated without harm to anyone. But in an enclosed space it can be deadly.

Each winter brings reports of death from carbon monoxide poisoning. The gas can seep up through the floor boards from a leaky exhaust. The victim becomes drowsy and then "falls asleep." It takes only a short time for an engine running in a closed garage to fill the building with deadly gas.

No one knows how many auto accidents are caused by motorists whose reaction time is somewhat slowed by a small seepage of carbon monoxide into a closed auto. If your exhaust and manifold are in good shape and fitted tight, you likely are safe. But it's even safer to leave a rear window open a crack.
