City Council Votes To Offer New Library Site to County

by G. K. Hodenfield

Greenbelt's dream of a new community library moved a tentative step nearer reality Monday night when City Council unanimously agreed to transfer ownership of a site near the Center to the County Commissioners. The step is tentative because it only makes a new library possible, it doesn't guarantee there will be one.

The motion, proposed by Councilman Cliff Simonson, specified two locations: (1) adjacent to the north parking lot, between the swimming pool and the apartment buildings, and (2) at the north end of the mall behind the statue. The motion also provided that council request an early meeting with the Prince Georges County Library Board to work out procedural details.

If construction of the library has not begun within three years, ownership of the land will revert to the city.

Champion Opposes

Only Councilman David Champion voiced opposition to the proposed procedure. He first said he was opposed to giving the site to the county without the advice and consent of the Advisory Planning Board. (The APB has approved the incorporation in the Greenbelt Master Plan of a site in the Center for the library, but did not designate a specific plot.) Later he said no action should be taken until there had been exploratory talks with the county commissioners. Still later he said Council should determine which site the County Library Board wanted before offering to convey title to the land.

When the motion was put to a vote, however, Champion voted with the other four members of Council.

Library Association Statement

Frank Lewis, chairman of the executive committee of the Greenbelt Library Association, read into the record a statement by the association urging prompt and aggressive action by Council.

"The time is ripe," the statement said, "the need is apparent; the solution lies in vigorous and unified action . . ."

Mayor Edgar L. Smith noted that about a year ago, Council met with a site committee of the County Library Board and toured all possible sites in Greenbelt. This was followed up with letters and maps, but, "We have heard nothing, absolutely nothing. They (the county board) know there is a standing offer of any site in the center which is available."

In reply, Lewis said, "I cannot emphasize too much that the climate is much different now than it was a year ago . . . we seem to have the county board and members of the Prince Georges County assembly delegation on our side."

McDonald Urges Site

Charles T. McDonald, speaking for the Greenbelt Library Association, said there could be no progress toward a new library here until a site was made available. He said he personally favored the site behind the statue, but that both were excellent. It might be possible, McDonald said, to combine the new library with another community need—a bomb shelter.

Talk On Property Values At Fair Housing Meeting

The Greenbelt Citizens for Fair Housing met on Thursday, Jan. 28, in the municipal building to hear Tighe Woods speak on "Race and Property Values." Woods has been a practicing realtor in the District of Columbia all his adult life. About 50 people were present.

Woods stated that real estate prices are determined by supply and demand, and that if a neighborhood is desirable in terms of schools, city services, and homes that are in good repair, prices will be maintained whether or not the neighborhood becomes integrated. This means, said Woods, that property owners in a neighborhood really determine the value of their property and control the resale values of their homes by their own attitudes and community efforts. He felt that prices do not drop when an area becomes integrated unless panic selling occurs.

In the past, real estate speculators have deliberately used pressure tactics to create panic selling; thereby flooding the market, reducing property values drastically, attracting less desirable buyers, and eventually creating new racial ghettos. Today, regulatory measures prevent unscrupulous realtors from using these blockbusting tactics. In addition, Negro buyers are better informed about the financial aspects of home buying. In spite of these improvements, Woods blamed the real estate profession, claiming most realtors are unwilling to sell houses on an open-occupancy basis.

But first of all, he said, "We must give the county a site, and from there the program can go into operation."

Simonson reported that the chairman of the County Library Board, Mrs. Dunn, has said she is convinced that "Greenbelt certainly deserves a library" and that "Greenbelt has backed the County Library Board better than any other community."

The next meeting of the county board is next Wednesday, Feb. 10. City Manager James Giese was instructed to advise the board that Council plans to attend.

Councilman Lewis Bernstein and William Hoff joined Mayor Smith in emphatic agreement with Simonson's motion.

"The time for talk is past," Bernstein said, "now it's time for action."

Mayor Smith said he personally feels the wooded area between the swimming pool and the apartments is the best site, but "Let's schedule a meeting with the library board, and find out what they want."

Board Recommends Adopting New GHI Proxy Procedures

by Al Skolnik

New proxy voting procedures for Greenbelt Homes, Inc. elections will go into effect, if the membership votes approval at the annual regular membership meeting, which is scheduled to be held on Wednesday, May 19.

The GHI board of directors voted unanimously at its regular meeting on Thursday, Jan. 28, to recommend to the membership approval of the by-law change which was prepared by the ad hoc committee on proxies, chaired by David Lange. The new by-law change incorporates language changes suggested by legal counsel.

The by-law change would require that an individual desiring to assign his proxy to another member must obtain an official proxy form from the secretary or GHI office (Under present procedures, the proxy could take any form and be made out on a scrap of paper.) The request must be made in writing. The form would then be mailed to the member unless requested in person by the member.

The official proxy forms when completed would be returned to the secretary or GHI office five days before the election, just as under current procedure. Information on the number of proxy forms requested and received will be a matter of public record.

The GHI board also endorsed the proposals of the ad hoc committee that each official proxy form be accompanied by a letter which explains the purposes of and procedures for proxies. Members would be advised on such matters as the possibility of reclaiming a proxy already submitted. Also explained would be the dual power of a proxy—the right to vote both in elections and in questions on the floor of a membership meeting. The ad hoc committee also suggested that proxy forms be valid for only three months. These suggestions were turned over to the Nominations and Elections Committee.

The GHI board felt that the new procedure will tend to discourage the "proxy-gathering" canvasses of past elections and still readily permit the proper use of proxies by absentee or ill members.

Long-Range Committee

Lloyd Moore, chairman of the Long-Range Planning Committee, presented a status report. He said that the Committee's work is proceeding at high speed, having had two meetings, with a schedule mapped out for the next four months. The first stage is to visualize goals—"the desired image of GHI in 1975". The second stage is to consider guidelines for action, with the final stage developing details to support the guidelines.

Moore reported that the subcommittees were meeting regularly. Subcommittee #1, under the chairmanship of Bruce Bowman, is considering long-range planning for frame homes. Subcommittee #2, under Roy Davis, is considering undeveloped land use. Subcommittee #3, under Joseph Vella, is considering the proper scope of operations for GHI.

The 15-man full committee has recommended to the GHI board of directors that a topographic survey be made of the land owned by GHI. The board decided to consider this matter, along with a low-level aerial photograph of GHI property, at its next meeting, after getting further information on costs.

Moore also informed the board that the committee is considering a questionnaire to elicit the views of the membership on the various topics being considered. The board approved the idea of a questionnaire in principle, but reserved the

by G. K. Hodenfield

City Council agreed Monday night to the establishment of a seven-member Community Relations Advisory Board whose duty it shall be to ease the problems of integration in Greenbelt. Mayor Edgar L. Smith was given the sole power to appoint and remove the chairman and six other members.

"The purpose of this board shall not be to force integration," Mayor Smith said, "but to make sure it comes peacefully when it comes—and I think we agree it is inevitable."

Most of the long discussion of the proposal dealt with the power to appoint and remove members. Councilman David Champion successfully urged that the power rest with the mayor alone. Councilman Lewis Bernstein said the decisions should be made by two-thirds of the Council. Bernstein's proposal was defeated, 3-2, and then Champion's measure was adopted unanimously.

Mayor Smith's Views

Mayor Smith told Council:

"We are dealing with an extremely sensitive subject, and one man should take the responsibility. I'm not sure I want that responsibility, but I've given it a lot of thought, and I'm not afraid of it. In any event, I certainly would consult with other members of Council."

"The Board can do a lot of good for the city if it handles its job right, and irreparable harm if the job is handled badly. We don't want extremists of either side represented on the board."

Dissenting Views

Bernstein argued that it is traditional for the full council to take the leading role in such an activity, and "it's the responsibility of Council; we are all in this together."

Councilman Clifford Simonson, supporting Bernstein, said, "I am thinking of the future: I would much rather rely on a collective judgment than that of just one man. In the future we might have a mayor who wanted to use this board as a political football—and certainly none of my comments apply to the present Mayor."

Mayor Smith replied, "The danger of the board becoming a political football is less if the responsibility rests with one man . . . I don't believe, for instance, that three or four members of Council would agree to remove a politically prominent person from the board."

Purpose of Board

The ordinance establishing the board says its purpose shall be "to foster sympathetic understanding, harmonious relationships, tolerance, good-will, individual responsibility and a practical cooperation among all groups and individuals to the end that the City of Greenbelt may grow and develop wholesome attitudes in respecting the individual opportunities and freedoms within a right to review its content and means of dissemination.

New Rules

The board approved some changes in its rules and regulations with respect to additions. Plumbing, heating, or electrical installations in additions must be made by licensed craftsmen, but GHI approval of the craftsmen is no longer needed. However, all heating and plumbing connections to the main service lines must be made by GHI workmen on a fee basis.

Other Matters

The board urged the city council to appeal a circuit court decision that Greenbelt is not an aggrieved party in the county commissioner's decision to zone 150 acres near DuVal High School for an apartment-industrial complex.

The primary function of the Board shall be to carry on research and studies and act in an advisory capacity to Council.

Board members shall serve three-year staggered terms.

The Council meeting lasted four hours and 20 minutes. More than half that time was devoted to the Community Relations Advisory Board and to discussion of the proposed library sites (see separate story).

City Treasurer's Report

Council also accepted a report from the city Treasurer, and agreed to meet with the city manager to discuss it. The Treasurer reported that overall expenses are in line with budgetary appropriations.

He expressed some concern, however, about the revenue from real property tax.

"At budget time," he said, "our tax rate was established based upon an estimated assessed valuation of $21 million. At that time it was impossible to establish accurately what our assessed valuation would be, due to the reassessment of all property within the city . . . and many of these assessments being challenged by the property owners."

"Even to date there are still some assessments which have not been finalized, the most significant being those for G.H.I. and the Klein Department Store."

The Treasurer said there were indications the assessed valuation would fall short of the estimated $21 million by about $2 million, reducing revenue by $21,000.

"If a deficit results in the City's fiscal operation for the year 1964-65," he said, "this will have to be made up in next year's fiscal plan and could well necessitate an increase in the property tax."

In other business Monday night:

Miscellaneous

—Councilman Champion withdrew a proposed ordinance regulating coin-operated facilities such as laundromats. This came after operators of the laundromats in both the Center and at Beltway Plaza testified their places of business were NO longer open throughout the night, and that regular inspections of the premises were being made.

—Council heard that the State Roads Commission has authorized left turn signals at Kenilworth Ave. and Greenbelt Road, at an estimated cost of $5,000.

—A motion by Councilman Champion was unanimously adopted, opposing the closing of the Post Office lobby at 6 p.m. daily, and refusing permission for the Post Office Department to place a large drop box in the center as proposed.

—City Manager James Giese was instructed to draw up an ordinance dealing with conflict of interest as it pertains to city officials.

—Mayor Smith was authorized to sell 4.8 acres (roughly one-half) of the City's landfill property to the U.S. Government for the construction of a private interchange from the Beltway to Goddard Space Flight Center. The negotiated purchase price was $10,000. The Government has agreed to permit the City of Greenbelt to use a nearby parcel of land of approximately 14 acres for landfill purposes for a period of five years.

—A special meeting of Council was called for Feb. 10 to discuss what further action should be taken in protest to the zoning of property in the vicinity of DuVal High School for highrise and garden apartments.

—Council agreed to endorse various proposals for legislation made by the Maryland Municipal League, discussed at a League meeting in Annapolis last week.

City Council Sets Precedent

The City Council set a precedent at its meeting last Monday: whether or not it was a wise one remains to be seen. The council voted that all appointments to, and removals from, the new Community Relations Advisory Board will be made by the mayor alone. The council as a whole appoints members to all its other advisory boards.

No reflection is intended on Mayor Smith, who has proved to be an able and conscientious public servant. He spoke in favor of the motion that was passed, and it was evident that he regarded the power of making appointments to the Community Relations Advisory Board as an obligation for which one man alone should clearly be responsible.

A majority of the council stated that this particular board was "different," more delicate, and that it could do the community either a great deal of good or a great deal of harm. They therefore felt that if ever one of its members attempted to use his position for personal publicity or political advancement, it ought to be possible to remove him without delay.

Unfortunately it has proved virtually impossible in the past to persuade a majority of the council to remove anyone from an advisory board. So perhaps the council's decision is, after all, the best solution to the problem.

However, there are certain dangers to giving one man sole power over appointments and removals from this important advisory board. Because this board is working in a sensitive area, we think that any action of the council in respect to the board should involve a certain amount of consensus. We would have preferred to see the Mayor given the initial power to make appointments and removals, which could be rejected if three other councilmen so desired.

Medical Center Opens Soon

Greenbelt's new professional building is nearing completion and will open sometime this month. The flat-roofed building, located in the Center next to the Post Office, is faced in redwood and brick and has two floors, each with its own street-level entrances (made possible by the sloping nature of the site).

The upper level will be shared by four Greenbelt physicians: Drs. Till Bergemann, Louis Moody, William Weintraub, and Hans Wodak. Moody specializes in obstetrics and gynecology, and the others are general practitioners.

The lower level will be rented, possibly to dentists or others in allied professions.

Doctors' Offices

The doctors' quarters are spacious, well-planned, and handsome. A large waiting room at one end of the building can be entered either from the Center Mall or from the parking lot, where ambulances will pull up beside a specially-constructed ramp. A sky-lighted children's corner and built-in magazine rack are features of the waiting room, which, like most of the interior, is paneled in mahogany and soundproofed with acoustical ceiling tile. The receptionist's office overlooks the waiting room.

Throughout the building, much built-in furniture has been used; chiefly wood with a natural finish topped by plastic work surfaces. "Pass-throughs" for specimens and file cards have been built into the walls. The upper level (except for the full-width waiting room) has been divided into thirds, running the length of the building. A central core houses laboratory, X-ray room and business office. Two side corridors with nurses' stations separate this windowless core from the two outer rows of rooms, which include four consulting rooms (one for each doctor), 10 examining or treatment rooms, and a library-conference room. This last, the doctors' pride and joy, overlooks the parking lot and the woods through large picture windows.

Prefabrication Used

The lower level has been "roughed in" and will be completed to the specifications of the future tenants. The total interior square footage is 7214 feet. The building was the work of Marshall Erdman and Associates, a Wisconsin construction firm that specializes in medical and professional offices. The firm's architect worked out the plans for the building with the doctors themselves. Many of the materials were prefabricated, and were shipped from Wisconsin and erected under the supervision of a company foreman who moved to the area temporarily to oversee the job. Local labor was used for the actual construction work. The building is completely air-conditioned and has a forced-air heating system.

The doctors are planning an open house soon for city dignitaries and representatives of various organizations; a second, larger reception will give every Greenbelt sidewalk superintendent a chance to look around. The dates will be announced in the NEWS REVIEW.

Our Lady's Sodality Meets

The members of Our Lady's Sodality of St. Hugh's Church will meet for their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 10, at 8:30 p.m. in the basement of the church on Crescent Rd. The speaker for the evening will be Rev. George Spellman of Our Lady Queen of Peace parish. Commemorating the 31st annual observance of Brotherhood Week this month, Father Spellman, moderator of the Catholic Interracial Council of Prince Georges County, will discuss, "Brotherhood, 1965—The Obligation of the Christian Conscience." Oops! Our Slip Is Showing

To the Editor:
I am moved to take you to task gently (for, I judge, you are a lady) for some apparent sloppiness in the operation of your paper.

Most disturbing is the fact that the weekly issues are dated Thursday, but never arrive at my door until Saturday. Today the paper was tossed up the stairs along with three of my neighbors' plus a welter of handbills. Hardly the way to endear yourself with me, as your subscriber.

Assuming you intended to get the paper to me by January 28, why do you carry a meeting notice in that issue for Monday, January 25? Why, if you have an obvious editorial article like "Art Comes to Greenbelt" in your pages, why aren't opinions attributed more precisely? In the second paragraph your writer does switch to the first person. Yet even if I assumed it was staff written (not necessarily true on the information you provide me), why is it signed D.S.? That could be you, or Dave Stern. Apparently Dave Stern isn't afraid to sign the library nonsense in the next two columns. The burning of the Hue library is hardly a laughing matter. Every day our men get killed over there for some reason no one has ever explained to my satisfaction. But hardly funny.

Your copy editing is sloppy, too. There is no "partially frozen ice" in this world. It is the lake, dear lady, that was partially frozen. Let me add that even the latter phrase is imprecise. A 20-foot-deep lake rarely freezes completely. But 5 or 6 of these feet converted to ice are perfectly safe for strolling or skating; it might even hold a Mack truck!

I would like to see you be more complete with your "What Goes On" column. Surely more goes on in newly awakened Greenbelt than your four items—three of which happened long after I received the paper.

I think your paper has a definite, valued place in the community. But just because the advertiser pays and not the subscriber—don't get too complacent. If I stop reading, the advertiser will stop paying.

Max B. Heppner

Editor's Note: A partially-frozen smile played over our lips as we read Mr. Heppner's letter. We are guilty on most of the counts, and would like to plead extenuating circumstances. (1) We try to make "What Goes On" as complete as possible, but there are a great many organizations in Greenbelt. Although we are glad to publicize their activities, our limited manpower obliges us to rely on the publicity chairmen of the organizations themselves to inform us of approaching meetings. (2) The article, "Art Comes to Greenbelt," was written by Dorothy Sucher. (3) No column of personal opinion or humor, such as "Speaking Sternly," can appeal equally to all tastes. The particular column our correspondent singled out has also received favorable comment from other readers for its wit. (4) We regret that Mr. Heppner's paper is delivered late, and are constantly trying to improve our recently-initiated delivery service to Springhill Lake (where he lives). We have been advertising for a circulation manager for the last three weeks, and the position is still open.

All of the weaknesses revealed by Mr. Heppner's criticisms can be traced to a twofold cause: the NEWS REVIEW needs more staff members, and the present members are far from perfect. As our correspondent may know, the paper is largely staffed by volunteers. We could certainly use a good copy editor, not to mention a few reporters, feature writers, advertising men, a circulation manager, and some delivery boys. Incidentally, the last person who wrote a letter along Mr. Heppner's lines ended up as the NEWS REVIEWS editor.

Speaking Sternly

... by David Stern

The most important item for watching a presidential inauguration parade (and we mean live, not on the TV screen) is a ticket entitling bearer to sit in the grandstand or adjoining bleachers. For anyone lacking such basic equipment we strongly recommend a six-foot stepladder. A five footer will do, but that extra foot greatly improves one's visibility and somewhat makes up for the fact (discovered by us after purchase) that such a ladder is too tall to sit on, while painting a room, without bumping the head against the ceiling.

According to the press, some of the spectators took their seats even before sunrise. In reality, there was no reason to hurry; there was enough time to listen to the inaugural address on TV, pick up at the Greenbelt exit a soldier named Wes who had a ticket to the stands but no transportation; be turned back from S. Capitol bridge by a couple of sullen M.P.s, walk 10 blocks or so shouldering the all-important ladder, sample one of the "comfort stations" (ever carried a ladder into an outhouse?), set up said ladder at a choice location and then discover that the parade was delayed and wouldn't start for another half hour or so.

The weather was great — clear skies, bright sunshine and a light breeze which rippled both the half-mast flags in front of the D. C. courthouse, mourning the late D.C. Justice Lynch, and those honoring LBJ atop their masts on the adjacent Esso building. The crowd was restless and even more so were the police, who cropped up in droves everywhere. Some, equipped with big binoculars, manned the rooftops along the route to ensure the president's safety. Long after LBJ passed they still tended their posts and as far as we could see, the one across the road was very busy binogling the pretty girls that came marching along.

Appropriately, it was the police that headed the parade, a wide wedge of them riding motorcycles. After them came a squad of camera trucks, then Lyndon waving cheerfully to the crowds from his limousine, then more cameras, more cops, more delays and finally, the big parade itself.

Chotiner Talks at Jr. High

Mr. Allan I. Chotiner, principal of High Point Senior High School, will speak at the Feb. 9 meeting of the Greenbelt Junior High School PTA. He will explain the program offered by High Point and answer questions concerning it.

The business session will begin at 8 p.m., followed by Mr. Chotiner's speech to parents of ninth graders. Teacher visitation is planned at this time for parents of seventh and eighth grade students. All interested parents are invited to come.

Nursery Plans For Future

The Greenbelt Nursery School is forming a committee for long-range planning for the school. The first meeting will be held on Monday, Feb. 8 at 8:30 p.m. at the home of Bernice Kastner, 39-F Ridge. Anyone interested in the future of the school, or in the possibility of extending pre-school education to lower income groups is invited to attend.

A complete rundown of the show that followed would require far too much space and patience, so we'll stick to a few high and lowlights. We enjoyed Georgia's "train," festooned with banners "Hi Lucie" all over, and also Illinois' big St. Bernard dog which wore a neat little keg and a badly fitting 10-gallon hat. We were embarrassed by the raggedy broken ranks of the Coast Guard Academy which put all its tallest cadets in the front ranks, setting a pace which the poor ill-uns in the rear just couldn't keep. We chuckled at the District's 3 commissioners, miserably wedged with their overcoats into the rear seat of their convertible (real pros like Bill Scranton of Pennsylvania sat on the top, feet on the rear seat, and greatly enjoyed the whole thing). And we didn't quite know how to react to the Shriners' mounted squad depositing oomph all over the avenue, through which the following Navy band bravely waded.

As colorful as the parade was, the spectators had their own attractions, especially when examined from a six-foot-high vantage point. We lost count of the strange cameras which we obligingly aimed and squeezed (and wound up with an abandoned camera-case beneath the ladder. Know anyone named Gensheimer?), We brushed against cardboard periscopes, U.S. patent 2 635 500 and bought an economy-size souvenir button with a ribbon proclaiming "I was at the inauguration etc., etc." We watched a group of youngsters decant and sip a yellowish beverage which certainly wasn't very soft, after which they behaved rather unpatriotically ("loushest parade I ever saw"). And who's that standing barely fifty feet away if not a fellow Greenbelter? Hi there, Harvey Geller!

Was it worth while? That's a hard question to answer. The parade was fun, the marching bands big and brassy, the majorettes cute and as for the big shots, why, it was a treat to see them for real. And yet somehow, above the clicking of shutters and the whirring of movie cameras, we heard only scattered cheers and no applause. Somehow, the elaborate floats seemed to reflect none of the American spirit which the president expressed only several hours earlier. Loaded with frills and with glitter, they seemed fitting for a homecoming parade, but inappropriate for the inauguration of a president. As we swiftly headed back to Greenbelt, hoping to beat the inevitable rush, we wondered whether this indeed was the best America could do.
