GHI EXTENDS APPLICATION TIME FOR NEW FREE STANDING HOMES

by Rita Fisher

At the G.H.I. Board of Directors meeting last Thursday night, a report from the Committee on Free-Standing Homes revealed that approximately 30 applications had been received by the deadline which was Nov. 1st. Although 11 of these applications were from families with four or fewer children, it was still the feeling of the Board that the small number received was due to a misunderstanding that some members might have had that the homes would be available only to families with more than four children.

The Board has agreed to extend the time for submission of applications with the hope that more families (regardless of size) would send in applications. All applications will be kept in strictest confidence. It was added that the members who submitted their applications before the original deadline would receive first consideration.

A report from a representative of the Member Relations Board stated that there was a need for more committee members. The Board felt that all committees were lacking in sufficient members and a plea would be made to the GHI membership for more participation.

Jim Smith, in his report on the Standards and Improvements Committee, recommended enforcement of the regulations regarding sheds, fences, etc. Also recommended was a continuation of re-surfacing the blacktop sidewalks with the comment that the work already done was considered excellent.

Re-Sale Inspections

Passed by the Board was a motion stating that, at the time of resale of GHI homes, inspections will be made of sheds, fences, etc., to check that they conform with regulations.

A motion made to combine the Maintenance Committee and the Standards and Improvements Committee was approved by the Board, and Georges Adams was appointed chairman of the combined group.

A discussion on zoning matters facing the city brought forth the following resolution by the GHI Board of Directors. "It would be the GHI position that any possible or prospective changes to the Greenbelt Master Plan should be reviewed by the Advisory Planning Board with a resulting recommendation to City Council and that all such changes should be contemplated at a public hearing before enactment."

President Charles Schwan also suggested that the GHI Board have representation at every Council meeting and this action will be taken.

League of Women Voters

The November meeting of the Greenbelt unit of the League of Women Voters will take place on Monday, Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. in the Springhill Lake Community Center. Mrs. Larry Fink will lead a discussion of appointed boards in the county, such as the Library and Hospital boards, of their duties and place in county government. The meeting is open to all interested women.

Special Meeting On School Sites

A special meeting concerning the acquisition of school sites in Greenbelt will be held at the Board of Education annex in Upper Marlboro on Friday, Nov. 19 at 10 a.m.

Accidents Continue At Beltway Plaza

Police Chief William Lane reports a total of 19 automobile accidents in Greenbelt during the month of October, with the majority taking place on the Beltway Plaza parking lot. The 62nd Avenue entrance to the Beltway Plaza shopping center was the second most accident-prone location.

The accidents included five cases of personal injury and 14 of property damage. The most common time for accidents to occur was between 4 and 5 p.m.; and the most common day of the week was Thursday.

Since January 1, 1965, a total of 13 accidents at the 62nd Avenue entrance to Beltway Plaza have been reported to the Greenbelt police. No traffic light has yet been installed here, and controversy has raged for months over the question of whose responsibility it is to install the light: the developer of the shopping center, or the State Roads Commission. Failure to grant the right of way was listed as the cause of nine of the 13 accidents.

Additional accidents have also taken place at the shopping center entrance, and have been handled by the police departments of the state, the county, and the township of Berwyn. The exact figures were not available.

Schlecht Show at Mickelson Gallery

Greenbelt resident Richard Schlecht is having a three week showing of his realistic work at the Mickelson Gallery, 707 G Street NW. (Gallery hours are Tuesday-Friday 9:30-6 p.m. and Saturday 9:30-5 p.m.) The show ends Nov. 26. Most of the 65 pieces have already been sold.

Born in Dallas, Texas, in 1936 and educated at the Univ. of Colorado and the Univ. of Denver, Schlecht for the first time is showing a comprehensive group of water color, oils, and drawings completed largely within the past two years.

Schlecht and his family moved to Lakeside North last February. He says some of the work he is showing was done in the Greenbelt area, one at the Agricultural Research Center.

Panel for High Schoolers

A panel discussion program especially planned for all Greenbelt high school age students will be held on Sunday, November 14, at 6:30 p.m. in the Greenbelt Community Church. The topic to be discussed will be "Troublespots in Greenbelt."

City May Get Federal Park Facilities Funds

City officials are optimistic about getting approval of a federal grant to assist in the acquisition of land for open space purposes after last Monday's meeting with Urban Renewal Administration officials. The city understands that priority is being given to communities that have not previously qualified and to grants of less than $500,000.

The city also understands that such funds can be used to purchase land that may be used for a municipal facility. City Council will be asked to approve a formal application for federal aid at next Monday's meeting. Approval of the National Capital Regional Planning Commission will also be sought.

A majority of council has indicated a preference for parcel 10—the 3 acres at the end of old Crescent Rd. adjacent to Kenilworth Ave.—for a municipal service building. The site is in a hollow, will not be near residential development, and will be buffered by park lands and Kenilworth Ave. It is almost at the geographical center of the city with good access to main streets.

The next preferred site is part of parcel 4—a 7-acre parcel located primarily on the west side of Research Rd., adjacent to the Agricultural Research Center. This property is sufficient in size to establish a buffer between a service building facility and existing GHI homes. However, sanitary sewer facilities may be a problem.

Solicitors in City Must be Registered

Greenbelt residents are reminded by City Manager James Giese that city ordinances provide for the licensing of persons selling from door to door. Each licensed person is issued a permit which he is required to carry when selling goods. Persons soliciting funds or selling goods to raise funds for non-profit organizations such as charities are not required to be licensed. However, such solicitors are requested to register with the Police Department so that the police can ascertain that a hawkers and peddlers permit is not required and so that the department will be able to answer inquiries made by citizens concerning the solicitation.

In the past year there has been an increasing number of Baltimore-located religious organizations soliciting within the city. Some of these organizations have questionable credentials and a few have been refused permission to solicit within the city and the county as a result of the actions of some of the solicitors.

In order to better verify the non-profit nature of the organization making solicitations, the city has prepared a new registration form. However, even though the Police Department will make a more thorough check of such organizations, the city does not guarantee the use to which donated funds are put nor does the city endorse any solicitations except by proclamation of the Mayor or resolution of the City Council. Greenbelt residents can help to control soliciting and peddling by asking to see a peddler's permit or evidence of registration with the Police Department. Persons not having such evidence should be requested to go to the Police Department. Any person experiencing difficulty with a solicitor or peddler should immediately notify the Police Department. The Police Department will also be happy to provide any information which it might have concerning any solicitation.

Board of Education Proposes Change in High School Site

by Elaine Skolnik

The Prince Georges County Board of Education announced a sudden switch in plans for Greenbelt's new schools at last Tuesday's Board meeting, which was attended by Greenbelt councilmen and citizens.

Instead of seeking 32 acres adjacent to the Capital Beltway for a Greenbelt senior high school, the Board stated that it was going to seek a three-school complex of 55 acres in parcels 1 and 2 — the vacant land between Greenbelt Homes, Inc., property and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway.

A senior high school would be placed on the south side of Northway extended (near the sanitary landfill); a junior high school north of Northway extended; and an elementary school on Hamilton rd. (near the GHI administration offices). All the acreage is owned by Charles Bresler and associates.

The Board does not expect the same difficulties in acquiring these sites that it encountered in attempting to obtain the Beltway site near the American Legion, also owned by Bresler and associates.

William Kahler, attorney for Bresler, told the board that his client would be ready to sell the land at an average price of $8,000 an acre.

The appraised value of the Beltway site was more than $20,000 an acre. The owner has been resisting condemnation of this site for a high school.

Pilski Suggests Postponement

The action of the Board came as a surprise to Greenbelt representatives. At the suggestion of Councilman Dick Pilski, the Board agreed to postpone final action until Friday, Nov. 19, when the city would be invited to make its comments.

Councilman David Champion, speaking "on his own behalf," commented that he favored the Board's proposal.

The Board's new plan was presented orally, since no written reports were available. The plan had been recommended by its engineer, Mr. Robertson, who had conducted a special study within the last few weeks. Robertson stated that parcel 11 near the lake was too narrow a strip for a junior high school.

The site on parcels 1 and 2 had been considered originally as a school location, but had been discarded because of the impact on road traffic and other problems. In the absence of any new roadways, a senior high school on the Northway site would mean that all school buses and school traffic would have to be channeled through such two-lane streets as Ridge Road and Northway.

Without an overpass or interchange with the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, the senior high school would be backed up against the parkway, with all out-of-town students forced to negotiate Greenbelt roads to get to the school.

Board of Education officials at the meeting, however, said that little busing of students would be required, except from Springhill Lake. No further explanation was given as to how this would be accomplished.

Threaten to Sue CFPG

Attending the meeting was a delegation from the Citizens for a Planned Greenbelt (CFPG), led by Chairman Lloyd L. Moore, and city councilmen who had been seeking to expedite progress on the Beltway school site. Nine months ago the Board announced plans for acquiring this site, only to run into difficulties in reaching an agreement with the owner. City representatives and CFPG sought a meeting with the Board, after learning that the Beltway site condemnation suit would not be heard until April 7, 1966.

During the meeting, President W. Carroll Beatty of the Board expressed the board's irritation at a letter it had received from CFPG. He took exception to the following passage: "It is disturbing to us (CFPG) to know that the Board would, in any way, consider or indirectly assist the pressures of the developer to effect a 'tie-in' deal on zoning of other property in order to expedite acquisition of the school site."

The passage referred to a proposal recently made by the owner of the Beltway site seeking council support for higher density of parcels 1 and 2 in exchange for uncontested consummation of the sale of the Beltway site to the Board of Education.

The Board asked CFPG to prove the allegation or withdraw it and apologize. Upon the motion of Mrs. Louise Yuill, the board authorized its attorney to institute suit against CFPG if a satisfactory reply was not received by November 30.

High Rise in the Park

They're burning the timber on the Jaeger tract. Soon what passes for progress around these parts will take its place. Another high-rise apartment complex will soar above Kenilworth Avenue, blanking out the uninterrupted view of forestlands in Greenbelt Park.

We can see it now—that first full-page ad in the real estate sections of the paper. Like another we saw recently, introducing a new luxury apartment building, we'll bet it will brag about a feature rare in the Washington area: "Every window with a spectacular outlook on the tree-tops in adjacent Greenbelt Park." Will there be a word about the zoning errors that led to this urban affront gouged out of a public park? Will there be a line about the toil, the petitions, about all those court and zoning hearings, and about the protests of countless citizens and officials who fought to preserve this stretch of land for parkland use?

In fact, to look into the future with unblinking gaze, we'll bet the ad writers won't even hint at what the view might be like from the tent sites in the park—the new America the Beautiful, brick walls and glass facades to blot out the setting sun.

Where To Go

The National Arboretum
Most Greenbelters may have never heard of the National Arboretum. Yet it is likely that most of us have seen it, at one time or another, when driving into Washington via the parkway - as a collection of greenery and neat little evergreens overlooking the highway from the left, just before the first traffic light on Bladensburg road. An arboretum, says the dictionary, is "A place where trees and shrubs are cultivated for scientific or educational purposes" and this defines it precisely: maintained by the Department of Agriculture and covering 400 acres, it boasts an astonishing variety of trees - from Japanese cherries to Cedars of Lebanon to Dawn Redwoods, not to mention our own native species. In addition, it is a pleasant park, with a network of trails lacing through it.

The glory of the arboretum is its azaleas and dogwoods. Every May thousands of visitors crowd in to view the colorful blooms, covering in one place an entire hillside. Lured by the main attraction, they swarm over the park's trails and soon discover other highlights - the scenic overlook from the bluffs of the Anacostia river, the long bench on Dogwood Circle, the numerous park pavilions, the administration building - a small architectural gem, surrounded by a shallow pool - the daffodils, rhododendons, camellias and many other attractions.

In the fall the arboretum offers an impressive array of foliage colors. This year, in addition, free tours are given of the fall camellias, now in full bloom, and of the Gotelli dwarf evergreen collection. The last of these tours will be given during the coming weekend, 13-14 November, continuously from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

To reach the arboretum turn left into Bladensburg rd. from the first light encountered when coming from the Washington parkway. The arboretum is on the left side of the road about half a mile away and may be entered either from M St. N.E. (main entrance) or from R St. It is open from 8 a.m. (Sat. & Sun. 10 a.m.) till 5 p.m.; rest rooms are provided but picnic facilities are not. DPS.

NOTICE
GHI home owners who are over 65, have lived at their present residence for five years or more, and whose total income is $4,000 per year or less, may be eligible for relief from real estate taxes for the year 1966. Please contact the Comptroller's office (474-6601) for the necessary forms to file with the County. The forms must be received at Upper Marlboro by December tenth.

Lakewood Says Thank You

To the Editor:

Lakewood residents owe a big thank-you to the City fathers and especially to Buddy Attick and his crew for the fine job they did in constructing a network of bridges across our "creek" and blacktopping the path alongside. The result of this work is that what used to be a muddy shortcut to St. Hugh's and the Center, to be attempted only by the most hardy, has been converted into a pleasant walkway wide enough for bikes and baby carriages. We do appreciate it.

Kathleen McFarland

Point of View by Dorothy Sucher

With the holiday season approaching, the annual TV toy assault on young viewers has swung into action. And "assault" is the word, all right. It's a military campaign complete with guns and cannon, bazookas, grenades, air squadrons, and realistically wounded soldiers.

That takes care of the boys. The little girls are offered dolls with hair they can bleach and set on rollers, and sleazy "hostess" outfits, apparently designed to teach the lesson that a hostess's mission in life is to arouse envy of her possessions in the hearts of her guests, and smugness in her own ("I'm glad that it's all mine.")

Poor kids! And poor us, the parents, who may not want our boys to grow up into blood-thirsty marksmen and our girls into house-proud, overdressed boobies.

These toys are not cheap, and their upkeep is astronomical. The newfangled dolls - military mannikins for the boys and shapely females for the girls—are only the foot in the door. The real budget-breakers, the accessories, come afterwards: uniforms of every description; miniature weapons; bandages and stretchers; and, presumably, regulation coffins complete with chaplains to read the service over the departed and telegram forms to be filled out and sent to the bereaved parents. Splendid material here for spreading holiday cheer.

The girls dolls, of course, will need lounging pajamas, cigarette holders, apres-ski outfits, and mink stoles—with appropriate price tags.

Then there are the batteries one must buy for those alluring battery-operated toys. One boy plus one toy plus one battery equals one day, or at most two, my experience has shown.

Finally we have the toys that simply break after they've been used a couple of times. In some ways this is almost an advantage, because the toys themselves are such a letdown for the children compared to their TV counterparts, artfully photographed with an accompanying sound-track lifted from a DeMille Word War II epic.

Many families spend the greatest portion of their annual toy budget between now and the end of December. Even if they want to invest in well-designed, stimulating, instructive toys that will last for years, where can they find them?

One good place is at the second annual Toy and Book Fair sponsored by the Greenbelt Cooperative Nursery School. This non-profit school is a Greenbelt institution, almost as old as the town itself. The Fair is offered primarily as a public service. The school hopes to make a modest profit as well, and I think they deserve one.

The nursery mothers and teachers have been scouring the market for superior playthings, many of them sold chiefly or exclusively to schools and generally unavailable to the public.

We bought many of the holiday gifts for our three youngsters—as well as nieces and nephews—at last year's Toy Fair. A year later I can report that those toys are still in excellent condition, despite hard use, and are giving undiminished satisfaction to the children and to us.

Theoretically, I'm in favor of leaving the children at home when I go toy-shopping, but I can't always manage it; so I was glad to learn that this year the nursery school fathers are providing story-telling to occupy the children while their parents browse.

This year the fair is featuring durable wooden toys; children's records selected by a musician; children's books selected by a committee of professional librarians, as well as paperback books about children for parents; hand-made origami decorations; a white-elephant sale; and a balloon man.

Last year's popular Audubon Society booth will be expanded, with gift items including tiles and stationery, games, books about birds and animals, and bird feeders. The arts and crafts section will include large sheets of newsprint paper, powdered poster paints, modelling clay, thick chalks, weaving materials, and easels.

The Toy Fair will take place at the Fellowship Center building behind the Community Church, Crescent Rd. and Hillside, on Friday, Nov. 19, from 3 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, Nov. 20, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. I'm looking forward to it.

Another Aspirin Poisoning; Doctor Warns Parents

A 3-year-old boy was taken to the hospital this week suffering from an accidental overdose of aspirin. He was released after his stomach had been pumped. This is the ninth case of aspirin poisoning reported by the Greenbelt Police Department since the beginning of the year.

Aspirin poisoning in children has become common in the county; more admissions for this cause were made to Prince Georges Hospital in a year than to New York's Bellevue Hospital in five years.

Children have been known to climb on bathroom sinks to take aspirin from the medicine cabinet, or on chairs to get them down from shelves in closets and kitchens. Sugar flavored aspirin tablets for children are often involved in poisoning cases, because children sometimes believe they are candy.

Greenbelt physician Dr. William Weintraub commented: "The only safe place to keep aspirin is under lock and key. Aspirin is an extremely toxic compound, and is often fatal to young children. At the very least, having his stomach pumped is a most unpleasant experience for a child."

Weintraub added that even vitamins can be dangerous when taken for a prolonged time in high concentrations. Many other common household products are hazardous, especially volatile compounds such as furniture polish and kerosene. Weintraub stated: "These should not be stored in the house at all. Very poor treatment is available to counteract these poisons. And they should never be kept in a bottle or container—such as a soda bottle—that was originally used for food-stuffs."

Recent studies have indicated that accidental poisoning is most common in active young children, and frequently occurs in late afternoon when the mother is busy preparing dinner, or in the morning when the mother is occupied in getting the older children off to school. It also tends to occur when someone in the family is sick, and medications have been left out within reach.

City Notes

Landscaping jobs, present and future, will be occupying the Greenbelt Public Works Department for some time to come. One seasonal new addition went in last week across the driveway from the east end of the Municipal Building—a permanent Christmas tree. Its site was chosen so that it can be seen down most of the length of Southway by those who enter the city.

Other future landscaping work in the center calls for some sort of summer-blossoming shrubs to be planted on the strip of lawn between the east end of the Center School and the west parking lot, and trees to be planted in an island to extend down the center of the entire length of the north parking lot. This island, to be formed of asphalt curbing, will be constructed by the paving contractor who has been doing all the street paving around the city. City crews will backfill and seed the island.

Still other landscaping work is to be done below the dam at the lake, an area which has recently been filled and graded. The opposite end of the lake—the so-called bay area near Charlestowne Village—has been regraded recently to eliminate a swampy stretch.

Nov. Peace Corps Test

Washington area residents interested in putting their skills to use in developing nations around the world are invited to take the Peace Corps placement test at 9 a.m. on Saturday, Nov. 13, at 1900 E St., N.W.

The Peace Corps uses the placement test to determine how an applicant can best be utilized overseas. The Placement test requires no preparation and is non-competitive—an applicant can neither pass nor fail.

Persons interested in serving in the Peace Corps must fill out an application, if they have not already done so, and present it to the tester before taking the test. Applications may be obtained from local post offices or from the Peace

Dead trees were also removed. After more filling, this area will be seeded by the city crews.

To control a drainage problem on Laurel Hill Road, a city crew recently regraded an area from the street to the sidewalk opposite 3 court. New curbing was then installed along the pavement and the area sodded. New sod has also been laid alongside the swimming pool, next to the new sidewalk.

Corps, Washington, D.C. 20525. The placement test takes about an hour and a half. An optional achievement test for applicants who have studied French or Spanish requires another hour.

Bystander Arrested for Obstructing Policeman

"Every charitable act is a stepping stone toward heaven," said Henry Ward Beecher, but a Washington man discovered Nov. 9 that it could also be a stepping stone toward Peoples' Court in Hyattsville.

He was just an innocent bystander in the crowd last Oct. 11, watching a Greenbelt police officer trying to break up a heated argument between three men in front of the Drug Fair at Beltsway Plaza. Impulsively, he began to advise the quarrelsome three that they were not obliged to say anything to the officer, or to answer his questions.

The officer asked him to depart—not once, but three times. Losing his temper, the Good Samaritan aimed a blow at the officer with his fist, according to Police Chief William Lane; whereupon the officer hit him over the head with a nightstick and arrested him. No one else was charged.

He was tried Nov. 9 before Judge Richard Painter, found guilty of assault (technically, "assault" is the aiming of a blow; "battery" is its delivery), and given a 90-day suspended sentence with a year's probation. He was also fined $50 plus court costs on each of two additional charges: interfering with the duties of a police officer, and disorderly conduct.

water heater acting up?

Had enough of never having enough hot water? Got a little leak in your tank? Don't wait till Old Faithful breaks down permanently! Change now, before the pressure's on. And this time, change over to flameless electric. It's the most efficient water heater you can buy.

There's no flame, no flue, no installation problems. You can cut down on heat-wasting pipe runs by placing your electric water heater near where the most hot water is used. Tuck it away in a cabinet next to the kitchen sink, a linen closet near the bathroom, or under a staircase. The tank is so well insulated, it's always safe to the touch. You can store things right on top. Or, get a new counter-top model and enjoy extra work space, as well as all the hot water a busy household needs.

Remember: There's a special low rate for you when you heat water electrically.
