Council Postpones Action on Capital Improvements; Passes Boat Ordinance

by Al Skolnik

Because of the lengthy hearings on the proposed gun control legislation, the rest of the agenda at city council's Monday night meeting was abbreviated. Postponed until the next regular council meeting on October 7 were the proposed special assessment ordinance for financing the improvements in the Greenbelt Center Mall and the ordinance authorizing the issuance of capital improvement bonds of $950,000. A resolution was introduced, however, scheduling the date of Tuesday, November 26, for a referendum on the bond issue.

The council did take final action on a revised boating ordinance, which would substitute for an annual fee a one-time initial registration fee of $3. Annual permits without charge will still be required for persons wishing to operate a boat on Greenbelt Lake. The revised ordinance recognizes any Stae or U. S. Coast Guard required number as the city registration number.

Tennis Courts

The council received bids for reconstruction of tennis courts, which came to some $5,000 over the estimated costs included in the budget. The council will consider its next step at a special meeting this Monday night.

The council appointed Charles Collins of Empire Place to fill the unexpired term of Donald Volk on the city's Advisory Planning Board. Volk has left the city for a year's time to take advanced education work at the University of Hawaii. Postponed to next Monday's meeting were other appointments to the APB and the city's Park and Recreation Advisory Board.

City manager James Giese informed the council that - the State Roads Commission has offered to provide a traffic signal at the intersection of Kenilworth Ave. and Crescent Rd. if the city pays one-half the installation cost, estimated at $7,535, and pays the electric bill for operating the signal (about $300 a year).

Perimeter Road

The council heard a statement from Charles T. McDonald opposing the inclusion of $42,000 in the bond issue for acquisition of rights-of-way for the perimeter road. His opposition was based on his belief that (1) the developers of the property being served by the perimeter road should pay for the road and (2) the perimeter road was a project "far beyond the practical and economical ability of accomplishment for a city the size of Greenbelt," citing the proposed "costly" bridges over the Beltway and Parkway.

McDonald felt that it was not fair to the built-up sub-divisions to use general tax money to pay for a road that would not be of direct benefit to them.

In reply, Giese said that the $42,000 was for purchase of rights-of-way through three small tracts whose size would not permit extensive development after the perimeter road was built. Hugh Jascourt thought it was "dangerous talk" to have a bond item supported or rejected on the basis of whether it helped a particular subdivision. The question should be, he said, whether the item is of general benefit to Greenbelt. He said he would be willing to pay his share of higher taxes, if the item met this test, even if it was of no direct benefit to his subdivision.

C. Sickles Gets 2-1 Margin Over Machen in Greenbelt

Carlton R. Sickles won handsomely the Greenbelt Democratic primary for the Fifth Congressional House seat, but it was the Springhill Lake vote that did it. He came out of "original" Greenbelt (Center and North End school polling places) leading incumbent Hervey G. Machen by just 129 votes. The 4 to 1 margin Sickles received in Springhill Lake gave him a Greenbelt total of 1,002 votes to 527 for Machen. Fred L. Wineland ran a poor third with 157 votes, and Melvyn L. Meer was fourth with 104 votes.

In the Republican race for Congress from the Fifth District, Lawrence J. Hogan had no difficulty in defeating Edward H. Cockerham, by the same large margin in all three Greenbelt precincts. The vote was 448 to 92.

Democrat Daniel R. Brewster and Republican Charles McC. Mathias easily won the Greenbelt vote in their parties' primary for the U. S. Senate seat now held by Brewster.

About 1,900 Democrats and 550 Republicans voted in Greenbelt's three precincts. This represents a little less than a 40 percent turnout for the Democrats and little more than 20 percent turnout for the Republicans.

The Greenbelt results follow:

SENATOR (DEMOCRAT)
Daniel B. Brewster	1,206
Richard R. Howes	255
Ross Z. Pierpont	145

Pristoop and Gemeny On Charter Committee

Two Greenbelters — Simon Pristoop and W. Gordon Gemeny — have been nominated as part of a five-man slate to draft a charter government for Prince George's County. The action took place Sunday night at a convention of the county's home-rule coalition. The other three named were William J. Kirchner of Lanham, Walter H. Maloney of Beltsville, and Robert E. Bender, Jr. of Palmer Park.

The nominations were not unanimous and, according to the metropolitan press, six organizations in the coalition have indicated that they will not support the slate, saying that the group "does not represent a broad base of citizen participation, although some of the candidates are highly qualified." Rival slates are expected to be formed for the choice of the electorate in November.

Leaders of the coalition had hoped for the nomination of a balanced ticket that would gain the support not only of all sponsors of the convention but of the county commissioners as well. The commissioners can place names on the ballot. Other slates must be backed by 2,000 petition signatures.

County voters will decide if they want a home rule charter drafted and if so, whom they wish to write it, during the Nov. 5 balloting. If the question carries, the proposed charter itself will be voted on in November 1970.

If charter government is enacted, the county would be able to enact local legislation that now must originate in the General Assembly.

SPECIAL MEETING

2. Resolution Setting Bond Issue Referendum - Proposed Amendment

City Council Votes Down Gun Control Ordinance

by Sid Kastner

The proposed city ordinance on firearms control was opposed by a majority of those present at a crowded, relatively orderly hearing before city council, Monday night. After Councilmen Gerald Gough and Bill Hoff failed in efforts to keep consideration of the ordinance alive by tabling it, the council voted the ordinance down by a vote of 4 to 1, Gough casting the lone vote in favor. Gough said that he voted for the bill, despite its deficiencies, because he favored in principle some type of gun control legislation that would reduce the misuse of firearms.

Other councilmen sympathized with the latter goal, but expressed doubts that this measure would provide the remedy. Councilman Francis White said that what was needed is control over the sale of guns. Mayor Edgar Smith said that effective control cannot be accomplished through one local jurisdiction and that when the ordinance was originally proposed it was assumed that other jurisdictions would pass similar measures.

The approximately twenty-five speakers for the opposition identified themselves generally as gun club members and hunters, while about eight supporters of the ordinance urged some form of control. Arguments raised by the opposition were that a need for the law had not been shown; it would penalize the law-abiding citizen, as contrasted to the true criminal; the ordinance itself was poorly drawn up, or infringed on a legislative area already pre-empted by the state; the chief of police would be given arbitrary powers over private property; and that present criminal laws were sufficient if fully applied. Speakers for the ordinance cited the survey reported by Senator Joseph Tydings which showed the U. S. greatly ahead of other countries in the death rate due to firearms. They referred to the results of nationwide polls in which a majority of citizens favor some form of gun control, and also took issue with fears expressed by the opposition that guns would be taken away altogether.

Anti-Ordinance

Among the more detailed statements were those by Freeman Morgan, secretary of the Greenbelt Gun Club, and Robert Noble, of the 12th Precinct Rifle Club. The former's points were that the ordinance would be of no value in identifying the potential criminal, that it was unfair to shooters, collectors and taxpayers, and that it was redundant since state legislation was pending in this area. He mentioned in passing that a practice range had, until recently, been available in Greenbelt for training people in the use of firearms, even the Maryland branch of the Minutemen.

Noble listed what he felt were weaknesses in the ordinance as drawn up; it would compel a criminal to incriminate himself; no appeal from forfeiture was provided for; there was no valid reason for listing one's profession; certain foreign guns could not be easily registered. He stated that an existing Federal firearms law provides for a fine of $2000 and/or a five year jail term for a convicted criminal using firearms, though it is not commonly enforced.

One spectator asked "Would the council point out what it's trying to protect?" Councilman Gough replied that the need for firearm legislation was quite apparent; he noted that the Sullivan law of New York City, a fairly strict gun control law, was responsible for New York's low gun death rate and added that "we are not going to take your guns away from you - that's a bugaboo thrown up." He then asked the audience "Would you favor any gun controls?" Only "NO" was heard from a few.

Ted Everett attempted to refute Gough's remarks, quoting two separate legal reports as casting doubt on the Sullivan law and as saying that firearm legislation should originate at the state level rather than the local level. He charged that the Metropolitan Council of Governments (COG) has pushed laws that are "seemingly aimed at the law-abiding citizen". Another opponent questioned whether the list of registered gun owners would be made known to outsiders, who might then know which homes were "easy pickings" - this brought loud applause. Joseph Hanyok objected to the chief of police having the right to say whether he should own a gun, as he put it; he also denied that any law-abiding citizens committed the recent assassinations on the national scene.

Pro-Ordinance

Allan Lenchek, an officer of the American Civil Liberties Union, read part of a statement which supported gun control legislation as being necessary "to foster the free and fearless debate on which our free society rests"; it said such legislation is not only consistent with the "right to bear arms" provision of the Second Amendment in the Bill of Rights, but is "absolutely mandatory for the effective functioning of a constitutionally free society . . . Where armed citizens flaunt guns in the midst of race conflict, or labor-management controversies, or political turmoil, citizens who hold minority or unpopular opinions on these issues can be cowed into silence."

A few speakers took middle of the road positions. John Leslie suggested that sportsmen would have to submit to some form of legislation, and at the same time asked questions to clarify some provisions of the ordinance, such as whether a panel of citizens should not be empowered to review police decisions. Another member of the Greenbelt Gun Club stated he was not against all gun legislation, but felt action should be taken at the state level to allow standardization. Bruce Sherman expressed approval of a suggestion made earlier that a rifle range be set up in Greenbelt; at the same time he thought an ordinance should be considered by the city because of the possibility of accidents, saying "I'm not afraid of registering my guns with the police, and I don't think anyone else here is."

SPECIAL FESTIVAL CONTEST WINNERS

The Special Contests held on Monday afternoon of the Labor Day Festival were well received. The sign-up lists were covered with names and the area was crowded with spectators. Forty kids each gobbled down a quarter of a watermelon in the first event. Unfortunately, the list of participants and winners of that event and the Tug O' War were lost during the afternoon rainstorm. The winners of the Diaper Derby, which was held a little early to avoid the impending rain storm, were Kenneth G. Miller, III (9 months), Roxanne DeLeo (11 months), and Alexander Barnes (8 months). The winners of the 3-Legged Race, for married and engaged couples, were William and Alice Hess, Tom and Cil Marshall, and Shirl and Ray Leber.

The list of entrants for the Sack Race was severely cut to 30 names, the number of available sacks. The winners were Kathy Geiger, Cindy Lankford, and Tom Paskalides. The five entrants in the Unicycle Contest fascinated a crowd of envious (?) onlookers. The winners were Nancy Gaffney, Brenda Brafford, and Lynette Brafford.

The entrants in the final event, the Pie Eating Contest, were easy to identify afterwards. Carl Davis won the contest so quickly that the judges had him eat the crust too!

MNCPPC Commended

We wish to commend the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission (MNCPPC) for its revised Area 13-N Master Plan for the College Park-Greenbelt area, which will be considered by the county commissioners shortly.

The plan is a great improvement over earlier versions, which had such undesirable features as four-lane highways and no additional single-family homes in the core of Greenbelt. Our readers may recall that more than a thousand Greenbelters attended a public hearing in July 1964 to protest the first version and that the city's unified opposition to the second version led the county commissioners in July 1965 to send the plan back to the MNCPPC for a reduction in the proposed densities.

It takes great statesmanship on the part of a governmental agency to acknowledge the possibility that it may have erred and to reevaluate its decisions. This the MNCPPC has wisely done, with the result that an Area 13 plan has now been produced that meets the general approval of the community and the Greenbelt city council.

This does not mean that the plan is perfect. The city council, for example, has opposed the proposed route of the perimeter road. But to its credit, the MNCPPC staff has indicated its willingness to consider alternate routes approved by the city and the school board. The council has also expressed its desire to retain additional tracts for single-family homes, such as parcel 15 (adjacent to Charlestowne Village) and parcels 3 and 5 on the northern boundary of the city. We hope the county commissioners will consider very carefully these and other recommendations made by the council, which has been wrestling with this subject for years.

The revised Area 13 plan is a tribute both to the citizenry of Greenbelt and the MNCPPC — to the citizenry because of its unflinching determination to make its views known, utilizing its legitimate rights of petition, assembly, and free speech; to the MNCPPC, for its recognition that the residents of a city and its elected representatives have a paramount interest in any zoning and development plans that affect their community.

Little League Awards

by Elaine Skolnik

This year the Little League banquet took on a new look with the addition of the "The Outstanding Fan of the Year" award. A standing ovation was accorded Mae Gingell, who was described by Jim Fontaine as a fan "who never misses a game, rain or shine. She comes down after a rain and sweeps up the infield, cuts the grass . . . and reminds the coaches, when they forget, that boys are still boys."

Approximately 350 persons - Little Leaguers, their parents, coaches, sponsors and honored guests — attended the banquet on September 7 at the Firehouse. Opening the ceremonies was Little League president, Ray Leber, who introduced master of ceremonies, Daryl Lofgren, Greenbelt's Recreation Director.

Winning team trophies were given to the boys on the American League Cubs, who were the World Series winners, and to the National League champs, the Tigers. Howard Wesley is manager of the Cubs and Norris Jenkins, assistant coach. The Tigers, whose 54-game winning streak was snapped by the Giants this season, is managed by "Larnie" Palmer. Assistant coaches are Al D'Annunzio and Al "Dusty" Rhodes.

Recipient of the coveted city "Man of the Year" award was Jerry Shafer, manager of the Athletics. Shafer, also active in the Boys Club, was cited for "meritorious service to the Youth of Greenbelt." His name will be engraved on a plaque in the Youth Center. Councilman Richard Pilski made the presentation.

Former Little League Commissioner and coach, Walter "Bud" Dean, sponsor of the Most Valuable Player Awards, presented the "Bud Dean" trophy to American Leaguer George Moore (Cubs) and the "Bernie Emmert" trophy to National Leaguer Randy Newkirk (Tigers). Dean pointed out that the coaches work all year round and need the help of parents. "The more you can give," he said, "the better off Little League will be in this town."

Thomas McAndrew, sponsor of the Rookie of the Year Awards, presented trophies to Al Mayham of the American League Giants and Michael Moriarity of the National League Tigers.

Recipient of the Sportsmanship Trophy Award, sponsored by Norman Ressiquie of the American Trophy Company, was Ray Leber, Cardinal's manager. The presentation was made by Harold "Dinks" Lloyd, National League commissioner. Gene Kellaher is the commissioner of the American League.

Recognition was also given to Farm Director, Ralph Sines; Indian's manager, Norman McCarthy, and assistant coach, Bob Bicknell; Lion's manager, Jim Fontaine, and assistant coach, Bill Ball; Athletics, assistant coach, Ronnie Falter; Orioles' manager, Weldon Drake, and assistant coach, Sterling Tropp; Giant's manager, Roger Evans, and assistant coach, Jimmy Crystal.

The guest speaker was Mike DeSarno, head football and baseball coach of Episcopal High School in Alexandria.

The dinner was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, with the assistance of several firemen.

Festival Committee News

The next meeting of the Festival Committee will be held at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, September 17, in the GHI Hospitality Room on Hamilton Place.

Key workers are urged to attend this evaluation session. Written suggestions for next year's Festival are welcome but will not be discussed at this meeting.

WINTER SWIMMING

Swimming will be held again this winter at Columbia Union College in Takoma Park on Sunday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m. Dennis Adams and Kixie Aulisio will take charge. If you have not already signed up and would like to do so, or if you want further information, call Mrs. Jones at 474-6001.

Letters to the Editor

Sincerest Thanks

The Prince George's Young Republicans have always had many members who hail from Greenbelt. They have usually been among the most active, sensitive and friendly people in our ranks. Thus, our organization has always known Greenbelt as a friendly town. But never did we fully realize the true depth of its well-deserved civic pride or the extent of its warm, friendly atmosphere until we joined its Labor Day Festival activities.

The help and consideration shown by each of you, in particular by Leo Gerton, Rita Fisher, Cathy Foster and Dave Lange, made our game booths and Crab Feast a successful experiment that was not only a nonpartisan public service, but also fun — even for our workers! Problems abounded, of course, but the unflagging good will demonstrated by the Committee and the citizens of Greenbelt made Labor Day for us a truly enjoyable and unforgettable holiday. We hope you feel the same way too.

To each and every one of you, we offer our sincerest thanks and every good wish for future Labor Day successes. With a town and a committee like yours, I don't see how you can fail.

Jay F. Morris, President, Prince George's Young Republicans

Thanks

Just a note to express my thanks to the Festival Committee for inviting me to participate in the parade, rally, and other festivities over the Labor Day weekend.

It was a pleasure to meet so many nice people and to renew acquaintances. I appreciated the opportunity to speak my views at the old-fashioned political rally.

Thanks for the warm welcome and hospitality. You helped give the people an insight into all the candidates for Congress.

Larry Hogan

Dr. Elijah Swift

Dr. Elijah Swift Jr., 49 Lakeside, died on September 1. He is survived by his wife Ruth, children Susan, Cynthia, and Elijah Swift V., and brothers John, Henry and Oliver Swift. Interment was in Parklawn Cemetery.

Selection of Delegates

I think we should all take to heart the words of Richard Homan, writing in the Washington Post for September 3, about the Democratic convention.

"The people (of Maryland) had played no part in the selection of the delegates or in the determination of their presidential choice."

The fact that our delegates were chosen in 1966, two years before the candidates and issues were known should be a shock to all of us. And the problem is not in the Democratic camp alone.

Action should be taken by our public servants to rectify this. Lack of action will prove that we have no public servants, only public leeches.

Edward Zahniser

License People, Not Guns

I am keenly concerned about the proposed gun registration, not only in Greenbelt but at all levels of the government. It appears to me that licensing may be necessary but the gun should not be licensed.

Since the object of gun control is to keep guns from persons who should not have them, I think that the person should be licensed to possess guns, much like a person is licensed to operate an automobile.

In this way a list of guns would not be available for the enemy in time of war, but persons possessing guns without a license could be easily identified and apprehended.

Jerry O. Newman

Thomas B. Ritchie

Thomas B. Ritchie, 4-C Ridge, died of a heart attack at the age of 50 on Friday, September 6, in Hartford, Connecticut, where he was employed as director of mental health activities for the State of Connecticut in the Greater Hartford area. From 1955 to 1961, before resuming his studies in New England, he was assistant to the director of the Prince Georges General Hospital.

A native of Canton, Ohio, Mr. Ritchie received a B.A. in business administration from George Washington University, an M.A. from the Boston College School of Social Work, and an M.A. in psychology from Assumption College in Worcester, Mass. He and his family moved to Greenbelt in 1945 and were charter members of the Greenbelt Mutual Housing Association, forerunner of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. An early board member of the latter group, he was also active in Greenbelt Consumer Services, the Greenbelt Health Association, and the Rapidan Camp cooperative. He directed many church choirs, among them the choir of the Greenbelt Community Church.

He is survived by his wife, Eleanor, of the home address; two sons, Thomas B. III of Vero Beach, Florida, and Donald, of Worcester, Mass.; his mother, Mrs. E. M. Gage, and sister, Mrs. Thomas Harrison, both of Hartford; two brothers, Ronald R. of Ansonia, Conn., and Glen E. of Garden City, New York; and two granddaughters. Memorial services were held Wednesday in Hartford.
