News Review Queries Council Candidates

In order to help the voters make an informed choice at the coming city election for council on Tuesday, September 21, the News Review invited each candidate to answer the following question:

"What do you consider the major issues facing the city in the coming two years and how do you feel about them?"

The replies of the candidates appear below in alphabetical order.

RHEA COHEN

10 Greenbelt Rd.
New Priorities — Greenbelt is no longer a small town with small-scale needs. A population of 18,000 has made this the third largest city in the county. Despite this growth, no machinery has been set in motion to correct such problems as sewage back-ups in homes and apartments, scarcity of recreational facilities, pollution in our lake and streams, eroding slopes and heavy traffic. If elected, I will work towards improving pedestrian walkways and traffic controls, renovating the Center Mall, developing and adding recreation space, and down-zoning of the Golden Triangle. In addition, I will continue to work to reestablish the outer greenbelt originally planned for this city.

The council must act forcefully regarding the dangerous Beltway Plaza cliffs and the air and water pollution caused by the sand and gravel operations west of Cherrywood Lane. Greenbelt should join the County and State in legal action, or file suit independently, to eliminate these health and safety hazards. At the same time, to protect our lake, we must enact strong city ordinances to control water pollution and erosion.

Concern for the People — I propose the establishment of an Office of Citizens Concern, to help improve the quality of life for our residents, and to aid them in securing the essential services they have already paid for in taxes.

If elected, I will set aside regular hours to meet with the public in the Municipal Building. I feel that all the members of Council should make themselves available for the Office of Citizen Concern on a rotating basis.

Transportation — I think the city can use its influence to improve the existing bus route in Greenbelt for more efficient service to all our neighborhoods. I would also like to see the city operate its own in-town bus service. All Greenbelt residents and their children deserve safe and timely transportation to our library, schools, parks and recreation buildings, and stores, without reliance on the automobile. I am in favor of expanding bicycle pathways throughout the city, with pedestrian overpasses linking neighborhoods to each other and to the Greenbelt Regional Park. State and federal funds are available for improving public transportation in urban areas such as ours, and also for constructing pedestrian overpasses.

Fiscal Policy — The programs I am suggesting can be accomplished without raising taxes. We should take another look at the nearly $750,000 remaining in the Capital Improvement Fund — which includes the proceeds from the 1968 bond issue — and redirect our resources with a new emphasis on the people's needs. Additional dollars. See Candidates, p. 4

Youth Center Addition Dedication Ceremonies

Golden Agers, queen contestants, county and local politicians and a host of ordinary citizens turned out on Labor Day, following the parade, for the formal dedication ceremonies for the new addition to the Youth Center. In the large meeting room of the new wing, after a buffet luncheon, they gathered before a veiled plaque to hear county councilman and former mayor Francis W. White reminisce about the dedication ceremony ten years earlier at which the main building was first opened to the public. White and Mayor Richard Pilski unveiled the plaque, which contains the names of all members of the last two city councils, who were responsible for authorizing and carrying out the building program which resulted in construction of the new wing.

In a brief speech which was a surprise to most of those present, Mayor Pilski also read a resolution of council honoring former mayor Allen D. Morrison, a senior citizen and former president of the Golden Age Club, for his contributions to the community. In recognition particularly of his leadership to the Golden Age group, council has named the senior citizens' lounge in the new wing "The Allen D. Morrison Lounge." All furnishings for the lounge were bought by the Golden Age Club, using funds raised primarily during the years that Morrison was its president.

Former city manager Charles T. McDonald, representing the Golden Age Club, thanked the city and its citizens for making possible the new facilities.

Besides the lounge and the large meeting room, which can be divided by folding doors into two smaller rooms, the $181,000-addition to the Youth Center contains two kitchens on the upper level (one adjacent to the lounge) and arts and crafts classrooms on the lower level. In addition, a locker room and lavatory are available to the softball field, also on the lower level.

With the new wing the Youth Center offers 8,840 square feet of space to the city for recreational use, according to Recreation Director Harold Lofgren, who was master of ceremonies.

GREENBRIAR REQUEST ON SEWAGE HOOK-UP TRANSFER UNDER STUDY

by Al and Elaine Skolnik

Greenbriar's latest attempt to secure a sewage hook-up during the current State moratorium for the proposed 1,193-unit apartment project on the Smith-Ewing tract east of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway has county officials on a merry-go-round. Last month the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission reported that developer Alan Kay and associates had requested transfer of pre-moratorium sewer rights held on another tract of land to the Greenbriar tract, thus assuring the proposed luxury-type project with immediate sewage hook-up for 400 units.

Upon receipt of the unprecedented request, WSSC forwarded it to the County Department of Health, which in turn referred the matter to County Executive William Gullett's office. At week's end, county spokesmen indicated that there will be a need for consultations between the executive and the county council, which now has pending before it the county's 10-Year Water and Sewer Plan. In the meantime, the county has asked WSSC to obtain more documentation from the developer regarding the land on which the immediate sewer rights are now held — its whereabouts, zoning, date of purchase, etc.

Hot Potato

The reason for the request's being treated like a hot potato is that no policy has been established for this type of transfer during the sewage moratorium which was imposed by the State Department of Health in 1970. WSSC officials feel that the health department, as the initiator of the freeze, is the proper party to interpret it.

According to Kay, after eight months of negotiation, he contracted to purchase in July, about 20 acres of undeveloped, R-18 (20 apartment units per acre) zoned land in Northampton, which is in the Largo-Lottsford area. This land, which Kay told the News Review was "purchased for legitimate construction purposes," had received authorization prior to the imposition of the moratorium for connection to the Western Branch sewage treatment plant. The moratorium permits implementation of pre-moratorium authorizations.

Transfer Proposed

Kay is proposing that this unconditional authorization be exchanged for the conditional authorization that Greenbriar now has for connection by gravity with the Blue Plains sewage treatment plant. Sewer hook-up at Blue Plains is contingent on a relaxation of the State moratorium. Because of the excess load on Blue Plains and the Anacostia pumping station, relief from the moratorium in the Anacostia basin is not expected prior to 1974.

According to Kay, a delay in securing sewage connections until 1974 would cause the Greenbriar venture to collapse at a very heavy financial loss. To make the venture succeed, Kay said he has to develop 400 units in 1972, 400 units in 1973, and 393 units in 1974.

Because the Greenbriar tract is at the very edge of the Anacostia basin and immediately adjacent to the Western Branch Basin, it is feasible to divert the sewage from the Anacostia basin to the Western Branch Basin. This can be done through a pumping station, which the developer has proposed to put in at his own expense.

Expect Relief Soon

Although the Western Branch is now also under the moratorium, relief is expected at a much earlier date because an expansion project, with the needed funds, has been approved by the State and Federal government. According to Kay, the Greenbriar project can expect to have no difficulty tapping into the Western Branch system after January 1973.

This still leaves the problem of the 400 units scheduled for completion in 1972, which under the conditions of the loan on which development of the tract is based, if not delivered, could cause collapse of the project. Hence, Kay's request for an exchange of connection rights which would make sewage facilities available for the 400 units scheduled for completion in the Greenbriar tract during 1972, Kay states that the project on the Northampton tract will not be ready for connection until 1973, presumably after completion of the West Branch expansion.

As the case is put by Richard Schifter, representing Greenbriar, in a memo to WSSC, Kay has "an interest in a tract ready for development in 1972 on which sewer connection rights cannot be exercised until 1973 while he has another tract which is not ready for development until 1973 on which sewer connection rights could be exercised in 1972 . . . It would make perfectly good sense to allow an exchange of connection rights between the two tracts."

WSSC Favors Transfer

WSSC, in referring the matter to the county health department for a decision as to whether the developer's request might be granted within the moratorium orders or would require a waiver, thought that the logic of the developer's request was strong. John B. Kenkel, WSSC general counsel, in a letter dated August 11, 1971, made much of the fact that the total potential flow of sewage in the Western Branch drainage basin would not be increased by the exchange.

However, in recognition that any action by WSSC on the developer's request might be considered in the nature of a new authorization, Kenkel asked for the concurrence of the county health department before approving the request.

County Health Officer Perry Stearns, in turn, referred the matter to Edward Chen, Chief Planner for Prince George's County Government. In a letter dated August 18, 1971, Stearns stated that the legality of such an exchange of authorizations would require an opinion from the State Department of Health but that before seeking such an opinion, he would like to know whether the county desires this project to proceed.

County Concerned

Chen told the News Review that the county executive's office is concerned as to what effects and precedents would be involved in approval of such exchanges of authorization. "Transfers have been honored in the past where the same parcels of land are involved and where there is no change in zoning conditions," Chen said. "Also the county will have to study whether granting the Greenbriar transfer would upset the county priority list suggested by WSSC." Such priorities are established in terms of health problems, public facilities, etc.

WSSC and Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning have approved the Greenbriar switch to the Western Branch in the county's 10-year Water and Sewer plan. The county executive's office has also approved the transfer, conditioned by the moratorium and on the developers paying the full additional costs. A hearing on this plan was held by the county council on August 18, and a review will probably take place at the council's second legislative session in Sept.

County councilman Francis White foresaw the need for the establishment of policies and regulations concerning the sewer transfer authorizations. Otherwise, he said, "land with pre-moratorium sewage authorization will become a super inflated commodity."

WSSC counsel Kenkel expressed similar reservations about "trafficking" in authorization rights and suggested the adoption of safeguards. These would include imposition of a condition that the applicant agrees not to sell, transfer, or otherwise dispose of the second tract, from which the unconditional rights would be transferred, until such time as the moratorium is lifted.

Needs Answering

To the Editor:

I am sorry that many of you will not have read this answer to the letter from Mrs. Martha Hutzler by the time you go to the informational hearings on September 9. I feel it needs answering even so.

1. The two hearings are NOT membership meetings and there will be no vote taken. The Board has called these for the purpose of informing the members and of sounding a consensus. The responsibility of the vote belongs to the Board.

2. If there were no Engineering and Architectural (structural) Survey, the present Board would not be carrying through on the promise made by the then Board when the Capital Improvements program was approved by the membership. The Board promised at that time that when the emergency capital improvements work was finished, there would be another look taken at what needed to be done. The Engineering and Architectural Survey is that "other look." I worked for many years with that Section of the Internal Revenue Service which deals with depreciation and capital expenditures in the world of business and industry. I know that such a survey as is contemplated is good business practice and I believe it is one of the smartest things the Board has planned for some time. Furthermore, the money to pay for the Engineering and Architectural Survey comes from the funds for capital improvements, spread over several years, and not from the 1971 and 1972 budgets.

3. The Organizational Survey (Management Audit) is not a financial audit. We have a financial audit twice a year and we know where we stand financially. An Organizational Survey or Management Audit would simply indicate whether there are areas in which we might operate more efficiently or give better membership services. It is even conceivable that, if the recommendations of the firm making such a survey or audit were followed, our costs would go up, not down—though presumably our services would go up along with them. The cost for an Organizational Survey would have to be paid for now—out of the 1971 and 1972 budgets.

4. The "allocation" of some of our costs must go to the time our comptroller has spent with Mrs. Hutzler over the past two years explaining the questions she raises about our finances—and he has taken a great deal of it. Either Mrs. Hutzler has not the background to understand accounting or she is stubbornly refusing to accept the facts. Facts cannot be changed just because Mrs. Hutzler will not accept them. When I was Chairman of the Audit Committee, Mrs. Hutzler called me and asked me to get for her certain financial information from the books of the corporation. I got that information; made xerox copies (at Corporation expense) of certain bills, statements, and checks which she said she wanted to see; called on Mrs. Hutzler at her home with them—and she refused to look at them!

I am sorry, Mrs. Hutzler, to have to write a letter like this, but when you persist in publishing false information, I feel duty-bound to put the facts before the membership through the same medium.

Greatest in Memory

To the Editor:

This past Labor Day Festival was one of the greatest in my memory!

It seems that each year I get the feeling that nothing can top that particular year's activities, but somehow or other, the experience of the people who worked on earlier Festivals, plus the extra enthusiasm and innovations of new volunteers keep the momentum going forward to more excitement, entertainment and adventure each year.

There were so many activities of interest going on that at times I wished that I could physically split into two or more parts to participate in, or to be in the audience when the different things were taking place. One of my friends must have felt the same way, as he and his wife were at the Festival more this year than during total participation in prior years.

I have a great feeling of pride in Greenbelt that there are so many people of all ages here who give untold hours of time to this common cause, putting aside their political and other philosophical differences to insure a meaningful Labor Day weekend for their neighbors.

To the various Chairmen, workers and sponsors—thank you for a job exceptionally well done and may you have a restful year (until next Labor Day weekend).

Sky Diving Cancellation

To the Editor:

Breakdown of the Navy plane was responsible for the cancellation of the skydiving scheduled for Saturday, September 4. The Labor Day Festival Steering Committee received such late notice before the scheduled event that it was unable to find another plane. The Navy was apparently also unsuccessful in obtaining a substitute plane. Because of prior commitments rescheduling was also impossible. The Labor Day Festival committee greatly regrets this disappointment.

Labor Day Festival Steering Com.

Thanks

As Chairman and Mistress of Ceremonies for the 17th Annual Queen Pageant of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, I wish to convey my many thanks to the following people for their generous support, time, effort and donation of supplies and equipment in preparing for this annual affair:

Ina Marie's Dress Shoppe, Seabrook Shopping Center, for the Fashions; Mrs. Rosemary Jung, Fashion Co-ordinator and Commentator; Jon's Hair Stylist of Riverdale; Francis Gregory & Sons Excavating Co. for the use of truck for our float; the City of Greenbelt for supplies and storage of float; the Washington Wilburt Vault Co. of Laurel for lending the use of artificial matting for the float; Mr. Tom Freeman, photographer; Pier I Imports, Hyattsville for the loan of the Queen's chair; and all the sponsors.

Shirley Meredith

Thanks, Festival Committee

To the Editor:

There are a lot of people forgotten when everyone is at the Labor Day Festival. My husband and I spent a good deal of time at the festival and had a wonderful time. There were so many events going on, it was hard to decide which ones to see. I wish to thank the Labor Day Festival Committee for giving us a wonderful weekend. They really deserve thanks. There are so many towns around here that didn't have anything, but thanks to the generosity of the committee chairman, we had plenty.

Patricia A. Molden

Appreciation

To the Editor:

I want to express my thanks to the Labor Day Festival Committee for thinking of us old timers over 40 in having the Starliners Band appearing on Saturday evening. It really brought back good memories of the big band era, which you don't hear much of these days. Perhaps the youth didn't appreciate them but we certainly did.

Potential Conflict?

On August 17, county council members Gladys Spellman and Francis Francois introduced a resolution urging the county executive to proceed with the acquisition of a 13.9 acre triangular piece of soon-to-be-declared surplus Federal land between parcels 1 and 2 and the Balt-Wash. Parkway. This tract was originally a portion of the Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville.

The city council of Greenbelt has also gone on record as seeking acquisition of the tract. On May 17 it passed a resolution indicating the city's desire to acquire the land, and city manager James Giese has so informed General Services Ad.

Kennedy Center Preview

by Sandra Barnes

The Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts is a delight to the eye as well as the palate.

Its simple elegance is reflected in the sheer white marble walled exterior, as well as the interior, which features huge crystal chandeliers, plush red carpeting, and floor-to-ceiling mirrors (much of the decorations, i.e., chandeliers, mirrors, tapestries, are gifts from various governments).

The Concert Hall and the Opera House await minor finishing touches. A magnificent crystal light sculpture, presented by the government of Austria, illumines the ceiling of the scarlet Opera House, which will also be used for ballet performances. The backstage area is capable of storing three complete sets of the magnitude of Aida. The stage area is built on springs to soften the tread of the dancers' feet and is comparable in size to the Met.

The Eisenhower Theatre for dramatic productions is not scheduled to be opened until the fall of 1972. Opening night for the Concert Hall is September 8, during which Leonard Bernstein's "Mass" will be performed.

The Burgundy silk on the cover of the menu for one of the three restaurants at the center, La Grande Scene, betokens the type of gourmet dining which gastronomes might expect. Depending on your mood and your pocketbook, you can dine in splendour at La Grande Scene; or the Promenade, described as a buffetaria; or the smaller Gallery, a European style cafe featuring hamburger provençal, omelette piperade, crepes and quiche lorraine. And there is a counter for those rushing to grab a bite before a performance.

A terrace connected with The Promenade offers the best view of Potomac landmarks—the Lincoln Memorial, half of the Washington Monument, the Capitol's dome.

At a recent preview for the opening of the restaurants, sponsored by the Canteen Corp., which also runs the gourmet restaurants at the Lincoln Center, the culinary expertise of Chef Claude Bouchet (formerly of the Jockey Club) was tested. In a sumptuous atmosphere (the tables were decorated with huge blocks of ice carved into swans, boats, or fish) the fare was a gourmet's delight: caviar Beluga, smoked salmon from the Gaspé, pate, stuffed wild bear, quiche lorraine, and little pastries filled with shrimp or lobster in a wine and cream sauce. Each delicacy was accompanied by an appropriate drink: champagne, port wine or iced vodka.

La Grande Scene promises to be the scene where Washington's elite will dine in style. However, opening night for the restaurants, August 9, proved to be somewhat hectic for the usually skilled French waiters, who were busier scurrying around trying to find the proper spoon or knife than in discretely hovering over the clientele. But the excellence of the kitchen should soon be reflected in more efficient service.

A note about parking. When you arrive at the center, you are invited to park your automobile beneath the building. Be sure you note on which of the three levels you have left your vehicle because you may be in for a lot of walking otherwise.

Council Candidates Examine Major Issues

lars can be expected from federal and state grants and from the anticipated increase in the city's tax base. I feel confident, therefore, that the policies I will promote as a member of council will benefit the City of Greenbelt and are fiscally sound.

CHARLES COLLINS 19 Empire Place

It has taken several years to develop a Master Plan — a plan developed through a series of public hearings. It is my belief the city should take leadership of not only advocating that the Master Plan be adhered to not only in Greenbelt but the Greenbelt-College Park area for which the plan was written. With this in mind and a close adherence to the Master Plan it is my feeling that the city should seek to work with the developers in developing the land within Greenbelt.

The purchase of further land for the City of Greenbelt is a decision that this council or the one following will make. While I would like to see the city purchase and develop land into parks and give the citizens of this community other places for leisure hour activity, I feel the following questions need further investigation:

1. Will the citizens of this town be able to maintain the land purchased in future years or will development be needed to broaden the tax base?

2. If we do purchase the land, what are the controls which the city will put on it? We can see by our lake property we are not providing city parkland but are providing parkland for the citizens of Northern Prince Georges County. Can the citizens of this community afford to do this?

Along this line the city council must consider how we can receive back into the city, funds paid to the county that are buying programs in other parts of the county but are not buying an equal amount of programs here in Greenbelt that we now have to buy with city tax dollars — programs to supplement not to replace.

The next point to consider is the ideal that is presented in the idea of the "perimeter road." I say ideal because the perimeter road was supposed to have tied the city together. For we know that the perimeter road economically is an astronomical project that the city would face. It is my feeling that there are many projects and programs that could be developed and would bring the city more into a city of oneness rather than the many divisions that we have.

While I feel services must be located in all areas, we have not moved fast enough or far enough to insure that we will continue to make Greenbelt a place to live in rather than like most suburban communities which are just a place to sleep in.

As to roads, while we have given a great amount of concern and planning to land use we have not given enough time except on a crisis basis to the movement of traffic and the updating of road needs in our community on a practical basis.

ELIZABETH K. MAFFAY 128 Northway

The upcoming city election is noticeably devoid of issues. This is primarily because of the excellent performance of the present city council. However, there are some significant problem areas which our new council must concern itself with. The most important — the Ecology.

The Ecology has been, is, and will continue to be an issue although I'd rather call it a deep and vital concern. The present city council, of which I am a member, has concerned itself extensively with the environment; i.e., passage of an anti-burning ordinance, and an anti-litter ordinance. Awaiting passage, a clean lot ordinance and a forceful water pollution ordinance. In addition the monthly paper collection program, which we established, has been enormously successful. Also we have recently acquired a bottle crusher.

On a broader level the city council, as members of COG (Washington Metropolitan Council of Governments), aids and participates in solving common problems affecting the Metropolitan area such as air pollution, land usage and sewage treatment. We can and must achieve more in the two years ahead. Our efforts should be directed towards controlling noise pollution, re-cycling cans and bottles, and on determining the feasibility of banning non-returnable bottles. (Bovies' Bottle Ordinance is presently in litigation.)

Our environment can also be improved by the detection and elimination of erosion within Greenbelt. In this area we must put pressure on the developer, county and state officials to correct the eroded mud bank at Beltway Plaza.

Another major concern for the new council will be to find an economical and feasible manner to dispose of trash and garbage. The council and city manager are presently engaged in evaluating landfill sites. Also, since this problem confronts other municipalities — the Municipal League, municipal officials, (including myself), are exploring alternative methods for disposal.

In my tenure on council the city has acquired parkland by purchasing parcels 7 and 8, a portion of parcel 15, and the Lutheran church site. Not bad!!! But, additional land can and should be acquired as soon as possible with matching federal and state funds, since it is possible that the matching funds program could be discontinued in future years.

I'm pledged for the earliest possible construction of a recreational center in Springhill Lake. We are fortunate to have a fine Youth Center in old Greenbelt, to which we added an extensive addition this year. Now we must focus our immediate attention on the needs of the youth in Springhill Lake. Being separated by high speed highways, they cannot use the established facilities. As the mother of teenagers I know how essential such facilities are.

RICHARD R. PILSKI 106 Rosewood Drive

Greenbelt Master Plan: The Greenbelt Master Plan adopted by the City is an ideal balance for the development of our City, thus retaining its character of single family and apartment development with emphasis on adequate parkland and roadways.

Parcels 1 and 2, located in the northeast section of the City, will be up for rezoning, I'm sure. They must be retained in RT and R 80.

Traffic: Traffic will still be a problem for the City the next two years. Some progress has been made, but we have been fortunate that development has not started on The Golden Triangle. The Council must see that some formulated plan is completed by the State Roads Commission, County Council, and the City. We have been granted some delay; but we must have progress on a new plan of bridges, cloverleaves, and roads oriented to the movement of cars, and not the outmoded method of movement by lights only.

Parkland and Recreation Areas: Park acquisition, development, and conservation will be greater in the next two years. The Council must strive to have mandatory dedication of parkland or fee in new developments be determined by the City Council and not the Park and Planning Commission.

Parkland must be set aside in parcels 1 and 2 before any type of development begins.

We must now move into a period of development for the parklands and open spaces we have acquired. The lake park must be maintained as a passive recreation area. A plan may have to be formulated to have outside visitors to this area begin to share in the cost of maintenance and development. The development of parcels 7 and 8 should be completed with consideration given to what the people in that area desire.

Municipal Services and Budget Control: Greenbelt still enjoys services in police protection and recreation unsurpassed by any municipality. The future shows that these needs will have to keep pace with the growth of the City. The next Council must be able to develop and maintain the balanced method of tax-supporting, self-sustaining, and citizen-participating programs for recreation needs in all sections of City. These programs must be for young and old alike.

All the operations of the City, both present and future, must rely on efficient and effective budget control, to be sure that the tax payers' money is being spent efficiently and without being a burden to the citizens.

Center Mall: The Center Mall renovation is long overdue and must be completed as soon as possible.

Ecology and Environmental Control: Greenbelt, like all other communities, now enters the period of ecology. We all know that something must be done. We have started in a small way with the paper drives and bottle crushers. We may move towards some arrangement with private corporations on methods of waste recycling.

The use of ordinances to supplement State and County restrictions will have to be studied and passed to prevent soil erosion, pollutants, and noise.

JOHN F. REYNOLDS 1 A-Eastway

I have been a resident of Greenbelt for over twenty-five years, and during that time I have not been aware of any problem concerning the city or its residents that has not been solved through the efforts of a strong city council and the active participation of an aware citizenry.

I believe that the greatest problem facing Greenbelt at this time is the orderly development of the remaining vacant land within the city's boundaries.

To develop this land will require a city council devoted to the good of the city as it is now constituted and not a city council interested in making Greenbelt one of the most populous areas in Prince Georges County, regardless of the will of its people. In a situation in which the interests of a builder are to be considered as opposed to the welfare of the residents of this city there is no doubt in my mind that the welfare of the city and its residents should be given priority, even to the possible detriment of the proposed builder.

I think that in future applications for building in Greenbelt there should be no exceptions granted to the existing ordinances and if it becomes obvious that the county intends to grant such exceptions the city council of Greenbelt should serve notice that they are prepared and willing to take the entire matter to court. I am satisfied that a determined city council willing to use every legal means to force future builders to follow regulations when building is the only hope Greenbelt has for its future orderly growth.

CHARLES SCHWAN 7-A Crescent

In my view, the most significant issue facing the city in the next two years is the continuing one of enhancing the quality of our environment through appropriate air and water pollution and erosion measures and proper land development and zoning procedures.

Long before it became a national issue, the city, aided by Citizens for a Planned Greenbelt, Greenbelt Homes, Inc. and, more recently, the Save our Community Committee, aimed to preserve Greenbelt as a low-density, planned residential community. I am proud to be associated with this 8-year old fight through my capacity as president of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. and in CFPG. Increasingly our collective voice has been heard and heeded by the county and state. We won our fights, for example, to secure a reasonable master plan for this area and to have the Greenbelt senior high school relocated.

At least two lessons are to be learned from our experience. First, we must be vigilant and persistent. Second, we must be united if we are to prevail.

Another lesson we should have learned is the need for proper planning and foresight. We now face the major question of the disposition of parcels 1 and 2—the land between Ridge Road and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. The city has expressed concern that the cost of providing public facilities if this land is developed may exceed that of public acquisition. We must have a city-appointed commission to investigate this question.

Another matter of concern is the county ordinance requiring new subdivisions to donate ten percent of their land for open space. The ordinance must be amended to insure that it applies in Greenbelt as well as the rest of the county, and applies to market value rather than assessed valuation.

Of the greatest importance, however, is that we decide questions on a community basis and present a united front. Unfortunately Greenbelt is divided by major highways into four distinct physical segments. All such segments must be made to feel that they are parts of Greenbelt. The efforts to this end with regard to Springhill Lake must be continued and increased and later applied to other areas as they are developed. We need each other if we are to gain the most from our human resources. We need each other in order to be heard.

EILEEN TURNER 47 Lakeside Drive

My historical background leads me to feel that the realities of today will determine the future of any given person, place or thing. As I see articles preaching about those coming "new cities" of the future and extolling what are purported to be examples, Reston, Columbia, I can't help feeling that GREENBELT was, is and should continue to be the real, original "new city." When conceived along with its sister Greentowns, Greenbelt was a new planning concept. There always were some citizens in Greenbelt who constantly questioned the direction being taken in the development of lands surrounding our city. The developmental path of Greenbelt is strewn with promises, few of which were actually worth the paper they were written on. We are only now getting the shopping mall promised many years ago; we have a city whose parts are divided by a dual lane highway and whose residents seem to be living totally apart from their city, yet whose swimming pools, recreational and other facilities could be shared by all. Why did planners not arrange an under or over road in and out of Springhill Lake? Why cannot this city find some way to become a place where a citizen can find a total life-style, meaning work, play, recreation, culture, education, and still maintain its lovely simplicity among the green trees? How can planning make those other "new cities" so great and overlook Greenbelt?

I do feel that HOW we shape our city and its environs is extremely important and will in this rapidly changing world set the future for Greenbelt.

Look at what has been done. Can you accept what has been done as the best development of this beautiful spot? I cannot, and will be anxious to see why certain things were done. I, as a responsible citizen will urge caution for the future. Questions which involve serious change, things which cannot be undone later, require much studying and a refusal on the part of those responsible for planning to submit to pressures from any side, but to be able to make unpopular decisions when in the long run the outcomes will mean a place we all can be proud to be a part of and live our lives in.

Time is running out as we continue to build, build, build. I hate to see this lovely place made a mess of. There is no local area with so much to offer plus convenience to major cities as Greenbelt, yet many wonderful people live here temporarily only to move on and invest in other communities. WHY? What do we lack? Is it because prior planning has been wasteful and tasteless? I think so and I'd like to see this change. Why not?

GIL WEIDENFELD 6206 Breezewood Drive

Greenbelt has been caught up in the recent, swift urbanization of Prince George's County. No longer is Greenbelt primarily a community of GHI and private homes. Approximately half the population of the city now lives in apartment units and more apartment complexes are anticipated.

The city must adjust its thinking to meet the challenge of this dynamically changing scene. To project Greenbelt's goals to include every part of the city, and not just, "old Greenbelt," serves the city better than to have isolated civic groups fighting alone for the needs of isolated groups of people.

The residents of old Greenbelt have, over the years, developed a community spirit that cannot be easily duplicated. Springhill Lake, also, has achieved recognition in the county as an outstanding community for its active participation in political and civic activities. But, these two communities often work toward solving community problems as two separate groups. The city must recognize its new dimensions, overcome physical barriers (such as Kenilworth Avenue), and work to integrate all the communities within its boundaries into one unified city. Every resident must feel he is accepted and wanted to participate in Greenbelt's activities whether he plans to live in the city for one year or ten years, and whether he owns or rents a dwelling.

Only with support from all sections of the community can our changing city proceed to address itself to the important issues of the next few years:

Maintaining the Greenbelt Master Plan;

Keeping population density as low as possible;

Open-space land acquisition programs;

Reduction of pollution and erosion;

Building an adequate total recreation center in Springhill Lake, improving the Lake Park, smaller interior parks and the Town Center, and providing additional playing fields;

Seeking a change in the State Highway Commission priorities so that immediate work can begin to alleviate traffic congestion at the Edmonston Road entrance to Springhill Lake, and the Kenilworth - Greenbelt Road interchange;

Continued high level of services offered by the city for the health, safety and recreation of its citizens.

Just think, if the Springhill Lake community and the original Greenbelt community were joined together, what a mighty community voice that would be to work for our city, not only at a local level, but at county and at state levels.

The public is welcome to view the quilts September 16 through September 18 at the Library. Admission is free.

County Opposes Federal Plans for Training Center

The Prince Georges County Council, September 1, has directed the County Attorney to file an injunction against the federal government to prevent the construction of a $52.6 million training center for federal law enforcement agents on a 491-acre site near Beltsville.

County attorney Walter H. Maloney said later he had assigned a member of his staff to begin the necessary legal research on a priority basis.

In announcing the move, First District Councilman Francis W. White said the federal government has continued with construction plans in spite of a Council resolution against the project, opposition by the County Planning Board, and Council action in cutting sewer lines to serve the facility from the county's 10-Year Water and Sewer Plan. A protest telegram to President Nixon was sent by Council Chairman Winfield M. Kelly, Jr., following opposing testimony by Kelly and White before the U.S. Senate's Public Works Subcommittee.

White, chairman of the Council's planning and capital improvements committee, charged that the government's persistence violates a Nixon executive order requiring federal agencies to cooperate with local jurisdictions in locating federal facilities.

Incompatibility with the Environmental Protection Act was also cited by White as a reason for opposition.

In the July 13 resolution against the Combined Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, the Council unanimously stated that the proposal was "a piecemeal approach to development" of 20.7 square miles of federally-owned land in the area. The Councilmen noted that the location has been designated in 1964 as an environmental "wedge" to protect underground waterways.

Kelly maintained that the Parkway Sewage Treatment Plant, which would serve the federal facility, is already overloaded and that even after planned expansion, the 246,000 gallons of raw sewage coming daily from the new project would represent one-tenth of the plant's total capacity.

"All this for a facility that appears at this time to provide no benefit to this county," Kelly remarked.

The center, opposed by many local community groups, would annually train approximately 8,725 policemen and federal investigators for several federal agencies.

In addition to class rooms, mock courtrooms, and interrogation rooms, the project would include a track for practicing high-speed chases and firearms range.

City Ordinances Explained

An Ordinance to Provide for the Control of Dogs, Cats and other Pets

Animal permits are required for all dogs or cats (pets) over three months old. These pets will be kept on the owners premises at all times, except when under the immediate and effective control of a responsible person.

Owners are also to prevent their dog or cat from being a public nuisance. Public nuisance includes excessive or untimely barking, molesting passersby, chasing vehicles, habitually attacking other domestic animals, trespassing or excreting on property that does not belong to the pet's owner.

When any female dog or cat is in heat, that animal shall be within a building or enclosure. Any abuse of animals is prohibited. Owners must also see that their pets are properly fed, watered and cared for.

Rabies vaccinations are required to obtain a City animal permit. These permits are good from August 1 of one year until August 1 of the next. The licensing fee is $2.00 per animal. A new permit must be obtained each year and the fee paid. The animal license is to be displayed on the animal's collar at all times outside of the owner's personal property.

Impounding of animals is done at the City shelters or at the County animal shelter. An impounding fee of $5.00 will be charged for every animal that is picked up.

Violation of this ordinance is a misdemeanor. In addition, notice of violation may be issued to the owner of an animal. The violation fee is $3.00 and if paid, no action will be taken.

City Notes

Faulty functioning of a furnace in the basement of a building at 3 court of Eastway sent oil down a floor drain and into a storm sewer emptying into the stream that flows past the firehouse. There it was observed and reported to the city before the oil had reached the lake. At almost the same time GHI management had also discovered and corrected the problem. City Manager James K. Giese reports that most oil was stopped short of the lake.

Four flashing signs to mark school zones have been erected, but the electrical connections would not be made until a few days after school began, city officials learned. The signs will be activated by automatic clocks. They will shut off on weekends but will have to be turned off manually for holidays.

Virtually all the city staff was occupied with the Festival — in setting it up, running it, and cleaning up afterwards. As usual, the trash and debris it generated was large. It could have been even larger, but one father was observed along the parade route, picking up empty cans for recycling. Giese particularly commended his action. The bottle crusher in operation at the Festival reduced an estimated 3600 bottles to about 1800 pounds of broken glass, enough to fill three barrels. The going rate for crushed glass is $20 a ton.

PFC Philip Coombes has rejoined the police force after a six-month absence.

The Co-op Hospitality Room on the second floor of the Co-op supermarket will be the new meeting place this year for the Greenbelt-Beltsville Unit of the League of Women Voters of Prince Georges County.

SLOW-PITCH FINALS

The Men's Slow-Pitch Tournament will conclude Thursday, Sept. 9 with the championship games at 6:45 p.m. and at 8 p.m. if necessary. Four teams remain in the playoffs at this time. Wildwood Manor Esso, from the Montgomery County 'AAA', and Wilson Sons Restaurant, from Prince Georges County, remain in the winner's bracket. The Coventry Shoppe, who won the Fairfax League, and Kidwell Concrete, also from Montgomery County 'AAA', will face playoffs in the loser's bracket.

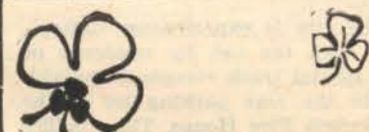

Aiding the Labor Day Parade to run smoothly this year was Md. HELP, a non-profit highway emergency locating pool, under the direction of Greenbelter Joe Lanning, president, who used walkie-talkies to assist in the lineup of the parade. The group also did all the communications work at the stage for the Labor Day Festival.

Since its formation in 1965, Md. HELP has rescued immobilized vehicles on the Baltimore and Washington Parkway, and the Beltway in co-operation with Park Police. For the last four years, the group has handled communications for the University of Maryland Science Fair. The group's first parade experience was coordinating Mt. Rainier's annual parade several years ago. This non-profit group helps distribute for the Salvation Army, and is on the streets during Halloween to protect both children and property.

Slow-Pitch Championship

Greenbelt Shell and Sheet Metal will at last meet for the City Championship. This game was delayed while both teams fought through the Prince Georges County Sectionals and advanced to the District of Columbia Metro Tournament. At the Metro Tournament, the Shell team became champions and Sheet Metal runners up. Greenbelt Shell advanced to the Regionals and went on to the National Tournament at Parma, Ohio.

The Championship will be decided in a two out of three game contest to be played on Sept. 13 and 15 at 7 p.m. A double-header is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 13 and the third game will be played Wednesday, Sept. 15, if necessary. Mayor Richard Pilski will present the winning team trophies.

Safe Mower Maintenance

Regardless of your mower type, proper maintenance procedures are essential to safety.

1. Always disconnect the ignition wire and tape it back away from the spark plug before reaching or working under the deck. On electric mowers be certain that the power cord is disconnected.

2. Do not run gasoline powered mowers inside a building. The exhaust of a small engine contains carbon monoxide, a deadly, odorless gas. Good ventilation is required to prevent carbon monoxide accumulation.

3. Check frequently for loose screws and bolts.

4. Inspect the blade regularly. Be sure it is tight and free from defects. Don't operate a mower with a blade which is badly out of balance.

5. Keep all guards and shields in place.

6. Remove grass accumulation from under the deck after each mowing.

7. Check the fuel system for leaks.

8. Inspect the clutch and clutch linkage for excessive wear which may result in erratic action.

9. Do not alter the governor setting and overspeed the engine. Excessive speed is dangerous and shortens the mower life.

10. Check the power cord on electric mowers. A serious shock can result from bad connections or breaks in the insulation.

A more complete list of safety practices is available upon request. Ask for Agricultural Engineering Release 50, "Power Mower Safety or a Power Mower Statistic."

Proper Use of City Trash Receptacle

The city is experiencing difficulties with the use by residents of the special trash receptacle provided in the rear parking lot at the Greenbelt Fire House. This facility is for those who do not want to keep special trash in their yards until the city can make a pick-up. The most serious problem is that some persons have used this receptacle for garbage. Since this is an open container, garbage cannot be permitted in the receptacle as it can become a rodent and a health nuisance. The other problem is that some persons have not been careful in placing trash within the container, and there has been some scattering around the premises.

The city has indicated that if the facility is not kept in a clean and sanitary condition its use will have to be discontinued.

Waiting Wives Club

The Prince Georges County American Red Cross is interested in helping to establish neighborhood Waiting Wives Clubs in Prince Georges County. Many waiting wives do not know other military wives locally with whom they might share common interests. Since the county is so spread out and transportation a problem, the Red Cross is trying to locate groups in the various communities. Anyone interested in joining a neighborhood Waiting Wives Club, please contact: Neighborhood Waiting Wives, American Red Cross, 6206 Belcrest Road, Hyattsville, Md. 20782. 559-8500.

Tip of the Month

Last month's fire prevention quiz question asked which room in the house has the greatest number of fire occurrences. The choices were the basement, the kitchen, the living room, or the bedroom. If you chose the living room, you are correct. The national figures for fires in dwellings is as follows: 35% living room, 22% kitchen, 13% bedroom, 10% basement and 15% for all other locations.

Nearly half of the sample asked this question thought that the bedroom was the prime offender. This is due to the fact that persons asleep are more likely to be overcome by smoke and to the publicity given to the hazards of smoking in bed. Except in very small homes and apartments, the living room serves as the center of much of the activity. This raises the probability of a fire starting in this area. The following discussion points out the potential causes and sources of living room fires.

The leading cause of fires in the living room is the careless use of smoking materials and matches. Often persons watching late-night television will drop smoking materials between the cushions of their furniture. Left alone for several hours, these materials will cause the upholstery to smoulder and eventually burst into flame. Often the occupants asleep in their beds will be overcome by the toxic products of combustion long before the flames appear. The drowsy smoker having one last cigarette may be having just THAT! Television sets and hi-fidelity equipment left on for long periods may malfunction and lead to a fire. This is especially true with the built-in variety where proper ventilation may be lacking. The friendly crackle of the log in the fireplace may become the fatal crackle of the walls and floor if the room is not protected by a fire screen. The screen should be in front of the fire at all times. The ember which is caught by the alert homeowner will still burn the carpet. Electrical wiring in older homes, often requires the use of extension cords for lack of wall outlets. A common cause of living room fires results from the concealment of extension cords under the carpet. Constant wear from walking will fray the cord and cause a fire. Keep the use of such cords to a minimum and locate them so that they will not be subject to wear and tear.

Next Month's Question
What should be done with old paint cans?
a. Store in the basement with the lid on for future use.
b. Burn.
c. Store in metal cabinets if they must be saved or discard.
d. Keep old paint and rags in one place.

The clinic will be conducted by golf professionals from the University of Maryland.

BICYCLE TRIP

Greenbelter Bill Cornett, 14 Greenway Place, covered over 1,100 miles this summer—on a bicycle. He pedaled down the East Coast with former Greenbelt resident Gordon Benson. Gordon was returning to his home in St. Petersburg, Fla., from a bicycle trip which took him to Ohio.

The boys carried sleeping bags and knapsacks packed with as few clothes as possible, tools and first aid kits.

The first day's ride took them only 65 miles to Aquia Harbor, Va., but they covered the 450 miles from Launenburg, N.C., to Tallahassee, Fla. in 28 hours with a four-hour break for sleep.

Since super highways are closed to bicycles, the boys had to take less travelled routes. One after midnight ride took them over a desolate 30-mile stretch in North Carolina. They travelled it in one hour.

Bill and Gordon stayed with friends and relatives at several stops, but they also slept in fields, hallways, a college dorm and the Seminole Christian Campus House in Tallahassee.

Riding time for the trip was just over eight days, but with visits, delays for repairs and R and R the experience lasted one month.

The cyclists parted at Gordon's home in St. Petersburg and Bill pedaled to his uncle's home in Satellite Beach, Fla. His return trip took only 22 hours. He came home by bus, but only because summer was over.

WHY YOU SHOULD ELECT Charles F. Schwan to CITY COUNCIL

"After six and a half years as Greenbelt Homes, Inc., president, Charles F. Schwan, has stepped down. He leaves an enviable record of leadership. Presiding over a very energetic board, the forthright and articulate Mr. Schwan can view with pride his role as chief architect and formulator of the policies that governed GHI during his tenure.

Among the many accomplishments of interest to the general community are:

(1) GHI became a positive force in the development of Greenbelt's zoning and planning policies. Until 1964, the burden was left almost entirely with city council to formulate and argue the city's case for a low-density planned community — a burden which at times proved too heavy. With GHI's active participation in pushing for a Master Plan, its mobilization of citizen support for the Plan, and its adamant opposition to deviations such as a school site on parcel 2, the tide has been turning in Greenbelt's favor."
